PEANUT GROWERS WILL MEET HERE

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

The purpose of this column has ever been to paint local happenings in a humorous manner, however from time to time we have diverted from that policy to "sermonize" upon matters of importance.

This week it is entirely fitting that we call to the attention of our citizenship a serious matter confronting this town and section.

Cross Plains has enjoyed rail road facilities exactly 23 years. During that span of time this place grew from a few hundred settlers to the largest town in a radius of 30 miles. The rail road made Cross Plains.

And now the very cause of our growth is being threatened. In fact it appears that Cross Plains—as well as Rising Star, Pioneer and all towns along the local M.K. & T. branch—may be deprived of rail transportation.

Lack of patronage, we are very authentically informed, is causing the local road to operate at a loss. Such action will not be continued for long.

Neighbors, if we want to keep our rail road and our citizens, who are dependent upon it, we can not merely sit idly by and offer the entree our good wishes. We must patronize it and avail ourselves to rail facilities.

Should the rail road "pull out" this city and school district would lose one of the largest tax payers, perhaps 10 families and an enterprise that would doubtlessly never be replaced.

This matter needs some serious thought and constructive action. If Cross Plains loses a rail road, don't think firms like the Oil Well Supply Company, who ship here in carload lots from New York and Pennsylvania, could or would remain here.

The Oil Well Supply Company is merely an example; there are other local concerns directly dependent upon rail service.

For the sake of stressing the importance of our rail road and how it benefits the town let us consider the case of the Oil Well Supply Company.

The Oil Well has maintained a store here after leaving most every other town in this section. The local branch serves oil men from 14 counties and has made this town, along with Ranger, headquarters for the petroleum industry in West Central Texas.

The oil men who come here merely to buy from this supply company spend hundreds of dollars in Cross Plains. The loss of this source of money—not to mention taxes and other items that would be lost should the Oil Well move—would be greatly felt.

Now we are not an alarmist and don't want to cause anyone any undue concern. But this matter is important. If you want a rail road in Cross Plains it is time to act. We have our information from a reliable source.

Cottonwood Basket Ball Team Wins Everything Except The Tom Green County Courthouse At San Angelo Tournament

TWO COTTONWOOD ATHLETES CHOSEN ON MYTHICAL FIVE

Cottonwood high school ball team returned Sunday morning from the Southwest Texas high school basket ball tournament at San Angelo, where they won virtually everything but the Tom Green county courthouse.

The Callahan team won the final and deciding game of the tournament Saturday night by trimming Crews 39 to 25. Perhaps the most spectacular game of the tournament—and one of the most lopsided contests ever heard of—was between Cottonwood and Paintrock. The Cottonwood boys won the fray by a score of 100 to 9. Other victories for the local team included a 28 to 16 triumph over Forsan, and a 20 to 8 victory over Coleman.

For winning the tournament eight individual miniature gold basket balls were presented members of the Cottonwood squad.

Then to claim more honors and more trophies, Cottonwood placed two players—James Strahan and Durwood Varner—on the all tournament team. Each boy was presented another gold basket ball.

San Angelo, Coleman and Forsan each placed one man on the all-tournament team, but to Cottonwood alone went the honor of having two players on the mythical five.

James Strahan, Cottonwood pivot man, was high scorer of the tournament with 60 odd points.

Cottonwood supporters left Saturday morning in a specially chartered bus to witness the closing games of the San Angelo tourney and see their home team win in a walk.

HOWARD PAYNE WINS OVER COTTONWOOD 5

Cottonwood high school basket ball team lost to Howard Payne College's highly touted varsity five Monday night 42 to 39, in a game played in the Yellow-Jackets gymnasium. The contest was "nip and tuck" from start to finish, with the high school boys constantly threatening to finish ahead of the collegians.

"Red" Bragg, Cottonwood coach, is a graduate of Howard Payne and was selected as all Texas conference forward last year, while playing with the Yellow-Jackets.

Kendrick Named General Chairman Of President's Birthday Ball To Be Held In Cross Plains January 31st

President Franklin D. Roosevelt has again lent the prestige of his birthday anniversary—his fifty third—in behalf of all who have been afflicted with infantile paralysis.

More than 5,600 balls have been planned for Wednesday, January 30, in communities where they were held last year, according to Ike H. Kendrick, local postmaster, who has been named general chairman of the Cross Plains president's ball.

70% Remains Here

Contrary to the program followed last year when $1,000,000 was turned over an endowment to the Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, 70 cents out of every dollar of the local proceeds will remain in the local community for aiding local victims of paralysis. The remaining 30 cents will be turned over to the national committee for delivery to the president, to be presented by him to the President's Birthday Ball com-

PLACE FOR F. D. R.'S NATAL BALL YET TO BE SELECTED

Plans were incomplete yesterday as to where the president's birthday ball would be held in Cross Plains. The Review was assured, by Mr. Kendrick, however, he said the function will be staged Wednesday night, January 30.

Last year slightly more than $68.00 was raised in Cross Plains for the campaign to "stamp out infantile paralysis." Mr. Kendrick was also chairman of last year's ball.

Full details of the "party" will be published in next weeks Review.

mission for Infantile Paralysis Research, which he has created of eleven leaders in national philanthropy and research: viz., Col. Henry L. Doherty, chairman; Jeremiah Milbank, vice chairman; Paul DeKruif, secretary; Edward S. Harkness, treasurer; Mrs. Nicholas Brady, Felix M. Warburg, Sen. James Couzens, John S. Burke, Edsel B. Ford, Lessing Rosenwald and Raymond B. Fosdick.

This commission will organize on a year-round basis in an effort to wipe the disease from the face of the earth. Its organization is an indication of the fact that war against infantile paralysis has grown from something of a minor or local interest to a major national movement. Such a movement is expected to not only raise huge sums for re-research, but also to redouble the effort of scientists who seek a preventive for the disease. Col. Doherty, chairman for the 1934 birthday ball, is again chairman this year. All of the commission's members are prominent in philanthropic and re-research work.

LOTIEF TO OFFER FOUR BILLS THIS SESSION, HE SAYS

Cecil A. Lotief, State Representative from this district, told the Review this week before leaving his home here for Austin to attend sessions of the legislature that he would introduce four bills for the consideration of the "new" House. They are:

1—An utility anti-discrimination bill, aimed at preventing an established utility to destroy competition by cutting rates. The bill would affirm the right of a community to fix minimum rates and compel a company which reduces its rates in one community to lower rates all over its system to the same level. Cutting a rate would be accepted as prima facie evidence of intention to destroy competition under the measure, Lotief said.

2—An intangible assets tax bill which would provide for collection of taxes against pipe lines, utility concerns and so forth on the basis of revenues as compared to renditions of real property.

3—A bill to lower the state poll tax charge to $1.00.

4—A bill to cut the automobile registration fee in half.

GOVERNMENT WILL BUY 500 MORE LOCAL CATTLE

George W. Barnes Assistant Drouth Director, has notified County Agent Ross B. Jenkins that Callahan County is allowed a new quota of 500 cattle. All cattle must be bought before January 13th. The will make 11,000 head for Callahan County to be sold to the government relief organization. This will mean an aggregate amount of about $145,000 that is realized by the cattlemen of the county.

Only stock of two years and over will be bought, according to a telegram received by County Agent Ross B. Jenkins from Fort Worth Wednesday morning. The appraiser who will buy the cattle will be in Baird Friday and Saturday, January 11 and 12.

Mrs. Paul Boase was a business visitor in Baird Tuesday.

A LAUGH A MINUTE IS GUARANTEED AT AUDITORIUM TONITE

A laugh a minute is promised all who attend a "Stunt Night" program in the Cross Plains high school auditorium tonight—Friday, January 11, the Review was told yesterday morning. An admission charge of 10 and 15 cents will be charged, the proceeds from which will be used to purchase new furniture for the stage in the high school auditorium.

Stunts will be presented by the Wednesday Study Club, the Lions Club, Junior Study Club, seventh grade and all high school classes, Dramatic Club, Speech Arts Department and possibly other organizations. The program is scheduled to last one hour and a half.

Rehearsals have been held the past week and those who have witnessed the practices state that "a swell program with a laugh a minute" is guaranteed.

Curtain will rise for the first stunt promptly at seven thirty. The entertainment is under the sponsorship and direction of the Speech Arts Department of Cross Plains high school of which Miss Novalyne Price is the head.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Joe Lilly, prominent farmer of the Sabanno community, to Miss Lorena Woods, formerly of Blanke. The ceremony was solemnized at Coleman, December second, 1934, with Rev. J. A. Sicleoff, Methodist pastor, reading the ring ceremony.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Lilly are well known in Cross Plains as well as throughout this locality. Their marriage came as a surprise to their many friends. They are making their home on the groom's farm.

The Friendship class of the Methodist church will have a cooked food sale at Higginbotham's store here Saturday, the Review was told by Miss Enid Gwathmey yesterday. Proceeds from the sale will be used to furnish the Sunday School room of the class.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Henkle had as their guests last week end Mr. Henkle's sister, Miss Anita Henkle of Wheatly, Ill., and Mr. Bill Hoskinson of Norman, Oklahoma.

Mrs. W. C. Wilkerson of Carbon is visiting friends here.

OLD AGE PENSION RALLY TO BE HELD SATURDAY EVENING

An old age pension rally will be held in the auditorium of the Methodist church here Saturday night, the Review was told yesterday by L. H. Maddux.

Mr. Maddux's announcement to the Review concerning the meeting follows:

ACTION THRILLERS ON LIBERTY CARD FOR COMING WEEK

"Hell Bent for Love", Friday and Saturday with Tim McCoy; "Embarrassing Moments", Sunday matinee Monday and Tuesday with Chester Morris and Marion Nixon; and "Fugitive Lady", Wednesday and Thursday, with Neil Hamilton and Florence Rice, is the billing at the Liberty theater here for the next seven days.

Concerning the pictures, W. A. Beavers manager of the theater, said last night:

"Plenty of action of the type Tim McCoy fans are enthusiastic over is present in the star's current speed, drama, "Hell Bent for love. A brief synopsis of the picture follows:

When McCoy serves a warrant upon a girl of whom the underworld chief is particularly fond, and when he later shows more than an official interest in the girl, Trigger Talano, the gangster chief, frames the officer. He is caught red handed apparently assisting in a payroll holdup and is discharged from the police force.

Ranking under the injustice of his suspension and discovering that the underworld boss was responsible for his disgrace, Tim sets out to vindicate himself. He organizes a band of ex-criminals each of whom he has befriended, and fights the underworld with its own weapons. He interferes with their rackets, breaks up their schemes and finally sends them to prison as jewel robbers.

"Embarrassing Moments"

Chester Morris, popular "Embarrassing Moments" star, plays the leading role, that of a young man who is constantly playing practical jokes on his best friends, causing countless embarrassing moments and nearly losing his sweetheart through his antics. Miss Nixon, petite and lovely screen actress, portrays the role of the long-suffering sweetheart, who is not in

SESSION CALLED TUESDAY MORNING AT HIGH SCHOOL

The first of a series of three meetings of peanut growers to be held in this county will be called to order in the Cross Plains high school auditorium Tuesday morning—January 15—at 10 o'clock, by County Agent Ross B. Jenkins. Tuesday afternoon a similar meeting will be held at Atwell and then Saturday afternoon, January 19, growers of the Clyde community will meet.

In explaining the peanut plan which the federal government will offer growers this year, Mr. Jenkins said:

The plan has three option plans, either of which each producer may choose. He may sign a contract based on the 1933 acreage and reduce that amount 10% or take the 1934 acreage and reduce it 10% or he may choose to take the average of both years 1933 and 1934 and make no reduction. The government proposes to pay a rental of 2-5 cent per pound on the actual 1934 production if the tonnage was as great as 500 pounds per acre, but in case production fell short of that amount not less than $2 per acre will be paid. There are no restrictions as to marketing in the agreement. It is simply aimed at holding the acreage to as low as it was the year or slightly less and to maintain a fair price for the 1935 crop.

The contract will not be paid but in one check and it will be made about the month of October. This program is expected to find some 400 or more signers in Callahan county. The October payment will give the supervisors time to check acreage and get their findings into Washington in time to forestall any rush in getting out the checks on time.

It is hoped all interested growers attend one of the meetings as it offers a fair rental and interferes little, if any with the regular peanut plantings ordinarily made.

favor of his 'gags' and is forever trying to make him act more seriously.

"Fugitive Lady"

"Fugitive Lady", Columbia's thrilling romantic melodrama co-featuring Neil Hamilton, Florence Rice and Donald Cook, opens Wednesday at the Liberty Theatre for a two day engagement. The new film is described as one of the most delightful love stories of the current cinema season, concerning, as it does, the romantic aftermath of one woman being mistaken for another man's wife.

Neil Hamilton and Miss Rice, a Broadway favorite until Columbia brought her to Hollywood recently, make a romantic team of new charm in "Fugitive Lady", which also is Miss Rice's first starring (Continued on back page)

CROSS PLAINS WILL HAVE A BIRTHDAY SATURDAY, WAS 23 YEARS AGO JANUARY 12, FIRST TRAIN RAN

Cross Plains will be 23 years old Saturday.

It was January 12, 1911 that the first train rolled into this city, which resulted in the removal of the township from the banks of Turkey Creek to the present location.

Although Cross Plains was not incorporated as a city until November 11, 1911, old timers declare that January 12, is the city's birthday for it was that day that things started happening.

More than $75,000. worth of city property was sold at auction the afternoon of January 12, 1911, by Rufus J. Lackland, who died at Fort Worth several year ago.

Records reveal that the first meeting of the city council of Cross Plains was on the night of January 2, 1912. At that meeting 13 ordinances were passed and inscribed into the city charter. Taylor Bond was the first city secretary. He told the Review this week that it took him more than a week to copy the ordinances passed by the council at it's first meeting night.

With the advent of the rail road virtually every business house in the old town moved "up on the hill". Among the firms that moved "lock, stock and barrel" to the new townsite were: the Cross Plains Mercantile Company, W. R. Wagner Drug Store, P. Smith and Sons General Merchants, G. B. Swan's Confectionery and Studio, Farmer National Bank, and two blacksmith shops.

No celebration nor official commemoration of the city's birthday has been observed.

Mother's Pleas Futile And Former Cross Plains Boy Dies In Electric Chair In Oklahoma Prison

Ernest Oglesby, a former Callahan county boy, and a son of Mrs. Mary Oglesby, of Baird died in the electric chair at the Oklahoma penitentiary at McAlester, early Thursday morning for the murder of Douglass Gates, Oklahoma City policeman, 13 months ago.

Mrs. Oglesby went to Oklahoma where she made a futile attempt to get governor William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murry to grant clemency to her son. She returned to her home at Baird, shortly before an electric current snuffed life from the body of her son.

Ernest Oglesby's death in the electric chair brought to an end a trail of crime which was spread across the boundaries of two states.

Ernest Oglesby first entered the Texas penitentiary June 23, 1927, to serve two years on conviction of theft in Stephens county. He was discharged in 1929 and a few months later was sentenced to serve ten years for burglary and theft in Eastland, Stephens, Callahan and Shackelford counties. He reentered the prison in May, 1929. Released to Scurry county on a bench warrant on July 6, 1929, he escaped while being taken to that county. Whether he still was a fugitive when arrested in Oklahoma is not revealed by available records.

Oglesby went to the electric chair alone early Thursday after two other doomed men were granted stays of execution by the federal supreme court, where intervention was sought to save all three of the men. The plea of his mother who made (Continued on back page)

City Tax Notice

All unpaid city taxes prior to the year 1934 are now classed as delinquent. 1934 taxes if not paid before February 1, 1935, will be delinquent and also subject to interest and penalties. In compliance with recent act of the Legislature the city is omitting collection of interest and penalties on all taxes paid before February 1, 1935. Under a ruling of the State Courts there can be no remission of lawfully assessed taxes either by the State or any of its sub-divisions, and if not paid are accumulating an everlasting claim against the property. To remit any lawfully assessed taxes would require the adoption of an amendment to the State Constitution granting the authority, and this could be made only to apply to future levies. In fairness to property owners who are paying their taxes it is very likely there never will be another remission, or postponement of interest and penalties on delinquent taxes, and all are advised who possibly can do so to clear their property of city taxes before the expiration of the present tax collecting period. The city is urgently in need of funds to take care of its bonded obligations, and eventually the collection of all delinquent taxes, with interest and penalties attached, will be compelled by the Courts and the holders of these legally issued securities. The collection of taxes, as some seem to understand, is not at all dependent upon the will or concern of the tax collector, but is as the law requires.

Very truly,
S. M. BUATT,
City Tax Collector and Receiver

A 1935 standard Chevrolet coach is being shown this week by Anderson Chevrolet Company. Master models are expected to arrive within the next few weeks, the Review was told yesterday by F. R. Anderson, head of the local Chevrolet dealership.

Prices f.o.b. 1935 models, both standard and masters, were announced yesterday by Mr. Anderson as follows:

New Standard models—Coupe, $475; coach, $485; sedan, $550; phaeton, $495; sport roadster, $465; sedan delivery, $515.

Master De Luxe models—Coupe, $560; coach, $580; sedan, $640; sport coupe, $600; town sedan; sport sedan, $675; commercial panel $560; de luxe panel, $580.

The prices on the New Standard coupe, coach and phaeton are $10 under those of the corresponding 1934 models. On the Master De Luxe, prices are exactly the same as in 1934.

F. R. ANDERSON FETES MECHANICS, SERVICE STATION BOYS AT FEED

F. R. Anderson, manager of the Anderson Chevrolet Company, was host to local service station men and mechanics Friday night, when he entertained with an oyster banquet at Wilson's Cafe.

After the meal, guests were shown four reels of pictures of the 1935 Chevrolet, illustrating new features and improvements of this year's model.

Round table comment concerning the various changes and methods of servicing the 1935 Chevrolet followed the showing of pictures of the new models.

Those present included: Stanley Clark, Norman Caton, C. R. Cook, Leon Smith, W. R. (Bill) Lowe, Jack Lacy, Merlin Garrett, Ralph Chandler, Homer Moon, Roy Lee Little, Vernon Barclay, Donald Aishman, Babe Wood, Sidney Ratcliffe, Orin Williams, Sam Barr, Fonia Worthy, T. Y. Woody, Jack Scott, and Mr. Anderson.

Knee-action continues as one of the outstanding features of the Master DeLuxe cars, Mr. Anderson stated, and is available to any customer on order at slight additional cost. Master De Luxe cars also feature the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, and a much larger body with corresponding increase in interior dimensions.

"Chevrolet was able to reduce its Standard model prices and to maintain its price levels on the Master DeLuxe series in the face of substantially increased material and manufacturing costs because of the greatly increased volume scheduled for 1935, as indicated by the thousands of orders we now have on hand for the immediate delivery of the 1935 lines of cars from our organization of 10,000 dealers," a press dispatch from Chevrolet headquarters "Last year Chevrolet built 870,000 passenger cars and trucks, which made it the leading manufacturer of motor cars in the world for the sixth time in the last eight years. With the establishing of our 1935 prices, we are in a position to secure our share of the low-priced car business this year.

"Both lines of cars are greatly improved. The New Standard is now powered with the Master motor, and has an entirely new X-type frame which is 15 times more rigid than its predecessor. The Master DeLuxe is a completely new and much larger car than the 1934 Master. To increase the comfort of passengers, and procure more body room, the wheelbase has been increased to 113 inches. This line now features, in addition to the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, the latest in 'tear drop' design, with dual windshield, no-draft ventilation, and all the comfort and convenience feature found in much higher priced cars," the announcement concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Bo Cavet who have been visiting in Tula have returned.

WHO'S WHO

Cheryl Lutgens
Cheryl Lutgens, the affectionate senior that has her finger on "Freshman" Cross, is to be discussed in full this week. Since school started in September, Cheryl has had many a "Romeo". Cheryl has lived in Cross Plains most all her life and is a friend to every one, Cheryl has been an active member in the pep squad since she has been in high school and is very loyal to the Buffaloes. She was President of the glorious pep squad of 34.

Beryl Lusk
This week the dial stops on Beryl Lusk to be discussed as whether he is older than Jimmie. Beryl was born November 17, 1916, at Sabanno, Texas, raised on a bottle and could cry louder than any other baby in the community.

Beryl started to school at the age of five at Union Hill. Moved to Peacock and attended school there 2 months. Moved to county line, community and finished the year, and moved back to Sabanno and entered the second grade. The next year he entered school at Union Hill, where he attended until he started at Cross Plains. This year makes four years he has been here. The past two years he has been an active member of the thundering herd.

He has not made up his mind as to where he will attend school next year.

HINTS TO THE BOOKLOVER

By Marie McVella

We all know that there are good books and bad books just like in anything else. We should try to always read the good books if possible. Bad books, that is books of no literary value, are sometimes worse for one than no books. That is why we try to keep the students posted as to the good books and bad books in the high school library. Just a list of a few books that would be well worth a few hours of any ones time are:

Adam Bede by Eliot, Far From the Maddening Crowd by Hardy, As the Earth Turns by Carroll, Lorna Doone by Blackmore, To Have and To Hold, by Johnson, and White, Bird Flying by Aldrick.

1935 FORD SHOWS BEAUTY, COMFORT AND ENGINEERING

The 1935 Ford V-8 (which is now on display at the McAdams Motor Company here) embodies a combination of engineering developments, riding comfort and beauty, according to Jesse McAdams, local dealer.

The new car marks the present culmination of developments begun by Ford three years ago at the time of the announcement of the V-8 engine. In the three years intervening, Ford has been engaged in the development of a combination of engineering improvements aimed at providing a degree of riding comfort and ease of control comparable with the performance of the engine itself. The new body designs are a further evidence of the progress of Ford engineering.

In appearance, the new cars are characterized by a freshness of conception utilizing flowing curves to carry out the modern motif, plus a new treatment of interior and appointments which sound an entirely new note in Ford body styling.

The engineering advances in engine and chassis are comparable in importance. Principal among these is the new "ride" effected by the new spring suspension system, proper car weight balance and passenger weight distribution and the location of the passenger closer to the center of the car—so that they ride between the wheels.

To accomplish this, the front spring, which has been lengthened, is located more than four inches in front of the front axle and the engine is moved forward more than eight inches so that its weight rests over the front axle. Front and rear springs have been made more flexible. Added chassis room available as a result of the front and end improvements permits redistribution of the passenger weight—now concentrated between the wheels—so that the weight on the two axles is approximately equalized, giving rear seat passengers the comfort of a "front seat" ride.

Key to the changes made in outward design is found in the relocation of the front spring and engine. This has permitted moving the body forward so that passengers ride between the axles, and the development of rear quarter panel treatment along flowing lines. The car is approximately eight inches longer from bumper to bumper.

The modern design note is carried without break through the new slanting vertical grille with horizontal beading, the sweeping line of the low hood and more sharply slanting windshield, the beautifully molded body and the flowing rear quarter panel. Fenders are deeper and more highly crowned, with sweeping skirts.

Bodies are materially wider. Slanting vertical louvers with horizontal stainless steel beading are combined to form an attractive hoodside adornment. The radiator ornament is fixed in position, the radiator filler cap being under the hood.

Wheels are smaller, tires larger. The hub caps are adorned with a new and modern treatment of the V-8 insignia. The result is an impression of mass and stability most pleasing to the eye.

Engine improvements include:

Addition of a new system of directed-flow crankcase ventilation, which exhausts water vapor and gasses from the crankcase and valve chamber. This minimizes the collection of excess water in the oil and lessens formation of sludge. Dilution of the oil by unburned gasoline is reduced. The continuous flow of air also exerts a cooling effect which tends to lengthen oil life and minimize engine wear.

Use of aircraft type copper-lead floating connecting rod bearings similar to those used in high-speed racing car and airplane engines where reliability under the most severe operating conditions is of paramount importance.

A new cast alloy iron camshaft. Additional major chassis improvements include:

Newly designed, internal expanding mechanical type brakes, intended to give more effective braking control—with less pressure—and embracing a new "floating wedge" as part of the design. This aids in equalizing pressure upon brake-shoes and in turn upon the drums. Additional drum ribs give a 40 percent increase in cooling effect.

A new clutch of simplified design requiring less pedal pressure at starting and gear-changing speeds and with much softer action. At higher speeds the pressure is increased by centrifugal weight act-

REVIEW IS CHOSEN TO "CARRY" CONOCO 1935 ADVERTISING

Newspaper advertising will again form the backbone of Continental Oil Company's 1935 sales promotion program, the largest in the history of the company, it has been announced by Wesley I. Nunn, advertising manager, who stated that at the Cross Plains Review has been selected to carry Conoco advertising.

"Proof of the value of newspaper advertising, backed by quality products and outstanding service," said Nunn, "is seen in the fact that our company during 1934 showed again of 65 per cent in the sale of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil as compared to the previous year.

"As a matter of fact, Conoco's gross sales in 1934 were better than for any year since 1929—a fact that leads us to believe that general business conditions are definitely on the upgrade. Of course, Continental Oil Company hasn't just marked time, but has gone out after business, backed by a large advertising program year after year.

"This year marks the sixtieth anniversary of Continental Oil Company, and we expect 1935 to be the best in our history."

On the SINCLAIR P. D. FLY FARM

Sinclair raises 1,000,000 insects each year to test the kill-power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray

The Sinclair Fly Farm at East Chicago is one of the most unique institutions in the world—and practically the only one of its kind in America. For it is here that Sinclair, every year, raises more than a million flies to test the killing power of Sinclair P. D. insect spray. Every batch of Sinclair P. D. manufactured must kill 1,000 flies under conditions more difficult than those in your own home. Five-day-old flies are used in these tests—as five-day-old flies are harder to kill than any other household insect. If Sinclair P. D. can kill healthy Fly Farm flies it is sure to kill any fly, mosquito, bedbug, roach or silverfish in your home. Ask for Sinclair P. D., the death-tested insect spray—it's harmless, stainless and sweet with the clean odor of cedar.

SYNOPSIS—Ellen Church, 17 years old, finds herself alone in the world with her artist mother's last warning ringing in her ears, to love lightly. Of the world she knew little. All her life she had lived alone with her mother in an old brown house in a small rural community. All her life, first as a new baby, then a bubbling child, then a charming young girl—she had posed for her talented mother who sold her magazine cover painting through an art agent in the city—Mrs. Church's broken life—the unfaithful husband, his disappearance—and after seventeen years of silence announcement of his death was at last disclosed to Ellen. The news of the husband's death, trying to follow the warped philosophy of her mother to "love lightly," resists the thought of love. Her circle of friends is small, artists and two or three girl models. Ellen attends a ball with Sandy. While dancing a tall young man

"I don't get Jane," she said finally. "What's she playing for, Tony? Not that it's very sane to ask—I know what she's playing for. It's you."

There was a seriousness back of Tony's casual sounding speech.

"Jane and I," he said, "knocked around together for years. I suppose she'd gotten to sort of taking me for granted. After all, we weren't responsible when we met, you and I. We shook all of the world's plans into a cocked hat."

Ellen spoke resentfully.

"That," she said "makes me feel like a spare tire. If you want an annulment any time, you and Jane, 'You'd drop me as easily as that, said Tony. 'You mean. You mean it."

Ellen wanted to say that she didn't mean it; that she wouldn't give him up, not for fifty James. But instead she made her mouth into a straight line and lowered her lashes so that Tony couldn't look into her eyes.

"I'd let you go as easily as I'd let go of this"—she told him. She opened her fingers and the huge chiffon handkerchief that she was carrying fluttered, like a dead butterfly, to the conservatory floor.

"I'd—" "Yes, you would!" said Tony gruffly. All at once he had gathered her so tightly into his arms that her body felt bruised against the hardness of his body. "I'm sick and tired of this stuff," said Tony, "it's time for a showdown. We're not fencing, you and I—we're married. It's time we behaved like human beings, or—"

He stopped. For there was a rustle of skirts (skirts do rustle this year) and a voice spoke.

"Oh—but I'm intruding!" said a voice. "It always seems as if I choose the wrong time for my entrances, doesn't it?"

Of course, it was Jane—it couldn't be anybody else. She stood in the doorway of the conservatory—the light was behind her. They couldn't see the outline of her face—the expression of her eyes and mouth—but somehow Tony's arms had loosened, somehow Ellen was wriggling free of them.

"You don't know," said Jane, "how silly I feel!"

Tony didn't say anything at all, perhaps it was because he couldn't trust his voice. Ellen didn't say anything either, for a moment, and then—

"It's quite all right," she said, "we were just rehearsing our big scene."

Jane took a step into the conservatory.

"It seems to me," she said at last, and levelly, "that it's always a big scene, that it's always a rehearsal. You and Tony aren't married, really—"

"Well," Ellen extended her slim left hand, "here's the evidence, and I have my marriage lines somewhere."

If Tony had been clever enough he could have read the desperation of her bravado.

Jane went on—her voice had thickened.

"You know what I mean," she said. "You and Tony don't belong together. You belong with fellows like Sandy and with that Dick of yours. Tony—Tony's down my street. It's all so silly. It's like playing hide in the dark, and finding you with the wrong person when the lights come up."

"Yes, isn't it?" agreed Ellen. She wouldn't give. Tony a chance to say it first—she'd say it.

"I wonder," said Jane, "why you came to my house—"

"I wonder," said Ellen, why you asked me?"

Tony spoke at last.

"Oh, for crying out loud," he said "It's complicated enough without —"

Ellen was smoothing the skirt of her pretty dress.

"Yes," she said, "it is—complicated enough without—without me. I think," her eyes were so bright that only tears could have made them so, "I think it's just about time that I did the conventional thing—even though I am a professional Bohemian. It's about time I told you, Jane, that I've just had word from town. The obvious telegram—or what have you. Explain to your guests that my grandmother is ill; tell them that a great-uncle has died and left me a legacy. Tell them I've gone back to pose for Dick, tomorrow—and tomorrow's Sunday, too. That'll perhaps be nearer the truth."

All at once she was running from the conservatory, scurrying along through the darker corners of the room. And then she was out of the door and racing up the stairs. Now she had gained the haven of her room and was tumbling things into her suitcase.

There was a knock at the door. For a moment Ellen didn't answer, and then with an effort she steadied her voice until she could speak.

"Come in," she called.

The door opened. It was Jane's mother.

"I met Tony," Jane's mother said without preamble. "He told me that you weren't well. That he was afraid you were going home. Something like that. Is there anything I can do?"

Ellen's voice was steady.

"I was going to leave a note for you" she said. "To tell you—how sorry I am. Yes, there is something I wish, maybe, that I could be taken to the station. I've had a telegram, you see."

"Poor child," said Jane's mother "I hope it's not bad news!"

Ellen's eyes, meeting hers, knew that she didn't believe in the mythical telegram.

"Yes," said Ellen, "I'm afraid that it is bad news."

Jane's mother was still standing in the doorway. Swiftly she spoke.

"Jane is my daughter," she said, "and I love her very much. Maybe she's a little spoiled; but she's a dear girl. And you must remember that she has loved Tony for a long while."

"Whereas," answered Ellen, "I haven't!"

"Ah," said Jane's mother, "you haven't! You'll have to love him a great deal to make up for the time you've missed."

She was turning and then—

"I'll make your excuses to the rest, at breakfast," she said. Don't you worry. And if you don't want to go down through the crowded rooms, now, I'll have the car wait for you at the side door. It will take you right to your door, of course. Traffic is not heavy—this time of night. It will be quicker than the train—"

Ellen was looking at her.

"My mother's hair," said Ellen, "was like your hair. Her eyes were sweet—like your eyes. But she was always so tired!"

"I'm tired, myself, most of the time," said Jane's mother, and then silently she had closed the door.

When Tony arrived ten minutes later, after locating the room through a certain amount of bribery and corruption—when he tapped at the door of that room there was no answer. After a moment he pushed the door in, even though he didn't belong on the floor. But there wasn't anyone in the room when he entered. There wasn't even the dust of powder on the immaculate top of the vanity table.

It was nearly dawn when Ellen arrived back in her own little room. She threw her suitcase, unpacked across a seat, and undressed rapidly and flung herself across her bed. And, though she had quite expected to sob herself to sleep, she didn't. Exhaustion is like that—it drains one of the emotions!"

There was bright sunshine—yellow, buttery sunshine—lying across Ellen's face when she awakened. And, such is the buoyancy of youth, coffee and toast restored to her a certain amount of confidence in herself. Her voice didn't even tremble when she called Dick on the phone.

"If you're working today," she told him, "I'm just the girl that will help you. Here am I, all alone in town over Sunday."

The taxi seemed to crawl through the quiet Sunday streets, and yet at last she was with Dick in his old familiar workroom.

Ellen, with scarcely more than a word of greeting, went behind the accustomed screen and changed into her Indian dress. And then she was out again and posing, a little kneeling figure once more—once again the child priestess.

When Tony came knocking at the door, after the first half hour of her posing, when at Dick's bidding he pushed the door wide, she did not change her position. Even though his coming was—just now—more than a surprise.

"I'm here," Tony said by way of greeting, "hunting for my runaway wife!" He didn't address Ellen at all; he spoke to Dick.

"Yes?" answered Dick, and went on painting. "I didn't know," he added, "that she was a runaway."

Ellen spoke dully, although she was in an agony of anxiety and embarrassment.

"I didn't tell Dick anything about the house party—except that I'd come home" she warned Tony.

"I shouldn't think," said Tony, "that you'd have to tell him any more. Alven't got sense."

"Which he doesn't always use," Dick threw in. All at once he had thrown down his palette. "You two kids," he said, "had better beat it away from here. I'm tired. I can't work anymore today. I supposed you had something of that sort in your mind when you came here, Brander?"

Tony still wasn't speaking to Ellen. He was speaking over her head, at Dick.

"Ellen ran out on us last night," he said, and his tone was cool. "Well, it was a dull party, I don't I don't blame her! As soon as I discovered she'd gone, I set out after her, of course. But I got—" he fumbled for words, "in so late that I went to the club. When I stopped at her place this morning I found that she'd blown, as usual. If you—" his voice was wistful, "if you've really finished working—there was something pathetic in proud Tony's appeal, 'I'd like to take Ellen out with me for a little drive somewhere or other.'"

Nothing was said about the house party. Believe it or not—nothing.

When the sun was actually setting, Tony left Ellen at her door. This time he kissed the tips of her fingers as lightly as it is possible for a man to kiss the tips of any girl's fingers.

"I'm not suggesting," he said, "that we dine together tonight. We're both worn out." It was his one reference to the night before. "But let's get together tomorrow, you and I. Maybe we can drive again, somewhere. Maybe we can go somewhere outside of the city, for supper."

And Ellen, with the purse in her throat choking her, managed to nod a quick affirmative.

"We poor working girls," she said, "like our moments of vacation with our rich relations."

The next evening they drove out to the country, to a little inn. If their talk were a trifle less formal, now, it wasn't because they were speaking to each other as married couples speak. It was because they were beginning to have a slight basis of reminiscence upon which to build conversations.

Ellen could almost settle herself into the red roadster as if she belonged in it. Tony didn't look quite so finely drawn as he had at the house party, when they had their encounter with Jane.

It is anticipated that neither changes in personnel nor drastic changes of policy will be made by the Community Service but the new company will endeavor to maintain the present facilities at a high level of efficiency in order to render a type of service that will be highly satisfactory to consumers in this community.

When a citizen tells you the people are about ready to do so-and-so, he means that he is.

It is not as bad as it looks. Thousands who seem unemployed are quietly working at some kind of crooked scheme.
