LOCAL RELIEF "SET-UP" IS CHANGED

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

Our nose for news scents an interesting item at far off Amarillo. In that northerly city, Lewis T. Nerdylke a Cottonwood boy who is making good with the Associated Press, will take unto himself a bride Sunday afternoon. The charming young lady is Miss Dorothy Beeman.

Lewis and Dorothy became acquainted while both were students in Missouri University.

Callahan county has perhaps never produced a youth with such journalistic qualities as Lewis possesses. And the unusual thing about this country boy who is achieving distinction with the world's largest news gathering agency in their Dallas office, is, he has the spunk to tackle any proposition.

Before he had ever learned the fundamentals of journalism, he walked into the president's office of a Missouri Woman's College and secured a position as publicity director. And even more amazing is the fact that he made a success of the job.

Incidentally, as editor of the Review, this columnist had the distinction of being the first newspaperman to purchase a syndicated column which the Cottonwood protege produced several years ago. The feature was interesting and most readers of this column probably remember reading it.

Far be it from us to declare that the robbery of the safe in the Anderson Chevrolet Company Saturday night was an "inside" job, but it does look strange that Babe Wood's cigars were found nearby and Mike Cook's tools were used.

"Dizzy" Dean, the braggart of base ball, doesn't know it yet but in a few days he will receive a unique gift from B. F. Peavy of Cross Plains.

A base ball whittled from a solid slab of cedar to the exact size, approximate weight, and with natural cover markings is the Cross Plains man's token to the St. Louis pitcher.

Although blind for 37 years Mr. Peavy has whittled some of the most perfect oddities ever seen in Cross Plains.

Mr. Peavy asks that "Dizzy" throw the wooden base ball in the ceremonial toss which officially opens the World's series. Or, he requests that the ball be given to the dignitary who heaves the first throw.

DR. I. M. HOWARD IN NORWOOD'S CLINIC AT MINERAL WELLS

Dr. I. M. Howard is in Mineral Wells where he is taking his second year's work in Norwood's Clinic of ambulant proctology.

When asked by a representative of the Review last week, when he planned to quit going to school and settle down to work" the veteran Cross Plains physician replied. "I know I am getting old and I have tried to plan that in my declining years I would do only a limited general practice and large office practice, and it is for this reason that I am again attending school—to prepare myself for a specialized office practice.

Doc. Howard stated that he was undecided whether he would reopen offices in Cross Plains after completing work in the Norwood Clinic but said that it would be either here or elsewhere.

Claude Daniel was in Abilene Wednesday night, where he witnessed the graduation ceremonies at McMurry College. His brother John received a degree from the institution at that time.

3.2 Beer Is Outlawed In This Precinct

CROSS PLAINS, CADDO PEEK AND DRESSY GO DRY BY 54 MAJORITY

Voters of this justice precinct—Cross Plains, Dressy and Caddo Peek—went to the polls Saturday and rejected the continuance of the sale of 3.2 beer. The majority for the 'drys' was 54 votes. Cross Plains rejected the sale by 40 votes, Caddo Peek by 10 and Dressy by four votes.

According to interpretation of the law, local dispensers will be permitted to continue sale of the foamy beverage until September 29, 30 days after the election.

The verdict at the polls Saturday was a reversal of an election held June 30, 1934, at which time sale of beer was legalized in this precinct by exactly 50 votes.

The same voting boxes—Cross Plains, Dressy and Caddo Peek—which outlawed the sale of beer by 54 votes went on record as disfavoring the repeal of the Dean law and legalizing the sale of liquor in Texas by a majority of only seven votes.

Complete returns from all voting boxes in Callahan county on the seven proposed constitutional amendments is prepared and published in a chart of this page of today's Review.

PHILPECO GOLFERS TRIM RANGER TEAM

Philpeco Country club golfers won the championship of the Heart of Texas and Oil Belt associations by defeating Ranger, nine to six, at the Cisco course Sunday afternoon.

Philpeco won the Heart of Texas pennant with only one loss during the season, dropping a match to Brady early in the season. A feature of Sunday's match was a sizzling 66 by J. T. Hammett, Philpeco ace, who took out Gid Faircloth of Ranger, four and three.

COMANCHE LAUNCHES SURVEY ON HIWAY 36

Comanche County Commissioners Court last week agreed upon a survey West as far as a $25,000, government grant will allow, along the proposed route of highway 36.

This is the highway that is being advocated from the Gulf coast through Bell County to Comanche and thence westward through Cross Plains and on to Abilene.

The survey will begin at the city limits of Comanche and extend West about three miles, according to Hilton Burks, Secretary, Comanche Chamber of Commerce, who is in close touch with the District WPA office at Waco, which handles the federal grant.

Chase Holeman is working on plans for the road and as soon as they are completed, the federal approval of the $25,000 relief project is almost certain to be made Mr. Burks said.

Since the western division of the road is not now a designated highway, the road will be built under the "Farm-to-Market" road plan advocated by the federal government. The road will have a 100 foot right-of-way, and the grading, drainage, culverts, etc., will be according to State Highway Department specifications.

The three miles will be completed with the exception of hot topping, and will include a caliche base.

M. M. Nance, of Lamb County and formerly of this place was a visitor at the Review office Thursday.

GENEVA MITCHELL BEARS EVIDENCE OF PAST CRIME

Geneva Mitchell, who appears Wednesday in Columbia's "Behind the Evidence" at the Liberty Theatre, still carries a bullet wound in her left arm received at the age of six when a gang attempted to "rub out" Big Joe Colisemo, Chicago's former Public Enemy No. 1. Curiously, "Behind the Evidence" deals dramatically with a young sportsman-reporter who sets out to expose a gang of criminals, masquerading as respectable businessmen and brokers. Norman Foster, Donald Cook and Sheila Mannors have the featured leads.

Miss Josephine Harris returned home after a weeks visit with her sister, Mrs. Willard E. Bounds, in Albany.

Buffaloes Begin Pre - Season Workouts With 27 Athletes Answering Call For Daily Drills

Uniforms were issued to 27 aspirants for berths on this year's Cross Plains high school football team by coach Calude Daniel Monday afternoon. Practices are being held each afternoon this week, plans, however, include both a morning and an afternoon drill beginning next week.

First game for the Buffaloes, according to the present schedule, is with Coleman, September 27. The contest is to be played at night beneath the lights on the Bluecats gridiron. Coach Daniel will take his charges to Coleman for one practice beneath the bulbs a day or so before the game, he told the Review yesterday.

If conveniently possible at least one game and possibly two will be booked for the herds before meeting Coleman, however, no satisfactory arrangements have been made to this end as yet, the Review was told.

Those to whom uniforms have been issued are: Captain Beevo Webb, Anderson Barr, Gene Blitch, J. T. Cross, Doyle McMillan, Eugene Cross, Albert Usrey, Buster Atwood, Durwood Varner, Billy Gray, Ross Hagan Hemphill, J. H. Childs, Garland Smith, Edward Boon, Melvin Placke, David Henkel, Tom Spencer, Howard Everett Denison, James Hall, Stanley Pierce, B. W. Huntington, Barney Hart, Colvin Lackey, Fred Coulter, W. S. Bingham, J. Lee Smith, Jr., and Teddy Walker.

R. E. (Lonesome) Duncan, end and possibly two Joy boys, who are reputed to both be speed merchants and proficient footballers, are expected to report for practice in the near future, greatly augmenting this year's prospects.

Coach Daniel moved here Monday and has taken a room at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Hemphill.

The field was being dugged Thursday morning and placed in improved condition.

LOCAL FIRM VICTIM OF "SAFE CRACKER"

A burglar who is believed to have been inadvertently locked in the Anderson Chevrolet Company building when the firm closed for business Saturday night, blasted locks to the safe and escaped with about $15.

The robbery was first noticed Sunday when Babe Wood, salesman opened the building to drive in an automobile. Papers were found strewn about the office and tools, which were believed to have been used in "cracking" the safe, were left at random. The tools belonged to the Chevrolet firm and were such as are ordinarily used in automotive repairing.

Local officers are working on the case.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Young left Sunday for Brownwood where they joined Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Pratt and from there both couples left for a weeks fishing trip on the Dan Martine lake in Mexico.

ONLY A COMMUNITY CLERK MAINTAINED AT LOCAL OFFICES

Cross Plains relief quarters have been transferred to Baird and Mrs. Gertie Sprawls, head of the local unit, has moved there and assumed duties in the Clyde and Oplin communities. Case worker for this place, as well as Putnam, is now Mrs. Flora Nordyke.

Mrs. Paul Boase, who was until recently with the Rehabilitation Commission, assumed duties again with the Texas Relief Commission as commodity clerk at this place.

Mrs. Boase told the Review Thursday morning that all persons who may desire to get on relief will now have to go to Baird and see Mrs. Callie Marshall at the "intake" office. "I can add no one to the rolls, my duties consist only of distributing surplus commodities such as canned goods and etc." she said.

Mrs. Boase will continue to make office headquarters in the building adjoining the Citizens State Bank at the West on Eighth Street.

ABILENE TRIO IS ARRESTED WITH 30 GALLONS WHISKEY

60 half gallon jars of whiskey were seized when two men and one woman was arrested near Baird Saturday night.

Each was liberated on a bond of $750, shortly after being taken into custody. They gave their names as Miss Chroistelle Smith, E. B. Jones and Bert Simpson, all of Abilene.

The arrest was made by Deputy Sheriff Laurence Nordyke, after a report had been made by a passerby that the automobile was parked along the highway and that one of the men failing to halt him had thrown at the passing car.

Deputy Nordyke drove out to investigate the report and found the men waving an inner tube at passing cars in the endeavor to secure help to repair a flat tire. In examining the automobile he noticed 60 half gallon fruit jars of whiskey. He arrested the trio and took them back to Baird where charges were lodged. Bond for each was set at $750, which was promptly made.

ARKANSAS FUGITIVE, CAUGHT AT STANTON, WAS IN CROSS PLAINS

Lee Sitton, one of two trusty guards who ran amuck at the Arkansas prison July fourth, was captured at Stanton—West Texas town—Monday, when he walked into a trap which had been set by officers.

Associated Press news dispatches said that Sitton had gone to Stanton from Cross Plains. A check up here, however, failed to reveal anyone who knew the Arkansas fugitive or what his business might have been in Cross Plains. Sitton was turned over to Arkansas authorities and Tuesday on his way back to prison.

Mrs. Laura Jones had dinner guest Tuesday, Mrs. Bond, and daughter P. Fort Worth, and Mrs. Howard.

John McKinney visited his daughter Burgin the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. returned from South Texas.

Has The Unwelcome Guest Called At Your Home?

Cross Plains must be a paradise for itinerant peddlers, it the number that apply their trade here is any barometer.

The newest injustice to local merchants is the grocery peddler, who goes from house to house taking orders and making deliveries the following week. His scheme is made more attractive by the promise that with every dollar's worth purchased from him (or her, women also find this place fertile soil) a coupon ticket will be giving which may be applied for a certain amount of cash on the purchase of a specified kitchen utensil.

Cross Plains housewives, thank goodness, are becoming bitter toward itinerant peddlers of this nature and ere long their trade may be so unprofitable that they will journey elsewhere to suck the blood of local industry.

Of course a person who makes his own money has the right to spend it where he desires. But unless each of us realize the obligation and loyalty we owe our home town business institutions, the time will surely come when Cross Plains will have none of the public institutions which distinguish this little city today.

We're all neighbors, friends and interested in each other. So, why not tell the itinerant peddler and mail order houses to go to the devil, we'll make our purchases in Cross Plains.

When the day comes that our citizenship will stand together on this plan, you will see the mail order firms and travelling peddlers do one of two things. They will either leave Cross Plains alone once and for all, or come here and open businesses and be one of us. In the latter event we welcome them to help pay the taxes, the charity load; to contribute for our churches, public improvements; to assist in maintaining and building up our schools; to render all of the many public services local business men are so frequently called to render.

Let's make the itinerant peddler an unwelcome caller at every Cross Plains home.

THE BOOK

the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures

by BRUCE BARTON

The Influence of The Book

THE longest telegraphic message that ever had gone over the wires up to that time was sent from New York to Chicago, May 20, 1881. Its one hundred and eighty thousand words were addressed to The Chicago Times. The Tribune had a message almost as long. The following morning both papers printed the four Gospels complete, with the book of Acts, while The Times had Romans also. The next day they printed the rest of the New Testament from copies sent by mail, proclaiming that they had performed the greatest journalistic achievement of all time. They were right.

The typesetting machine was not yet in use. The Tribune employed ninety-two compositors and five correctors, and completed the work of taking, transcribing, correcting and setting up the text in twelve hours.

On the same day this Revised Version of the New Testament was put on sale simultaneously in New York thirty-three thousand copies were sold locally and at retail in twenty-four hours. Two million copies were sold in twenty-four hours. Two million copies were sold in Oxford and Cambridge before the edition was off the press. In the United States, from May twentieth until the end of the year 1881, thirty huge editions, mounting into million of copies, were sold. Nothing comparable has ever occurred in publishing history.

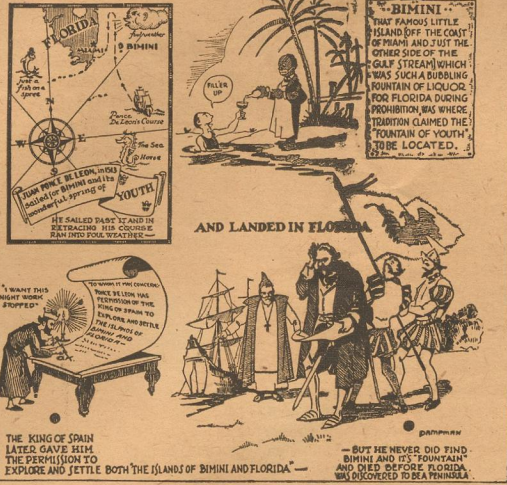

The New Testament has four short biographies of Jesus, each containing some material which is not in any of the others. It has often been asked, "Since we have four, why not more?" Several of the apostles are supposed to have journeyed.

There is nothing inherently improbable in the thought that one or more of them might have written for his own converts in a distant region a little sketch of Jesus as he remembered Him, and that this sketch, however inferior as a whole to any one of four gospels, might contain a few authentic incidents, one or two parables, or a report of some discourse with Jesus hitherto unknown. It has been conjectured that such books were in actual existence.

Such conjectures are probably without foundation. But suppose that such a book, a gospel by Thomas or Andrew, were to be found in a far corner of Asia or Africa, and that some scholar of a reputation as well established as that of Tischendorf, the discover of the Sinaitic manuscript were to see it and pronounce it genuine. Suppose the authorities of the library or convent where it was found should say that scholars were free to examine and photograph and translate it, but that it must not be removed. What would happen?

After the Rails Are Abandoned

(An Editorial from the Gain and Feed Review, Minneapolis, Minn.)

Some eighteen months ago the Omaha Railroad abandoned its branch line from Sioux City, Iowa, to Wynot, Nebraska—a distance of about forty-five or fifty miles. The line had been operated at a substantial loss for some time prior to its abandonment, and because of its proximity to Sioux City most of the business which it would have normally carried was diverted to trucks, when the petition for abandonment was presented by the railroad to the Interstate Commerce Commission, that body granted a stay of one year to determine whether or not the people living in territory tributary to the line wanted railroad service or not. After the year of grace had expired the Interstate Commerce Commission granted the petition of the railroad and the tracks were torn up. The truckers assured the townspeople and the farmers that they would be entirely able to fill their transportation needs. They pointed out that the bulk of the transportation service was already in their hands and that they could handle what little remained.

Now let us see what has happened in this Sioux City-Wynot territory. First of all, the grain rate by rail by Sioux City and the East was 3 cents per bushel from the farthest point on the line. Now the rate is 10 cents a bushel to Sioux City. Coal was laid down in the farthest town for 20 cents a ton, while at present truckers are offering to deliver coal to close-in points at $2.00 a ton. Farm values have depreciated from 50 per cent to 75 per cent. Some farmers are fifty miles from a railroad. Homes in the towns erected at a cost of $4,000 are begging for buyers at levels low as $1,000 and there are no buyers. Lastly, the Omaha Road paid $28,000 each year in taxes and this sum has been shifted over to the remaining taxpayers.

This is not a nice picture, yet if the rural merchants and the rural community does not awaken, it is a scene that is going to be enacted in scores of towns that are today thriving trading points.

The Family DOCTOR by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

A TALK TO WOMEN

I want to make this talk to my good lady readers—I know it concerns every woman whose eyes may fall upon the words herein.

To begin with, no two women in this are exactly alike. Therefore, it is unreasonable to imagine that they could all take the same kind of medicine and receive benefit; a "patent medicine" that would help one woman, might fail with ninety-nine others. I have known one woman to spend fifty dollars for a nostrum she had heard would be "good for her"; she was disappointed, of course.

No woman should buy a medicine aimed at a single symptom; I would not buy a medicine over the counter for "backache," "pelvic trouble," "female complaint," "leucorrhoea," and such like; the latter may have any one of a hundred causes. Find the cause, treat your case and get well. Only your medical advisor is competent.

I have no tolerance for "vegetable compounds," "Indian discoveries," "Squaw cordials," and the like, such as are sold indiscriminately. Two sisters may have the same symptoms, and yet have entirely different diseases.

Of course, married women differ from their unmarried sisters, and of course, require different lines of investigation and, different treatment. It would be foolish to treat both alike, simply because both wore feminine apparel!

In on capacity is the family doctor a more faithful servant than in his treatment of his woman patrons.

The Story of the Constitution by CALEB JOHNSON

VII—THE SUPREME COURT AND ITS POWER

The need for a Federal Judiciary was apparent to all the delegates to the Convention of 1787. The earlier attempts at an effective Federation had been handicapped by the lack of any court having jurisdiction outside its own State. The scheme of "checks and balances" which the framers of the Constitution set up called for a Judicial branch independent of and coequal with the Legislative and Executive. The number of Justices of the Supreme Court is not fixed by the Constitution. Originally there were seven. The number was increased to nine in the administration of President Grant. The Constitution does, however, provide that all Federal judges shall be appointed by the President, and shall, hold office "during good behavior." The number of inferior Federal Courts is left to Congress to decide.

The power of the Federal Judiciary, in the language of the Constitution, extends "to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties," as well as to cases arising from disputes between States, or citizens of different States, and those affecting foreign interests.

The great power of the Supreme Court derives from its duty of interpreting the Constitution. That it might exercise that power to declare an act of Congress unconstitutional was foreseen, and accepted as a matter of course, by the framers of the Constitution. The Federal Judiciary system was intended as a check upon the Legislative and Executive branches of the Government, to see that neither of them exceeded the powers specifically granted to them by the people in the Constitution.

It has been largely through this power of interpretation by the Supreme Court that the power of the Federal Government has grown from its early beginnings. Instead of constant amendment, to meet the inevitable social and economic changes brought about by the passage of time, the Constitution has been kept in mid-channel of the current of events through successive interpretations of its intent by the Supreme Court.

In the exercise of its duty to test all laws by the standard of the Constitution, the Supreme Court, in its 146 years of existence, has passed upon 24,016 public laws enacted by the Congress. In only 59 cases have laws been declared unconstitutional, and 27 of those decisions were unanimous. The tendency of the Supreme Court throughout its existence has been to keep the Constitution, through its interpretations, abreast of the times.

The Supreme Court never acts on its own initiative. It passes only upon cases brought before it by litigants, generally on appeal from the lower courts. And when it decides that a law is unconstitutional its decision is, in effect, a declaration that Congress has tried to do something that runs contrary to the will of the people, as expressed in the document under which Congress, the President and the Court itself derive their powers.

The Supreme Court itself has no power to enforce its decisions. They are, in effect, self-enforcing, for they are recognized by every court in the land, Federal or State, and by Congress and the Executive, as the final word on the question at issue. When the Supreme Court declares a law unconstitutional that law ceases to exist.

How accurately the Supreme Court reflects the changing public sentiment of changing times is indicated by the fact that only once has an amendment to the Constitution resulted directly from an adverse opinion by the Court. That is the income tax amendment.

It takes courage of the he-man sort to do what a young flyer did over a Cleveland airport Tuesday. The pilot discovered a dangling wheel, loosened, in the take-off, and turned the stick over to a passenger who had never handled a ship before, while he climbed out on the landing gear and dangled head down for 40 minutes to replace the wheel. A chance, that inexperienced hand at the stick, could have made the wrong move and the plane would have crashed before the pilot could have regained his seat. Courage like that is what developed aviation to its present stage where less courage is required in flying.

Worshipping God in a wilderness—the old cowhands of Albany and Shackelford county trekked out to the Davis Mountains this week to attend the big annual campmeeting—Just thirty-two in all, driving four hundred miles to worship God in the fastness of the mountains. The camp is located away high up, some six or seven thousand feet above the sea level, an ideal place, no flies, bullgnats or mosquitoes to bother and you have to sleep under two blankets. This camp was established something like fifty years ago. You know that the old time cowman likes the Big Open Spaces, possessed of a Christian ideal, all his own. Yes, old time religion, minus flounces and frills, just range and chuckbox stuff, claps the brand on, burn to the red and the human broncs are broke to the range—O yes, a religious shrine in a desert wild.—Selah.

While Paul Crow, Victor young man, was riding into town in a Ford pickup last week he happened to an accident, the recital of which would thrill the notorious Ripley. Crow was sitting in the back of the pickup, dangling his feet behind. The wheel ran over a sharp rock which flew through the air and cut the heels off both Crow's shoes. The heel nails and all, were completely sheared off by the force of the rock. Crow was not injured. He had new heels attached to his shoes when he got to town.—DeLeon Free Press

Thirty-eight years ago Will Lummus lost a quilt on his father's place east of town. He hunted a long time for the quilt, which was valued by him. It contained an iron handle with a lacing blade and knife blade and the quilt extended from the end. Last week the handle was found, rusted considerably. It was found just where Mr. Lummus believed he lost it.

The quilt was made by the late George Greer, famous settler of the Greer Mountain country, and sold to Mr. Lummus. He stated the quilt handle must be 50 years old or older. The rust has been removed to some extent, and it will be fixed up into a quilt again as a keep-sake.—Moran News

The Divorce Court MURDER

By MILTON PROSSER

Twelfth Instalment

SYNOPSIS—Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man, is murdered as she waits alone in a side room to testify in the divorce case of Rowland vs Rowland—She was to have testified for the husband, a friend, who was defendant in the action. Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case from police headquarters—His preliminary investigation disclosed that both Mr. and Mrs. Rowland had gathered evidence against the other of infidelity. The will of Mrs. Rowland's first husband directed her lawyer brother, Mr. Willard, to handle the estate until she remarried when the new husband was to come into control. Detective Rankin finds motives and the evidence of guilt for the murder of Mrs. Keith, husband of the murdered woman, Hugh Campbell, paramour of Mrs. Rowland, and his underworld confederates—

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Wisely, Miss Edmond made no effort to deny the charge. "Where did you learn that?"

"From Harvey Willard, of course—and Mrs. Rowland," Rankin returned provocatively. "They informed me of your entire part in the collusion—how, as secretary, you agreed to pretend an affair with the husband. And how you climaxed the 'intrigue' with the affair at the Inn." He smiled contemptuously.

As he intended, anger burned in the girl's eyes, as much directed against her erstwhile confederates as against his insulting comments.

"They told you that? But it was their plan; I had nothing to do with it and had no interest in it, until I innocently took the job as secretary."

"Just the same, you've conspired to defraud justice and commit perjury under oath," the detective put in coldly.

Jill Edmond's resentment, increasing with her alarm, loosened her tongue.

"I won't be a fool for them." She clenched her fists. "They may have told you a lot, but they left out even more. You haven't heard yet that they tried to double-cross Mr. Rowland. There was a woman he really loved—for whom he wasn't faking an affection; and they attempted to catch him with her—his real mistress."

"His real mistress? What do you mean—he was unfaithful, after all."

"Yes, he had a mistress; and here is more news to surprise you." "They didn't tell you her name, either, Mr. Rankin; it was Barbara Keith—Mrs. Mortimer Keith! It was with her not me, that he went to the Sunset Inn February first, to spend the night!"

"Mrs. Keith!" Rankin ejaculated. "Good heavens, how can that be possible?"

He could hardly credit his ears. He had expected information from the girl, but never, in his wildest speculations, such a startling, overwhelming revelation.

"To clear up this whole business for you, Mr. Rankin," she related, "I had better begin at the beginning. What they said about hiring me and planting the impression Allen and I had an affair is probably correct; they'd have no reason to lie about that. Up to the day we chose for the final discovery, everything went according to plan. It was arranged to catch us together, Thursday, February second; you know, as secretary, I had every Thursday off and usually spent it with Allen to increase suspicion. He was to write a note, making an appointment to meet that night at eight o'clock in town. Mrs. Rowland would supposedly discover it, turn it over to her brother and Dorkin, and the three of them would watch our meeting. Then, to produce proofs of our relations, Allen and I were to drive to the Roadside Hotel, thirty miles out along the Lancaster Pike and there be trapped in a bedroom together."

The detective's face screwed into a baffled, uncomprehending frown.

"This was set for Thursday, the second? But according to Mr. Willard and the testimony," he objected, "the climax really, was acted the day before Wednesday, February first. And it took at the Sunset Inn, instead."

Jill Edmond smiled vindictively. "Yes, that's so; that is where the double-crossing comes in. The whole program was advanced one day by Mrs. Rowland's treachery in trying to drag Mrs. Keith into the scandal. She failed only because I was too much for her. At the hearing afterward, she couldn't prove anything against Mrs. Keith, so she Mr. Willard and Allen had to stick to the story they originally planned and change only the necessary minor details, such as the date and the scene. After all, so far as Dorkin was concerned, he witnessed on Wednesday substantially what we intended him to see on Thursday; and that was the evidence he offered."

Still Rankin wore a puzzled look. "I'm afraid I don't follow at all, Miss Edmond. How can that be if Mrs. Keith went with Rowland to the Inn?"

"It's simple when you know the conversation I overheard Wednesday afternoon, February first," the girl returned. "I came downstairs in the Rowland home about three o'clock and heard Mrs. Rowland on the phone in the living room. She spoke to Mr. Willard, breathlessly and yet so plainly I couldn't help understanding; there was something joyful, almost—unholy about her excitement. Curious, I slipped into the conservatory where I could listen still better. First, she said, 'My suspicions were right, after all, Harvey; I have proof at last. Allen is seeing that woman tonight! You refused to believe it when I insisted all this time she was his mistress, but now you'll have to admit it. She then answered a question. 'Never mind how I found out; I'll tell you that when you arrive. Just be here with Dorkin—at nine o'clock at the corner of Jackson and Elder streets.' Then she added, 'He has the audacity to meet her practically in front of my home! Now we won't have to wait for the faked meeting tomorrow night to prove he is faithless; tonight we'll catch him red-handed with his real mistress and have honest grounds for a divorce. And with that she hung up the receiver.'"

"So I had to get in touch with Allen and warn him of the trap. Only, I couldn't locate him; I went out and phoned his apartment several times, but in vain. My only hope was to be at the meeting place and if Allen arrived first, warn him and try to stop him. I hired a car, figuring I might need one if any traveling was to be done. At eight-thirty I parked near the corner, careful not to be observed; I watched Mrs. Rowland, Mr. Willard and that detective come at twenty minutes later, Mrs. Keith walked up, and at exactly nine o'clock Allen picked her up."

"Since I could not signal Allen, I followed both cars to wait for a later chance. All the way to the Inn, I trailed behind Mrs. Rowland while she trailed him. At the Inn, I drove ahead and parked on the other side. But while Mr. Willard's crowd delayed until Allen and Mrs. Keith were well settled in their quarters, I acted. I could tell from the new light on the second floor, the location of their room. Without stopping to ask at the desk, I entered and went directly upstairs as if I were an expected visitor. When I knocked at the door, there was a dead silence until I announced my name; then Allen opened it cautiously for me and let me in."

"Mrs. Keith was panic-stricken," the secretary proceeded dramatically, "half fainting and trembling in terror; she cried out about being ruined by the scandal. Allen had enough presence of mind to realize that he had to save the reputation of the woman he loved. He sent both of us into the bathroom to exchange clothes. Luckily, we were about the same size. Then I gave Mrs. Keith the key to my machine and Allen ordered her to drive back to the city immediately."

"Even so, she had barely a moment to spare. As she stepped into the hall, Mrs. Rowland, her brother and Dorkin were already climbing the stairs. To escape them, she had to slip into an open bathroom several doors down the corridor. Then she waited until everyone rushed into our room—before she sneaked out and ran down to my car. She probably just missed meeting Mr. Keith on the way."

The girl flicked away her cigarette ash and shrugged her shoulders carelessly.

"The rest of the story must be fairly clear from the records of the hearing," she concluded. "Allen and I were well compromised by the interruption; we acted dismayed and guilty, precisely as it had all been planned for the next day. Though I almost spoiled it by laughing at Mrs. Rowland's rage and mortification and Mr. Willard's amazement. During the confusion they searched the room, closets and bathroom for Mrs. Keith. Yet they had to carry out the scene, not daring to demand where she was or question the substitution. That would have given away their knowledge of the whole secret and admitted the collusion."

After a moment of deliberation, Rankin said:

"I suppose that covers all the ground, Miss Edmond, except for my original question. Do you think Mr. Keith went to the Inn because he suspected his wife would be there with Rowland?"

Again he sensed in her that quick wariness.

"I'd say it was something like that."

"That's very important," Rankin returned graciously. "You had no reason to shield Mortimer Keith in this business had you?"

The girl looked startled. "Of course not, Mr. Rankin," she answered vehemently.

"You also failed to inform me," Rankin pointed out severely, that, on the afternoon of the murder, Mr. Keith visited the lawyers' offices. He arrived about when you did, two-thirty-five. You couldn't help seeing and recognizing him in the main office, yet you concealed that fact from me."

"Mr. Keith there?" Jill Edmond's attempt at surprise held a false note. "I swear I didn't know, Mr. Rankin; I neither saw him come in or leave."

At the sudden inspiration that occurred to him at that instant, Rankin shook his head savagely.

"Perhaps I can suggest a better reason why you wanted to protect him; you found it profitable to tell him the truth."

The secretary's eyes widened with terror.

"That is called blackmail, Miss Edmond," he went on, "a much graver offense than obstructing justice. You threatened to make public Mrs. Keith's infidelity unless it was made worth your while not to."

"No, no, that isn't what happened at all!" Jill Edmond's alarmed cry interrupted. "I had done him a service he would appreciate; at the cost of my character, I had saved his wife's honor and his from public disgrace. Surely it wasn't too much for me to expect some reward."

"And in that way, profit at both ends for the same thing," Rankin declared curtly. "I went to see him as soon as I got Allen to admit who he was. And was perfectly willing to let me have the money."

Abruptly the detective rose, his mouth grim and ominous.

"Miss Edmond," he warned her, "this is your only chance; hold your tongue and be prepared to so."

"Yes, yes, Mr. Rankin," Jill Edmond promised only too fervently. "And thank you; you can depend on me not to breathe a word to anyone."

Rankin's faith in Barbara Keith was destined to receive an even more severe strain that very night when he reached the Central Detective Bureau.

Items of Interest From COUNTY AGENT'S OFFICE

Screw Worm Control

Screw worms have been reported to be unusually active this year in Callahan county. With this in mind, the following facts as established by the U. S. Department of Agriculture Bureau of Entomology may be beneficial.

Four important facts should be understood; How screw worms develop (2) how to recognize screw worm cases (3) how to treat infested wounds (4) and how to prevent screw worm flies.

Screw worm maggot is the young of a certain kind of fly that lays its eggs only in live animal tissue. Usually its a scratch, a cut, a tick bite, or wound made from castration or dehorning. They do not develop in decaying meat. The government drouth cattle program did not increase any screw worms for they do not produce in dead animals nor hatch in dead carcasses. Eggs are laid on the wounds and maggots hatch out in 10 to 12 hours. They bore into the flesh in clusters so as to form pockets in the wounds. As the pocket becomes larger more eggs are laid and the animal will soon be killed if not treated. The maggots become fully grown in 4 to 6 days and drop out on the ground where they become full grown flies in 10 to 14 more days. The flies mate and the females are again ready to lay eggs in 7 to 10 days.

Recognizing the Case

When a bloody discharge is seen on the animal it is almost a positive identification that the animal has screw worms. Common blowfly maggots do not cause bleeding in wounds. Infested sheep and goats hide away as soon as they get a case so as to try to get away from the flies. Cattle sometimes stray from the herds and become weak and soon die.

Treatment.

Since this is a cattle country and many old timers have spent a life time fighting this menace, the writer feels a hesitancy in stating that many cattle have been lost by improper methods in handling the cases but such is the actual fact. Thousands of cattle have been lost by cattlemen using coal tar, creosote, carbolic acid, or any of the phenols which are poisonous to animals. "Don't use any of the above remedies."

The question naturally arises which is the best treatment. The only approved treatment is BENZOL, benzol, and pine-tar-oil. Benzol kills the worms and pine-tar oil heals the wounds and keeps the flies away. Wounds with bloody secretions must be cleaned well before the benzol is applied as it does not readily kill the worms that are protected by fluids in the wound. After the cleaning the wound should receive an application of benzol applied with an oil can or syringe, which regards the flow of blood. Three or four minutes should be allowed the benzol to reach the worm, then apply another light application and insert cotton in the opening and should be left in the wound so that the gas will be breathed by the worm. It is also recommended that the cotton and worms be left in the wound. Nature will take care of the residue and soon heal the wound. Of course, a pine-tar oil should be coated over the wound after the cotton is inserted. Insist that this oil be of specific gravity 1.065, acid free, dehydrated. This should be applied at two or three day intervals until the wound is healed. Benzol should be 90% pure commercial.

Prevention

From the above statements it is seen that the only way to stamp out screw worm infection is to prevent their breeding in live animals. Traps, and the burning of dead carcasses will not stop them or check their spread. They do not breed or develop in dead stock neither or they attracted by dead meat. Only the blowfly and houseflies that we see daily go to such material.

Then it is proper that no castrating, dehorning, or branding should be done after April 1st and before a killing frost. Screw worms can not eradicate but can be controlled.

resident Signs New AAA

The amendments to the AAA were passed by Congress and have received the signature of the President. It is to continue the Bankhead Act another year also which is not a part of the AAA program. New cotton program is in the making and will be ready for signers before very long. Like both the previous programs it will be voluntary and will benefit the co-operator more than those who do not sign a contract. It is announced that the new loan policy will let contract signers have 12 cents for their cotton against, for those who do not cooperate. However, any man who does not want to go with his government in a program to help all should not expect the government to help him in any special way. The world does not run on a "Pay You for Nothing" bases. You get out about what you put in and that goes for more things than cotton, wheat, or hogs. The Commodity Credit Corporation will offer a loan of 10 cents per pound at the farm, without recourse on the borrower, on 7/8 inch middling cotton or better.

The Secretary of Agriculture and the Commodity Credit Corporation announced today with the approval of the President that a cotton loan plan would be put into immediate operation on the 1935 crop which would assure cotton producers an average return of not less than 12 cents per pound on cotton grown in 1935. The AAA will make payments to cotton farmers to equal such difference, if any, as may exist between 12 cents and the average price of 7/8 inch middling cotton as reflected in the 10 spot markets during the period from September 1 to January 1, this period is chosen as covering the harvest months. Such payments as may be made will be limited to the individual producer's actual production up to the amount of his Bankhead allotment.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will offer a loan of 9 cents per pound at the farm, without recourse on the borrower, on 13/16 inch low middling cotton or better. This loan will enable any grower cooperating in the Adjustment Program to obtain a loan at once, and will permit him to market his cotton in an orderly fashion throughout the year. The rate of loan is obviously substantially below the present or prospective price levels. These offers will apply only to those producers who are cooperating in the 1935 program and who agree to cooperate in the 1936 program.

It was stated at the AAA that plans for the 1936 program are being developed and that the Administration would continue its efforts, in cooperation with cotton farmers, to adjust production to effective demand, and further reduce the end season carry over down to normal size.

It was emphasized that at present levels of world consumption domestic and foreign mills should require at least 11,500,000 bales of the 1935 crop and that with less than 1,000,000 bales of free cotton in the hands of the trade, a strong buying movement should result which would permit the new crop to move readily into consumptive channels.

Prospects for cotton consumption are much improved as compared with last season, it was stated by the AAA. Last month's domestic utilization was 9 per cent above July of last year and the general rising tide of industrial activity promises higher cotton consumption through the whole of the cotton season. The plan as developed, quotes a telegram from C. A. Cobb, Director, Division of Cotton, is expected to assure cotton growers of an income of around $700,000,000 for their lint cotton for 1935, exclusive of rental and benefit payments under existing contracts. This compares with an income of $613,000,000 for lint cotton in 1934; $634,000,000 in 1933; and $424,000,000 in 1932. The AAA emphasized that one important objective of this plan was to produce the orderly marketing of the crop and that with the free movement of the new crop into consumption, together with the certainty of a strong control program for 1936, the cotton situation appeared more hopeful than at any time during the past five seasons.

WHEELER, WOOLSEY AT LIBERTY SCREEN SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Beautiful belles and a frenzied feud are mixed together in a mint julep of merriment labeled "Kentucky Kernels," in the new comedy attraction which opens at the Liberty Theatre Sunday.

It is well to mention that Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, the inimitable comedy entertainers are starred in the little roles of "Kentucky Kernels," and you will have a plausible explanation of the rampant comedy in the production. As a pair of vaudeville magicians impersonating two gentlemen native to the South, Wheeler and Woolsey offer a bagful of new tricks which evoke a continuous stream of hearty guffaws from the audience accordance to W. A. Beavers, Liberty manager.

Concerning an age-old feud between two Kentucky clans, the plot abounds in exciting action and hilarious situations. An unforeseen crisis makes Bert and Bob foster fathers of a child heir to a Southern plantation. Delivering the boy to his family, they blunder into a terrific feud. The boys' attempts to settle the family war and Wheeler's wooing of the opposing faction's belle provide a mad and merry melange of music, girls, dancing, comedy and romance.
