The following morning, when members of the store opened for business the store was found in a ransacked condition. The loss consisted principally of dry goods and guns. Officers were notified and are working on the case.

Two Letters

The first written twenty years ago, the second recently by Mrs. J. H. Bourland, Frankston, Texas.

June 2, 1904, she writes:—"For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head, a continual dropping of mucus into my throat causing frequent expectoration. My entire system became involved and I grew worse. It seemed as if I could not recover from a constant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic. My bowels were affected, causing alarming hemorrhages. I tried many remedies and finally took Pe-ru-na. In three days I was relieved of my bowel trouble and entirely cured by five bottles. I most cheerfully recommend Pe-ru-na."

June 30, 1924, Mrs. Bourland writes again:—

"I will soon be seventy-nine years old and enjoy good health for one of my age. I still recommend Pe-ru-na and take it myself when necessary."

For more than half a century Pe-ru-na has a proud record of good done. Men and women the world over stand ready to testify to its value in the treatment of all catarrhal disorders.

Kiener's Lookout

Photo © 1922

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

KIENER'S LOOKOUT is not really its name at all. It is merely a fire lookout station on the top of Twin Sisters Mountain in Rocky Mountain National Park, and Walter Kiener is the man on watch for forest fires. Nevertheless Walter Kiener's outlook is unique. For right across Tahosa Valley looms the dark, sheer East Face of Longs Peak, "King of the Rockies." And it is there that was enacted last winter the grim struggle between man and mountain that thrilled the mountaineers of the world. That dread East Face did not stop Agnes Vaillie and Walter Kiener. But altitude and storm killed Agnes Vaillie after the summit was won, crippled Walter Kiener for life and did to death Herbert Sortland in an attempt at rescue. And from his lofty eyrie on the Twin Sisters Kiener looks out day after day and night after night on these very places. (Picture No. 3.)

Rocky Mountain is the most popular of all the national parks. Tahosa Valley, at the foot of Longs Peak, is its south entrance. The Twin Sisters rim Tahosa's cup on the east; the crest of the vast granite heap is the park boundary. Hundreds each season climb the Sisters for the magnificent view, the alpine flowers, the fantastic timberline. This season thousands instead of hundreds have worn deep the steep and narrow trail. It is the Twin Sisters plus Walter Kiener. Men and women of prosaic lives are fascinated by the tragic and thrilled by the heroic.

Tahosa—Land of the Dwellers in the Mountain Tops—is 9,000 feet up in the Colorado Rockies. The south Sister rises to 11,384 feet; its Twin to 11,436 (No. 2). If your eyes are good you can just see from Tahosa Kiener's Lookout on the bare granite summit of the north Twin. His sheltered cabin is hidden from sight.

Longs Peak rises to 14,255 feet. Its slopes are deeply scarred by ancient glaciers. It was not ascended until 1865—and then with great difficulty from the west and by way of The Notch. Finally was found a comparatively easy trail from Tahosa Valley, which able-bodied men, women and youngsters can safely travel with competent guides. About a thousand visitors a year make the ascent. But not more than six winter ascents have been made.

The famous East Face of Long Peak rises 2,455 feet from Chasm Lake in East Gorge. It is mostly sheer. It was believed by all mountaineers to be impossible of ascent. In 1922 a Princeton professor made the ascent. Since then it has been climbed several times by experts. The dotted line shows the only way up (No. 1). All of these ascents were in summer.

It was this winter ascent of the East Face that challenged Agnes Vaillie. The daughter of a wealthy Denver man, she had chosen a business career and was secretary to the chamber of commerce. Mountaineering was her avocation and she could justly boast that no man in the Colorado Mountain club could outdo her.

Walter Kiener is a Swiss who had established a reputation in the Alps before coming to Denver about two years ago. He has done much climbing in the Colorado Rockies and had frequently been the companion of Miss Vaillie.

Agnes Vaillie, Elnor Eppich and Kiener left Denver Saturday, January 10. Sunday at 3 a. m. they reached Timberline Cabin (11,300 feet up on the regular trail). At 9 a. m. the two climbers left for Chasm Lake and Miss Eppich returned to Tahosa Valley. Darkness found the two climbers only part way up the East Face. After a favorable day the thermometer had dropped to 14 below and the wind had risen. They decided to climb up rather than down. They reached the summit at 4 a. m. Monday.

There is no shelter there; they had to keep moving. The regular trail down is on the west slope. They chose a shorter route down the north slope. Few have been over it, even in summer. They had both used it. There is no trail. By 9:30 they had descended about 750 feet.

At this point, the most difficult of this dangerous route, Miss Vaillie lost her footing and slid down over rocks and snow for 150 feet. She assured Kiener she was not hurt. But it was found that her feet and hands were partly frozen. With Kiener's help she went on a hundred feet or more. Then she was exhausted, though unbroken in courage.

Kiener left her for help at 10:30 a. m. He reached Timberline Cabin at 1 p. m. There he found a relief party of four men: Herbert Sortland, Jacob Christian, Hugh Brown and his son, Oscar Brown. Leaving Oscar Brown to keep the fire going, Kiener led the others back up the mountain. Just above timberline (11,500) Hugh Brown had to drop out. At 11,800 feet Herbert Sortland, twenty-three years of age, could not keep up and was sent back. Kiener and Christian—he had given up hope of returning alive—reached Agnes Vaillie at 4:30. She was dead—and had been for hours. The two men got back alive to Timberline Cabin at 7:30 p. m.

Then at intervals struggled in men whom the drifts and gale and flying snow and bitter cold of the winter night could not keep back. Each had started as the news reached him that Agnes Vaillie was in danger on Longs Peak. By 10 o'clock had arrived Tom Allen, assistant superintendent of the park, and Jack Moomaw and Walter Finn, park rangers. At 4:30 Tuesday morning Superintendent Roger W. Toll (cousin of Agnes Vaillie) arrived from Denver, with Edmund Rogers, Gorge C. Barnard, William F. Ervin and Carl Blaurock, veteran mountaineers of the Colorado Mountain club. Daylight found them all trying to keep from freezing about a fire kept burning on top of the cabin stove. To recover Agnes Vaillie's body was impossible. At 9:30 all descended to the valley.

Then it was discovered that Herbert Sortland was missing. Volunteers—Casey Rockwell, John Sherman, Ed Andrews, Jack Dillon, Warren Rutledge and others—risked their lives in the vain search that was made below timberline.

Not until Thursday could Agnes Vaillie's body be reached. It lay at an elevation of about 13,300 feet on the north slope, 200 feet back of the edge of the East Face, and about 50 feet above the perpetual snowdrift on the edge of Boulderfield—which is in plain sight from the valley, suggests a flying bird, and is sometimes called "The Dove." Two skis were placed end to end and a third lashed across the joint. The body was strapped to these skis and carried with the aid of ski poles. Eight men carried the body across Boulderfield, relays taking part at frequent intervals. Further down a toboggan could be used.

At Timberline Cabin fluttered the American Flag, worn and frayed from the winter storms. Agnes Vaillie had done patriotic service overseas during the World War. They took down Old Glory and laid it across her body. And so came back Agnes Vaillie from Longs Peak to Tahosa Valley.

Walter Kiener, badly frost-bitten and partly snow-blind, was driven to Denver for medical treatment; several operations were found necessary. Agnes Vaillie's father paid the hospital bills. The national park service gave him the lookout station.

The body of Walter Sortland was not found until February 25—in the Valley, within a stone's throw of the main road and of shelter. Kiener's official gaze must pass over the spot several times a day. And he cannot look at Longs Peak without seeing "The Dove."

Master Craftsman

Either the burglars in France have exquisite sensibilities or the press agents are adepts at the profession. Consider the case of a burglar who broke into a house, packed up all the valuables ready to take away, and found that the tenant was no other than the famous Mme. Duflous, whom he had seen many times behind the footlights at the Stricken with remorse, he thereupon left everything he had planned to take, and added this note: "I would not for anything in the world give you pain. But you must permit me to carry off some photographs. Your radiant beauty and your equal goodness of heart will forgive this petty larceny."

Heavy Inheritance Tax

Perhaps the oldest and certainly the most drastic of inheritance tax laws in the world is that of the Igorot tribes of the Philippines. When an Igorot tribesman dies, half his property is sold off and the proceeds used to defray the cost of a canoe or wake. The cadaver being smoked into a mummy in a burial chair, sits by and views the orgy, one of wine and feasting and utter abandonment to the carnal pleasures—save alone abuse of virtue, which is not known to the Igorots and if perpetrated would entail the death penalty. American government is the sole uplifting influence amongst these tribes.

Permanent roads are a good investment—not an expense

How Much Are Poor Roads Costing You?

5,000,000 of America's 18,000,000 motor vehicles are recognized as an economic necessity on the farm.

Is your car giving the full efficiency of which it is capable—and at the lowest cost per mile possible?

Not if you are jolting over bumps and ruts. Not if you get stuck in the mud.

In addition to the time you thus lose along the way, you also pay from one to four cents a mile more in gasoline, tire and repair bills than you would pay on permanently paved highways.

Think, too, how many so-called improved roads have gone to pieces within the past few years, thereby piling up huge maintenance and rebuilding costs.

Contrast all this with the record of Concrete Roads—the roads that have repair built out and maintenance built in. Firm, rigid and unyielding, free of bumps, ruts, holes, mud and dust, they are, in every way, the most economical roads.

Tell your highway officials you want more Concrete Roads. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

Let us give you all the facts about Concrete Roads, including the experience of other communities. Ask for our free booklet, R-3.

Community Building

Many Points Involved in Community Planning

What is genuine community planning? asks a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Our present city planning deals for the most part with the bare physical framework of the city. Community planning comprehends not merely the physical layout of streets, avenues, blocks and traffic arteries, but the whole environment, including the work, the housing, the recreation, the customs and habits of the people who make up the community. Rouseau said that houses make a town, people make a city; and we may add that the combination of houses and people provide the situation for the community planner.

Now, in dealing with his individual client, the architect does not merely pay attention to his rough physical requirements, to drainage and circulation, and so forth; he also pays attention to the specific use or uses to which a building is to be put, and to the needs and interests of his client, interpreted in the broadest sense.

Community planning carries this habit of mind over to the community as a whole. Just as it is impossible to design a good house if the owner wants to spend the greater part of his available capital on a range, so it is impossible to do any effective community planning if the majority of people are more interested in making financial values than in creating for themselves the real good that comes from houses well-placed, and community buildings which serve every member to their maximum capacity.

Writer's Strong Plea for Zoned Villages

During a recent rather extended automobile trip the writer saw two kinds of villages. One kind looked entirely commercialized, unkempt, a hodge-podge. They looked like places without pride of civic spirit. The other kind were the opposite. They appeared to point with pride to one section and say to the visitor, "This is our business section," and to the other, surrounding section, and say, "Here are our homes, our lawns, our flowers and gardens. This section is sacred from the sordidness of commercialization."

The difference was just this: The beautiful villages were zoned, the unattractive were not zoned. In the latter, here and there, scattered up and down the lines of homes, were gas stations, sidewalk pumps, lunch-stands, the "Dew Drop Inn," the hot-dog counters. Tom, Dick and Harry, little or big, had been allowed to do as they pleased without let or hindrance. In the zoned villages all was neat and equally as prosperous.—Canton (N. Y.) Plain Dealer.

Before Fire Gets Start

Nobody, whether he be householder or business man, who ever has "had" a fire, can fail to understand how vitally important in combating it successfully are "the first five minutes."

Used intelligently at the very start, a small quantity of water thrown at the base of a fire, or a hand extinguisher well directed, may be effective far beyond the operations of an entire municipal fire department later on.

To keep a small, a trivial blaze from swelling speedily into a big, an uncontrollable fire—this is really the fundamental purpose of such an installation as the automatic sprinkler. Motorization of fire apparatus has for its primary object the extinguishment of that "little fire, which, being suffered, rivers cannot quench"; in other words, the motor-driven engine "gets the jump on" the little fire and, of course, speed of warning, coupled with accuracy, constitutes the whole aim of the new highly developed telegraph alarm.—Safeguarding America Against Fire.

Septic Tank Works Well

The septic tank is approved by health authorities throughout the country. It has been used long enough to establish its desirability. When it is of sufficient size to insure the complete process there is little or no sediment to collect, and if used for what it is intended it will serve for many years without cleaning or other attention.

Unnecessary Fire Loss

Buildings consumed each year by fires in the United States, if placed on lots of 65-foot frontage, would line both sides of a street extending from Chicago to New York. The value of the buildings would be more than $500,000,000. They are burned at the rate of $60,000 each hour, day and night.

Condemns Filling Station

A gasoline and oil service station in an exclusive residence section has been ruled a nuisance in a recent decision handed down by the Fayette county (Ohio) court of appeals. The decision will be of interest to real estate boards of the national association, to property owners and to students of city zoning. "By the universal trend of adjudicated cases," the decision states, "an exclusive residential section is accorded certain immunity against offensive trades and business."

THE BOOK SHELVES

There was great excitement among the books on the bookcase shelves.

The Books Had Been Squeezed.

"I wonder if I'll leave you," said a fourth book to a fifth.

"Maybe," said the fifth. "But I believe we'll more or less keep our old positions, only we'll be able to stretch a little and we won't have to be so cramped. Dear me, but it will be nice not to have to be huddled up as I've been."

"My pages are just miserable. And my covers don't like it at all. They've been threatening to break and really do a little harm. Yes, they've been threatening to do that for some time."

"Oh, see," said another book. "I believe they are ready now."

The books all kept very quiet and watched what was going on.

The books that were too far back couldn't watch what was going on but they were told the news by the books in front.

A little girl had been getting more books all the time. She was building a fine library for herself with the help of her father and her mother and her aunts and uncles and with little gifts of money which she had saved.

And the books had been mounting up so that there had been no room any more in the bookcase.

She had put the books way in, along the shelving of the bookcase, as far as she could. Then she had put other books in front of these.

Then she had put books sideways over the tops of the books that did not reach up to the top of their shelf and to the bottom of the shelf above.

The books had been squeezed so tightly together in the bookcase that they had hardly been able to stand it. They liked to be close together in a friendly fashion.

But they had not liked to be so terribly jammed. It had been painful to be so jammed. And they had somehow not been pulled out of their shelves and looked at so much lately.

Their owner would stand before them and say:

"Oh, dear, I don't believe I'll bother to get that adventure story out now. I had wanted to reread that exciting chapter just before the end but I haven't much time and it is so hard to get at it."

That had been the way for some little time.

And the books shoved way back had not been able to see anything at all.

The titles on the back parts of the books liked to be able to see a little.

Their owner had said:

"I really have to memorize where I've put my books."

Now the news had spread from the books on the outside of the books way inside.

"There are going to be new shelves built along the wall," was the news of the books.

And now at last the new shelves had been built—a bookcase of white-painted shelves and the carpenter was putting the shelves up along the wall.

Then their owner had a glorious time. The books were brought out and newly arranged. They were put in much the same order as they had been before, but none were put on top of each other. Each had a position of its own. And they were looked at more than ever now. Oh, it was a great relief.

CRETONNE FOR HOUSE WEAR; SWEATERS MORE GORGEOUS

CRETONNE seems to be wielding an hypnotic spell over all fashiondom. This persuasive material actually cajoled some appreciative somebody into giving it a tryout as a medium for a full-length summer topcoat. To say that the experiment was a success, but mildly expresses it. Once the first cretonne coat made its appearance, behold! all fashiondom went cretonne-coat mad. Cretonne coats to the right of us, cretonne coats to the left of us, and up to the last day of summer cretonne coats reigned in countless number.

At any rate we have learned to appreciate the charm of this beautiful material and we are loth to allow it to settle back into the conventional role it once played as medium for draperies and household decoration. No, indeed!

Then there are newly designed cretonne aprons which are entrancing. The picture reveals a winsome model. If there is such a thing as a "dress-up" apron, this is it, for it is actually piped with heavy black satin, which of course places it in the patrician class.

Some there are who prefer the solid colored apron trimmed with cretonne. Very effective color schemes are worked out in this way. Chambray in the picture. Knitted of red alpaca with white striped trimming, its colorfulness cannot fail to appeal to the schoolgirl, likewise to the sports enthusiast who graces tennis court and golf links.

In the outfitting of the school and college girl, knitted togs bid fair to play a very important part this fall. The mode insists that the component parts of the costume be carefully selected relative to a perfect ensemble. Good style is expressed in trim sweaters whose accompanying skirt, be it cloth, silk or knitted, partakes of the general scheme, the perky little felt hat is usually selected in rose, or maize, blue or green, for the body of the apron, with borderings of cretonne, also pockets which carry flowers and motifs which reflect the basic color. If one has leisure, the prettiest house dresses and aprons are elaborated with applique of bouquets cut from the cretonne. In fact, the idea of cretonne applique is one which applies to satin and silk backgrounds as well.

In the spirited election now going on within the precincts of sweaterdom, the successful candidate, so far, is a very reserved and conservative type. Apparently the requisite qualification for enrollment in the list of contestants for style supremacy is that of smart simplicity. Without a doubt, it is the sweater which boasts long sleeves and high neck, especially "turrelating itself to the entire by virtue of its matched shade.

Ombre effects are a new color note in advance sweater modes. While the tailored aspect is maintained, the novelty coloring is of captivating charm. There is something eminently fascinating in a sweater which is daintily white at the top, taking on a lavender tint, then a deeper tone until at its hip line it develops into a glorious pansy purple. Cloth of purple is suggested as a tasteful medium for a proper skirt to complete this costume. Perhaps the color scale of the sweater graduates from white through shell pink and tones of increasing intensity until it climaxes into that popular and handsome shade, hots de rose.

Mrs. Lee Suffered From All These Troubles, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well

Terre Haute, Indiana.—"I was weak and run-down and in such a nervous condition that I could hardly do my work. I was tired all the time and dizzy, had no appetite and could not sleep. I tried different medicines for a year but they did not help me. Then my husband saw the ad. for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and had me take it. I regained my strength and never felt better in my life. It completely restored me to health. I had practically no suffering when my baby boy was born and he is very strong and healthy. I know that the Vegetable Compound is the best medicine a woman can take before and after childbirth for health and strength. Theatre Gets New 101 Ranch Film

"Trail Dust," a thrilling story of the old west, recently filmed on the world-famous 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, will be shown at the Ideal Theatre next Saturday, Sept. 12th.

Here's a great story of frontier life, replete with thrills and a very human dramatic interest. No other place in the universe could afford the possibilities for a production of the old west as the famous Miller Bros. 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, with their unlimited pioneer equipment and the variety of scenery. From a realistic standpoint "Trail Dust" has never been equalled on the screen. The Hollywood cast is adequate to all the demands of the splendid story and the picture, as a whole, is the greatest current production based on frontier history.

The wagon trains, the wonderful Indian scenes, especially the marvelous Indian village and the raid sequence, in which the town is burned, the buffalo stampede—all the red highlights of "Trail Dust" are sufficient to place this picture above the ordinary production by several degrees. It is very much worth seeing.

Hand the Dollars You Spend to Your Neighbor

When you hand the dollars you spend to your neighbor you are handing them to someone who will re-spend them in this community. And the more dollars we can get spent and re-spent in this community, the greater it will grow as a trading center. You are protecting and cultivating your own interests by making this a bigger and better trading center. Give New Meanings

One wonders where language will bring up one of these days. Every new dictionary is thicker than the last. Is it that there are too many new words, or is it that people are using words in so many various ways that note has to be taken of all of them?

There are a few newspapers that are still sticklers for the use of words. One of them, for instance, will not permit any of its writers to use the word "secure" for "obtain." The newspaper is right and yet it seems to be dipping back the sea with a teaspoon as against the flood of use. More people, more newspapers appear to be using "secure" where they mean "obtain." So it goes, many more words are being used in their figurative sense until the usage becomes matter of fact.

So one may ask, where is our language tendency finally to bring up? The final effect may be that we shall cultivate the use of so many words and cultivate some of them so far from their original meaning that obscurity rather than clarity will result. —Lansing State Journal.

"Rocking Stones" Are Credited to Glaciers

How did the Bowder stone in Borrowdale get to its present position? How did the many "perched boulders" and "rocking stones" hundreds of tons in weight, yet poised so lightly that a human hand can move them, get into these peculiar positions?

They were gently deposited by melting ice, as gently as ever mother laid her baby to rest in its cradle. For ice is the king of dumpers, and the former presence of glaciers accounts for all the erratic boulders in the world, says London Answers.

Some of these curious rocks are of tremendous size. The biggest in England is the Bowder stone, but there is one in Switzerland, far away from any present-day glacier, which weighs 3,000 tons and contains 45,000 cubic feet of rock.

And visitors to the Alps can see the same processes at work today, as huge rocks, which no traction engine could haul, are borne along very slowly but nevertheless very surely on the surface of the glaciers.

Removing Temptation

A friend tells me that he attended church the other night where the pastor delivered an interesting lecture which was illustrated by stereopticon slides in the darkened auditorium. At a certain point in the lecture the collectors received the offering, the room still remaining quite dark. The narrator says when the collection plate reached him—after having been handed along by fifty or sixty persons—it had only about 19 cents in it, and he held back the silver dollar which he had expected to give and fished out a nickel for the plate. He said: "If forty or fifty folks, after listening to that splendid lecture, couldn't contribute more than 15 or 20 cents, my silver dollar might tempt some one to steal it from the plate, so I clipped in a nickel and played safe."—Pol Daniels in Howard Courant.

Introduction of Straw Hats

The recent heat introduces the subject of straw hats and straw-hat stories. In 1796 a chancellor of the exchequer imposed a duty on hats. All headgear made of "felt or wool or beaver or any leather or japanned hats," came within the scope of the tax. But an Edinburgh merchant, astute enough to observe that straw was not included in the legal enumeration of materials used, introduced straw hats to Scotland for the first time, early in the summer of 1798. Unfortunately for the enterprising hatter, an amendment to the act, within a few weeks, rendered the popular tax-evading novelty liable to payment. The act, which remained in force until 1811, allowed exemption to nightcaps.

Beat Everything in Sight

There is a good one about a little old man who was given his first watch the other day as a gift on his ninth birthday. His aunt tells the story. "Although he seemed pleased," she said, "when he first opened the box his enthusiasm was quite restrained. But he dashed into the house on his return from school that day, and exclaimed jubilantly. "My, but I've got a dandy watch!" "I'm glad you like it," said his mother, truly pleased at his pleasure. "Yes," he said, "it's half an hour ahead of Jim's watch, and it's a whole hour ahead of the clock in the drug store! Gee, it beats them all!"—St. Paul Dispatch.

Wax Effigies of the Dead

It was once the curious custom in England to carry wax effigies of the dead—if they were distinguished enough—in their funeral processions. It was also customary to leave the effigies near the grave for some time thereafter, and the mourning friends of the deceased used to compose elegies, laments and similar productions which they would write out and pin to the clothing of the dead. A number of the quaint old customs are still preserved.

Notice to Subscribers

A large number of Review readers mail their papers to friends or relatives after they have read it. These papers now require 4 cents postage. The recent advance in postal rates on certain classes of mail hit the newspapers heavy. The publishers mailing rates were advanced also, but the individual who mails a copy of the Review must pay more than the paper cost him to mail it, so it will be cheaper to subscribe for the Review for your friends or relatives; it will save you the trouble and you can keep your paper for future reference, if you wish. But if you prefer to mail your own paper, be sure to put 4 cents postage on.

Tell It To Them

The next time anybody yelps about a typographical error in your paper, hand them this:

In an ordinary column there are 10,000 pieces of type, there are 7 possible wrong positions for each letter, there are 70,000 chances to make errors, and millions of possible transpositions. In the sentence, "To be or not to be," by transpositions alone 2,759,022 errors can be made.—Ex.

Dr. W. C. Rountree, M. D.,
Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Doctor: I had Pellagra. I was very nervous, had stomach trouble, lost weight, hands blistered and peeled off, very dependent. I thought that I would lose my mind. I took over 700 hypodermics and it got worse all the time. I heard of Roundtree's Pellagra Treatment, took three treatments and am now so well. The last treatment was taken 18 months ago and I have no recurring symptoms.
Mrs. W. W. Powell

Dr. W. C. Rountree
Texarkana, Texas.

Dear Doctor: I had been having stomach trouble and losing weight; my skin had turned brown. I had a general weakness all over my body, felt tired all the time and could not sleep well at night. I had changed my diet often trying to get rest, as I was very nervous. One of my neighbors had Pellagra and told me possibly I had it. I did not believe at that time that I did have Pellagra, but I tried one of your treatments and got immediate relief. My nervousness was at once relieved; my stomach cured and I am now a well man. I only took two ten dollar treatments which cured me.

W. W. Fletcher, Carrollton, Texas.

STORM WRECKS SHENANDOAH; 14 ARE KILLED

BIG DIRIGIBLE BREAKS UP IN FOUR PIECES; IS SCATTERED OVER AREA OF TEN MILES.

HER COMMANDER DIES

The Shenandoah Was the First Craft of Its Kind to be Built in the United States.

Cambridge, Ohio.—Whirled through the air by a storm, twisted and tossed until she broke into pieces, the giant navy dirigible Shenandoah hurled fourteen of her crew to their deaths near Ava, Ohio, and then fell, a total wreck.

Commander Zachary Lansdowne perished with his ship.

In addition to thirteen dead, two are injured and four of the crew are unaccounted for. The remainder of the crew are safe.

Members of the crew were scattered over an area of ten miles as the giant airship whirled and twisted in the air, tossing them from the cabins swung beneath the gas bag.

Those who witnessed the disaster from the ground described the Shenandoah as "spinning like a giant revolving door" before she finally broke in two.

The dirigible finally reached the ground in four pieces—scattered over ten miles. First, the keel broke off and fell, one part directly to the earth in a farmer's barnyard, and the other ten miles away—carrying eight of the crew to the ground with it uninjured.

Without keel the airship careened in the storm beyond all control. Then a seam opened and the bag broke apart, the forward half dropping to earth nose first and the stern drifting miles away and landing as it was almost lost to sight.

People up early to watch for the coming of the great air cruiser saw her spin and twist and plunge as the gale, as if angry, vented its whims upon the ship, tossing it as if it were but a toy.

Buffeted by the storm the giant craft was blown from its course to the southeast.

Unable to withstand the gusts, the ship crashed, cracking in two.

The first section shot upward, dropping the pilot cabin, which crashed to the ground on the Floyd Davis farm. Commander Lansdowne was in this cabin.

The Shenandoah was the first craft of its kind to be built in the United States.

Shenandoah, which was built at a cost of $2,000,000, had left Lakehurst, N. J., for a trip through the Middle West. It was her second attempt to invade the Mississippi Valley, she having been turned back by the windstorms during the summer.

It was 680 feet long, weighed thirty-seven tons and required a hangar 201 feet longer than the U. S. Capitol. Its framework was made of the light but firm metal duralumin, and the craft had twenty great gas compartments, several dozen gasoline compartments and huge water tanks.

LOSE ALL HOPE OF FINDING MISSING FLYERS

Fruitlessly Comb Pacific for Men
Missing for 48 Hours.

Honolulu, T. H.—Honolulu has abandoned all hope for the rescue of Commander John Rodgers and the four men who were with him on the navy seaplane PN-9 No. 1.

While the search continued, with all available naval vessels refueled, and scouting planes, pressed into service, no news of the missing flyers have been received nearly forty-eight hours after the huge flying machine, crippled by lack of gasoline, had plunged into the storm-tossed waters of the Pacific.

It was indicated, but not confirmed, that the navy's search for her lost men might be abandoned. Admiral J. D. McDonald, in command of the situation here, refused to comment on their possibility.

With the area of search being widened constantly, the same vessels that first began sweeping through and over the seas in the vicinity of the island of Maui were continuing their unsuccessful hunt. The plane tender Arostook, the destroyer Farragut and the mine sweeper Tanager, flashing their positions back and forth and bearing more and more to the southward, were aided by a dozen submarines and the squadrons of Pearl Harbor planes.

But in the messages that trickled through to navy headquarters here, there was not the slightest hint of success from any of the searchers.

Coolidge Shocked at Disaster.

Swampscott, Mass.—Shocked at the fate of the navy dirigible Shenandoah, President Coolidge is keeping himself informed of the disaster through press dispatches and information sent him from Washington over the White House telegraph wire. It was said late in the day he probably would have nothing to say for publication. The President has evinced a keen interest in aviation, particularly in the Government's experiments with dirigibles.

PRO OFFICIALS NAMED TO AID MAJOR WHITE

Fletcher Albright and N. A. Baker
Given Places.

Fort Worth, Texas.—Prohibition enforcement chiefs who are to assist Maj. Herbert H. White, new regional prohibition administrator, in combating illegal liquor vending in Oklahoma and Texas, have been named. Appointments will have to come from the head of the prohibition forces in Washington, Maj. White said. However, his recommendations are sure of acceptance, in his belief.

The oath of office was administered to Maj. White by Arch Tyler, one of the Texas enforcement heads.

Frank Cole, former chief of the Texas dry forces, whose headquarters have been in Austin, has been recommended as assistant administrator in charge of permissive work. W. D. Smith, formerly in charge of general prohibition enforcement agents in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, was selected as assistant administrator in charge of enforcement work.

Both of these men have had wide experience in this branch of Federal administration and will make highly competent aids for Maj. White in carrying out the Texas and Oklahoma part of the intensive campaign planned against bootleggers by Gen. Lincoln A. Andrews of Washington, new national head of the prohibition forces, it is believed here.

The three judicial districts of Oklahoma were placed under the direction of M. F. Meadows, former prohibition director for Oklahoma. He will continue to have his headquarters at Oklahoma City.

The northern district of Texas will be under the direction of Arch C. Tyler, former group head prohibition agent at Fort Worth. Mr. Tyler is the oldest man in point of service in the prohibition forces of Texas. He will continue to have his office in this city.

N. A. Baker of Hamilton, formerly a member of the general agent's staff at San Antonio, will be in charge of the southern district with headquarters at San Antonio.

The eastern district of the State will be in charge of Fletcher Albright, with temporary headquarters at Tyler. Albright was formerly group head agent of that district.

THE TAX PUBLICITY LAW IS OPPOSED

President Coolidge to Urge Abolition of Provisions.

Swampscott, Mass.—President Coolidge brought the tenth week of his vacation to a close by greeting at White Court the American delegation to the Pan-American Congress of Highways, holding one of his semi-weekly conferences with newspaper men and arranged to discuss the transportation situation with Senator Watson of Indiana, ranking Republican of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The position of the President on various public questions on which he is keeping tab from the seclusion of the summer White House, as outlined, showed that he favored repeal of the publicity provision of the tax law, believes the Shipping Board must put an end to friction among its members and is still determined to take no hand in the anthracite shutdown which became effective Sept. 1.

It also was disclosed that Mr. Coolidge will hold himself in readiness to return to Washington any time after Labor Day, has no speeches in contemplation aside from the one he will deliver probably Oct. 6 at the American Legion convention in Omaha; has no present intentions of making a trip to the Pacific Coast prior to the congressional elections of 1926 and has given no thought to returning here next summer for a vacation.

The making public of income tax returns, as was done Sept. 1 by internal revenue collectors in compliance with law, has the effect, President Coolidge believes, of interfering with the collection of revenue.

Rafael Tiejó Is Held.

He was in the Mexican army for fifteen years and served under Presidents Diaz and Carranza. He has a wife and three children.

Think Three Lives Lost.

Westfield, N. Y.—The excursion steamer Colonial has been destroyed by fire with the probable loss of three lives about a mile and a half off Barcelona harbor, near here. Those missing and believed to have been drowned were Thomas McCuern of Cleveland, assistant engineer of the vessel; Earl Duncan, Erie, Pa., second cook and Paul Bryan, Cleveland, wheelman. Sixteen men and one woman were rescued by the coast guard rum chaser No. 123 of Dunkirk.

GERMANY NOW PREPARING TO ENTER LEAGUE

Berlin Concerned With Military Control and Cologne Evacuation.

Berlin.—Culminating a prolonged game of diplomatic chess, Germany is preparing to enter the League of Nations and it is even possible that the German application for membership may be placed before the sixth annual meeting of the league, which begins immediately. Whether or not the German application is made in September, Germany will apply for membership, and that at no very late date.

This, in principle, has been certain ever since the allies dissipated Germany's principal objection by virtually granting her a permanent seat on the league council, and thereby granting her equality in voice and dignity with the other powers. The remaining difficulties are of less importance to Germany.

In order of the importance Germany placed upon them, these secondary questions are:

Fixation of a definite date for the evacuation of the Cologne zone.

A definite understanding on the question of European security.

There is also the problem of Article 16 of the league covenant which pledges league members to assist other members when attacked and to permit the troops of all league members to move across each other's borders. Germany would like exemption from that article.

The evacuation date for the Cologne zone doubtless would be agreed upon by an international conference convened to discuss security and if its discussions were successful, two German demands would be settled thereby.

With the subject of military control Germany is much concerned. No permanent control organization shall be domiciled within the German borders, the Germans insist. They want military control, such as was imposed upon Germany by the Versailles treaty, to be administered from Geneva or some other place outside Germany, with the understanding that control officers would be at liberty to visit Germany if necessary.

In arguing against Article 16, Germany professes to fear that her territory might be made a battleground and the blood of her young men spent in a cause in which she would have no concern. The allies assured Germany some time ago that she alone would have the power to determine the strength of her troops which might take part in such operations.

As to neutrality, in so far as barring German soil to the troops of other league members in the event of trouble, there is scant likelihood that the league would compromise by granting Germany a privilege not possessed by other members, although the Germans assert that their disarmed condition should make them eligible to special treatment. The French reply that Germany is not disarmed.

HANEY REFUSES TO RESIGN HIS JOB

Democrat Declines to Accede to Request of Coolidge.

Washington.—Relations between the Fleet Corporation and the Shipping Board have again been thrown into sharp relief through the refusal of Bert E. Haney, Democrat of Oregon, to resign as a commissioner of the board, at the request of President Coolidge.

Asked to resign because of his efforts to remove President Palmer of the Fleet Corporation, Mr. Haney has refused to accede to any such grounds.

The President only recently made it clear at Swampscott, that as far as he was concerned, Mr. Palmer and not Chairman O'Connor of the Shipping Board, was running the Fleet Corporation. His position was disclosed after differences over budget matters had developed between the two officials but this was followed with the information that he was not contemplating at this time requesting the resignation of any other Shipping Board commissioners.

In his telegram to Mr. Haney Mr. Coolidge said:

"It having come to my attention that you are proposing to remove Admiral Palmer, contrary to the understanding I had with you when I reappointed you, your resignation from the United States Shipping Board is requested."

DEATH CALLS JUDGE DUNLAP IN COLORADO

Was Well Known in Texas and Dallas
in Baking Circles

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Judge O. E. Dunlap of Waxahachie, Texas, died here Sunday morning after a week's illness of pneumonia. He had a nervous breakdown and came to Colorado Springs on Aug. 1, accompanied by his wife and daughter to recuperate. Judge Dunlap was born in Mississippi on Nov. 30, 1849, and moved to Ellis County when 15 years old. He lived in Dallas and moved to Waxahachie forty years ago. He was president of the Citizens National Bank of Waxahachie and chairman of the board of directors at the time of his death. He also was a former member of the executive council of the American Bankers' Association, former president of the Texas Bankers' Association and chairman Texas Council of Defense during the World War and was County Judge of Ellis County three terms. He was interested in Dallas and Italy banks.

Judge Dunlap was married to Ella McDuffie Dec. 31, 1876, and is survived by one daughter, Miss Estelle. The body has been forwarded to Waxahachie, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Royal A. Ferris of Dallas, who were here spending the summer. Burial will take place in Waxahachie.

PLANE BUILDER BACKS FIGHTER IN AIR CHARGE

Aartin Tells How Favorable Tests
Were Ignored and France
Bought Bomber

Washington.—Col. William Mitchell, former head of the Army Air Service, dropped a bomb in official aviation circles here with his charges made in Chicago that the Government had been offered a super-airplane that could make a nonstop flight to Paris with a ton of explosives, and "old fogey ideas" of the Government had prevented the machine from being given a thorough test.

It was believed that Colonel Mitchell was referring to the M.P-1, which was invented by James Martin and claimed by experts testifying in the Congressional investigation of the national aircraft scandal to be capable of making a non-stop flight from Paris to New York, drop two 2,000-pound bombs on New York and then land in Canada.

Martin said that he submitted his designs to the Army and Navy entirely free of charge and offered to furnish bond to the amount of $750,000 that he would produce the bomber according to specifications, but his offer was rejected.

After warning the Government that he would reveal the full details and principle upon which his machine was designed, Martin said, he caused the facts to be published in an aerial magazine. He said:

"France has built my machine. It has established the world's record for efficiency. The French Government has made thorough tests of it and found it could fly across the Atlantic and bombard New York. France is not making the exhibition because she does not wish to spur the other Nations to building similar craft."

It was in 1919, Martin said, that he developed his M.P-1 bomber. He said he wrote a letter to Col. Thurman H. Bane, head of the engineering division of the Army Air Service at the time, asking that a committee of Government aeronautical experts test his machine.

"Then I took it up with the Secretary of War and officials of the air service, but they all said that Bane was the man to see; that whatever he said was final.

J. A. Roche, who is in charge of all airplane design for the army at the McCook Field Experimental Laboratories, admitted that my plans could make a non-stop flight across the ocean and drop two 2,000-pound bombs on Paris.

"The tests have proved that if my designs were applied in the planes used for carrying Government mail, they would reduce the cost of mail transportation from $2.50 per ton mile to thirty cents.

Gay Cafe Ordered Padlocked

Chicago, Ill.—Valentino Inn, one of the gayest of downtown cabarets, has been closed on orders of Mayor William E. Dever. The closing order was issued while a number of guests were dining and dancing. Failure to comply at the time limit, led the authorities to dispatch a squad of police officers to the inn, order the guests out and padlock the place. Mayor Dever held that the cabaret was the gathering place of many undesirable characters and not in keeping with public morality.

The HAPPY HOME By MARGARET BRUCE

WNU Service

Overdoing the Favorite Dish

She was a very young wife and mother—so young that she and her baby daughter both wore their hair bobbed and every one looked astonished that she should have a baby at all. She was a very young cook, too, and hadn't yet got beyond the point where half of her culinary experiments turned out to be woeful failures.

She certainly could make wonderful Queen of Puddings, though. Her youthful husband smacked his lips over it the first time she made it, and declared it the finest dish he had ever eaten. She grew pink with pride, and had it again two days later. He was enthusiastic about it again, and made almost as much fuss over it as he had the first time. Not quite so much fuss, you know, but nearly as much. So she had it again at the end of the week. This time he merely said:

"Ah, Queen of Puddings tonight."

When she served the dish again a few days later, he said nothing at all. He ate it heartily, and even scraped the last bit from his dessert glass—but he said nothing at all.

The very young cook gazed at him long and silently, and her eyelids narrowed wisely. It was three weeks or more before Queen of Puddings was served at that little table-for-three. Both the baby and the baby's father had forgotten all about it. Then suddenly it appeared at dinner one night, in all its custardy richness, its raisiny interior, its bit of quince jelly spread under a blanket of delicately browned meringue.

"Gosh!" exploded the head of the house, sniffing it rapturously. "Look at that heavenly sight. Queen of Puddings, as 'im a starvin' man!" And he took three servings of it, and gave the baby a bit of its wholesomeness.

Queen of Puddings appears on that table only at rare intervals now. It takes a birthday, an anniversary, or a visit from one of the young husband's college friends to bring it about. And never, never is it greeted with silence or taken as a matter of course.

The Little Odd Table

Quite as much of a necessity in the home as the "occasional chair" of which I wrote recently is the little odd table, placed with apparent casualness but intentional forethought in various corners needing just this touch.

Did you ever go into a room, with your hands full—a book to be returned, perhaps, a package you had brought along from your shopping, or some letters to be mailed—and found absolutely no spot where you could lay your impedimenta down while you visited with your hostess? There are many rooms which boast an overloaded library table as the only available resting place for temporary burdens. Frequently books, vases, magazines, ash trays, and other articles have to be shoved aside to make room for the caller's handbag, book, or bundle.

The little odd table near the window, beside the hall door, or over against the wall, comes in very handy at such a time. A small half-table or console fills such a need; a lift-leaf card table is always beautiful as well as convenient; and as for the quaint little butterfly table, shown in today's sketch, it is a joy to behold as well as a welcome surface for the gloves and purse, the emptied cup of tea, or the book of snapshots brought from an adjoining room.

In the dining room of a friend of mine, a little odd table is brought to the hostess' side as the dessert is concluded, bearing the pretty coffee service. It is just large enough for the oblong tray and when not in use it stands unobtrusively between the windows, holding a silver bowl of fruit.

In the sunroom and the bedroom, the little odd table is always pretty and appropriate. It stands at the elbow of the needlewoman, holding her workbasket, scissors and spools. It can be moved near the window for the mending process, or over near the fire to hold the reading lamp. Nests of odd tables, little collapsible drop-leaf tables of an excessive narrowness, and similar easily lifted stands bring gold comfort to both family and guests in any house.
