HOME TOWN GOSSIP

This column's most sensational discovery of the week is that an attractive, young Cross Plains girl and a prominent young Cross Cut man are "that way" over each other. The affair is reported to be reaching serious proportions.

Browne Baum, who recently returned from Houston to pinch-hit for his father on a sizeable farm West of town, is a staunch believer in comfort. Any way now he may be seen going to and from the field with a pillow under his arm. The sofa is used to cushion the bounces to be witnessed on a cultivator seat.

Imagine our embarrassment when J. P. Smith endeavored to sell us a lariat rope last week, to tie the bull which he said amounts in this column. Such crust.

400 drivers licenses have been issued in Cross Plains to date. Taylor Bond estimates that at least 1,100 more will be supplied local drivers before the first of next month. Better get yours.

An expectant father stood nervously by the other day, awaiting the arrival of his first born. Jokingly, to relieve the tenseness, a friend asked: "What are you going to name him?"

"George Washington", was the patriotic father's prompt reply.

A few minutes later a very attractive baby girl was born, and since the name George Washington is quite inappropriate for her sex, this column suggests to Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Luttrell, the name "Betsey Ross."

After sailing the salty seas for four years, Claude Mayes has returned home to be a "landlubber."

Today W. D. Smith, owner-manager of the local Piggly Wiggly Store, celebrates his seventh business anniversary in Cross Plains. The fire back page of today's issue, claimed by firms with whom he has done business, in wishing continued success.

The Piggly Wiggly has been one of the most consistent users of advertising space in the Review. For that reason, we can't help but feel partially responsible for the firm's achievement.

Now isn't that just like "doggone" newspaper men to claim credit for everything, including the rising of the morning's sun.

Of the several schools this rural pencil pusher has attended (yes, we really got past the fourth grade, but pardon the bragging about it), none is held in greater affection than the one to be found at Cottonwood, which we never were privileged to attend even a single day.

Again we've been invited to deliver the commencement address to high school seniors there. And because it's a real pleasure to participate in functions at that splendid institution, we'll be on hand the night of May eighth to attempt the assignment.

McBee Murder Mystery Nears Solution

DETAILS OF CRIME DISCLOSED FRIDAY IN "HABEAS CORPUS"

As a result of sensational developments over the week end in the McBee murder mystery, four persons are being detained on charges in connection with the crime. Those being held are: Raymond Henry, Mrs. Henry—McBee's wife at the time of his death, Jack and Lynn Smith.

It was disclosed in a habeas corpus hearing at Eastland, Friday morning, how McBee was stabbed to death and, three weeks after burial, his body exhumed and hung to a tree in the densely wooded section near the Rising Star cemetery.

Previously, M. E. (Sandy) Tyler of Lelia Lake who was living at Rising Star had told of going to McBee's home the night of the slaying, May 1, 1933, and being informed by the victim that "Henry had stabbed him (McBee) with an ice pick."

Tyler said he offered to bring a doctor but was stopped by Henry. "McBee said he wanted some whiskey, so we went to get some," Tyler testified. The witness said he could find no whiskey and returned to McBee's house.

When he started to leave again, Tyler testified, he was pushed back by Henry, who bolted the door. Tyler said Henry told him he "didn't want anyone to know anything about it." Later, Tyler said he was allowed to leave.

Tyler said about three weeks later Henry and some other persons came to his house.

"They had something with them—McBee I guess," Tyler said. "They went in the house and rolled it up. Raymond Henry got a quilt and a piece of clothesline. Tyler testified they took the bundle from his house, put it into an automobile, and drove toward the cemetery, Tyler accompanying the party. He said they drove into the brush, left him in the car and took the bundle away, returning in about an hour.

Tyler said he was threatened if he "talked."

Scenes In McBee Murder Mystery

Scenes figuring in the murder of H. L. McBee, former Cross Plains man, are pictured below. McBee lay with a stab wound and died May first, 1933 in the house in the top picture, which was his home at Rising Star at the time; his body was buried in the hole shown in the second view, and later disinterred and hung from the tree at the center of the bottom picture. McBee's skeleton was found hanging from the tree more than a year after he disappeared. In the bottom picture are, left to right, Moran Barr, former Cross Plains man who is now a member of the state highway patrol, Sheriff Frank Mills of Coleman, and Joe Thompson, public safety agent. The three officers have had important parts in the solving of the murder mystery.

PIONEER'S OLDEST CITIZEN SUCCUMBS; NAMED THE PLACE

Captain A. M. Curry, 96, a Confederate veteran, died at the home of his son E. M. Curry, near Pioneer, early Sunday night after an extended illness. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon with Rev. Ed Anderson, of Strawn, officiating. Interment was made in the Pioneer cemetery.

Mr. Curry was born in Indiana. He was a Captain in the army of the Confederacy and saw action in several of the major conflicts of the civil war.

He was one of the earliest settlers of the Pioneer community and had the distinction of giving Pioneer its name at a mass meeting of citizens in July 1833. When suggested names for the town were called for, Captain Curry is reputed to have risen and suggested: "Let's name it Pioneer, in tribute to the men and women who blazed the Westward trail and made possible the outposts of civilization." His suggestion was immediately unanimously accepted and within a few short months a post office for Pioneer, Texas was granted by the federal government.

Through the years Mr. Curry continued to make his home at Pioneer and has for long been known as "The Father of Pioneer." The place where he died—at the home of his son—was the old Curry homestead more than 50 years ago.

Survivors include three sons, Bob and Grover, of Arizona, and E. M. (Ed) Curry, of Pioneer, as well as several daughters, whose names the Review was unable to learn.

Friends crowded the Pioneer church beyond capacity Tuesday afternoon in a final, parting tribute to the man who was known and publically esteemed as a pioneer, "veteran of the gray," and oldest citizen of his community.

EARLY DAY SETTLER DIES AT HOME HERE TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. P. M. Jennings, 88, long time resident of this section, who died at her home in the West part of town shortly before two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, was laid to final rest in the Howe cemetery—near Burkett—Wednesday afternoon. Interment was made beside the grave of her husband who expired September 15, 1917.

Death resulted from pneumonia and heart complication, the attending physician stated. Mrs. Jennings had been in failing health the past two years.

Funeral services were conducted by Pastor J. P. Salyer, of the Burkett Church of Christ, and Vice-President Tom Morris, of Abilene Christian College.

Mrs. Jennings was born in Kentucky, February 11, 1848. She moved with her husband a few years later to Missouri. In 1885, the couple came to Texas, settling in Brown County, near the Howe community, where Mrs. Jennings was buried Wednesday afternoon.

Survivors include three sons and two daughters. The sons are: G. L. Jennings, of Abilene; L. E., of South of Cross Cut; E. L., of Santa Anna. The daughters are Mrs. John Mode, of Grosvonor, and Miss Lillie Jennings, who resided with her mother here.

Pal bearers at the funeral and interment service were employees of G. L. Jennings, who is in the motor car business at Abilene.

Funeral arrangements were handled by Higginbothams, Cross Plains.

VERNON R. KING IS CANDIDATE FOR TAX ASSESSOR-COLLECTOR

Vernon R. King, Tax Assessor and Collector, makes announcement this week of his candidacy for reelection, subject to the action of the Democratic primary to be held July 25.

Mr. King has held the office of Assessor and Collector one term. Prior to that he served as Tax Assessor for one term. He is well known to virtually the entire citizenship of Callahan county.

The volume of business being handled through his office at this particular time of the year will probably forbid Mr. King devoting a great amount of time to the campaign until after the bulk of automobile registrations are disposed of, however, he states that he hopes to see every voter in the county if it is possibly to do so.

His official statement to the voters appears on another page of today's issue of the Review.

The school election will be held in the Anderson Chevrolet building, with F. R. Anderson acting as presiding judge.

BAPTIST TO BEGIN REVIVAL MEETING HERE SUNDAY MORN

In compliance with the statewide request of Governor James V. Alford that the week beginning March eighth be set aside for revival meetings, the Cross Plains Baptist church will launch an eight day revival Sunday morning.

The pastor, Rev. V. W. Tatum will do the preaching. Singing and special music will be handled by local forces the Review was told. The following statement concerning the revival was handed the Review for publication.

"We will be glad to have the entire citizenship of Cross Plains trade territory to come and worship with us. Please consider this as a personal invitation. Evening services will begin at seven thirty and your presence is urgently requested."

Sunday morning services will begin with Sunday School at nine forty five. Preaching will be at the 11 o'clock hour, for which Rev. The show is scheduled to start at 10:00 A.M. and run through 2:00 P.M.

At 2:00 o'clock the boys will be assembled and allowed to try for pigs that will be turned loose on the grounds that will be the property of the boy who catches him and will agree to feed him according to the rules. This contest is open only to 4-H club boys who show their cards filled out and in the office of the county agent. Friends cooperating with the county agent in this show are business men and ranchers of Baird, Clyde, and Putnam. We appreciate the cooperation of the Callahan people in this growing work. There were four boys in 1934, twelve boys in 1935, and eighty-five boys for 1936 enrolled for 4-H club work.

Oh Sure! You Can Keep It in the Can

It is just as safe to keep canned food in the can it comes in—if the can is cool and covered—as it is to empty the food into another container. Thousands of housewives are firm in the faith that canned goods ought to be emptied as soon as the can is opened, or, at least, before the remainder of the food goes into the refrigerator—one of the persistent food fallacies. The question keeps coming to the Bureau of Home Economics in letters from home-makers.

A few acid foods may dissolve a little iron from the can, but this is not harmful, not dangerous to health. Cans and food are sterilized in the "processing". But the dish into which the food might be emptied is far from sterile. In other words, it is likely to have on it bacteria that cause food to spoil.

Whether in the original can or in another container, the principal precautions for keeping food are—keep it cool and keep it covered.

To The Citizenship Of Callahan County

In announcing to you my candidacy for re-election to the office of Tax Assessor-Collector, for a second term, I wish to express my sincere thanks to you for the confidence and trust that you have placed in me in the past. It has been my purpose at all times to discharge the duties of this office in the most efficient and courteous manner, and in view of the fact that the past year called for a complete re-organization of the set-up for the handling of the business of the new combination of both offices, I believe that I will be in position by reason of this past experience to render you even better service in the future should you see fit to re-elect me to this responsible position. Wishing to assure you I shall appreciate your confidence and support in the coming primary, and that I am ever grateful for the favors conferred upon me. I am.

Sincerely yours,
VERNON R. KING

Obituary

In Memory of William Oscar Peavy

Little William, age 10 months, departed this life February 25. He is survived by his parents, two sisters, one brother, grandparents and a host of other relatives and friends. He had been sick several days and suffered lots.

Though we are grieved to see him go, we should be reconciled when we know his sufferings are over, and he is walking the golden streets, beckoning us on.

Heaven is brighter and dearer to us, because of his going. He and his little sister, who left us a few years ago are bright jewels of Heaven.

Grieve not, dear ones, but so live that when the death angel lays his icy hand on your brow, you will be ready to meet your little ones gone on.

I wish that His hand Could be placed on our heads And His arm around us be thrown, And we might see His dear face, When he said, "Let the little ones come unto me."

Mixed up with a great deal of justifiable complaint about existing social conditions there is a certain proportion of plain ordinary self-pity. It expresses itself after this fashion: "You who are older have grabbed all the opportunities. You had it easy in your day. If you couldn't find a job, or if you didn't like your job, there was always the land. You could pioneer."

Seen through the rosy haze of emotion, the pioneers appear as a company of hardy young men and women, with their attics full of ham and potatoes and their cellars full of hard cider—dancing barn dances and holding husking bees. But what were the facts? You get a glimpse of them in a recent biography called Old Jules by Mari Sandoz, daughter of a Nebraska sod-hut pioneer.

Merely to escape starvation, Old Jules was driven from one home-stead to another, a half-dozen moves. Sand storm and drought destroyed his crops; his cattle died from lack of food or water, or were frozen to death in the terrific shelterless winters. He had to fight off thieves and wolves, and labor from starlight in the morning to moonlight at night. Four wives wore themselves out trying to carry on with him; he could hardly have been punished more by sentence as a galley slave.

His case is not exceptional. Out of the multitudes who started West with the Forty-Niners, only a few arrived; thousands travelled only a little way before the privations drove them back.

The western frontiers are gone, it is true, but if any boy or girl has in him the courage of the pioneers, he will not be downed in this age, any more than he would have been a hundred years ago. Courage is timeless; so, unfortunately, is self-pity.

Your Friend Forever...◆◆◆

When you landed in this world, probably the first to chronicle your birth was the ol' home town newspaper. Through the years—infancy, adolescence, manhood (or womanhood)—it has been like an elder brother pointing the way, rejoicing in your success and achievements, lauding them to the world. When the icy hand of death squelches the breath from your body, the ol' home town newspaper will again perform it's sublime duty. It will portray you simply, fairly, yet correctly.

Through a lifetime, your home town newspaper devotes it's best to keeping you informed of the happenings of interest. Each week it brings news of the shops, accidents, county, church, neighbors, school, trade area; the things you really care to know.

Stand by your home paper as you would yourself. It is your friend, interested in your welfare, a champion of your course. Subscribe for it. Recommend it to your friends. It records the only history of your family. In it's files, yellowing with age, is the only authentic record of the happenings of yesteryear.

The management of the home newspaper may change from time to time. But no individual—regardless of who is the publisher or editor—will ever own the home town newspaper. It belongs to the people, as much as does the church, the school, or the courthouse, the Alamo.

The Cross Plains Review is your home town newspaper. Frankly, it's personnel is striving earnestly, diligently to give the Cross Plains trade territory a paper of which to be proud.

SYNOPSIS: A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marenia" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romantic, entertaining . . . and tragic . . . Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. . . These characters are aboard the ship. Macduff, dour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter; Captain Baring, master of the ship.—and his soul. No, Go On With the Story.

The girl had passed from frenzy to maudlin collapse. She was shivering as her protector dragged her firmly through the door. Down the companionway and along the corridors they staggered, the older woman moving with intent and decisive steps. At last they reached Joan's cabin and the girl flopped on her bed. Miss Mudge bent down and drew off her slippers and stockings. She made her sit up while she pulled her flowered chiffon frock over her head. Blushing vaguely when she saw how little she wore, she gingerly drew off the scrap of lace that seemed to be all of her under-clothing. How lovely she was! Miss Mudge went into her wardrobe and found a nightdress—of silk so soft that she could crush it in one hand. It was fragrant and sweet as acacia blossom. "Cofy now?" she asked.

Joan's reply was an incoherent whisper. Miss Mudge kissed her and tucked her up, dimly touched by her helpless state. Then she found her way to her own bed in the darkness for she could not bear the light just then. Her numbness was slowly passing and she was coming out of a fog, aware at last that something terrible had happened to her in the captain's quarters. In a full blaze of consciousness, she buried her face in her hands and sobbed. Miss Foster, wild and drunk and beautiful, had told the truth and stripped her to shreds, right down to the awful foundation of her cotton nightgown and her crimped fringe.

Miss Mudge was seeing things as they were, and she felt alone and afraid, in a vast hall that stretched to infinity, a hall lined with flashing mirrors that reflected over and over again the cheapness of all her belongings. A week ago she had felt so chic. And the kiss from Mr. Charlton—an act of pity! That had been cheap, too. Her face was drained of life. For hours she lay on her bed without moving.

The cocktail party went on, with the guests making feverish efforts to cover up the disappearance of Miss Mudge and Joan. Only Dick went out, after catching the eye of the captain. Angela shook herself clear of the horror she had gone through.

Captain Baring took out his violin and settled it tenderly under his chin. He played for them, softly, Grieg and Bach. Angela sat entranced—not so much by the music as by the strange man who spent lonely nights on the bridge and could wring such feeling from his violin. When he had finished, he was still remote, as if his playing was a form of self-indulgence that he did not care to share with others. He listened to their compliments absent-mindedly and left them without a word.

Miss Mudge left the Marenia at San Francisco. She was pale and wore her glasses. Her fringe was straight and she had given her Spanish shawl to her stewardess. All of her vanities had been laid aside, for her mind worked clearly now, with everything out in the open. After her tips had been paid, she had eight dollars left and her railway ticket to Ohonto. That was that! She had travelled forty thousand miles but had failed to see the world. She had spent her life's saving and would have to begin all over again. Another twenty years with Agatha before she could the gangplank, knowing that glamour was only an empty word. She was sure at last that there was only one sphere in which she could move. Hereafter she would keep her wings clipped to her surroundings, and her thoughts close to the ground.

She had avoided Dick since the cocktail party. He had sent her a note, kind and detached, telling her that she must forget every word Miss Foster had said. It was now among her souvenirs—a red balloon, a swizzle-stick, a cheap little Tanagra from Athens, a small carved god, her Jordan water, some gala favours, her autographed menus, a snapshot of him at Kandy. That was all. It was good-bye.

The people with whom she had chatted on deck and at table, exchanging addresses and promising lifelong friendship, had been too busy with their own affairs to notice her undistinguished departure. There were two exceptions. Mrs. Wynant had been cordial, inviting her to visit her home in England, and Miss Arundel had kissed warmly, promising to send her some wedding cake. Miss Mudge fluttered along the pier. She had to get through the customs, but pain was fogging her vision, and the dragging weight deep in her inside, was getting worse each minute. For twenty years she had looked forward to her trip around the world. Now it was over, and she had nothing. She stumbled against a trunk and wiped the tears from her eyes.

It was too late for her to see that Dick was watching her as she wandered with uncertain steps among the packing cases on the wharf. His glance was kind, but he was thinking that it was far, far better for Miss Mudge to be stepping back into her lustreless frame at Ohonto, Wisconsin. He had avoided Miss Mudge since the cocktail party, but ing deliberately out of his way, and he had taken his cue from her. There was nothing he could say to her, nothing at all.

The orchestra was playing. Its languid notes came drifting up from the ballroom. Patty's hand stole through Johnny's arm. He squeezed it hard.

"Good kid!" he whispered, and kissed the tip of her ear.

Patty sighed. "I love the swish of the sea in my ears. Life will seem so quiet, Johnny, when we're on land again."

"Life is just opening up for Patty," said Angela, watching her affectionately.

"I hope there's something in Johnny, for Patty is a fine girl," Macduff declared.

"I think there is, Macduff. You're a little hard on the young."

"Intolerable puppies, all cheek and ignorance!"

Angela laughed. "I've got rather fond of those two. I shall always wonder about them. When you're thrown together on a trip like this, and share the sort of things that we have shared, you get more attached to people than you would in thirty years at home."

"I wonder what's happened to the Langford woman," said Macduff, irrelevantly.

"She's probably not with Rumford by now, but she did all the damage she could while she was on the oat. She comes from New York, doesn't she? You may run into her some time."

"Angela," Macduff bent over, "would you ever want to live in New York?"

"Never."

Dick Charlton took off his jacket and put on his dressing-gown, he lighted his pipe and sat down at his desk to read. A knock at the door. He opened it wide, and found Joan standing outside, the strap of her satin frock slipping down over her arm, and her wild green eyes ablaze with light. Dick grew pale but controlled himself. He couldn't forget what this devilish girl had done to Miss Mudge.

"What do you want?" he demanded.

"I want to speak to you, Dick. I want to tell you I'm sorry. I swear I didn't mean to hurt her—or you. I swear I didn't."

"Joan, I hope never to see you again as long as I live," said Dick, in a voice that stung like a lash.

"Oh, oh, Dick, you can't mean it! You can't have forgotten our night together."

"No, no, Dick, don't do that!"

She was looking at the closed door. He had meant it, then. It was all over with Dick, who had seemed for a brief-space to find her desirable. She knocked at the door again. There was no response. She would go to the bar.

An hour later Joan was on her way to the top deck again, with the vague idea of having a plunge to cool herself off. That idiot Macduff was standing at the top, staring down at her. Now would be as good an occasion as any to tell him what she thought of him. There were times when Joan burned to express her true opinion of some of her fellow passengers and here was a good chance.

"Looking for Mrs. Wynant?" she inquired, reeling up against him.

He pushed her off. "No," he said

"That's funny." She laughed on a piercing note. Macduff regarded her with disgust.

"I don't like your looks," said Joan, "and I don't like the way you're staring at me now. Who do you think you are, anyway? You're scarcely human."

She prodded him in the ribs. Macduff did not move.

"But I like the way you can drink." She grew confidential. "Let's have a brandy together. Come to my room."

"No, thanks."

"All right, big boy. Joan's going to have a swim."

She made a gamine gesture and followed a twisting course to the pool. Macduff watched her, wondering if she were't tipsy enough to drown. What an appalling girl! Even before she had reached the door she stooped down, caught her frock at the hem and began to pull it over her head. He could see her long, slim legs. The pool was dark, was dark, except for the green light in the far corner. Her dress came off and was flung to the floor; then she spread her arms for a dive. He caught a glimpse of her gleaming back in the second before she jumped. He waited for the splash, hoping that it would sober her up. It was his duty to see that she didn't drown.

But no splash came. Only a dull crash that sickened Macduff and hurried his footsteps through the door that Joan had entered. God in Heaven, the tank was drained! For a moment he shut his eyes, then leaned over the edge of the tank. The green light spread in suffusion, and there, on the bottom, lay Joan. She was naked except for her beads, garters, stockings and sandals. One of her legs was halfway down. Her arms were spread like wings. Her face he could not see. It was pressed on the tiles. Slowly he stepped that the girl must be dead. Through a mist he saw her dress lying on the floor beside him, flame red, still warm from her body. There was no other trace of her, not a scrap of underwear. She had died as recklessly as she had lived.

The ship was heaving gently rocking her white body. On every deck people were packing for landing. No one could know that he was standing here alone; guarding a lifeless form. He must do something about it. He must start the horrible chain of machinery moving. Two girls dead across his path! Jenny in the China Sea and the click of her heel on his wall. Joan with her brains dashed out before his eyes. He had sworn to avoid all human contact, yet fate had caught him twice in the orbit of death. Was it punishment for vowing that he would travel alone and apart? Were people not intended to avoid one another and the burden of mutual care? Had he been ducking and had Angela touched his sensibilities at last? Was there something else that one must heed beside the inviolability of one's solitude and the warmth of a glass of whisky? Macduff's strong Highland sense of superstition was aroused. Great stood on his brow. Though now he was through his mind in molten masses. The numbness of forty years was wearing off and each nerve was a red-hot needle, coming alive and pricking his flesh. He
