COLLINS WINS MAYORALTY RACE

HOME TOWN GOSSIP

The Gossip column has received its worst set-back in years. Here we had just about gained a reputation for keeping the public informed of approaching marriages and the like, until Miss Elma Ruth Clarkson destroys our efforts in a single afternoon.

Without warning to anyone she took the 'fatal plunge' at the home of her parents, in Cisco, Sunday afternoon. The fortunate groom is W. O. Wheatley, a big oil and gas man, from Tilden, Texas, (if you know where that is).

The only excuse we have to offer for our shortcoming in not printing something about the approaching marriage last week is (in the bride's own words) "The date was not set until Sunday", and of course last week's paper was already out then.

And here's our proverbial blessing to the two most recent sailors upon martial seas; "May the Lord bless all that He has created".

Edward Schaffner, Jr., comes to the front this week with another of these "Will You Believe It" gags. He contends that a pigeon at his place has hatched a hen egg. He states further that the process of incubation took place in the pigeon's nest in a tree. Now Edward, will you please tell the Gossip readers, how the pigeon got that hen egg in her nest. Certainly the hen didn't lay it there.

A part of the program at the Junior-Senior banquet in Cross Plains high school gymnasium Wednesday night was a hog calling contest. The distinguished professor William Vinson Wheeler took first prize and has been acclaimed "Champion Swine Yodeler" of the school.

It is indeed gratifying for us, a long time acquaintance (notice we don't say friend) of the Santa Anna scholar, to know that he has at last excelled in something. As much could have been expected, however for there is the old adage: "A man calls those most affectionately, whom he has called most frequently".

And since we're devoting space to the school faculty this week, it is but fitting to call to your attention to the interest that Lewis Norman, high school principal, is manifesting in one of the city's most charming maidens.

Frankly, we think Norman is about "ga-ga", for we notice he goes about inhaling the freshness of Spring, as if it had not always been that way.

At the end of the Gossip this week you will note what is headed "A Serious thought". Bet you didn't know we ever had one. Each week this column will present one of its meditations in this fashion. Watch them, if you agree let us know. If not, do the same.

As these lines are written, a lady in despair rushes into the office to seek protection from a torrential rain and a colorful electrical display in the heavens.

Here we were; literally shaking with fear (Golly, theres another e-r-a-c-k ! ! ! of lightning) and now we must contain ourself to prove a better control of emotions for the male sex.

But honestly if this lightning doesn't stop raining a moment to break down and admit that we're just as scared as is our excited visitor. Mercy me!

Spurred by victories in many arid sections, Callahan County "Wets" are about to make another challenge at the "Drys" in a ballot box contest, in which the sale and manufacture of 3.2 percent beer and wine in this county will be evolved.

A SERIOUS THOUGHT

Some of the biggest boosters of a few years ago are now the most devoted disciples of the opposite cause.

NAME 3 TRUSTEES AT POLLS SATURDAY

4 CANDIDATES ARE OFFERED VOTERS OF THIS SCHOOL AREA

Voters of the Cross Plains school district will go to the polls Tuesday to elect three trustees, for terms of three years each. At noon yesterday there had been only three nominations for the places. They are, Arthur Mitchell, A. G. Foster, and Edwin Erwin.

Another petition bearing the names of Edwin Erwin, A. G. Foster and C. F. McNeal was being circulated yesterday at noon, the Review was informed by a member of the school board.

Voting will take place in the Anderson Chevrolet Building, with F. R. Anderson acting as presiding judge.

E. I. Vestal, president of the school board, told the Review yesterday morning that the school bus would be used to transport voters from the Sabanno community to the polls.

Ballots were being held up yesterday until after midnight in order to place any last minute candidate on the list. The deadline for nominating is Thursday at midnight.

Porter J. Davis, of this place, will be a candidate for county school trustee in the election Saturday.

School districts all over Callahan county will hold their annual election Saturday.

TEACHER HERE WED TO TILDEN MAN IN CISCO LAST SUNDAY

Miss Elma Ruth Clarkson, teacher in Cross Plains schools, became the bride of W. O. Wheatley, of Tilden, Texas, Sunday afternoon. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clarkson, in Cisco.

Mrs. Wheatley returned here Monday morning and has filled her place in the school this week. She will not teach next year, however, she told a representative of the Review.

Mr. and Mrs. Wheatley will make their home at Tilden, where the groom has oil and gas interests.

FORD PRICE NOT TO ADVANCE IS REPORT

DETROIT, April 4.—Rising wages and materials costs brought automobile price increases Thursday by all automotive producing units of General Motors Corporation, and almost simultaneously came a statement by Henry Ford that these factors would not influence his company to raise the selling price of its cars, according to Jesse McAdams, local Ford agent.

Asserting that his company was operating profitably under present conditions, Ford said that if necessary to avoid price increases the Ford Motor Company would expand its own production of materials used in car manufacturing. The Ford Company several weeks ago let contracts for an enlargement of its steel producing facilities at the Rouge plant.

"I have found," said Ford, "that higher wages do not mean increased costs and if our material prices go too high we will start making our own."

It long has been the expressed Ford philosophy that higher wages make for more efficient workers and that "better materials are always more economic in the end."

Miss Pauline Payne of Abilene visited relatives here and Dressy Sunday.

Mrs. Wilbur Wright was in Hico last week end visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. Bob Clark and Mrs. Talbot Nichols were in Brownwood Monday.

MRS. A. G. FOSTER IS LAID TO FINAL SLEEP WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. A. G. Foster, 56, who died at Santa Anna Tuesday, after a major operation in a hospital there, was laid to final rest in the Cross Plains cemetery Wednesday afternoon. Funeral service, conducted by Dr. C. A. Voyles, local Baptist pastor, was held from the Foster family home, in the North part of town.

Mrs. Foster had been ill for some time before entering the hospital, at Santa Anna, 10 days ago.

Mrs. A. G. Foster was born at Walnut Springs, Texas, March 20, 1878. She had been a resident of this immediate locality more than 50 years. She had been a member of the Cross Plains Baptist Church 50 years.

Pall bearers at the funeral and interment service were: Bill Cross, Bob Young, Ed. Henderson, George Clifton, Lon Halley, and Steve Foster.

Mrs. Foster is survived by her husband, several children and a host of relatives and friends throughout this entire section.

BILL CALHOUN BUYS SAUNDERS SHOP HERE

E. A. (Bill) Calhoun purchased the blacksmith shop, just in rear of Garrett Motor Company,—formerly known as Saunders Pix-It Shop—from Mrs. J. G. Saunders this week. Mr. Calhoun informs the Review that he will install several pieces of new equipment. He has engaged a blacksmith to take charge of the business. An announcement from Mr. Calhoun concerning his new enterprise appears in the advertising columns of today's Review.

CITY IS VICTOR IN DECISION WEDNESDAY IN FEDERAL HEARING

Judge M. S. Long's decision in district court—in the case of Southwest Gas Company vs the city of Cross Plains—which has forced the city to operate the municipal Gas System as a separate unit, was over-ruled in district court Wednesday, according to word received by S. M. Buatt, City Receiver, from the law firm of Scarborough and Ely, which represented Cross Plains at the hearing.

The Review was unable to get in touch with Dallas Scarborough yesterday for more complete information. It was understood, however, that the city would now be permitted to operate the gas system in the same manner as is done with the water.

H. T. Schooley visited G. W. Carney in Seymour two days last week.

LIGHTENING HITS JOHN BAUM'S HOME THURSDAY MORNING

Rain fell in torrential sheets at intervals over the Cross Plains trade territory Wednesday night and Thursday. Creeks and tanks were showing effects of the precipitation early yesterday and indications were that farmers and ranchmen would be provided with ample stock water for the approaching Summer months. No definite gauge of the moisture was available yesterday at noon, however, the Review learned that more than two inches had fallen.

Perhaps the greatest damage of the rain, which was accompanied by an electrical display, was done to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Baum, which was struck by lightning early Thursday morning. The flash hit the roof of the house and ignited shingles on the West side. Firemen hurried to the scene and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze, however, before it had time to gain much headway.

BANKS ARE TAKING STEPS TO PREVENT HOLD-UP BY YEGGS

Beginning Monday the Citizens State Bank will close each day during the noon hour, in cooperation with other banking institutions throughout Central and West Texas, as a precautionary measure against bank robbery.

Deposits in the Citizens State Bank are covered 100-percent against robbery, but due to the rapid increase of this crime, banks everywhere have agreed to cooperate with insurance companies in the endeavor to not only discourage bank robbery, but to stamp it out completely. C. C. Neeb, Cashier of the local institution, told the Review in a conversation yesterday.

Another precautionary measure, of keeping only necessary cash on hand has been asked by insurance companies and state banking officials and will be obeyed by the Citizens State Bank. Signs will be posted in the windows and lobby of the bank within the next few days advertising "This Bank Keeps Only Enough Cash On Hand For Current, Daily Business."

In the event that a large quantity of money is needed for certain days business, all banks throughout this section have made arrangements whereby it can be sent to them promptly.

Customers of the bank are urged by the officers and directors of the Citizens State to lend their cooperation to the precautionary measures, by governing their banking business accordingly.

Wade Golson, a close friend of the Stone family, also made a brief talk at the funeral service.

Mr. Stone had been in ill health for several years and his condition grew grave last week.

Friends from more than a dozen counties assembled at the little Cross Cut church Tuesday afternoon, to pay final respects to Mr. Stone, a trail blazer into Texas and a former cow-man known and admired by thousands. We wish to thank your superintendent and other for the help accorded us during the course of our work there".

"Similar petitions are being circulated all over the county and will be presented to the Commissioners Court, at the next regular meeting of the body", the Review was told yesterday.

EDITORIAL The Farmers Rights

By W. N. Long

Selfish opinions have been a faltering measure of any so-called united group of people. Conditionally, in the United States which is founded upon equality of the rights of free born citizenship of likeness to representation. These rights are mostly given to the free benefits according to burdens. The one who does not receive the benefits which he rightly deserve is, what we call, the underdog. Education surely has its need to make these impressions.

The first step toward civilization education, may I ask? Who pays for education? The taxpayer, and please note that the farmer contributes 75% of this burden; yet, in many of our schools, vocational agriculture is being denied. Why? Because the rulers do not want it. They have no children who expect to be farmers. They want little Johnnie or Jane to go to college. But what will the boy do who is left on the farm? Yes, the son of the tax payer. Many of our school rulers are not even property owners. Feature it! Rulers, representatives who are to care after the welfare of our schools and do not own property.

We are glad and appreciate the consideration of the farmers rights for the two preceding years, but the outlook for next year looks dark. The farmers and boys are not begging, but merely asking for their rights. Ask a farmer; he has a right of opinion. Ask an F.F.A.; he has been through the course. Then ask yourself—is there a more practical subject being taught?

The supervised of our school are the life of its constitution, so let us strive to help its preservice. For instance, this school was a dead house for athletics and literary work until our present superintendent plared that life of hope into it. What if our rulers had have barred him? We would not have our fine school that we have today had this a school of variety and unity.

A DEDICATION

By W. N. Long

I don't take religion first, And to politics all at once burst. Has again opened his mouth. He says disappointments are mine, But there's none that I can find. And back out by far too late. It seems that my friend to the South As first, I want to show That he has't made a go; Then he will have to cease And to me the right lease.

I'll again give him a chance And his sores of infidelity lance. We are not to fight and fuss But merely hold the trust. I don't brag that something's true And be down with Capitol Punishment flue I don't challenge a debate, I don't vouch a theory's so Just because I always know.

I don't tell anyone I'm higher And pronounce the Bible a liar. I usually listen and find Whether a person's warm and kind.

To higher ground my faith reaches— To what the Bible teaches— Leaving these lines to you, Change from brag to true.

"The action of man Is the scene of God To be judged by his hand Upon thine sand and sod. Judged by my character to mold That comes from my life With all his love to hold, Not of war, fortune or strife; But many hardships to fight."

Mr. Wheeler: That's not beauty, that's imagination.

The Dollar Bride

by Mary Inlay Taylor

M.C.M.S. AUTOCASTER SERVICE

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT

THE STORY SO FAR

Nancy Gordon trades herself in marriage for fifteen thousand dollars—the price of her family honor—and the freedom of her brother, Roddy who stole, for a woman, that amount from the bank in which he works. Desperately in love with young Page Roemer, nevertheless agrees to a secret elopement with Dr. Richard Morgan, and with the money he loans her prevents Roddy's arrest. Dr. Morgan is loved by Helena Haddon, a sophisticated young married woman, but he adores Nancy and hopes to win her after marriage. In Washington they are married, Nancy is Richard's bride—and afraid of him.

Now go on with the story

Then, either the visitor had found out all she wanted to, or she was tired of it; she was actually going. Nancy heard their movements in the hall. Mrs. Gordon came back, painting.

"Oh, Nancy, do you think she—she knows anything?"

Nancy shook her head doubtfully. "How can she? Unless— There was Beaver, but Nancy would not believe that. It was too much. "I think she only wanted you to talk about Richard."

Mrs. Gordon's face changed. "I didn't know that he—that they had ever been engaged," she said blankly. "Anyway, he's in love with you, Nancy, I know that!"

A strange smile twisted Nancy's lips.

"Perhaps he isn't now," she said briefly, "perhaps he doesn't like a secret in the family—and I—" she laughed wildly—"threw myself at his head, Mama."

"Oh, Nancy!" her mother blushed like a girl.

But Nancy did not blush, she turned suddenly white to the lips and caught at Mrs. Gordon's hand convulsively.

"There's Page Roemer coming in the gate—oh, Mama, what shall I do? What shall I do?" she cried.

Amadna's dusky face appeared at the door.

"Miss Page Roemer, Miss Nancy," she said softly, showing the whites of her eyes, "I said mebbe yo' was in an agin mebbe yo' warn't but he's waitin' says he's gwinter wait till he sees yo' anyways, yes, m'm."

"That's all right, Mandy. I'll see Mr. Roemer."

Mrs. Gordon gave a little gasp and let the girl's hand slip. She was as eager to escape as Amanda.

Left alone to face the inevitable Nancy dreaded it. Now, fresh from the thought of Richard's repudiation, of Richard's rage at her fear of him, she must face Page.

"Come in here please, Page," she said faintly. But he heard it, and came into the library. As the sunlight struck his face, Nancy saw the wreck of it, Page had been suffering, too, and the sight of his haggard eyes wrung her with a pang sharper than her own self pity. They stood looking at each other dumbly for a moment. He was the first to recover himself enough to speak.

"I got your note," he said harshly. "I don't understand."

A deeper wave of crimson went up over Nancy's tremulous face and her eyes sank. She averted her face from Page's eyes, clasping her hands behind her back.

"I don't understand," Page repeated hoarsely. "What did you mean Nancy?"

"What I said: my—my marriage is to be a secret."

"A secret?" there was a new note in his astonished voice. "Why?"

She recognized the note in it and she winced.

"I don't want it known—yet."

He caught his breath. She didn't love Morgan, she wanted to hide her marriage—please God, he'd got her yet!

"Nancy, you don't love him! You're sorry you did it—you want to keep it secret because you can't bear it You—" he came nearer, suddenly he flung himself down beside her. "Nancy you're not living with him—you're here—you're not actually his wife," he gasped.

"No!" she cried passionately, "no, no!"

Exultation leaped into Roemer's face. He had suffered agonies of shame because Richard had taken her away from him that night!

"Nancy!" his feverish eyes searched her face, "answer me—have you ever been his wife—except in name?"

She drew a deep breath.

"No," she whispered it, her head drooping, "never—never—I came home!"

Page gave a great gasp of joy. "God," he cried, "God, I'll take her away from him yet!"

The fury of his passion transformed him: his handsome smooth young face was furrowed—not with love but with hate, his hatred and his jealousy of Richard. Nancy saw it; something in his very passion was selfish and cruel, it reached her: suddenly, shaken as she was, she thought of Richard. Would Page have spared her as Richard had?

"You mustn't say such things, Page," she said weakly, "and I—I mustn't hear them, I—" she could not finish her sentence.

He caught her hands almost roughly in his.

"Answer me," he gasped hoarsely, "tell me the truth—you don't love him—did you have to marry him Nancy?"

"Yes," she answered faintly, not understanding, "I had to marry him, Page," she was too clean-souled to understand.

Richard would have known it, but Page dropped her hands and rose to his feet, tramping up and down the room like a madman. He had loved her, loved her deeply, and Richard had robbed him. Richard must have gone what he would never have dared to do. She—God, was she worthless? He could not believe it, yet she said so. Yet—he drew an agonized breath, he couldn't give her up, he'd get her away from Richard yet, damn him!

He—Page clenched his fist, he would like to shoot him, but, if he did, if it came out—poor Nancy! She—? He stopped short in his walk and stood thinking: was she worth the struggle? The world would say "no" His own selfish ego cried, no, not now! Then he looked at the girl.

She looked like a broken lily. All the blood in his body surged up into his head; he turned hot with rage. Damn him, he should not keep her!

"You'll leave this house, sir. That's what you'll do."

thing when I behave like this—why, Page I—I'm married!"

"Married?" he snapped his fingers, "that for such a marriage! I'll break it—listen to me, Nancy, I'm a lawyer, I'll break it—I'll—"

"You'll leave this house, sir. That's what you'll do!"

They both recoiled. Mr. Gordon was standing in the door, looking at them, his face on fire, his eyes blood-shot, his iron gray hair standing up in a frill on top of his head.

"Do you hear me, sir, you'll leave the house."

Roemer swung around, facing the older man, for a moment shamed.

"Mr. Gordon, I can't bear this! I know the truth, Nancy told me—she's been dragged into a secret marriage. If it were right, if she loved him, I—I could stand it. As it is I'm here, I'll—"

"I've come to thank you, Major," she said faintly, blushing and paling.

always be here, read to serve her, to get a divorce for her, to set her free."

Mr. Gordon made a furious gesture with one hand. "That's enough! I understand. Now—go!"

He was shaking with rage and Nancy saw it, she looked at Roemer imploringly.

"Please go now, Page!" she pleaded.

He hesitated and then he turned, took her hand, kissed it and went out passing Mr. Gordon with the air of a conquering hero.

"Good day, sir, I'm sorry you misunderstand."

"I don't misunderstand, Mr. Gordon shouted, "Good day, sir, and good riddance!"

The front door closed sharply. Nancy drew a long breath. Mr. Gordon came slowly into the center of the room and stood staring at her.

"Is that your idea?" he demanded hoarsely, "to marry one man—for money—and let another make love to you?"

The girl lifted her head and looked straight into his eyes.

"You're my father, she said simply, "look at me—do you believe I'm like that? That I'd be so—so base? If you do, she cried passionately, "I—I might as well kill myself!"

Her father's face worked, there was something like tears in his eyes.

"Nancy, my girl!" he held out his arms.

She flung herself into them with a low cry of anguish, pressing her face against his shoulder.

"I—I loved Page!" she gasped, "I'm wicked—I love him still!"

It was only two or three days later that Nancy—unable to endure the wretchedness of her plight at home—determined to go to Angie Fuller, could tell Angie anything. She must keep her own secrets, but about the girl that was like balm to a sore heart.

Angie met Nancy in the kitchen; she had gone there for some hot water for her uncle.

"He's got one of his awful attacks of gout, Nancy," she explained, flushing a little at the sight of her visitor, "he's as cross as two sticks, but I'm sure he'd like to see you."

The old man was huddled up in a big Morris chair.

"My soul!" he let his eyes rest on the pair with a twinge of approval as sharp as his twinge of gout. "Where d'you drop from, Nancy Virginia?"

Nancy smiled more naturally than she had for days.

"I've come to help Angie take care of you," she said.

The major chuckled. "I'll soon scare you off!"

Nancy sat down on a low stool beside the old man's chair.

"I've come to thank you, major," she said faintly, blushing and paling by turns, "with—all my heart!"

"Eh?" he gave her an angry look, his brows down, "what for?"

"For buying our house—"

He snorted. "Glad to get rid of it then?"

She shook her head. Speech was going to be very difficult. "You've—let us stay in it!"

The major settled back in his chair, staring hard at her quivering face.

"Your father's paying rent," he remarked dryly, "I'd call him a pretty good tenant—says he'll make his own repairs."

"Someone else might have turned us out and—" Nancy's voice broke so that Angie dropped down on the floor beside her holding her hand. "We all love it!" she faltered.

The major stirred his tea.

"Where's Roddy?" he asked, abruptly, "still doing well?"

Angie felt Nancy's quick intake of breath; the girl full of her own thoughts of Roddy divined that there was something wrong.

"I had a letter from him yesterday," she said hurriedly, forcing lightness, trying to be unconcerned, "he's—he's all right, major."

Angie felt Nancy trembling now, and she jumped up suddenly.

"Why there's Dr. Morgan, uncle," she said, "he must have just got back—he's been out all night."

"Go let him in," the major set his cup down. "Here, Nancy, stay I won't be left alone with a doctor. Dick's enough to kill me anyhow."

But Nancy was on her feet in a panic.

"I've got to go," she panted, "I only came in to thank you—to ask how you were, major!"

But he had hold of her hand and he kept her struggling, until the door opened for Richard.

"I want you to tell this doctor of ours to treat an old man decently," he said chuckling. "He's starving me to death!"

It was the first meeting since that night when Nancy had refused the offer of his name and his home.

The only low-priced car with fully-enclosed Knee-Action Wheels and what a difference that makes in performance and dependability

Simple as a Shock Absorber! Chevrolet's "fully enclosed" Knee-Action is, in reality, a gigantic shock absorber, built solidly on to Chevrolet's big, heavy frame, with the front wheel solidly anchored to the "shock absorber" arm. The result: When the front wheel comes in contact with a bump or hole, it rises or falls to absorb the shock.

A smooth, restful, gliding ride . . . a bounceless back seat . . . a new feeling of safety and relaxation in high-speed or rough-road travel. All these pleasures are yours with Knee-Action wheels. And if your car has enclosed Knee-Action, like Chevrolet's, you not only get this gliding ride at its best, you also get two other extra advantages. One of these is shock-proof steering. And the other is dependable operation. The patent rights on this special kind of Knee-Action are held exclusively by General Motors. That's why no other low-priced car has it. Also, no other has a Fisher body, cable-controlled brakes, or a Blue-Flame engine of unsurpassed economy. TEXAS FACTS

Texas, first railroad was commenced in 1852.

The State Asylum for the Blind in Texas was established in 1856.

The University of Texas owes its existence to the wisdom, foresight, and statesmanship of the founders of the Republic of Texas.

The University of Texas is governed by a Board of Regents who are appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate.

In 1870 the Sam Houston State Normal was established by the State of Texas for the purpose of training competent teachers for the Public schools.

In the early Texas colonies there were no practicing physicians and any serious illness was likely to result in death.

After the early Texas colonies became more thickly settled, it was said of Texas that it was "a heaven for man and dogs, but a hell for women and oxen."

The Alamo still stands as a monument to remind this generation in all countries that men can die bravely in a holy cause.

The Battle of San Jacinto was a just retribution for the heinous crimes committed against a patriotic and brave people by the ruthless invaders.

The colonization law of 1842 exempted Texas colonists from taxes for the first ten years of their residence.

The death of Moses Austin brought to a close a life that had been almost an epitome of the progress of Anglo-American civilization across the continent.

The women of the early Texas colonies gave their lives for Texas as truly as the heroes who made the last supreme sacrifice within the walls of the Alamo.

Moses Austin's journey to Texas in 1820 marked the advent of Anglo-American civilization across the Sabine and the real beginning of the history of modern Texas.

No person was admitted as a settler in Austin's colony in Texas unless he produced satisfactory evidence of having supported the character of a moral, sober, and industrious citizen.

The Monroe Doctrine settled, once for all, the independent destiny of the Western Hemisphere, and incidentally the destiny of Texas.

Each settler in Austin's colony in Texas was required by the provincial government to take oath of allegiance to the government exercising sovereignty of the country.

In early Texas colonies, "wine skins," as in Biblical days, were used as containers for liquids, such as honey.

In the early Texas colonies wild honey was regular article of diet, and was the universal substitute for sugar.

Colonists came to Texas not only by the land route, but some came by schooner from New Orleans.

CORRECTION

The Review has been informed of an error which appeared in last week's issue, and is desirous of making this correction.

In the story of a double funeral at Burkett last week for A. M. Younglove and Othor C. Merryman, it was stated that they were uncle and nephew. This was incorrect, there was no relation. The Younglove and Merryman families, however, have been intimate friends for years.

In the story the Review also stated that Othor Merryman was survived by his mother, two brothers and one sister, which was incorrect in that he had no sister.

We apologize for the error.

Thanks A Lot

To my friends and citizens of Cross Plains I wish to extend by deep appreciation for the consideration given me in the Mayor's race Tuesday. Although I was defeated I am proud of the vote that I received.

I wish also here to extend congratulations to the victor and the entire city council, and assure each of them that he has my sincerest wishes and cooperation for the success of the approaching administration.

Lets all join hands and work together for the good of our town, the best little town in Texas.

Sincerely,
Jesse McAdams.

IN MEMORY OF OTHAR MERRIMAN

On March the 28 the news came
Of the death of our dear darling friend
Now we will all miss him until this life shall end.
His loving words and his sweet smiling face,
Will be missed in the home more than any other place.
To his sweet Mother he was a great help,
He help carry her burdens in each weary step.
He lay in his white bed he suffered much pain,
But Jesus came and took him never to suffer again
And the voice of Jesus was so tender and sweet,
When he came and called him home,
Where we all shall meet.

Softly his voice speaks to the weary, tenderly he Speaks to the sad, if we will all hear him he Will make our hearts glad.
Oh, Mother please don't be weary
For God answers prayer just think of your darling
That dwelleth over there.

Oh, Father and brothers please don't be sad,
And your heart must be glad.
Your dear little brother, for Othar you must Not weep, for in the arms of his Savior he Lies peacefully asleep.
He has gone to a golden city, to a home so fair and sweet

Oh, how we will miss him while he is in his silent sleep.
Gone—My darling Author, Gone for ever more,
But tis sweet to know we'll meet you
On that beautiful shore.
Your vacant place at home is there,
And around the city ever where.
We look for you but look in vain,

He is in the garden of roses, with a crown upon
His head, Oh' it seems as tho' I can Almost hear him speak.
For his soul is not dead.
Now lets all think of Othar. And be sure to prepare
For a glad meeting with him.
In that land—Oh' so fair.
