COTTON ACREAGE BEING REDUCED

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

It befalls our sublime duty to divert from the humorous to the serious in the opening paragraph of the Gossip this week.

Rumor is afloat that the M. K. & T. railroad which serves this place and others along the line to DeLeon may ask permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission to abandon the road unless increased business is forthcoming.

Now it is not our purpose or intention to lambast or laud anyone but it seems that a few striking facts should be driven home. The M.K.&T. railroad maintains 23 people in Cross Plains. The company has a pay roll at this place to its employees alone which exceeds $13,000 annually. It pays into the school, city and county tax coffers more than $1,722, a year.

The value of this road is unmeasurable. It can be maintained if enough local men and women manifest interest, enthusiasm and patronage. To date the company has not even asked to abandon the road. Apparently they have confidence in this section and the prosperity of its people. Let's do what we can to repay that confidence as well as the tax load the company has borne.

Note in the news this week that a new bridge club has been organized in town and named 'Entre Naus'. After a consultation with our language editor, we find that the name means 'Among Us'.

Selah! what names these bridge clubs select. Sans Souci of a few years ago was bad enough.

And speaking of names, S. Freeman, A&P manager, has been nicknamed "Jello" but we don't know why. And incidentally he doesn't resent the cognomen.

With city elections but a few months in the offing citizens are encountering some difficulty in finding candidates to run for the municipal offices. Apparently the political prospects have finally realized that to be elected to a city office is but to be crucified on the cross of public service.

If we want to get good men in the future and keep them it will be necessary that they be shown more consideration and respect than our present official family has enjoyed.

We were about to believe that the astrologist here with Brunk's Comedians last week knew his stuff until we read his preparation of Martin Neeb's horoscope. It stated that Martin was musically inclined and that he might achieve great prominence in that field.

If you have ever heard him whistle, you will agree that the astrologist made a serious error that time.

MUCH NEEDED RAIN FALLS WEDNESDAY

A rain measuring one and three quarters inches fell over the Cross Plains trade territory Wednesday greatly benefitting stockmen and farmers throughout this section. Although the precipitation came slow and gentle it was of sufficient duration to put out some stock water as well as place an abundant seasoning in the ground for Spring crops.

The rain started early Wednesday morning and continued through the day, until about nine o'clock that night. A measuring device in the city, limits gauged the moisture at one and seventy five one hundredths inches.

Low heavy clouds and an unsettled atmosphere indicated that more rain might be forthcoming over the week end.

Mrs. George Scott spent the first of the week with her mother Mrs. J. B. Cutbirth in Baird.

C. V. RAMSEY KILLED IN TRAGIC ACCIDENT

THRONG OF FRIENDS PAY LAST RESPECTS SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral rites for C. V. Ramsey, 32, local automobile mechanic who was fatally injured when he fell from the back of a truck Saturday afternoon, were held from his home at Cottonwood Sunday, with Rev. Ross Respass and Dr. C. A. Voyles, Baptist ministers officiating. Interment was made in the Cottonwood cemetery.

C. V. Ramsey, who was employed by Anderson Chevrolet Company, had gone out with E. O. Adams local truck contractor, to listen for a defect in the motor before repairing it. He told Adams that he would step to the back of the truck and listen for trouble in the differential. It is believed that he slipped from the rear of the truck catching his foot in a trailer hitch. He fell to the pavement striking his head a severe blow and breaking a leg. The accident happened a half mile beyond the Eastern city limits.

Dr. J. G. Rumph, local physician, was summoned and immediately rendered first aid before placing the injured man in an ambulance enroute for a Santa Anna hospital. He died as the ambulance reached Coleman.

Surviving are his wife and infant daughter and mother Mrs. Missouri Ramsey.

About 1,000 friends gathered at the Ramsey family home at Cottonwood to pay final respect to C. V. who had resided there his entire life. People were present from practically every city or town within a radius of 100 miles.

Pall bearers were F. R. Anderson, Babe Wood, Sidney Ratcliff, Bud Strahan, Howard Strahan and R. P. Bowden.

Boyhood Friend Of Witt Asks Promotion Of Lieutenant-Gov.

By Tom Bryant

Recently I received a personal letter from a life-time friend of mine, Edgar Witt of Waco, who is at this time our Lieutenant-Governor of Texas. Having been personally acquainted with Edgar Witt and his family during my entire life and feeling that he is unquestionably honest and fully capable of all his undertakings, I wish to make this statement in behalf of his candidacy for Governor of Texas.

I feel that he is entitled to the serious consideration and support of all the voters of Texas and that in the event he is elected as our next Governor we will enjoy a satisfactory business administration.

During my entire life I have never known of Edgar Witt doing a dishonorable thing. He has always been considered a good citizen and a true and trusted public official. He was elected Lieutenant-Governor in 1930 and re-elected in 1932 without opposition, by the largest vote ever given a candidate for office in Texas.

It so happens that during his administration as Lieutenant-Governor that I have spent considerable time in Austin and had occasion to come in contact with him on numerous matters of legislation in which West Texas was interested and it so happens

PUBLIC LIBRARIAN AND KINDERGARTEN INSTRUCTOR ADDED

Two teachers were added to the Cross Plains school system the past week as a result of C.W.A. monies appropriated for public education. They are Misses, Christine Cunningham and Elizabeth Jackson.

Miss Cunningham will have charge of the school library, which is not at access to the entire public. Miss Jackson was made kindergarten teacher and all children who will be old enough to enter the first grade next year are eligible to attend the kindergarten without charge. Enrollment will begin Monday, January 22.

A. L. Johnson, County Superintendent, made the arrangements for the teachers in a meeting with C.W.A. authorities in Austin last week.

The groom has been a resident of Cisco for a number of years, where he formerly operated a jewelry store. He is at present employed with an architectural firm in El Paso, and the couple will leave Cisco Friday for that place to make their home.

Mrs. Martin Neeb and daughter, Leta and Mrs. Charlie Neeb were in Santa Anna Monday.

11 Days Remain To Pay 1934 Poll Tax

11 days more remain for voters to pay 1934 poll tax.

Unusual interest is already being shown in approaching elections this year, due to the fact that many important county and state as well as a gubernatorial campaign is in the offering.

To be qualified to vote, a citizen must remit $1.75 for a poll tax receipt before the first day of February.

PORK PRODUCTION TO BE REDUCED IN CALLAHAN COUNTY

A corn-hog reduction campaign in accordance with agricultural recovery plans will be instituted in Callahan county within the near future, according to a communication from County Agent Ross B. Jenkins. His letter in full to the Review reads:

"Corn-Hog reduction contracts are in the office and we will start soon to signing contracts for this commodity. We will hold an examination for this job and any one who needs work and is good in handling figures accurately may apply for the job. The test will last one hour and at the end of the time the papers will be taken up and sent to Austin for grading. The best paper with the most accurate work will get the job. It will pay $4.00 per day less 15%. The first 10 persons applying will be given the test.

"All persons, who have farrowed 3 litters of pigs or more during the years of 1932-33, may sign a contract to reduce their production 25% next year and be paid a rental of $5.00 per hog of not more than 75% of the 2 year average. All who are eligible to sign this reduction contract please let me know at once."

'By Candlelight,' Gay Romance, Booked Into Liberty Theatre

That gay, sophisticated Universal screenplay "By Candlelight," has been booked into the Liberty Theatre starting Monday for two days run. Elissa Landi and Paul Lukas, co-starring in this clever story of high life among the nobility of Continental Europe, head a cast which also includes Nils Asther, Ralston, Lawrence Grant, Dorothy Revier and other popular favorites.

Miss Landi, maid to an Austrian countess, and Lukas, butler to a prince meet on a train bound for Monte Carlo and convince each other that they themselves are member of the nobility, and the complications which ensue are enough to keep all that section of Europe in continual hot water. The fact that the prince is a notorious pillanderer only serves to increase the difficulties of the masquerading pair.

Here is spicy romance and an intimate picture of gay doings among European royalty, with danger always just around the corner.

If you fail to see "By Candlelight" you will miss the most clever, most brilliant comedy in years. It was directed by the versatile James Whale, who was responsible for "The Invisible Man," "Frankenstein" and "The Kiss Before the Mirror."

Waldo Wilbern, of Kilgore, was a business visitor here Tuesday.

E. D. Priest, of Brownwood, was in town Wednesday.

F. R. Anderson and Mack Underwood were business visitors in Fort Worth Thursday.

Miss Eloise Watson and Miss Ellie Thames visited friends in Brownwood over the week end.

COMMITTEE ASKS FARMERS SUBMIT INFORMATION NOW

Ed Henderson and L. O. Payne, committeemen from this precinct, to handle contracts for the 1934 and '35 cotton acreage reduction program told the Review Wednesday afternoon that the work in this locality was progressing normally but that the cooperation of farmers in turning in their cards early would be necessary for them to complete the work on schedule.

They asked that farmers sign the information cards and return them within the next few days. All cards must be in Washington by the first of February and it is necessary that they be okayed in Baird before being forwarded to Washington. It will be necessary, therefore, for the local committeemen to complete their work by Saturday afternoon January 27, the Review was told.

County Agent Ross B. Jenkins in expressing his opinion of the recent contracts to the Review Wednesday said: "The new cotton reduction contract is fair. It gives each man credit for the kind of production he has carried on.

"These few points may help some in getting the red card fixed properly so contract can be more speedily drawn. Get all bales that have been grown on the farm you are now on who may have grown them for the five years from 1928-32. List on the back of each card the correct weight as shown by the gin record or sales receipt, or weight report for every bale. If you can get the accurate weight of no more than half of all concerned then bring them in and we may compute your average from these reports. It is most important that accurate weights be obtained as the rental is paid on the pounds of five year production. List the number of acres that were planted prior to July 1st of each year. If the grasshoppers had destroyed any acres prior to that date do not count them as planted as it will decrease your yield to add non-producing acres. The rule works that if you increase acres you decrease yields which cuts the rental per acre.

"Uncle Sam" is not trying to make us rich on the land he rents but is paying a good rental on it and assures us we will get a much better price for that larger amount that we do cultivate of that 60 per cent. Then it is our patriotic duty to support the government in its attempt to cut production to the needs of the commonwealth.

"Mr. E. E. Cook relief administrator, has just informed us that he will be glad to put as many stenographers at our disposal will be needed to take care of the rush. We have only until January 31 to get the contracts signed and tabulated so Secretary Wallace may determine if this plan is to work or shall some other that is not so generous to the farmer. Congress will stay in session until the cotton situation is fully cleared.

"About 50 per cent of our farmers Continued on page 6

C. A. Lotief Announces For Reelection To Legislature

In making my announcement for reelection to a second term as your Representative, permit me to say in beginning that in a feeling of deepest sincerity and fullest appreciation of you as a friend and supporter, I have enjoyed serving you. It was a great privilege as well as an honor to be your Representative and serve on five important committees in the lower house. I have always had the interest of the masses in mind and every vote that I cast was for you and not for the monopolies and the special interests.

Practice Economy

The records will bear that I have offered more amendments to the appropriation bill of state departments and institutions than any other member of the 43rd legislature. By so doing many hundred thousands of dollars have been saved Texas tax payers. In one amendment to the teachers summer school, I saved $87,500.00. I mention this only in order for you to know that I have never slept on my post of duty; but always worked for honesty, economy and friends at home who depend on me to look after their interests. I was one of the leaders who fought the paid lobbyists of the special interests. I introduced and passed through the house the first resolution of its kind in the Texas legislature requiring the lobbyists to register their names and by whom employed with the chief clerk of the House. I, also, was author of the public utility bill which was passed by the House but killed in the Senate. This bill alone would have saved utility consumers and housewives in Texas over $6,000,000.00 a year. Also, I was author of the House Resolution which prohibited the heads of different state departments from evading the nepotism law, which prohibited the appropriating any money for those who evade the laws of our state. This alone created more talk and excitement than other bill during the entire session of the 43rd legislature. I was co-author of the Rollings- Lotief et al auto registration fee, which placed a flat rate of $6.00 on each automobile regardless of size. This passed the House but was killed in the Senate, as usual. Author of the Amendment to No. H. B. 733 placing gas pipe line companies under the intangible asset taxes, this alone would have placed $2,000,000, in treasury. The Senate did not pass it.

Author of Bills

Also, I was author of the House Resolution requiring each member of the House to state under oath his connection with any corporation or anyone who seeks special favor from the legislature. This resolution made it possible for the people of Texas to know who their representatives are and what connection they have with special interests, if any.

Conduct in Office

As to my conduct in office and belief in economy, the record will show that there are about 20 Representatives out of 150 who spent less than $75.00 for stationery, printing stamps and telephone calls. I am proud to tell my constituents that I was one of the 20 who spent less than $75.00 for these purposes during my five months in Austin as your Representative.

I believe we should have a law on our statutes to prohibit State Representatives from accepting retainers fees from corporations. It should be a criminal offense for the men who are elected to represent the people of Texas to serve two masters at the same time.

I also worked diligently in all matters which had as their objective better conditions and laws for the laboring people and masses of Texas. With such a record as above stated and my fight for honesty in government and with the assurance on my part that I shall continue to work for the best interests of the farmer, small merchant and laboring man of our state, I am offering you my candidacy for reelection to the post of Representative from the 107th Floterial District.

With sincerest good wishes and hoping to see each of you during the forthcoming campaign, I am,

Sincerely,

Your servant,

CECIL A. LOTIEF

YOUNG DEMOCRATIC MEET AT LUBBOCK

Eyes of Texas political observers will be trained on Lubbock, Feb. 3, when Young Democrats of 125 West Texas counties gather there for their first annual convention.

State Democratic Chairman Maury Hughes of Dallas, will make the principal address. Candidates for all state offices have been invited and many will be called upon during the convention, which is expected to draw 300 enthusiastic young party leaders.

State officials of the Young Democratic Clubs are urging young Democrats in all counties to organize and send a sizeable delegation to Lubbock and where it is impossible to organize in advance, a large delegation of individuals interested in the movement is urged.

Permanent organization of the Young Democratic Clubs of West Texas, similar to the South Texas organizations, will be formed and an East Texas organization will be held for that section later. After formation of the regional organizations a state convention will be held at some central point.

Debt Organization Perfected In Meet At Baird Last Week

At its initial meeting held at Baird, last week the Farm Debt Adjustment Committee was organized with the following officers elected: H. A. McWhorter, chairman; Ben Halstead, vice-chairman; J. S. Yeager, secretary. All members, who are H. A. McWhorter of Baird, Ben Halstead of Baird, R. P. Stevenson of Clyde, Cleve Callaway of Cross Plains, and J. S. Yeager of Putnam, were present.

The function of such committees already in several counties of the state is set forth in the Governor's letter of appointment.

It is our thought that such committee will serve as a material assistance to both debtor and creditor in an effort to arrive at a friendly, sensible and fair solution of the debt problems of the type which have heretofore resulted in unnecessary foreclosures. It is likewise hoped and expected that these voluntary committees will serve in the future as a basis of developing harmony between contending interests in various localities of the State.

Any debtor or creditor seeking a readjustment is the debt relationship, one with the other, may ask this committee to investigate and make recommendations to either or both parties for the purpose of effecting a satisfactory solution of any existing difficulties.

An extension agreement may be arranged which will, in a sense, "freeze" the accumulated indebtedness and provide for the division of available income among creditors, taking into consideration priority of claims, until such time as it may seem advisable to effect a more permanent settlement of the case.

Experience Of County Farm Debt Adjustment Committee

Types of cases vary widely. In one case a debtor stated before a committee that he has several creditors who had been unwilling to consider any definite agreement with him. The committee set the date and notified creditors of the hearing. When the time for the hearing arrived, the debtor called the committee by phone saying: "I told you my creditors had been unwilling to consider any settlement with me, but after they received your request for the hearing, they came to me in a group this morning and offered a plan of settlement I was happy to accept."

The scaling down and readjusting of debts are of many types, of which the following is a good example: A first mortgage loan of $10,000 bearing interest at 5% was past due, with the other accumulations as follows:

Delinquent interest $350.00 Unpaid Taxes, $120.00, Machinery Account, $220.00, personal notes, $280.00, and Open Accounts $130.00. When the creditors were all brought together, the minor creditors scaled down their claims so that a foreclosure of the property would not be taken. The settlement arrived at was as follows:

The Machinery Account scaled down from $220.00 to $170.00 the Personal Notes from $280.00 to $230.00, the Open Account from $130.00 to $100.00, the first mortgage holder cancelled the delinquent interest and the $120.00 he had paid for taxes. He also remitted creditors and composed the farmer's entire indebtedness in a single mortgage refinanced for a five year period.

When application of a farmer for refinancing is finally acted upon and it appears there is a shortage in the amount of the loan granted and the amount necessary to retire principal and accrued interest and taxes, then it will be the duty of the County Committee to get the debtor and the creditor together for an adjustment so that the landowner may retain his home. When the creditor resides outside of the county where the debtor lives, the committee should send full information to the State Chairman with your recommendations and views.

Yours very truly,
R. J. Murry, Chairman.

Texas Farm Debt Conciliation Committee.

The committee is now organized and ready for any business that may come before it as outlined above. We would suggest that any person, who has any difficulties as outlined above, take the matter up first with the local member of his locality and if it can't be adjusted, he will offer suggestions along the line mentioned and he may may then come before the entire committee.

The next regular meeting of the committee will be at Baird, January 26, at the Court House in the County Court room at 2:00 P. M.

J. S. Yeager, Secretary

The feeding of the poultry flock is of the utmost importance if heavy egg production is to be obtained.

Foods are made up of compounds called nutrients into which the foods are broken before being used in sustaining living processes. These nutrients are proteins, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins and water. Proteins are always necessary in the diet. They cannot be stored in the body for future use and, as they are used to build tissues and repair worn out tissues of plants and animals, and are the basis of all living important part of the entire ration. They are the most expensive nutrient to purchase and the hardest to produce at home. The proportion of protein usually determines the price of the feed.

Carbohydrates constitute the greater proportion of the nutrients of feeds and include starches, sugar, and fibre, which are chiefly valuable in producing heat and energy. Nearly two thirds of our common grains are carbohydrates, and they are the cheapest portion of the ration. Fats serve the same purpose, or a similar purpose to carbohydrates and have an energy value that is 2.25 times that of carbohydrates. Fats are found in all feeds, vegetable products and animal tissues.

The ash is the part of the grain, plant or food left after burning and destroying all organic matter. It is very necessary to egg production. The ash content of the ration for laying hens. During the last few years the minerals in the ration have been receiving an increasing amount of attention.

Water aids the softening of the food and the transportation of vegetable matter, and also regulates the body temperature. Fowls consume large quantities of water through feeds and drink. The importance of water may be illustrated by stating that a bird will die when it has lost 10% of body weight through thirst, but will not die from starvation until all fat is removed from the body and 50% of all protein.

The vitamins are a necessary part of the ration to aid in the assimilation of other nutrients and to maintain the health of the bird. They are, at the present time, designated by letters of the alphabet. Briefly stated, a deficiency of vitamin A leads to diseases of the eye and throat; a deficiency of vitamin B to nervous troubles, including a typical form of paralysis; a deficiency of vitamin D results in an inability to properly assimilate or utilize minerals; a deficiency of vitamin E to sterility. The requirements of the fowl for vitamin G are not definitely known at the present time but it has been shown to be essential. There are indications that vitamin C is not necessary in the poultry ration.

PIONEER CHAPTER
F. F. A. NOTES

Wayne Middleton, Reporter
A Meat Identification Team, composed of three regular members and three alternates will be selected this week, from the local Chapter of the Future Farmers of America. The team will participate in the First Annual Meat Identification Contest to be held at Stephenville, February 10th.

Twenty-five retail cuts of meat will be laid out on tables and each contestant will be required to identify each cut by name, and kind of carcass from which it was cut. Four kinds of carcasses will be represented; namely, mutton, beef, veal and pork, and as the contest is planned to be as educational and practical as possible, Prof. H. N. Smith of John Tarleton Agricultural College, will name, identify and discuss the cuts while the score cards are being graded.

This will be very good experience for the contestants; especially since it is being conducted on a similar order of the National F. F. A. Meat Identification Contest held at Kansas City each year. We trust the neighboring meat shops will permit the team to get some good practice between now and the time of the Stephenville contest, as the Texas Association of F. F. A. has just recently chartered our Chapter and all members are eligible to try out for the team.

The F. F. A. will sponsor a chapel next Wednesday morning, January 24th, in the school auditorium. The program has been planned by the Chapter program committee, Bill Barton, Duncan Dupriest, and Odell Brooks, to further acquaint those present with the regular work of local chapter. The program will be carried on as though it was a regular meeting of the Pioneer Chapter of the F. F. A.

The opening ceremony will be held on the meeting, following by the program itself; among which will be such discussions, as, "History of the Future Farmers of America", "The Future Farmer Emblem", and "Objectives of the Pioneer Chapter of the F. F. A." After the program proper, the chapter officers will close the meeting with the regular closing ceremony.

BIG TOURNAMENT IS CONTEMPLATED

Everyone Invited

The Cross Cut school has planned for Friday and Saturday, January 19-20, a big tournament. Eighteen basket-ball teams have been invited, and a large crowd is expected. There will be no admission fee, and trophies will be awarded to the winning teams of both the boys and girls. The most outstanding individual player will be given a silver basketball, or something of the sort.

Games will start promptly at 2:00 P. M., Friday afternoon, and will last sometime into the night. Play will be resumed early Saturday, and will continue throughout the day and night until the champions have been determined. Everybody, from every country in any universe and on any planet is invited and urged to be here.

And you need not even bring your lunches, for there will be stands on the ground where you can buy anything from a cup of coffee to a ham sandwich. There will probably be a large bulletin board which everyone can see, and which will continually keep everyone posted as to the sway of the game.

This is the largest undertaking our school has contemplated since the basket-ball tournament last year. This one is designed to be as much bigger than the one last year, as it was larger than an ordinary ball game. By the time you read this, the teams will be collecting, and within two hours the big-time will start. Roll out the old "bus" and drive over this afternoon. (Friday.)

DESERTED

By Norris Chambers

"And son, be sure you don't come back till you've captured that machine gun nest. It will undoubtedly cost your life—but at all risks, get the gun—there will only be two with which to cope." The speaker was the commander of E Company, and he was sending Brent Harrison on a mission which would very likely mean his death. But Brent was brave, and he knew no nobler thing than to die for his country.

"I'll do my best, Sir," he said, clearing his throat; "do I start now?"

"Yes, and God be with you." The officer strode back into his small, torn tent. Brent looked around the camp, perhaps for the last time. Then, taking his rifle in his hands, he started out through the darkness toward the front lines.

There was no need for stealth now, for he had not crossed his own trench. But when he climbed down, and then out of the muddy, slimy ditch, he was in the land of lost souls—No Man's Land. He had before him a boggy stretch of Belgian swampland. Occasional flares soared upward in a glowing arch, spread their revealing light, and settled slowly downward. At each flare, Brent flattened himself against the ground. Occasional rifle bullets zipped around him, although he knew they were accidental, and that he was not observed. Far in the distance, the German artillery was roaring, and all around him machine-guns and rifles kept up an incessant crackle.

Now he was approaching the deep muck of the swamp. How he hated to plunge into it—the cold, thick slime, mixed with the last remains thousands and thousands decaying bodies. That awful stench—but how could those poor, unfortunates who gave their lives prevent this? Nature was taking its course.

For an hour he lay, half-unconscious, in the deep, mucky swamp, worming his way forward, little by little, till finally he was within one hundred yards of the machine gun nest which had been causing so much havoc among the Americans. If he should ever get out alive, how he dreaded that quarter-mile crawl through those rotting, stagnant bodies. He knew he could never return alive. But there was no need to dread this—

There was the machine gun directly ahead of him—not more than a hundred feet. He could see it every flare. But why was it so silent? Why was it not doing its share of creating torment. Maybe they had seen Brent and were waiting with rifles for a shot. A flare died out—Brent crawled another ten feet, and lay down for another which he expected at any instant. It came—there was the machine gun, sand-bags piled around it. Brent lay still. Another spell of absolute darkness, another ten feet, etc. until he came within fifteen feet of the formidable muzzle. The end was undoubtedly here; how could he approach any closer without being observed?

He must act at once. There was only one thing to do, under the circumstances, and that was to make a sudden rush.

If he remained unseen long enough, he might shoot the two who were holding the nest. But the chances were against him. Nevertheless, he would try. Tensing every muscle, he waited for a flare. It seemed to Brent as if every gun had stopped for a moment—ceased to watch the daredevil who would dare to fling life away so uselessly. Even if he got to the nest before the machine-gun could be used, he would meet two well armed with rifles and revolvers.

Suddenly the flare came. Brent muttering a prayer and a curse, sprang forward. With lightning-like rapidity he cleared the barrier, and leaped into the enemy strong-hold. What was wrong? There was no one there. The post had been deserted several hours before.

"And to think, I was fool enough to drag through that rotting mess—and to think, I am fool enough to go on a blind mission. I must drag back through that awful morass! Oh, if I could only have accomplished something!"

First Installment

Mrs. Gordon peered anxiously out of the window.

"Papa," she said nervously, "I do wish you'd put on your shoes. There you are in your stocking-feet and I believe Nancy's going to bring young Roemer in!"

Mr. Gordon glanced up from his newspaper.

His wife turned slowly from the window, a slight flush on her smooth round face, a face that had a skin almost as fine as a baby's with only tiny wrinkles about the mouth and eyes—like a withered rose leaf.

"Papa, I think Nancy—" There was a pause.

She did not finish, for the door opened and Nancy came in. She closed it behind her and stood looking at them, laughter, in her eyes.

"You dear old things," she said gayly, "I thought you'd gone to bed; I know I'm late!"

"We sat up for you, dear, but I was afraid you'd bring Page Roemer in, and find Papa in here his stocking feet."

Nancy laughed. "Page wouldn't mind," she said, taking off her hat and tossing it upon a chair. She had glorious hair; the tints of auburn in it glistened like sunshine caught and held in wavy brown shadows. She swept a rumpled lock in place now with a deft little touch, absently unconscious of the grace of it.

"It was lovely—the music, I mean, and we walked home; that's why we're so late, and—oh, Papa, I met old Major Lomax there; he stopped me to ask, quite pointedly, about Roddy. He said: 'Tell me, child, is he doing well?'"

"Of course you said he was!" her mother exclaimed. "Why, I thought the major knew that Roddy was in the Greenough Trust Company in New York," she added proudly.

Nancy, who was looking at her father, nodded thoughtfully.

"He knew all that, of course, but he was very pointed. I didn't know just what he meant."

"He's getting old," remarked Mr. Gordon grudgingly. "Lomax must be close on eighty—that's all. He probably forgot that Roddy was grown up. I thought he was getting dotty when he let Haddon buy that racer—Polestar Third—out of his stables. Did he keep you?" he added grimly.

"It's eleven o'clock. I'll wager the squawking was over at ten-thirty; you and that Roemer boy must have found the walking good."

His daughter laughed. "It's a lovely night," she said archly.

Her father laid his newspaper across his knee.

"What d'you see in that fellow, Nancy Virginia?" he asked impatiently.

She gave him a sidelong look, her dark lashes shading her blue eyes softly, without casting darkness into them.

"What do I see in Page?" she smiled provokingly, showing a fugitive dimple in one cheek. "I'm sure I don't know, Papa. Do you think people do usually? Do you suppose old Major Lomax knows what he saw in that poor Diana Aylett? He's mourned her for forty years, hasn't he? Or do you know really what you saw first in Mama, Papa?"

"I suppose the major and I fell in love, Nancy," Mr. Gordon retorted. "Do I understand that you're in love with Page?" he added dryly.

Nancy moved easily across the room and looked out of the window, her small slight figure and the uplift of her defiant little head showing plainly against the square of darkness.

"Papa," she replied, and laughed a little tremulously.

Mrs. Gordon stirred uneasily. "Papa, it's time to go to bed," she warned him, trying to catch his eye, warned him, trying to catch his eye.

But he ignored her, reaching for a pair of old heeless leather slippers and thrusting his feet into them.

"If you're so keen about falling in love, Nancy," he remarked calmly, "it's a pity you couldn't have managed it with Richard Morgan."

Nancy flashed around upon him, her blue eyes wide open.

"I hate that man!" she said quickly.

"Hoity-hoity!" said her father, rising, "you'd better go to bed; it's time you got a little sense and—"

But Nancy interrupted him with a little startled, joyous cry, her eyes fixed on the space outside the open window. Then she ran tempestuously to the front door.

Mrs. Gordon looked blank. "It can't be that Roemer boy back again!" she exclaimed.

Mr. Gordon, whose ears were sharper than hers, pushed back his chair, looking toward the door.

"It's Roddy."

"Roddy?" Mrs. Gordon sprang to her feet, flushed and eager. "It can't be—why, Roddy darling!"

For Nancy appeared, driving her brother before her. The reading-lamp on the center table made a soft illumination which showed young, Gordon tall and slender and boyish, but otherwise very like his sister.

"You got off unexpectedly, didn't you, Rod?" Mr. Gordon asked. "Got a vacation?"

Mrs. Gordon, still clinging to Roddy's arm was absorbing him so closely that he did not answer, and his rather spoke again—sharply.

"Did you hear me, Rod? How much of a vacation have you got?"

His son laughed suddenly, and foolishly, a deep blush mounting to his hair.

"That's what I'd like to know," he exclaimed. "I hope it won't be cut too short?"

"I hope not!" his mother agreed warmly. "You've been working too hard, you show it. Now you've got to let me have my own boy for a while. Have you had your supper on the train dear?" she added anxiously.

"Let me get you something—a slice of cold ham—" she started toward the door.

But her son stopped her. No! he cried hoarsely. "Don't! For God's sake—I can't eat! Ham? he laughed shrilly; "ham? When a man's done for!"

He made an angry, swaying movement toward a chair, stopped short and rallied himself, folding his arms on his breast in a boyishly tragic attitude. His hair was disheveled, too, one long lock hung between his blood-shot eyes. His startled family, gradually taking in these details, discovered too, that his necktie was untied and his collar wilted.

Mr. Gordon suddenly sat bolt upright in his chair.

"What's the matter with you, boy?" he demanded sharply. "Have you been drinking?"

The young fellow steadied himself, white to his lips, his haggard eyes turning slowly from one to another in the little group.

"No," he said thickly. "I'm not drunk—I'm a thief."

No one spoke; his mother dropped into the nearest chair and his father stared at him with his mouth open. Only Nancy drew a little nearer, searching his face, her eyes intent and wide. She caught at his sleeve.

"Rod! What do you mean?"

He shook her off. "You'd better not touch me, Nance, I'm a thief, that's what I came home to tell you all."

The repetition was too much, it forced belief. Mr. Gordon pushed himself forward in his chair, gripping the arms with such force that his knuckles whitened.

"What d'you mean?" he demanded hoarsely; "what are you talking about anyhow? Explain yourself."

Roddy turned a startled look toward him, which had in it something of his boyish flinching from the paternal wrath, but he faced them all desperately.

"I've been taking money—bonds and cash," he repeated it like a lesson had already learned by rote. "I've been a messenger and go-between in the Trust Company. Mr. Greenough sent me over to the banks sometimes himself. I've carried a lot of money. Millions, I reckon. I didn't mean to keep any of it I—meant to return it all, but—" he stopped, gasped, and went on harshly—"I can't, that's all. When you can't you're a thief."

His mother, staring at him with terrified, incredulous eyes, uttered a cry of anguish.

"You meant to return it?" his father shouted with sudden violence. "You meant to return money you'd stolen?"

My God, do you mean to stand up there—my only son—and admit you're a thief?"

Roddy choked, his smooth young face darkening with shame.

"I meant to return it!" he struggled with himself, facing his father; "I tried to—I even gambled in stocks to make good, but I can't—it's too late—they'll find it out before I can put it back."

"Can't we pay it back?" Nancy's shaking voice startled them; they all looked around at her speechlessly. "Can't we pay up? How much is it, Roddy?" she asked tremulously, her blue eyes fixed on her brother.

He gulped painfully. "Fifteen thousand dollars."

"Roddy!" his mother dropped weakly into her chair.

Mr. Gordon rose and prowled up and down the room, his heelless slippers slapping the floor at every step.

"Fifteen thousand dollars," he repeated fiercely; "by gum, you're some spender for a boy of twenty-three! You're the first felon in our family, sir. How did you get rid of a small fortune? Spend it in chewing-gum?"

Young Gordon made no reply; he was breathing hard and drops of cold perspiration stood out on his forehead in beads. Mrs. Gordon was sobbing audibly, her head in her hands, and Nancy stood, looking on. She felt as if her world had suddenly tumbled down about her ears; for the first time in her life, too, her father terrified her. He wheeled now and came back, thrusting his face close to his son's.

"What d'you mean by it? Did you forget the family honor—your own good name? Who taught you to steal? My God in heaven, I never thought my boy'd be a felon!" he raved.

His son faced him sullenly, he felt like a man with his back to the wall, but the sting of his father's insults was turning his shame into rage; he returned his look with rising fury.

"I didn't take it for myself," he cried bitterly. "I borrowed it—bif by bit—to help someone else, someone in distress. I swear I meant to return it; to me—things went wrong, I can't put it back in time—I started for Brazil—I—I came here because—I wanted to see Mother first!"

"She?" Mr. Gordon pounced on the pronoun. "You've been giving money to a woman—that's what you've been doing! Some painted hussy's been playing you for money!"

"She not a painted hussy!" cried his son passionately, "she's the loveliest woman in the world—I love her, I'd steal for her, I'd die for her—I'm going to jail for her now!"

"Going to jail for her now, are you?" his father shouted. "A pretty story—stealing for a jade, a hussy, a—"

"Oh, Papa, hush!" shrieked Mrs. Gordon, snatching at his sleeve, "hush!" She was in tears.

But her husband shook her off. "You keep out of it!" he said fiercely. "You let me alone—I know what I'm talking about. Here's this—this young jackass been steling for a hussy! D'you hear me, Sir? he thundered, facing his son again. "You've forgotten the family honor, you've forgotten you're a Gordon, you've broken your mother's heart, you've disgraced your father and your sister—your young sister! Look at her, a girl in the morning of life—with a thief for a brother!"

"I'm sorry, Father," Roddy burst out hoarsely, "but it's not true—about her, the lady, I mean, who—"

"Lady?" mocked his father, "lady? By gum! You fool, you mad young fool, you've ruined yourself, you've ruined us all—I'm too poor to bail you out, you'll go to jail. You're a felon, a disgrace to your people, your name, your family honor, yourself—and you've done it all for some worthless, painted trollop—d'you hear me, sir?—for a painted trollop!"

His son stared at him for a moment, speechless. He was not quite sure that the red-faced, screaming, frantic man was his father. He couldn't be! And the insult plunged deep into the boy's raw heart. Hatred leaped up in him like a flame. He emitted a snarl of rage, like a young wolf gone mad.

"Stop that!" he shouted. "I won't have it! You shan't insult her!"

He rushed blindly at his father, deaf to his mother's shriek. His hands were actually on the older man's throat before he knew it. Then, for the first time, he heard his mother's frantic cries.

NEW YORK

He was a smart young freight clerk for the Kellogg Company out in Battle Creek, Michigan. Discovered how to save his firm half a million a year in freight charges—But said nothing. Instead he sought a lawyer—Then, ignoring minor impediments such as vice-presidents and secretaries he finally entered the president's office. "I can save you half a million a year, said he, "but you sign this paper giving me half the first year's savings before you hear how."—The president demurred; finally signed. The freight clerk told him to change the wording on his package and he could ship at a lower freight rate—The kid got his quarter million and promptly went to the devil in Rolls Royces and such.

It's a good story, told in good faith. College professors tell it in different versions to illustrate how a young man may get ahead. But the trouble, is it isn't true.

The true story goes this way: some thirty years ago a freight clerk of the Niagara-Hudson railroad, in his usual line of duty told the Shredded Wheat Biscuit Company to leave off the word "biscuit" and ship their product at the lower, cereal rate. Wheat did so, was appreciative—But they turned over no cool, quarter million to the clerk. Instead, some time later the clerk took a job with Shredded Wheat and through long years of faithful service finally took charge of a Pacific Coast Plant where he worked until his retirement.

When prohibition is a thing of the past we'll still have our Federal Agents. They'll be busy, too! Alphonse Nuynens, French cordial maker, reports that "bootleggers" have approached him with soft words. They say rum-running will be much less expensive than the high taxes they expect. Evidently the bootleggers and rum-runners are not going to take repeal gracefully. Nuynens has declined their offers.

You've heard the gag about the New Yorker landing in the west and immediately asking, "But where are the Indians?" The census figures show that there were 391 Indians in New York City in 1339. They don't specify whether they were wearing feathers or not.

The first underground railway in New York was a 250 foot tunnel in lower Broadway, secretly excavated in 1873 to prove to objectors that an underground could be made beneath Broadway "without interfering greatly with the traffic of that busy thoroughfare. The first subway was opened for operation in 1904. It ran from Brooklyn Bridge to 145th Street. Excavation had started in 1900.

"So this Broadway!" Visitors used to say it breathlessly. More now say it disappointedly. With more and more hot-dog stands, open-front-stand-up and eat restaurants, a flea circus, barkers, beggars, peddlers, blaring loud speakers, cloth banners, cut-outs and mechanical advertising contraptions, Broadway becomes more like Coney Island every year. With repeal, high-class restaurants may follow the finest moving picture houses to Sixth Avenue or go beyond to Fifth, leaving the garish White Way to go Coney Island as fast as it may.

The Benefits Derived From Participation In Club Activities

The modern rising generation should certainly learn to be orderly. The heathen of yesterday had no organization or order. He had no labor unions, clubs, or classes. He was far behind our level, and we should strive to keep our accomplishments. We may begin by studying business, among which we must learn order and organization. The modern club activities give just such training as you need. You, of course, will derive pleasure, but you will learn order and organization also.

A Bit of Junior News

The most cheering situation is to see so many men sign up who were not signers of either agreement but are signing up so as to do their part in the regulating of the bad situation.

"It will be good to remember that not only a rental be paid on the land of 3½ cents per pound for the five year average yield but also a parity payment of not less than one cent per pound for 40 per cent of the average yield. This is three and nine tenths cents per pound for every pound for the five year average production."

Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

If you want to GET RID of Constipation worries—

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to the use of laxatives in liquid form.

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, always read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescriptive preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using it, you avoid danger of habit. You can keep the bowels regular and comfortable; you can make constipated spells as rare as colic.

The liquid test:
This test has proved to busy men and women that they can be not "weak bowels" but strong cathartics:
First. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose you find is suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without any need of stimulation.
Syrup pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. It contains senna, a natural laxative which is perfectly safe for the youngest child. Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.
