New Road District Created

IS ANOTHER STEP IN ROUTING HIGHWAY 36 ON TO DESTINATION

A local bill authorizing the creation of a special road district along the proposed route of highway 36 in Callahan and Taylor counties...

The special district—known as a shoestring district—is created in order that a special tax may be levied to finance the purchasing of right-of-way, fencing and other expenses incidental to placing the road in condition to receive designation by the state highway department.

The district does not affect any of the Cross Plains precinct—Callahan county precinct four—but begins at the Western boundary of this precinct and proceeds into Taylor county.

Civic groups of cities along the route of highway 36 are pushing efforts for its re-designation and improvement to afford this section a direct inlet to the coast and South Texas.

Virtually all schools in the county will be dismissed today and will have entries in the literary events which start at nine o'clock in the high school auditorium.

CLEAN-UP DAY FOR CEMETERY SET FOR 9TH OF NEXT MONTH

First Tuesday in next month—April sixth—has been designated as clean-up day for Cross Plains cemetery. A committee composed of C. S. Martin, chairman; E. C. Neob, Mrs. Leah Boden, S. R. Jackson and Nat Williams is in charge of arrangements.

Ladies are urged to prepare a basket luncheon and bring it to the cemetery that day; men are asked to come equipped with tools and be ready to do a full day's work.

Condition of the cemetery is said to be further unsightly and many graves are in need of attention both from weeds and sinking. The Review was told.

The date April sixth was chosen after much consideration had been given to the time most convenient for all concerned. In view of the fact that much more can be accomplished by everyone coming and working the same day a large turn-out is expected.

About 400 rabbits were killed in a drive made of the Burnt Branch and Dressy vicinities Friday by farmers. Disagreeable weather kept many from participating in the drive, however, another will probably be scheduled later in the Spring or early Summer, the Review was told.

LIBERTY TO SHOW "MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN"

"Who's looney now" is a phrase made popular several years ago when a certain millionaire named Chalmers, accused by his relatives of being slightly cracked, beat them in a law suit and triumphantly uttered the quoted words. One is reminded of the occasion now when considering Columbia's new Frank Capra picture "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," showing Sunday and Monday at the Liberty Theatre, in which Gary Cooper, as a young man who has recently inherited $2,000,000, is put on trial for his sanity because some people don't like the way he is spending his money.

Before the trial is over Cooper turns the tables and practically convinces the judge, jury and spectators that everyone is looney but he. Among the many things that those who had him arrested and the psychiatrists who ultimately examine him present as evidence of his mental disability, are his feeding doughnuts to a horse in an effort to ascertain how many the animal will eat before asking for a cup of coffee; his playing the tuba to help him concentrate his wanting to give his $2,000,000 to the impoverished farmers; his chasing fire-engines; his habit of throwing out of the house guests he doesn't like; and his dashing manly through New York's streets in his underwear.

Two feeble-minded spinsters from his home town give evidence that Cooper, as Mr. Deeds, is "killed" "fixed" means chicken, in their vernacular. Mr. Deeds' own deposition of the slant's testimony proves that everyone does crazy things to help them concentrate, like penciling peculiar designs on a scrap of paper and filling in O's and I's, admits he was drunk when he fed doughnuts to the horse and ran out in his shorts; reminds the court that there are thousands of so-called "crazy" people who chase fire-engines; and gives a lot of sensible reasons why he should be allowed to give his money to needy folk, especially if he himself gets very little pleasure out of it.

It is easy to realize that the court sees his point and dismisses the case!

Featured with Cooper in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is Joan Arthur.

SELECT ASSISTANT IN REHABILITATION WORK OF CALLAHAN

Employment of Sidney S. Harville as his assistant has been announced by J. S. McKnight, county supervisor of rural rehabilitation, one of the steps through which a more effective supervisory program will be provided for this county's Resettlement borrowers.

Ninety-eight such assistants in Texas have been appointed, chosen largely from successful farm operators. They will work at actual field supervision over a period of several months during the Spring and early summer. The county supervisor said that in the past his office has been so heavily loaded with loans to a large number of needy farmers that he has had insufficient time to plan the farm program and give the supervision which is the real basis of rehabilitation. He said that even under these conditions the larger part of Resettlement borrowers in this county have been taught to grow their living at home and to raise their own food crops, which he characterized as the first step to help them up the agricultural ladder. "Most of these farmers came to Resettlement from the relief rolls and have been helped by us in ownership of their tools and equipment, which is the necessary preliminary to land ownership," the supervisor said.

It takes the county home supervisor at least half a day to work out a farm plan, in addition to the time which must be spent later giving instructions and checking to see that the plan is carried out. A cropping plan must be laid out which provides as the first requirement that the farmer shall grow his own food and feed to the greatest possible extent. The plan must also provide crops which can be sold for cash to buy things that the farmer cannot grow at home and to repay his loan. The farm plan covers the family's home life, as well as crops and livestock. It provides for canning and drying of vegetables, curing of meats, making mattresses, quilts and clothing. The slogan of the rural rehabilitation home supervisors is, "Take what you have and make what you need."

With 28,500 farm plan families in Texas last year served by 120 county supervisors, each supervisor had more than 200 families for which to make plans and then see that they were properly carried out. The staff was so inadequate to meet the needs of the situation that the county commission is practically every county of Texas arranged to provide additional clerical help. In some counties as many as eight or nine additional helpers were supplied in the rush season by the county government, chambers of commerce, or other agencies. "I do not think there could be any more powerful recognition of the benefits resulting from the rural rehabilitation program than the fact that the local governments and other community agencies have sided in so generously," the county supervisor said.

These men met with the county agent Saturday, March 20th, and elected Steve N. Foster as chairman of the county committee, Julian L. Farmer as vice-chairman and Chas. Straley the ranch member of the committee. Fred Stacy was selected as alternate. The county committee then appointed, subject to approval of the State Board, W. L. Henry, rancher and stockman of Baird, as range inspector for the ranch program. Everett H. Williams of Putnam was chosen assistant and alternate.

It will be the duty of the range inspector to visit each ranch that is making application for entry into the A.A.A. Program for 1937, and determine the grazing capacity of the land and also to establish such areas as will be used in the eradication of prickly pear, mesquite, and to check the dirt that is used in the construction of earth tanks.

In order that there will be uniformity of decisions covering the range areas in Texas there will be field trips for these inspectors along with the range member from the county committee and the county agent. Messrs. Henry and Straley will accompany the county agent on his Spring March 29, through 31 study with the members from the Forestry Service, the experiment stations and the Extension Service to effectuate the purpose of the range program.

Mr. Henry stated that he believed that all ranchers would enter the program because there is needed improvements on every ranch in the county that can be aided by the 1937 range program. Some 150,000 acres of ranch land has now been listed for entry into the program and others are sending in their applications daily.

The community committees above named will take temporary applications of all farmers who wish to enter the Agricultural Conservation Program but ask that farmers please call at their homes either at noon time or at night as each of them has farming that need to be done. However, anyone may sign his application in the county agent's office any day and if convenient it is hoped that most all of the signing will be done in the office because all the available records covering the past several years are now on file and can be checked with the farmer so as to help him in making his 1937 work plan on the farm.

Small Grains as Green Manure
All producers who plan to use small grain acreage in establishing their soil conservation acreage must sign a statement to that effect with the county committee on or before April 15th. A letter from the State Board of March 19th, says, "Small grains are soil depleting crops regardless of the use made of the crop, except that the county committee may approve the use of small grains on a designated area on a farm as a winter cover crop. If small grains on these designated areas are pastured or plowed under and the land is protected immediately thereafter by a soil conserving crop or practice, such land will take the classification of such soil conserving crop or practice. Where such crops are plowed under as green manure and followed by another soil conserving crop or practice, all such land shall be classified as soil conserving. April 15th is the final day for designating the use of such small grain areas."

The committees have in their hands forms to be signed by all farmers that plan to use this method in setting aside their conserving acres and should be signed at once. Final Date For Summer Fallowing
The State Committee has recommended that the first operation of furrowing, or other working of the soil, as required under subsections J, K, and L, section 104, SRH 101 be completed not later than July 1, 1937, for land to be considered as soil conserving as provided in these subsections. The State Committee has also announced that idle land terraced in 1937 between the dates of October 31, 1936, and October 31, 1937, will be accepted in lieu of soil conserving crops and such areas will be accepted as setting up soil conserving acreage.

ALL AMERICAN CHUMP IS BOOKED AT LIBERTY

"All American Chump", which opens at the Liberty Theatre Tuesday, demonstrates in a mirthful manner what can happen to a bridegroom in this country today.

The story presents a small town bank clerk who is a lightning calculator, the character being portrayed by Stuart Erwin in the title role. He encounters a carnival manager who recognizes the money value of his talent with the show.

Induced by the manager to join the show and influenced by the fact that the boss has a charming daughter, Erwin signs up.

On the train heading out he joins a game of bridge with strangers and unwittingly defeats the American champion.

When the news is flashed on the wires he becomes a celebrity and his adventures begin.

An official match is arranged but gangsters kidnap him. Eventually, he wanders home to find the manager's daughter awaiting him.

Betty Farnose has the feminine lead and does excellent work. Robert Armstrong plays a carnival barker and Edmund Gwenn, who is George Bernard Shaw's favorite comedian, portrays the show manager to perfection.

Miss Willie Gay Stacy, Miss Virginia Bell Baird, Tommie Harris, and Vernon Baird were Fort Worth visitors Monday and Tuesday.

ISN'T IT STRANGE

A hen is not supposed to have Much common sense or tact. Yet every time she lays an egg She cackles forth the fact. A rooster hasn't got a lot Of intellect to show, But none the less most roosters have Enough good sense to crow. The mule, the most despised of beasts, Has a persistent way Of letting folks know he's around By his constant bray. The busy little bees they buzz, Bulls bellow, and cows moo The watchdogs bark, the ganders quack And doves and pigeons coo. The peacock spreads its tail and squawks, The squeal and Robbins sing, And even serpents know enough To hiss before they sting. But MAN, the greatest masterpiece That nature could devise, Will often stop and hesitate Before he'll advertise! ISN'T IT STRANGE?

Ferdy smiled, but Vicky knew that he was furious.

"Catherine, cross your heart and hope to die if you ever tell anyone this!"

"I do," said Catherine solemnly, "sitting the action to the world."

"Who's her stepfather?" Vicky echoed, repudiating the relationship.

Victoria was at the dock, in the fine soft November fog, to see the ship come in.

"There are a thousand persons to whom I ought to telephone," Magda said lazily.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Victoria Herrero is a vivacious little girl that comes when her father, the Herrenden, lost his fortune, gentle, unobtrusive soul, he is employed as an obscure chemist in San Francisco, at a meager salary. His wife, Magda, cannot resist herself to the change. She is a beautiful woman, fond of pleasure and a magnet for men's attention. Magda and Victoria have been at a summer resort and she joins them for a bridge party, leaving herself for being such a "wreck." Later that night she is grief-stricken when she sees her parents quarreling. The parents return to their small San Francisco apartment. Keith approves of Magda's mad life and they quarrel frequently.

she's a cheap little idiot I know years ago—Magda married Tony Fenney divorced him and spent a few in Paris, so now she's "Ma Fenney," and she can hardly read an English word?

"Does Ferdy like her?" Vicky asked, looking at her daughter curiously, answered mildly.

"Oh, and of course she passes at Ferdy."

"Vicky said, it was the atmosphere again! Rather, at the Manners home, she is very stupid for me, ended the subject cheerfully, rapid, that's what it is, for I never look at anyone like that and now tell me more about it, said you say France Peacock?"

Margery King's mother, over Europe trying to get to marry her to Joe Peacock couldn't."

"Ferdy's nice, Vicky said, you're adorable, only you see Herrenden eyes that remember to keep open, said lovingly, "Did you get some lovely things in Paris?"

Not expensive. But I give, I have two or three.

"You had it waved, Vicky? No, that's just brush setting."

—about, and with an instance for Ferdy and for Ferdy, yet she knew that she met him halfway with and flirtatiousness, submit and embraces, concede, tenderness and little harmless, or he would not like her, on the very first evening, stop carrying on with her.

he days began to go by, pondered what she was to the endless line of them, hebed ahead. For a week, he'd the new life lazily, suddenly the whole thing palled.

had her own beautiful rooms; Ferdy had his, entirely separated lives, they saw each other, course of the day, and not. Quite often they the same house, but the were large, and Ferdy went before Magda did, explaining to a servant that heing some friend first at for preliminary cocktails, Magda always went late, in te, in her beautiful car, own driver. So that even had no moment together.

CHAPTER III

ather was not happy. Gal-smiling, keeping a brave world, Magda's soul, to feed itself on hooks, told Victoria of the last was a story of disillusion and loneliness, in a setting travel, extravagance, one minute before eleven o'clock she drew up alongside, and all the excitement of landing began.

Then mother and daughter were in each other's arms, and Victoria was laughing.

"And how's Ferdy?"

"Ferdy—" Mrs. Manners' glance returned from the luggage and fixed itself upon Victoria. "Ferdy is—just the same—as ever."

"And when does he get here? Or does he go to Paris? You were so vague!"

"No, here. When the Loughborough's yacht does, whenever that is," Mrs. Manners said, in the same tone of pleasant indifference. "And now, is a car here, and did you reserve my rooms?" she demanded gayly, as the customs formalities were concluded and she could pick the Pekinese from Victoria's arms again and accompany her along the pier. "Don't tell me it's going to be freezing like this."

"It's been actually hot, until today. This is just fog," Victoria explained.

Maid, dog, parrot, bags, they got into a large waiting car at the Embarcadero, Mrs. Manners talking, as is the custom of returned travelers, of the amusing steward on the boat, the races at Havana, of everything unimportant and inconsequential. They were driven rapidly up the steep hills to the big hotel; everything going with the smoothness of custom. Victoria's mother had been arriving and departing in just this manner ever since her second marriage five years earlier.

Soon Victoria and her mother settled at luncheon beside the fire. "Well, this is fun!" said Magda then. "And now we can talk. You look so well, Vic, and you're really handsome. Really you are! What have you been doing with yourself, tell me everything, you got my wires?"

"You're the one with the news," she said smilingly. "Nothing has happened here. Miss Butler put me on night duty last night—only the second time, and I'm dead! I had breakfast at the hospital at seven, and had to clean up three bath-rooms, and stopped on my way downtown to leave my bag here."

"The hospital!" Magda echoed, almost not hearing the rest.

"You've been ill!"

Victoria's smile was reassuring. Her color was beginning to come back now, as she felt with vigor upon a three-inch steak, and there was revived light in her eyes.

"I'm in with Catherine," she explained. "Student nurses."

Mrs. Manners sat back and regarded her with puzzled eyes.

"Mummy, you're such fun—it's such fun to be talking to you again, and it's the best food I ever tasted! But darling, Victoria pleaded, "I had to do something. I couldn't just take a room somewhere and wait for you. You were with Ferdy 'way down in South America, and I was absolutely on the loose."

"But you were with Anna and Catherine."

"Aunt Anna got a most flattering offer from a school in Cleveland. We couldn't go with her, and Kitty was going to be a nurse. So I went along to the hospital with her."

"You are handsome," Magda said, under her breath, not listening. "Don't they let you use make-up at all?"

"Not on duty, and you sort of get out of the habit. What are you looking at?" Victoria asked, with an embarrassed laugh, as her mother continued her placid scrutiny.

"Well, you're simply adorable, Vicky," she said at length, "and you get enthusiastic just the way you used to. But—although it's a little soon to talk about it, I had rather a different plan in mind for you. I was thinking of Europe—after your debut."

"Europe!" Vicky echoed, her own eyes suddenly blazing. She remembered her student year there under the gentle unremitting chaperonage of the Dominican nuns. Again she heard the fountains of Rome splashing; saw the lights of the Place de la Concorde setting white statues and dark tree tops in bold relief against a blue night sky, caught a whiff of wet spring greenness from the grass beside the London Mall.

"Oh, Mummy! she said.

"Would you like it?"

"Oh, well, Mother—you and I?" Victoria's voice shook with excitement.

"We two."

"Ferdy wouldn't mind?"

Instead of answering, Mrs. Manners looked away through the exquisite silky shadows of half-lover lashes. Victoria's heart sank; she knew that gentle patience, she knew that long, resigned sigh. All was not going well between her mother and Ferdy.

The luncheon was cleared away; the two women resumed their chairs by the wood fire.

"There are a thousand persons to whom I ought to telephone," Magda said lazily. "I won't. I love this sitting here with you. You haven't told me anything about yourself, Vicky, have you seen or heard anything of your father?"

The question came suddenly, and with it the color rose to Magda's face.

"Yes, I saw Dad about two weeks ago," she said aloud.

er, were the radiant expression that only a new gown gives to twenty years.

She halted at the sight of a strange tall man standing at the foggy window, talking with her mother. They both turned. Victoria's hand was taken in a big fard hand. She liked the man at once, one must like him; there was something about Lucius that disarmed criticism, that won all hearts. Something simple and friendly, and a little uncertain and timid, and at the same time something definite and vital; there was a world of mirth, a child's secret and delicious merriment in his gray eyes.

He was not smiling this morning; he seemed serious and burdened, immediately the pleasantries of greeting had died away. Victoria, presently going back to her room, could hear through the open doorway the gravity of his tone as he and her mother talked at the window, their heads together.

"I can't, Magda," he said more than once. "I'm so sorry—I can't."

But when Victoria came out again to find her mother alone, there was no air of disappointment or defeat in Mrs. Manners' attitude. She was glowing with inner fires; she was shaken, laughing, ecstatic. She put her arms about Vicky; held the girl away from her to laugh into her eyes.

"My darling do you like him?" Victoria regarded her with a smile that had small heart in it.

"Isn't the question—do you?"

"Vic, on the steamer, the day we left Buenos Aires, we found each other," Magda said. "He came up to me and said, 'Aren't you the Valdes' friend, Senora Manners?' I don't know how he ever nerved himself to do it, for he's not like that as a rule. But he said he had seen me at the country club. We hardly spoke to anyone else on the voyage; we had our meals on deck, we talked and talked as if we never could talk enough!"

"For the first time in my life, Vic, I have met a man who strikes me—something—something that I might have been, might have had?" Magda continued. "He loves me, I know that, although he's never told me so. But it isn't that. It's the companionship, the exquisite delight of being understood—understood!" Magda broke off to say in amused scorn. "He knows more than I of everything—books, music people. And his attitude toward life is so beautiful, so simple and eager and fine."

There was silence. Magda smiled and wiped suddenly wet eyes, and Victoria smiled, too, a mother's patient smile for a child.

"So what?" the girl asked good-naturedly.

"So nothing, my darling, that's the tragedy," Magda answered lightly, and there was another silence.

"No," she went on presently, ending it. "Ferdy gets here next week, and Lucius goes down to his wife and the little girls in Carmel, and that's the end."

The day moved on.

That night, when they went downstairs to join the Knodalls, and he carried off for a dinner, Victoria saw Lucius and a woman and two gawky dark shy girls, all sitting in the great red chairs of the hotel foyer, evidently waiting for someone. "Was it for Mother?"

Whether it was or not they all came over to Vic and Magda, and there were introductions. Mrs. Farmer was a plain stout wholesome-looking little woman in glasses, with ropes of oily gray-brown hair wound about her head. The girls were like her, although both gave promise of some beauty. Ann, Constance, Victoria.

"Vicky," said her mother, in the course of the next few days, "when you fall in love, make it with a man to whom you can be an inspiration. It's a sacred thing—it's worth all the pain and the ache, to inspire a truly great man."

At first Victoria felt most pity for the man. He was clever, keen, affectionate, simple, and he was suffering cruelly. After a few weeks she perceived that her mother was in misery as great as his. Magda carried it better, but it was there—

Magda added no further questions, but her eyes were expectant.

"He's married again, you know Mummy, I wrote you that. And they're going to have a baby. They were married last February, and they expect the baby at Christmas. He simply adores Olivette, and he's all excited about the baby."

"Ha!" Magda said and fell thoughtful. "Still up in Seattle?"

"He says he loves it."

Magda twisted the Herrenden pearls in beautiful restless fingers.

But for some reason or other she felt a little chill in the air, felt that her mother wasn't wholly pleased with the news that Dad was happy and that a new baby was on the way.

"Ferdy," said Magda, out of thought—Ferdy is a strange creature, Vicky, I may as well tell you now as at any time that everything's wrong—it's all wrong."

Victoria was silent, puzzled, and after a pause Magda went on lightly:

"And so—Mr. Fernando Alonso y Castello Manners and I have decided to separate. No, no, no, not a divorce," she interrupted herself to say quickly, as Vicky's stricken face was turned from the fire in involuntary protest. "He doesn't want a divorce, if he got a divorce Maud Campbell would have him married before he could turn around, so he doesn't want a divorce, and neither do I. If you get a divorce they can do all sorts of funny things about alimony, go to court and have it adjusted and lessened—I don't know what they can't do. But a separation means that you and I can live where we like, and do as we please. And so it's to be Europe—off we go! I'll get you some things—or we can get them there."

"The only thing," Victoria began somewhat hesitantly. "Ought Ferdy pay for me, too? I mean, it's all right for a visit—it's all right for a few months. But after all—after all he doesn't owe me—"

"It's my money, and you're with me," Magda explained simply, with a touch of impatience.

"I was thinking of Ferdy, Vic," Magda said, out of a silence, "and thinking—" she stopped for a long sigh—"thinking of the tremendous difference there is in men," she said.

"I mean, Vic," she began again, as Victoria could find nothing to say—"I mean that—well, I suppose I was thinking of Lucius Farmer."

"I Love This Sitting Here With You."

"Who's he?" A familiar tightening, a familiar sinking sensation was at Victoria's heart. Oh, dear, Oh, dear. This was commencing again was it?

"You must know his name, darling. He's about the most successful painter of murals in America. He made the trip with us from Buenos Aires, but he lives down here in Carmel with a perfectly impossible wife and daughters."

"And what did the impossible wife and daughters think of you, Mummy?"

"Oh, they weren't along—perish the thought. No, he was alone." Magda's voice fell to a dreamy note. "One of the finest men—" she said, under her breath. "I mean one of the simplest and—and big-gest—and gentlest—"

"This life would be heaven for women, Vic, if many men were like him."

And again Victoria could find nothing to say.

More flowers came; the telephone rang; Magda's old friends were beginning to realize that she had arrived.

Lucius Farmer came to see them the next morning.

Magda was restless Victoria had gone into her own room to try on a gown her mother had brought her. It was of sheer batiste, embroidered delicately with tiny garlands of roses, all in white. It was the sort of gown that makes any girl's eyes dance, and Victoria, coming back with its frail folds blowing about

Q. How did the Llano Estacado or Staked Plains, derive the name? A. Despite the fact that several legends have been accepted by different historians, it is altogether probable that the region was so named because of the "palisade," "barricade," or "estacado" effect of the escarpment at the edge of the plain.

Q. What three expositions, international in character, are being planned to run simultaneously in Texas in 1937?

A. Greater Texas and Pan American Exposition, at Dallas, a continuation of the Texas Centennial of 1937; Southwestern Frontier Exposition, at Fort Worth, succeeding the Texas Frontier Centennial of 1936; and the International Oil Exposition, at Houston, for which a $1,350,000 exposition hall is being constructed.

Q. What was the first county seat of Brans county?

Do YOU LET THE "ROSY" PROMISES OF NEIGHBORING TOWN MERCHANTS BLIND YOU TO THE WELFARE OF YOUR COMMUNITY?

NEIGHBORING TOWN MERCHANTS

A. In 1842, at Clarksville, Texas, by Col. Charles DeMorse, who edited it continuously except at intervals during the Civil War, until 1867, it being the first and most important newspaper of that section.

Q. When, where and by whom was the Northern Standard established?

A. In 1842, at Clarksville, Texas, by Col. Charles DeMorse, who edited it continuously except at intervals during the Civil War, until 1867, it being the first and most important newspaper of that section.

Q. Who accompanied Houston when he left Nashville to join the Cherokee Indians in Arkansas?

A. An Irishman, who had been in Nashville, but a few months and gave his name as H. Harrison. He was with Houston with the Cherokees for a time, but apparently dropped out of his life as suddenly as he had appeared in it, for beyond a letter to Secretary of War Eaton written by him June 23, 1829, nothing more is known of him.

Q. How many Centennial markers have been placed in Red River County?

A. Six, as follows: In the Clarksville cemetery, at the grave of Capt James Clark, founder of Clarksville; at the home of Col. Charles DeMorse, founder of the Northern Standard (still occupied by his descendants) at the site where the Northern Standard was published by DeMorse; at the site of McKenzie College; at the birthplace of Vice-President John Garner near Detroit; at the old Jonesboro crossing, on Red River, where Sam Houston first entered Texas; at the First Presbyterian church, Clarksville, commemorating the founding of Old Shiloh, the oldest continuous protestant church in Texas.

Q. Where and when was Sam Houston born, and where did he die and what public offices did he hold? S. W.

A. He was born near Timber Ridge Church, Rockbridge County, Va., March 2, 1773, died at his home known as "The Steamboat House," in Huntsville, Texas, July 26, 1863, and was buried in the Huntsville cemetery. Aside from military positions, he was District Attorney of Davidson County, Tenn., from 1819, to 1823, member of Congress from 1827 to April, 1829. In Texas, he was a member of the San Felipe Consultation of 1835 and there elected Commander in Chief of administering government; first elected president of the Republic, Oct. 22, 1836 to Dec. 10, 1838; voted President from Dec. 10, 1841 to Dec. 9, 1844; member of U. S. Senate from 1846 to 1850; Governor of Texas from Dec. 21, 1859 to March 16, 1860.

Q. What became of the Santa Maria Mission established on the Neches River in 1597? B. M.

A. The building was washed away in a flood, crops failed, the soldiers and Indians alike became troublesome and the Mission was abandoned in 1605, the priests and people leaving what treasures they could not take away and hurrying to Mexico. The East Texas missions were abandoned the same year.

Q. What salaries are district court judges in Texas now receiving?

A. The present Legislature increased salaries of the 128 district judges from $4,000 to $5,000 by a vote of 219 to 11 in the House and 23 to 7 in the Senate. The bill was approved by Lieut. Gov. Wood, as acting governor in the absence of Gov. Allred from Texas making it effective immediately.

Ask To Abolish

PROPOSED CHANGES AFFECT ALL OTHER NEARBY COUNTIES

A change in the line-up of districts of this section is proposed in a bill redistricting the house of representatives on the basis of 1930 census, which received a favorable report from the house legislative districts committee Monday.

The bill was drafted by a sub-committee and if enacted would be the first legislative redistricting in 14 years.

District 107, now consisting of Callahan and Eastland counties, would be abolished, Callahan would be joined with Shackelford and Stephens in the 106 district. Eastland county's 106 district would become number 88.

The present district 125—Coleman and Brown—would be torn up. New District 86 would be Coleman and McCulloch, and district 87 would be San Saba and Brown.

Taylor county, now the 116 district, would become the 108.

District 107, of which Cross Plains is a part, is now represented by T. S. (Tip) Ross of Gorman. The Review had not contacted him yesterday as to how he stands on the proposed measure, and its possibilities of becoming a law.

Citizens interviewed at random by the Review were generally opposed to the abolition of district 107 and combining Callahan with Shackelford and Stephens in district 106. Others, however, were unconcerned.

KINSMAN OF LOCAL PEOPLE IS KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vestal, Enall Vestal, Davis and Earl Montgomery, Mr. Ben Atwood and J. C. Huntington returned Tuesday night from Ohio where they attended the funeral of Dr. Ishell Irvin, 28, who was killed in an automobile accident near Carlsbad, New Mexico, Sunday.

Irvin, who was born on a ranch south of Baird in 1910 was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Irvin and nephew of Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Montgomery and Mrs. Vestal. As a widow, she is survived by a husband, one sister and one brother.

The accident happened about five o'clock Sunday afternoon when a tire on the young man's car blew out causing it to swerve from its road and overturn five times. It died four hours and a half later.

Funeral services were conducted from the Otton Baptist church at 10 o'clock Monday in the cemetery there.

WILL VOTE SATURDAY ON SCHOOL TRUSTEE

Two elections are to be held in Cross Plains within the next few days. The first is the school trustee balloting Saturday and the second the choosing of city councilmen on Tuesday.

Three trustees are to be named for three year terms. Those who have been nominated are Arth Mitchell, Pat McNeel and Edw. Erwin, incumbents, and Ben J. Wood and C. W. Kemper. Balloting will take place in the Anderson Chevrolet building.

At the election to be held in city office Tuesday, two city councilmen are to be elected. Three candidates are: T. D. Litt, incumbent, and L. W. Placke and C. D. (Duke) Westerman.

LOCAL TEACHER QUILTS TO TAKE AMARILLO JOB
