in Italy, on boarding the train, the brakeman brogue was that of a southerner. Turning suddenly, I recognized Steve Foster. On reaching Fort Worth, I changed cars to the Atwell Northeastern, a fellow passenger informed that Atwell's growth was due to an oil gusher located on the Otis Purvis farm.

As we pulled into the city line its, I noticed an exclusive residential section called Eddleman Addition, on a signboard near the railroad track was an advertisement of Foster Coffee, the firm being owned by Mr. John Foster. At the station the red cap who carried my luggage to the service car turned out to be Leonard Pillans. As I rode along a large wholesale house caught my eye for a sign read Sherman Pillans Wholesale Grocery

The hotel at which I stopped was a twenty-story building run by Bill and Osie Drigger. The clerk spoke to me and I immediately recognized Leo Purvis. After resting for awhile I went out to dinner at the Cafe, I noticed two flapperish waitresses who proved to be Donie Black and Marie Purvis. Walking along the streets I was so engrossed in the sky scrapers that I bumped into a woman with a bundle of clothes under her arm. She turned around and stared at me. I was shocked to see Lois Mitchell. There was quite a bit of excitement in the middle of the street caused by some officers trying to arrest a man. The officers were Sam Jones, Mr. Brashear and Elvin Rouse. In asking who the escaping man was they replied, Nathan Foster. The excitement was too great for me and when I regained consciousness I found myself in Dr. Truett Foster's office.

Wishing to get out of the crowded streets I took a sight seeing bus. We drove out of the busy city in a Northeastern direction and in a few minutes reached a small suburb called Scranton addition. On the one business street of the small suburb a large sign read J. H.

Valuable goods were being produced in the Midwest, and the mighty Mississippi was our only link to the sea. But the outlet in New Orleans belonged to France. So President Jefferson sent agents to Paris to negotiate for the addition of New Orleans. Surprisingly, Napoleon offered to sell the entire Louisiana Territory for only $15,000,000. And that included what is today Arkansas, Missouri, Jowa, North and South Dakora, Nebraska, Louislana, Oklahoma, most of Minnesotz, and parts of Wyorning and Colorado.
