The money will be used for their loss prevention program.

The Texas Farm Bureau Insurance Companies pay fire departments this amount when the department

Texas Forest Service Says Beware

Although scattered afternoon thunderstorms have provided some temporary relief at best from rising fire danger, these storms have also introduced another ignition source for firefighters to worry about here in west central Texas. That ignition source being lightning.

Dry vegetation baking further under the hot Texas sun, has become ripe for lightning ignited fires.

With most of the state seeing lower relative humidities, fine dead fuel moistures are extremely low. Cured grass sites will thus ignite and burn easily. thunderstorms over the past several days have been the major cause of fire starts and have contributed to fires spreading rapidly due to the erratic and strong winds associated with these storms.

Rain associated with these thunderstorms typically comes down hard and fast, over a short period of time. When this occurs, most of the water runs off the land instead of soaking in. With the strong winds associated with these thunderstorms, it takes very little time for the cured grasses and dead brush to dry out. A lightning strike that may have occurred during a storm could result in what is termed a "holdover" or "sleeper" fire. This occurs once the vegetation has had the chance to dry out and can be sparked by larger vegetation (down or standing trees) that had been lit by lightning. Larger, smoldering vegetation that has gone undetected, can ignite surrounding vegetation that has had the chance to dry out after the storm passes. These holdover fires have been known to occur days after the initial storm has passed over the area, especially in the more remote areas of the western United States. Although there is nothing anyone can do about stopping the lightning associated with these storms, there are several things people can watch out for during these thunderstorm events. The foremost priority is your safety, so seek out appropriate shelter from these storms. If you are caught in the open and cannot find suitable cover, avoid standing next to lone standing objects (single trees, fence posts, towers, etc. Avoid ridges and hill-tops. If you observe lightning striking the ground, make a mental note of where the strike occurred. Let your local fire department know about the strike and if possible keep an eye on the particular area where the strike occurred. The more eyes out there watching, the better.

You never know, you may have a sleeper or holdover fire pop up.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,
I think the interest in the District 17 congressional race is a strong indication of the awareness of the people of this area of current and future problems here and in Washington. It seems pretty obvious to me that we should simply look at the record of the incumbent and then compare whether there is documentation that the challenger provides a better solution.

What is important to this Nation and our nation? Social Security, tax reform, production industries including agriculture and oil, defense, jobs, health care, and the fundamental issues of integrity would top my list.

My concerns on Social Security deal both with my posture and future and that of my children who are in their twenties and thirties. The very word security is something that we all have doubts about when it comes to this program. Yet I have watched our congressman working on both sides of the aisle in Congress to provide solvency to our social security system and extend that solvency to potentially encompass my children. In tax reform, I have heard and read the rhetoric of a political party but know the truth, because I have been there on this one. Congressman Stenholm has taken nothing for granted on tax reform and seriously studies every alternative to better and more fairly accumulate required tax resources... but I have also heard him remind his colleagues that we should STUDY each idea; but not just through the existing tax code out the window to try something new.

There is no stronger supporter of the production industries on the Hill than Charlie Stenholm. That's just simply a fact. And that support for those industries carries over into the support for Dyess Air Force Base, Goodfellow and the reserve components and National Guard as well. Certainly it helps that each of our communities have been aggressive partners with our incumbent; and that is a credit to the people of our district including our local elected officials and to Charlie. People issues such as rural health care and veterans health care have been daily issues in which Charlie has not just pledged support; but staunchly worked toward improvement.

However, I think the most important issue of all is the issue of integrity. This issue is actually more important to the voters of my four children's age than mine. Every time we elect a representative, we develop a relationship based upon trust and simply "doing the right thing." After I look at everything else, I see no reason to replace Charlie with someone who isn't tested; but on the issue of integrity, I see a tremendous national calling for Charlie Stenholm. Ladies and gentlemen, I have worked issues of defense and economic development on Capital Hill since 1980. Throughout this time, I can only name four elected official who's opinions were sought equally across the aisle. Other elected officials trusted them as counsel. Charlie Stenholm is one of those four.

Finally, Charlie has always worked to define whether the government should be involved; what the government's roles were and then insure that those goals were met through a developed system. But what happens when the system fails? In my 30 years of dealing with politicians, this is the acid test and I have personal experience that Charlie will fight to ensure that people are treated right and fair within the system. I'm not a close friend or insider of Charlie's. I just believe in his work and applaud his effectiveness. I like Rudy also, but after a review of Charlie's record, I just don't think I'm in the market for a change right now. We need to keep Charlie on the job in Washington in order to secure our future throughout the World and here in West Texas.

Editor,

The heat certainly has curtailed some activities but I wonder how we survived before air conditioning.

I got a letter from Donald Evans in the Mississippi State Prison at Parchman saying his terrible heat rash has cleared up since a friend sent him the price of a fan. He says the sweat just rolls off of him but the fan gives a cooling effect as it helps evaporate that water.

From every Texas inmate I exchange letters with I get variations of the same complaint.

Contrary to what too many people believe, those joints are not air conditioned. They do have large fans which circulate fresh air to dispell the smell. UH OH! You guessed it; one inmate writes that the fan in his section broke down.

Zack writes of his own little problem. As he has not heard from relatives in fifteen years he tries to depend on himself. He traded art work for a fan and radio from an inmate about to be released. A bit of his art work was printed in this paper a while back. But they have a rule in TDCJ that inmates must have property papers for everything they have. That is a slip from the mail room for books received and commissary receipts for things like fans and radios. Otherwise it is assumed even in absence of a complaint that something was stolen that the item(s) were obtained by theft. Not that anything actually taken is ever returned. Items without property papers are "confiscated." Confiscated is an euphemism for official thievery.

So, in shake down just as the heat set in Zack had his radio and fan confiscated. Strange to me is his greater complaint is about missing the comfort of his favorite religious program than the lost fan.

He says the back of his cell faces the afternoon sun and stays hot till after midnight.

Mike Carlson has fan trouble too. His family sent Inmate Trust Fund money for a fan and Mike has three times had blue slip approval to get the fan from commissary but delivery has been blocked. A staff member who naturally will not be named informed him that Warden Woods is blocking delivery to "teach him not to file suits."

So far his letter of complaint to the TDCJ Director has not been answered and do you know what? I have never yet gotten a satisfactory nor honest reply from any level of TDCJ administration.

Honestly, I have found that most letters to politicians and bureaucrats are the price of a stamp wasted and to TDCJ, not just most but ALL letters are a waste. However, in a recent instance I wrote again, not expecting a proper response but just to show in the law suit I am filing that I made a good faith effort to settle before suing.

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Ed Sterling
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Gov. George W. Bush and Attorney General Dan Morales have agreed to let arbitrators decide how much private lawyers will get in the state's $15.3 billion settlement with tobacco companies.

After months of contentiousness, Bush and Morales settled with each other on July 16, enabling the state to collect the first $350 million of the largest civil settlement in U.S. history.

Bush, who started the fight over lawyer fees in January, said he was happy with the agreement. "I have consistently asked that the attorney fee issue be separated from the rest of the settlement so the award to Texas can become final, and I am pleased that this has now happened," he was quoted by the Austin American-Statesman.

A federal arbitration panel, which will convene in November, will decide how much cigarette makers must pay attorneys hired by Morales to represent Texas in the lawsuit.

Morales hired six private lawyers and agreed to pay them 15 percent of any money won by the state in its lawsuit. Fifteen percent of the $15.3 billion award totals about $2.3 billion.

Bush and seven legislators complained that the lawyers were going to get too much.

Among the terms of the settlement are requirements that:

- Some of the money to reimburse the state be returned to Washington to cover tobacco-related health-care costs paid in Texas by the federal government.

- Tobacco companies remove billboards and reduce advertising aimed at children.

Scholarship Increases Proposed

The Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board members are telling lawmakers early they want the state Legislature to triple the budget for scholarships to about $500 million.

Too many students and parents are being priced out of the market, they say.

"We're looking at a real crisis of access by everyone — not just minorities, but the middle class," said Board member Joe Krier of San Antonio.

"If [lawmakers] don't address this in a big, big way ... we believe they'll be looking at a dramatically declining number of people in public higher education," he said.

Annual tuition and fees at state colleges and universities have risen dramatically in the last five years, the Austin American-Statesman reported. At the University of Texas, those costs are up 78 percent and will average $3,004 for undergraduates in the coming school year.

Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said there is a lot of interest in boosting scholarship funds, as the days tick away to the January opening of the 1999 Legislature.

Other Capital Highlights

- If stock markets don't crash and tax revenues continue to grow at 10 percent, the state budget surplus for the next biennium will be nearly $6.3 billion, Texas Comptroller John Sharp predicted recently. In 2000-01 budget period, state lawmakers should have that amount to spend or return to taxpayers, he said.

- The Texas Department of Criminal Justice has approved more than $13.5 million in grants to local probation departments covering 109 counties with drug abuse treatment programs as an alternative to sending nonviolent offenders to prison.

- Texas is intervening in a Virginia lawsuit filed to prevent undercounting in the 2000 census. In 1990, Texas was undercounted by 482,783 people, resulting in a 2.8 percent shortfall in federal funding, the Texas attorney general's office said.

- The Texas Department of Transportation reported last week it resolved 1,316 "lemon law" complaints last year. The agency's Motor Vehicle Board ordered repurchase or replacement of 56 defective vehicles in 1997.

- Attorney General Morales, who is finishing his second term, said last week he plans to begin a career in investment banking after he leaves office in January.

- About 185,000 unclaimed items with an appraised value of approximately $525,000 will be auctioned on Aug. 15 in Austin. A catalog listing all of the items for sale is now available from the State Comptroller's office. Pictures of many items in the auction can be viewed by computer at: <http://www.window.state.tx.us>.

- The Texas Civil Justice League has formed a coalition to solve the so-called "year 2000 computer bug" and to address anticipated lawsuits related to the problem. Ralph Wayne, president of the business-backed group, said the problem, if uncorrected, will end up costing businesses, consumers and taxpayers millions of dollars in court costs and attorneys' fees.

Cookie jar... don't have to be very old to have substantial value. A jar's value is determined by design, rarity and condition more than age.

Covered jars made especially to hold cookies were commonly used in England during the 19th century. They usually were made of cut glass and silver.

But it is the American pottery jar that has caught the eye of the collector.

The first American cookie jars, either glass or pottery, seem to have been made in the 1920s. The early jars were shaped like covered cylinders or pots.

By the mid-'40s, the figural cookie jar came into fashion. Jars were made to look like barrels, animals, fruit, vegetables, people, cars and hundreds of other objects.

Cookies, children and comics go together, so many jars were inspired by the cartoons and comics of the day. Superman, Winnie the Pooh, Dumbo, Mickey Mouse and Woody Woodpecker are among the many comic figures that appear as cookie jars.

Makers of jars include Red Wing, McCoy, Brush, Hull, Regal China, Metlox and Robinson-Ransbottom.

One jar in demand by collectors is shaped like Yogi Bear, the Hanna-Barbera cartoon character who debuted on television in 1958. Yogi got his own show in 1960, and he appeared in a full-length movie in 1964. His most recent show went off the air in 1992; reruns of his various cartoons still air.

The Yogi Bear cookie jar, made by the American Bisque Co. of Williamstown, W.Va., was made in 1961. It came in several color variations. Yogi jars sell today for $300 to $400.

TIP: Ice cubes can help you get candle drippings off fabric. Rub the wax with the ice until it hardens. Then scrape off the hard wax with a credit card or stiff cardboard. If some wax remains, put a blotter over it and run a cool iron over that.

News And Views For The 17th District

By Charlie Stenholm

July 17, 1998

Playing With Fire

As I have traveled around Texas and witnessed first-hand the devastation of the drought, I have been amazed by the ability of Texans to withstand the effects of the heat and not let it break our spirits. Texas is big in so many ways, including our ability to persevere in tough times.

With more than 80 people having now died from the extreme heat, thousands of farmers facing financial devastation from unproductive crops, and countless ag-dependent businesses severely crippled, this is the time for some federal help.

That's why I've been working on a comprehensive response to the urgent needs of rural communities now dealing with the relentless drought our area has experienced.

Fortunately, some forms of relief already are in place. Crop insurance provides catastrophic and buy-up coverage, while the non-insured Assistance Program provides disaster-type payments for losses not covered by crop insurance. The Livestock Indemnity Program pays producers who lose livestock due to natural disasters.

Meanwhile, the Small Business Administration delivers loans through the disaster area office located in Fort Worth. If a small business has suffered substantial loss as a result of a disaster, regardless of physical damage, the business may be eligible for SBA financial assistance.

Rural communities may find relief from Community Facilities, Water and Waste Water, and Business and Industry Loans, as well as other programs handled through the Rural Development Agency.

But in severe emergency situations such as we find ourselves now, more must be done. That's why I am working with colleagues in Congress as well as the White House to secure additional relief for Texas.

We can begin by making advanced payments of $5.5 billion in 1999 transition, or so-called "Freedom to Farm payments" this coming October 1. The government can also help by buying-up surplus farm commodities to bolster prices.

I have recommended that the government pay crop insurance premiums for producers who will receive an indemnity payment, as well as a proportional payment for producers with catastrophic coverage or those who would be eligible for the Non-Insured Assistance Program.

Beyond that, however, I would like to see Congress provide funding which would allow the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the Disaster Reserve Assistance Program, which reimburses producers for up to 30% of the cost of the feed they must purchase.

These short term measures must be followed by actions which will open up foreign markets to American-produced products when the weather improves. Increasing our international trade opportunities will go far to create jobs and economic security at home.

It's hot and dry in Texas. This is no time for Washington to play with fire by failing to react quickly to the crises we face.
