PETTY CRIME WAVE COVERS CITY

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

Judging by the number of banquets that have been held here the past few days, an outsider might conclude that the depression is a thing of the past in Cross Plains. Maybe it is. Tuesday night the Lions Club was host to members and about 40 visitors at a very abundant feed. Wednesday evening approximately 75 high school students met in the Presbyterian dining hall for another delicious spread. The Odd Fellows have another planned for the near future and Cross Plains firemen observed their annual oyster supper the latter part of last week.

Now if that's not a lot of social life, I'm a Broadway playboy.

The Webb family has furnished Cross Plains with football players for years and they have all been good. But the youngest of them—all little 120 pound 'Bevo'—today surpassed all records set by his brothers and played the best defensive game of football ever seen on the local gridiron.

He cracked big Rising Star backs as if they were twice their size. Accurate figures kept on the tackles made during the last half show that he was in exactly three fourths of the plays.

What a team Cross Plains should have when that fellow gets some weight and a little more experience. This was his first year. Yet he not only earned a letter but will be voted one of the most valuable linemen in the district.

Tommy Webb wound up his four years of football Wednesday afternoon and will be succeeded by a new captain but he may rest assured that the family name of Webb will be well taken care of. We'll wager the Review's best typewriter that 'Bevo' will be the best of the Webbs'.

Another thing for which 'Bevo' might be lauded here and now is that he is one of the cleanest kids the town ever possessed. He has never been known to swear, smoke or indulge in hindering habits. Power to you 'Bevo' you're a fine little fellow.

It has been said that a rolling stone gathers no moss. But we are in position to state that an editor's head gathers plenty of sand in somersaulting across a football field.

However it was worth doing twice, to see those 'Buffaloes' scrap like they did Wednesday. Every man on the team played superior football and we are proud to know that we never lost confidence in their ability.

You readers that don't like football please pardon for devoting so much space to that subject this week but we were so impressed with the game Wednesday afternoon we must pass a few posies to every one in any way responsible for the good game that Cross Plains athletes turned in.

Be Spencer bit his stride Wednesday and played a brand of football that should make some college pine for his services. Oh shucks! the boys all agree that we have used up space... and can't even mention a fight that halted the minute in the first half.

LOCAL WOMEN DIES IN PLANE CRASH

Antrey Monsey, manager of the San Angelo airport, and Truett Young, young airplane owner, were killed instantly when their plane crashed near the landing field there Sunday evening. The craft was said to have taken a nose dive from about 700 feet.

Monsey was a cousin of Miss Madge Renfro and Mrs. B. W. Wilson, of this place. With Mr. Wilson they attended funeral services for the deceased pilot at Trickham, in Brown county Monday afternoon.

WILDCATS DEFEAT HERD IN ANNUAL CLASH

BUFFALOES PUT UP STUBBORN BATTLE; LOSE BY 1 POINT

'Bevo' Webb Most Outstanding Player On Field; Davidson Scores For Locals

Rising Star's highly touted Wildcat football team invaded Cross Plains Wednesday afternoon and managed to get away with the long end of a seven to six score in the traditional game between the two clubs. But a moral victory was certainly the Buffaloes. They fought an uphill fight from the very beginning and were a constant threat throughout the entire last half to take the contest.

Little 'Bevo' Webb, Cross Plains center—although the lightest man on the field—was by far the most outstanding player for either club. He cracked big Rising Star backs like a 200 pounder and was in no less than three fourths of the plays. On the offense 'Red' Conger and 'Moose' Montgomery were the shining lights for Rising Star, while Bruce Spencer and Leonard Davidson claimed similar roles for the purple and gold.

Rising Star's marker came late in the second quarter when the Wildcat center—Curtis Smith—blocked a punt on the Buffaloes 10 yard stripe. 'Red' Conger traversed the necessary distance in three downs. J. Lee Smith converted the extra point for Rising Star by place kicking. Only one other time did the visitors threaten to score. That too was in the second half but the time keeper's gun ended their rally 18 yards short of the local's goal line.

Cross Plains touchdown came early in the third quarter. Bruce Spencer and Leonard Davidson advanced the ball to the 21 yard stripe and Davidson circled right end for the remaining distance for a touchdown. Walker's pass for extra point was knocked down.

Only one pass was completed by both clubs. It was a 12 yard heave from Montgomery to J. Lee Smith. The first half was Rising Star's

LIONS CLUB FETES LADIES AND GUESTS IN ANNUAL BANQUET

Cross Plains Lions Club observed their annual ladies night banquet in the dining hall of the Methodist Church here, Tuesday evening. The program included: musical numbers, impromptu speeches, magical feats and an address on 'Lionism' by District Governor Kurkendall, of Albany. A three course dinner was served.

President Jesse McAdams acted as toast master.

Lewis C. Norman, high school principal, baffled the gathering with several of his magical tricks for one of the high spots of the evening's program. Mrs. W. O. Wylie, Jr., of Baird, played a piano solo. She was applauded roundly and came back with an accompaniment for a piano duet. Vernon Bowers, Nat Williams and Lewis Norman sang three songs which also received a generous ovation.

District Governor Kurkendall, of Albany, pointed out several of the purposes and achievements of Lions Clubs in his address on 'Lionism'. He held the audience of 80 people attentive throughout his speech of more than 20 minutes.

Brief remarks of congratulation to the Cross Plains service organization were extended by several visitors and former members. The ladies night is an annual feature of the local club.

Buffaloe Footballers Abandon All Training Rules In Annual Pep Squad Banquet Tuesday Night

All training rules were abandoned when the Cross Plains high school 'Buffalo' football team met in the dining hall of the Presbyterian Church Wednesday night for their annual banquet to which the pep squad girls were hostesses. Superintendent Nat Williams was toastmaster.

High spots of the entertainment program were the selection of a football captain for next year, coronation of a football queen, musical renditions readings and impromptu speeches.

Miss Clara Nell McDermott was crowned football queen and presented a large bouquet of flowers by Miss Opal Young. She was recently elected by a balloting of the student body, in which votes were sold at a penny each. More than $20. was raised from that source, which went toward the staging of Wednesday night's banquet. The remainder of the money necessary to promote the event was made in a play staged last week by the pep squad.

Mrs. Nat Williams read to the 72 guests. She received a stupendous applause. Floyd Halbert rendered a harmonica solo. Professors Norman, Williams and Bowers sang. A violin solo by Miss Leora Gaines, piano numbers by Miss Blix Pittman and a girls quartet by Misses Zelah Pittman, Leota Loving, Opal Young completed the program.

Santa Claus Tells Children To Write Wishes To Review

SPECIAL TO THE REVIEW TOYLAND, NORTH POLE—

Santa Claus said today that he wanted every child in the Cross Plains trade territory to write him within the next few days and state explicitly what they wanted for Christmas. He has requested that the letters be published in the Cross Plains Review, in the big Christmas edition and shoppers guide, that will be issued December 16. A copy of that paper will be addressed to Santa Claus and rushed to Point Barrow, Alaska, by air mail. From there the paper will go to Toyland, North Pole, by reindeer express.

The letters should be written plain and addressed to the Review, Cross Plains, Texas, within the next 12 days. Every missive will be published in the big Christmas edition.

Santa Claus has asked that children be more considerate in their wishes this year as times have been rather hard in the North Pole and he is working his entire crew night and day in an effort to have enough presents to go around. He says that he can fill orders faster by getting them all at one time through the paper. Remember the date and watch for the Santa Claus letters in the Christmas edition and shoppers guide December 16.

Burkett Barber Gives Humorous Sketch Of Dealings With Floating Pig Peddler

Editor note:—Bill Cross, formerly of this place, now a barber at Burkett, furnishes the Review with the following humorous yarn concerning his dealings with a travelling pig peddler. The article is published herein because of the amusement that the Editor believes it will provide Review readers. The following is exactly as it was received from Cross.

A few weeks ago those slick tongue hog peddlers came into the notion of buying a pig. I had some of the best country. I explicitly told him that I did not want a pig that didn't seem to do any good. He began to talk about the election and seemed to side in with me on every candidate.

Then he told me what a good man he had always been, always helping a fellow that was down and that he had bought so many liberty bonds, paid the preacher large sums, helped the Sunday school, visited the sick and every other thought of that nature that one man might poke into another's head. I had met a man that was very much like myself, for he agreed with me on everything.

2 STORES LOOTED IN 3 DAYS; RECOVER S. FREEMAN AUTOMOBILE

C. P. Mercantile, Foster Filling Station And A & P Manager Are Victims Of 'Yeggs'

A wave of petty crime swept Cross Plains the past week. Two stores were robbed and a car stolen, in three days, all at separate times. Cross Plains Mercantile Company, A. G. Foster's Filling Station and Grocery and S. Freeman were victims of the 'hoodlums'.

The Mercantile was broken into early Saturday morning and merchandise valued at approximately $75. taken. Foster's Filling Station was robbed Sunday night and then Monday night S. Freeman's automobile was stolen from the side of his residence here.

Break Mercantile Lock Nightwatchman J. M. McMillan and two men near the side door of Cross Plains Mercantile shortly after two o'clock morning and started down gate their business. The Mercantile however and the Cross Plains was unable to pick up the dark alley. Entrance at the Mercantile by prize from the lock on the door of the Eighth Street.

B. B. Bond, owner of the Review yesterday morning and started down gate their business. The Mercantile however and the Cross Plains was unable to pick up the dark alley. Entrance at the Mercantile by prize from the lock on the door of the Eighth Street.

Recover Automobile S. Freeman, local A & P manager recovered his car early Tuesday morning about three miles North of Cross Plains. It had been run in a ditch and had three tires, wheels, and a car was stolen from the side of his house, one block from the school buildings, Monday night.

Foster's Filling Station was robbed Sunday night and then Monday night S. Freeman's automobile was stolen from the side of his residence here.

M. F. RAY RETURNS FROM HOSPITAL MUCH IMPROVED

M. F. Ray has returned to his home here after spending several weeks in the Overall hospital, Coleman. He was bitten by a spider almost two months ago and was for some time in a serious condition. Attending physicians say that he is practically out of danger now and will probably be able to return to his work again in the near future.

I started to go back to my shop, when he stopped me and whispered confidentially what he had given for the pigs. He said that he was over-loaded and that if I would take one of them off his hands he would let me have it at cost. I told him again that I didn't want any pigs. But he made it so plain where I could make some money and how the pig would grow just on the waste from around the house. I finally gave him $3.00 and picked out the hog I wanted. He said he would take the pig down and unload it, and I could go on back to work, which I did. Now I will say right here, if one of those slick tongue peddlers ever sells you a hog, go with him to unload it. That night when I went home, tired from my day's work, I gathered up some feed and went out to feed my pig. When I looked in the pen and saw what that 'good man' had left me, I completely lost my temper. I poured the feed in the pen, rolled up my sleeves and went into the house and told my wife that I was going to hunt that peddler and when I found him he would never want to see another pig. But she talked me out of everything.

BURKETT BARBER

my idea of getting desperate with the peddler, by saying that maybe the pig would get fat and be alright after all. I fed that pig about 3.00 worth of barley, $2.00 worth of corn and all of the 'slop' I could get our neighbors to give us. The pig was not satisfied however. He caught and ate a dozen and a half of my wife's fine chickens, then jumped out of the pen and began to catch our neighbors. Pretty soon he had them all mad at me.

That pig got to where he could almost walk a slack wire.

I went out one frosty morning with a nice bucket of 'slop' that I had put on the stove and warmed for him. When I approached the pen, to my surprise, the pig had another of my wife's prize chickens and was eating it. He looked up at me and just seemed to say 'Set it down, I'll get to it in a minute.' I poured the slop in the trough and went to my barber shop in search of someone to help me kill that pig. Finally, I found one man that was not mad at me and he agreed to help. When we got to the pen, the pig looked at us in such a manner that you could tell it was going to be a fight. We filled up two warshpots and started the fire and were just about ready to begin the killing proper, when we looked up and saw the pig standing on the top rail of the fence watching us. He jumped down outside of the pen. My friend 'Crip' Hilburd said would catch him. The race started. I saw 'Crip' would never accomplish the task alone so I joined in.

Finally, I made it to the house and got my shot gun. I told 'Crip' that if I ever got close enough I would shoot the rascal. But the gun was so heavy that I could not run fast enough to get close to the pig. We chased him all morning and after following him through four net fences we were just ready to give up when the pig started through another and got caught. 'Crip' made a wild razzoo and caught him.

We had run him so long that our water had gotten cold and by the time we got it warm again the pig was cold. Nevertheless, we finally went to scalding and scraping and then here some more trouble cropped up. We couldn't get the hair to slip. We used all of the water in both pots and finally cut the head off where the hair was worst. We then singed the hair off the head and made soap out of it. We threw the feet away.

I went up to the barber shop, got one of my razors and shaved the hair off the hog. We then ground the pig, shoulders, middlins and all into sausage. It took until about midnight to finish. Then the two hams were salted down in a shoe box. My wife rendered the lard and put it in a Prince Albert tobacco can. We went and settled for the fence the pig had torn down and finally got on speaking terms with our neighbors again. Everything is running along very nicely at present but you can see that the pig cost me about $20.00. However I have learned my lesson and will never let another slick tongue peddler sell me another pig.

J. F. Kelly Jr. was in Cross Plains last weekend.

Annual Pep Squad And Football Banquet

As we pause to observe Thanksgiving Day, we also pause at another great event and that is, the annual Pep Squad and Football Banquet.

Realizing the boys have played hard and won victory after victory, we feel as though we owe them some kind of praise. But, please boys, don't get 'chesty' before our game Wednesday, just because we say we think you deserve praise.

Not only to the football boys do we feel we owe this praise, but also, to Coach Keyes. He has been the chief aim for which our boys have fought and we are proud that we have such an excellent Coach as we have had this year.

As we pay tribute to the boys and Coach, we think Miss Gwathmey and Miss Clarkson are due a word or two. They have worked for and with the pep squad and without them our pep squad would have been a disorganized yelling section.

Let but not least lets thank Mr. Williams for all the favors he has granted the pep squad this year.

Sophomore News

RAH for the Seniors and Sophs. Miss Gwathmey considers the Senior class the best in school as a whole. She considers the Sophomores second, but she has been gradually losing her good opinion of them. She doesn't even consider the Juniors and freshmen.

Isn't it funny that Clara Nell blushes so often now-adays.

SOPHOMORE NEWS

In England, the aim of athletics is recreation, in America it is victory and especially victory over the rival school. If we fail to accomplish that, the season is counted a failure. And so everything is organized with a view of bringing about victory.

Have you ever noticed the crowd at a football game? At critical moments the fans will execute some of the movements of the players. For instance, when the full back is making a rather deliberate kick, the feet of some of the fans may be observed as making a similar movement. It is amusing to see such actions if you can keep your eyes on the game for a while, and if you find that hard to do.

Oh, how many weeks exams. More to flunk and more to be on the honor roll. MERRY???

UNUSUAL CALF OWNED BY NIMROD FARMER

Henry A. Schaefer, of the Nimrod community, owns a three-month old calf that was born blind yet romps and plays and shifts for itself as any normal calf might. The calf goes to the pond for water when thirsty and seems to know exactly where the waters edge is, as it never wades into the water in a stumbling manner.

In its romps it seems to know just where the gullies and other impediments are located, always stopping just before it reaches them, then proceeds with caution until all danger is past. The calf seems to know when there are strangers on the farm, Mr. Schaefer said, as it shies off at a safe distance, but is gentle and friendly when only the members of the family are present, and responds when called by Mr. Schaefer's brother, who does the milking. Except having been born without eyesight, this calf is perfectly normal and does not seem to be disturbed by its blindness.

TEMPERAMENT

BY PAUL HAWK

Complete Short Story

Elise, carrying her heavy traveling bag, looked up at the rambling, aristocratic old structure that was, she hoped, to be her new home for a long time. It was a beautiful place surrounded by spacious grounds, and it seemed to be a perfect setting for the sign which announced in Old English letters: Hudson Institute of Fine Arts.

She crossed the wide veranda and entered a paneled hallway. Sounds to the left told her a dancing class was being held. Muted pounds of pianos from various parts of the office on the right.

"I'm Miss Chesterton," she announced to the woman there.

"And I'm Mrs. Wilson," said that lady. She was little and energetic, as befitted the business manager of such a large school. "I'm glad you're here. I've already quite a large class of beginners for you. Come I'll show you your room. You can get settled today, and tomorrow you start work."

The room was on the third floor.

"I must warn you, Miss Chesterton," Mrs. Wilson told her, "that it's Mr. Carleton you'll have to please. Understand it's not to make you nervous or anything, but, although I'm business manager, he has the say about all our instructors. And he's quite temperamental. He won't stand for any disturbing noises. So, as your room is just beneath his apartment, you'll have to be careful. And he's liable to practice at any time of the day or night. You know of him of course. His programs are well received all over the country. Some day, he'll be America's leading musician. But I'm sure you'll get along all right."

Elise found her trunk in the hall. As she went into her room, she heard strains of music from the studio above. She listened for a while, standing at the window and looking out over the garden of flowers, the velvety lawn and well-kept shrubs, toward the river in the background. What a musician that man was!

As she turned away from the wide window, she inadvertently tipped over a potted plant that some former occupant had left there. It fell to the floor with a loud crash. Instantly the music above stopped. She heard restless footsteps. She could picture the artist tearing his long hair in a frenzy at being interrupted in his work.

She heard a crisp voice through the ceiling. "I suppose you are Miss Chesterton?"

Elise's face flushed. Not a very auspicious beginning for her. "Yes," she answered.

"I hope you will contrive not to follow your noisier practices when I'm practicing. It's quite unfortunate you should get that room below me."

"I'm sorry," said Elise, "but I certainly didn't do it on purpose."

His voice hadn't been unkind, but, if he'd say that to somebody he's never met, what would it be later on after he got to know her? She'd be worried all the time.

Elise walked down to the river's edge. On the way back, she stopped to admire the flowers in the garden. Rounding the corner, of a little trellised summer house, she bumped into a bareheaded, overalled young man. His sandy hair was all awry. His hands were dirty, and in one of them there was a trowel.

"I beg your pardon," he said, and stepped back to look at her.

Elise was enough to make a young man look twice. She had long black hair coiled in a knot low on her neck. She had dreamy black eyes that fitted the solemn intonation of her name—Elise. Her skin was of that milky whiteness that only appears starting on the perfect brunette. And while she was not fat, Elise was very properly curved.

"What a pretty garden!" she exclaimed.

"Thank you," said the young man.

Elise looked back at him. He was rather handsome for a gardener. "And do you help in the house too?" she asked.

The young man looked at her curiously. "I might," he said, and grinned.

"Because I've a trunk to get in my room. I'm Miss Chesterton."

"Call me Red," he said.

Red was a sympathetic person. He moved her trunk in, offered her a cigarette, and before she knew it, Elise was confessing her hopes and fears about her job to him.

Red scoffed. "Afraid of that fellow? Don't let these temperamental ones bother you. He's just a lot of wind when he's keyed up that way. If Carleton worries you, you just let me know."

"Even your sympathy helps," said Elise. "You see, I've studied a lot, and I'm good, but I've never taught before."

"What's your—er—handle?" Red asked boldly. "Miss Chesterton's too long."

"All right—call me Elise then."

The first week was very long. The pupils of Elise had liked her, but the hour lessons all day long were trying on her nerves. And then there was the matter of wondering if Mr. Carleton, whom she had still not met, would like her work. And the other matter of evenings in a city in which she had no pals.

She retreated daily to the garden. Since he was always there, it was only natural that she talk to the understanding Red.

"That Carleton's so sneaky," she complained to him. "Why, after a lesson the other day, I opened the door, and there he went down the dark hall. I just know he was listening in on me. I thought he was an older man though."

Red asked boldly. "Miss Chesterton's too long."

THE END

"Bout my age," said Red. "Did you talk to him?"

"I've never even had a good look at him. He beats me!"

"Want to go to a play with me tonight?"

"Oh, I do."

The next day, Mrs. Wilson called Elise into the office. Mr. Carleton's not exactly pleased with your method of giving lessons," she said. "He hopes you'll be more patient and try harder."

Patient? As if she weren't!

"Why doesn't he talk things over with me?" Elise wailed.

"Now don't be too alarmed, my dear. He just doesn't like interviews and routine work. We have to humor him you know. And it does show he's interested in your work."

Elise retreated to the garden. She sat down in the summer house, hidden from view. Her best chance, and she was falling! The tears come to her eyes.

Red came in. She couldn't see well enough to tell he wasn't at all dirty from his gardening.

"Tell me about it," he demanded. Elise did.

"Come on, get it over." He pulled her head to his shoulder and patted her comfortingly while she cried a little. Then he turned up her wet face and kissed her lips. That remedy seemed to relieve her a little.

"I hope," Red said cheerfully, that Carleton keeps on picking on you. It certainly helps me. As a comforter, I'm at my best.

Elise smiled through her tears. "You might try that—that remedy again."

Carleton did keep on fussing at her—but still through Mrs. Wilson. And Red was there each time with his remedy—a remedy daily acquiring more healing power. In fact, she looked forward to the remedy more than she hated Carleton's complaints.

Then one day, Red said, "Listen, I know a permanent cure for this Carleton trouble. If you take it, Carleton won't ever cuss you out any more."

Elise looked at him questioningly. "Marry me! You know I love you."

Some time later, Elise started for her studio and called back to him. "I'll dinner then, Red?"

Mrs. Wilson appeared beside her. "Wha-what did you call him?"

"Red," said Elise defiantly, prepared for criticism about her acquaintance with a gardener.

"Imagine! And with his temperamental too! Oh well. Mr. Carleton does some funny things—such as that—and putting around in the garden. All great musicians do."

Elise gasped—and finally understood.

They are trying to revive interest in wood-burning at one of New York's department stores. But now, it done with a pyroelectric pen and is very safe and rapid.

WEST TEXAS—"Raw Materials Capital" Offers Immense Industrial Opportunity

It has been the history of West Texas that after every national depression this section returns to normal—and marches ahead to greater prosperity—more rapidly than any other section of the country.

Present fundamental conditions are sound, and West Texas' wealth of natural resources—unsurpassed in any other part of the country—promise future progress of a magnitude that will dwarf that sensational development which a few short years ago riveted on this section the attention of the entire nation!

AND ALERT INDUSTRIES ARE TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THIS ASSURED DEVELOPMENT!

An adequate, flexible and inexpensive power supply is vital to industrial activity. Here in West Texas, the "Land of Opportunity", this industrial necessity is ably and amply supplied by the West Texas Utilities Company.

Industries recognize power as one of their prime problems. They recognize, too, that in West Texas this company has solved that problem by making their power investment for them—and is able to furnish energy at a lower cost than it could be produced in any other manner.

The West Texas Utilities Company, dependably serving 125 progressive West Texas cities, makes available more than 100,000 horsepower of electrical energy, distributed from three major generating stations and 22 auxiliary plants over a 2,500-mile transmission line network.

Some people are forever preaching forgiveness and long suffering, but the first time their toes are stepped on, they become the most vindictive of the species.

Somehow the fellow who ought to worry about his debts never seems to, and the fellow who pays, does the worrying for both.

Those who think the end of progress has been reached would do well to recollect these words of the late Charles Steinmetz, greatest of inventors:

"We call this the electrical age, but it isn't. The electrical age has hardly begun. In that age electricity will do a multitude of things of which we have never dreamed. For the electrical age is yet to come. And it will be a great age."

The young man who makes up his mind to quit school for awhile, as a rule quits for good. The time to go is now.

The dollar spent at home helps to build up this community. The dollar sent in to the big city is a booster for the big cities. Whom are you boosting?

You usually have to go out and hunt your pleasure. Trouble camps on your trail and hunts for you.

If you have a good many responsibilities, don't complain. It is a sign you amount to something.

Life is worth more than speed.

LIFE INSURANCE

Is your life insured? If so with whom are you carrying this protection? Would it not be better to insure with a home man, than with a 'Floater Agent' whom you do not know.

Life Insurance contracts are haphazardly bought from floater agents that you hardly know. Neither do you know the strength of the company, nor the contract that he sells you. Why not buy your life insurance from a home agent, and be assured that your loved ones will get the service that you bought at a time when you will not be here to look after them.

A Narrow Escape

By Norris Chambers Complete Story.

The chaos of the chase sounded near. Polly 'Possum wondered what the farmer and his dogs were chasing now. Perhaps they were after King Wolf, or Grandpa Jack-rabbit.

Anyway Polly would not let that bother her, for she had her own personal troubles. Her life had been miserable since the farmer's old cat had got mad and left home, and made her headquarters on Rocky Ledge.

Every time Polly was about to find something good to eat the old cat would fall seemingly out of nothingness and seize it. The 'possum was getting thin, and stood a good chance of gettin thinner, if the cat didn't stop her mean tricks.

"I guess," thought Polly, as she stood on a high rock and looked off of the high ridge into the great Red River valley, below; "that I'd better be going somewhere else, for those crazy 'possum-hounds will be here in a moment, and I will be the object of their trail."

Polly started walking swiftly across the rough ground of the hillside. She would go to the Dilsoma Hollow, one of the most famous hollow tree hang-outs in the animal world. Its reputation extended for miles and miles across the wild stretch of mountainous region. It was in this hollow that Martin 'Possum, the greatest politician that Rocky Ledge had ever known, met his fate. He was killed by an army of Moles who did not like one of his bills—one that had been put before the Legislature by the famous statesman, and passed.

Polly saw the giant tree looming immediately before her; at the same time the nearest of the dogs broke over the knoll. Polly was scared; she had been absorbed in thought and had not noticed the movement of the dogs. She did not think she could make it. The foremost dog saw her, and let out a blood-curdling war whoop—it was taken up by the others.

The dogs were now within ten feet of her; she was within twelve feet of the trunk of the tree. Now they were within five feet; now five feet; now four—she was within five feet of the tree. Again a triumphant cry came from the leader; simultaneously it was taken up by the others. The 'possum felt a cool shudder creeping up its back bone. Then she gave up, fell back; and prepared to die!

Suddenly a white streak shot through the air. A body hit the ground and hurried away. The dogs were dumb-founded; the leader hesitated a moment, and then plunged after it—the other dogs followed.

Polly lay on the ground and watched the peculiar spectacle. That was the farmer's old cat—her enemy and rival—and it had saved her. Maybe it wasn't such a bad thing after all. Polly shamefully arose, and climbed the tree.

She suddenly gave an exclamation of surprise. She found five young, tender quail in the large animal apartment. They had been killed by some animal. The old cat had left them there.

Polly feasted, for the first time in two days, and really enjoyed her meal; but afterward she became sick, for she had eaten too much.

"And" concluded Polly, "the old cat is not such a bad thing; for if it had not been for her I would have neither lived or eaten."

Among the peculiar belief of the Tibetans, is their objections to cutting the spruce trees or their branches, believing that is displeases the mountain god who would punish offenders. Another peculiar custom is to print on the waters of the Yellow River with a brass mold of Buddha, after which he throws a handful of barley in the river as an offering to imaginary Buddhas.

Mr. and Mrs. Alto Baucom and Mrs. Williams were in Brownwood Saturday.

The school here is to have two holidays in succession, Thursday and Friday because practically all of the teachers are going to the State Teachers Convention at Fort Worth for both days.

The chapel program Monday morning was given by the faculty. The program was most amusing. In fact, it was the best chapel program of the year.

Rev. W. N. Scott filled his regular appointment at the Baptist Church Sunday.

The Cross Out Community night program was given Friday at the high school auditorium. The program was as follows: readings by many small children and Mrs. Jack Bettis; songs by the high school girls; and a one-act play "Good Morning, Teacher". A box supper was held after the program. "The proceeds of the sales of the boxes were for the Athletic Club. The Community night programs are given once a month. They are free and everyone is invited to attend them.

Mrs. N. J. Prater and sons, Ernest and Herman of Brownwood, were here Saturday.

Geneva Atkinson, who has been visiting friends in Brownwood and Santa Anna, returned home Friday.

Tie Clark was in Brownwood Saturday.

All of the teachers here attended Teachers' Institute at Brownwood Saturday.

Two small children of Mr. and Mrs. Odis Williams are ill with diptheria. The diptheria toxin anti-toxin was given to the children last year but was not effective.

Bryant Moore entertained with a dance Saturday night. Those present were: Elden Gregg, Myra Prater, Ben Bingham, Mr. Baltwell, Leta Merle Edgington, Elbert 'Chuch' Hill, Elva Stockton, Frances Hill George Wright, Johnie Teague, Tom Baucom and the host.

The Cross Out Senior basket ball girls will play Blanket here Wednesday night—if our court is ready by then.

Mrs. Burton had been in Pioneer only a short while visiting relatives. Her home was in Shackelford County. Surviving are eight children, 75 grandchildren and 125 great grandchildren. Funeral arrangements were under the supervision of Higginbothams, Cross Plains.

FOOTBALL STORY

while the last went to the locals decisively. Big Bruce Spencer ripped the Rising Star forward wall for consistent gains in the third and fourth quarters and Davidson and W. Spencer made profitable spurts off tackle and around end.

Cross Plains made 11 first downs and gained 164 yards from scrimmage. Rising Star made 12 first downs and gained 152 yards from scrimmage.

Bruce Spencer, Cross Plains, and 'Red' Conger, Rising Star tied for the honor of the longest run of the afternoon. Each is credited with a spurt of 25 yards. Spencer's was through the middle of the line and Conger's was around right end.

Leonard Davidson received a knee injury at the last of third quarter and was taken out. He returned seven minutes before the close of the contest and finished however.

LOCAL BOY PASSES SPARE TIME WHITTLING ODDITIES

Persons troubled with 'time on their hands' should take lessons from Earl McDowell as to how to dispose of it. He was showing in town Wednesday several oddities that he had manufactured with a pocket knife recently in spare time.

His collection included a set of wooden keys and a ring whittled together, a double triangular contraption constructed inside of a bottle and round ball whittled in a box with a chain attached to the end.

All of the carvings were what might be considered as evidence of master woodman craftsmanship.

Cottonwood

Our community was saddened by the death and burial of one of our most highly respected citizens. Monday, Hassie Mitchell who has owned and run the barber shop here for a number of years, was taken seriously ill with tonsillitis, while at the home of his mother, near Atwell, last week. Complications developed and he grew rapidly worse until early Monday morning when he passed away. Many friends and relatives mourn his passing.

Miss Sophia Payne of Cross Plains was also laid to rest in the Cottonwood cemetery late Monday afternoon. Two funerals in one day is a very unusual occurrence for this place. We extend our heart sympathy to all the bereaved.

Rev. and Mrs. Van Pett, the recently appointed pastor of the Dressy circuit; were visiting in Cottonwood Monday afternoon. We are glad to welcome our new pastor and have that his stay among us may be filled with happiness and richest blessings.

Mr. Richmond O'Neal is quite sick at this writing from a spider bite on his back.

Mr. and Mrs. Ott Peavy visited relatives in Clyde last week end.

Prof. H. S. Varner and daughter, Miss Esther, Mr. and Mrs. Farrow, and Miss Bulah Respress attended County Teachers Institute at Baird, Saturday.

Cleburn Thompson, and Dan and Ritchey Mitchell who are attending school in Baird spent the week end with homefolks.

Miss Byrd who has been visiting her sister in Atwell.
