Home Town Gossip

June, the merry month of marriages, is hurrying to a close but in its wake are many newly wed brides and grooms.

Surprise number one of the week was the wedding of Miss Opal Baker, home economics teacher in the high school, to Herald Overton at Mineral Wells Saturday evening. The ceremony was a most affair, Mary Opal's sister being her matron of honor.

Such a rhyme would probably be a grammar teacher to tear his hair. But to a country editor is downright funny.

The Fort Worth Frontier Fiesta opens its gates Friday night for a press-radio preview. Cowtown's hospitality to the scribes and blabbers for the evening is to be an advance presentation of a Mañana with all of the edible treats thrown in.

Reports are abroad that a certain stenographer is secretly married, however, efforts to get definite confirmation have as yet been unavailing. Your guess is as good as good—maybe better.

Markets will build a town faster than oil. So here's a public vote of appreciation to local buyers and negotiators to farmer friends.

Tip to the Cross Plains boys now playing in Hamlin; (Roy, Stan, Art, Michael, "Stinky" Davis, W. Milner et al); J. T. Hammett is playing in the Hamlin invitation tourney this week. He's good to win the event. Anything out of the semi-final pay-off will be a bargain price for J. T. in your parts.

Completing Plans As Picnic Nears

55TH ANNUAL EVENT ONLY 12 DAYS OFF; DATES ARE JULY 8-9

With Cross Plains fifty-fifth annual picnic and old settlers reunion only 12 days in the offing, finishing touches are being added to the entertainment calendar and the grounds placed in readiness for the large crowd expected.

Ed Stritch, manager of the Valley Shows, was in town Tuesday and concluded arrangements for transportation to and from Cross Plains. While here he held a representative of the Review that his entertainment offering this year would surpass all other previous efforts.

To thoroughly advertise the celebration J. L. Settle, general chairman of the picnic committee, announced yesterday that the local band had been engaged to make a tour of the Cross Plains trade territory, playing several tunes at each stop and extending public invitations to the picnic.

An amateur contest each night will be a feature of this year's picnic program. Prizes will be awarded in at least two divisions. Chas. F. Hemphill and W. J. Cross are in charge of this phase of the entertainment.

The picnic grounds are to be cleared next week and water connections prepared for the convenience of the public. Seats will probably not be handed to the grounds until the carnival layout has been arranged, however, Arthur Mitchell, chairman of the grounds committee, has assured that there will be plenty of seats in the shade to accommodate at least all of the aged visitors.

Cross Plains band is to play concerts during both days of the celebration, the Review was told yesterday by Alton Barr.

Local Golfers Off To Santa Anna For Last Match Sunday

Philpeco country club golfers conclude their 1937 season in the Mid-Texas Golf Association Sunday afternoon with an invasion of Santa Anna for a clash with the Mountaineers. The locals are now perched at the top of the league standing, by virtue of a half game lead over Santa Anna.

Hammett Mastering Mysteries Of Grass Greens

Grass greens which have heretofore been an enigma to J. T. Hammett, local golf ace, are becoming more understandable.

Hammett returned Monday from Del Rio where he stroked his way to the finals of one of South Texas most important golf events.

Hammett was defeated in the 36 hole final by Buck Loose, of Austin. It was "tricky" fairways and not the grass carpets that caused trouble, he said.

MARY OPAL BAKER AND GORDAN MAN MARRY SATURDAY

Coming as a surprise to her many friends in Cross Plains was the marriage Saturday evening of Miss Opal Baker, local home economics teacher, to Harold Overless. The wedding was a double affair, a sister of Miss Baker's, Miss Inez Oleta Baker, becoming the bride of Keene Ludden at the same time.

The ceremonies were held on the front porch of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Baker, in Mineral Wells. An improvised altar was banked with ferns and rosebuds. Floor of the altar was softened with artificial turf. Luminations came from white candles in the candelabra, lighted ushers.

Proceeding the ceremonies a quartet rendered "Robbins and Rosses", "When My Dream Boat Comes Home" and "Moonlight and Shadows". Then came a vocal solo, "I Love You Truly" by Martha Jane Baker. A sister of the bride accompanied at the piano, and also rendered the wedding march.

The Ludden-Baker rites were solemnized first, followed immediately thereafter by the Overless-Baker nuptial, which came as a surprise.

Following the ceremonies the bridal parties sliced cake from a large, beautifully decorated, three tier wedding cake. 75 guests were served.

Both couples left shortly for a brief bridal tour. Mr. and Mrs. Overless have returned after several days in Fort Worth. At present she is in Cross Plains completing the supervision of Summer home-economics projects, while he has returned to Gordian where he is service manager for an automobile concern.

Nat Williams and Lewis Norman, who are attending school at Texas University in Austin this Summer, spent the week end in Cross Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Williamson and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Williamson and family visited in the home of J. H. Williamson last week.

Dan Cutbirth, Jeph Cutbirth, Annie Cutbirth, and Patsy Cutbirth of Dundee visited their sister, Mrs. W. C. Adams here Sunday.

CITY IS OFFERING BEST MARKET FOUND IN ENTIRE SECTION

Heated competition between local buyers gave Cross Plains this week one of the strongest grain markets in West Texas. First dollar wheat in the entire area was sold here.

28,267 bushels of wheat had been bought in Cross Plains up to Wednesday morning, however, several large quantities were contracted early Thursday at a dollar per bushel which were not included in these figures, due to the fact that they had not been weighed in at the scales of Public Weigher I. B. Loving as the Review went to press.

Local bank deposits swelled to a new high last week and a report from the Citizens State Bank Thursday morning said they stood at $123,792.77. C. C. Neeb, Cashier, told the Review he expected the total to reach $140,000.00 before the week's end.

32 carloads of grain were shipped via the M.K.&T. from Cross Plains last year. A composite estimate made by S. P. Bond, E. V. Carter and T. A. Holken, local buyers, and R. A. Bolles, railroad agent, predicted that 87 carloads would move from here this year. An average carload is between 80,000 and 90,000 pounds—1,333 to 1,500 bushels.

First dollar wheat in the entire area was sold by H. L. (H.) Harris.

Public Weigher I. B. Loving has worked until far into the night all the past week. Steady streams of grain have poured in until near midnight, as the largest crop in recent years moved into Cross Plains.

Six threshers are at present operating in the trade territory. Yields are reported to be exceeding estimates by as much as 50 per-cent, however, in most cases wheat is matting near 23 bushels to the acre. Several patches of 30 bushel wheat have been reported, however.

Foreign buying of Texas wheat is credited with the unusually good price this year.

TWO MULES AND TEN PUPS MAKE HOLLYWOOD DEBUT

Betty and Maggie, two twenty-year-old white mules, have crashed Hollywood!

They arrived at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios from Excelcior Springs, Mo., together with ten pound pups, and went immediately to work in "The Voice of Bugle Ann," with Lionel Barrymore. The new picture came Thursday to the Liberty Theatre.

Mrs. H. R. Rich and son, Joe Elden, of Odessa, visited friends and relatives here the past week.

Mrs. S. C. Sipes had as her guest this week her sister and family of Quanah.

Mary Jackson and Opal Vallie of Rising Star visited friends here Wednesday evening.

F. R. Anderson was a business visitor in Brownwood Monday.

W. S. Ramsey, C. W. Kemper and Ben Atwood were business visitors in Abilene Monday.

Mrs. W. J. Gray and Mrs. S. P. Long visited in Moran Monday.

Our Apologies Please

Due to unforeseen circumstances the serial novel, "There's Only One", which was originally scheduled to begin in the columns of this newspaper the first week in July will be postponed one issue. The initial installment will, therefore, appear in the July ninth issue of the Review.

The popular story by Sophie Kerr was advertised to begin next week, and the Review staff offers its apologies for being unable to carry out these plans, however, such is virtually impossible. So, watch for the first installment of "There's Only One", a story you will like and long remember, in the issue of July ninth.

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER

"So did I!" Vicky said. "Do you mean—" Quentin had clutched her arm; his fingers bit into it like a vise, he was almost shouting. "What do you mean? Isn't he gone?"

"Oh, no; but Quentin, there's no hope," Vicky said. "Master say other doctor come now," the amah said in a singsong. "Yes, come in with me, for God's sake, Hardisty, and see what you think!"

"Then they were in the sickroom, Vicky watching her husband's, rather than the patient's, face, her own face reflecting the fluctuations of feeling she saw there.

"Quentin," the sick man said, clutching at his hand, all personal feeling forgotten in the grips of life and death, "you can do something for me, can't you? For God's sake get me out of this, operate, do anything! That ass there," he whispered, with a flickering glance at that agitated Cudworth, "tells me

"Not quite so good. We won't know quite what chance you're got until we've gone a little farther. Ah, here's our nurse, as fast as you can manage it; we've no time to waste."

Vicky ran downstairs, ran up stairs for sheets; Serena was not in evidence, and nobody asked for her. The nurse suggested a rubber sheet, and Anna pointing in with the big bundle, was sent flying back to the Hardistys' for one. Presently there was nothing for Vicky to do except sit on a chair in the hall and wait—and think—and wait.

Quentin came out with a nurse's white apron tied on him back to front and asked for soda, just plain kitchen soda.

"And you might as well go home, Vic; this'll take it out of you."

"No, I'll wait. Quentin has a chance."

"I'm afraid not, but we'll try. They're putting him under now; we'll know in an hour."

"She couldn't!" Vicky glanced at the closed door of Serena's room. "She wouldn't have done it!" she whispered.

"I don't know. But it's not for him I'm fighting, Vic!" Quentin said. "It's for all of us. It's his touch and go now; if he lives, we live, and if he dies, I may have gotten you into something you'll never get out of, my dear."

"You'll be in it, too!"

"I'll be in it, too. Oh, she couldn't get me in as an accomplice," Quentin said. "But she could do enough to ruin us all. We'd have to go away, Vic."

"We'd go away."

"And the story would follow us, and follow the children. That's all I've done to you!" Quentin said.

"The woman—the amah—has produced a bottle, half full, that would kill ten men. Our one hope is that it was about a ten-times dose, and in ten-minute. Lemon is the only antacid that touches it! If anything saves him, that'll save him—that is, if we get to the kidney in time."

"You will!" Vicky said, with her faithful eyes on his and her world rocking about her and her lips white.

"You believe in God, don't you?" Quentin asked, almost absently.

"I do."

"Then—while I'm in there, you pray, Vic." Vicky kissed her without smiling, without seeming even to see her; released her from his arms. "My God, you are a tower of strength to me," he said. "You are a rock of help! Pray for everything we've got, while I'm in there, the kids and the home—everything I always thought—I always thought," Quentin muttered, turning away, "that I'd like my boys to be proud of their father. My kids."

He went into the sickroom, and Vicky waited. There was a big Spanish chair in the upper hall of the Morrison place, and she sat in it and clasped her hands to keep them still and prayed. A Navajo blanket, richly striped with yellow and black and scarlet, had been hanging over the black iron railing of the stairway; she wrapped it about her; the night was bitterly cold.

CHAPTER XV Silence and night and vigil. Unseen somewhere a clock struck the hours and the half-hours; to wash my hands in the dark a rising wind whiffed anestly, and now and then a brook on branch skittered on a tiling of the roof, in the upper hallways of the Morrison house one lamp burned softly, steadily; from the half-open door that led into Spencer's room came sounds: low voices, the creaking of a bed and the tinkling of ice, and once a sort of bubbling groan that made Vicky's heart stop for a moment in terror.

She prayed, trying not to think, drowsed, awakened with a start to find that it was not all a strange dream. She really was here in the Morrison house in the middle of the night, Quentin was behind that bed room door, bringing all his skill, every ounce of strength and knowledge and inspiration that he could muster to the saving of Spencer Morrison's life, and Serena was in her bedroom only a few feet away somehow living through the hours that would decide whether or not she would be tried on a charge of murder.

What was she doing? Vicky wondered. She had swept away from the group house earlier, had closed her bedroom door upon whatever she was experiencing, suffering. Furious with fear, the accusing eyes of both doctors upon her, their flat refusals to perjure themselves in protecting her still ringing in her astounded ears, and Spencer struggling in death throes of his case, she had angrily withdrawn. Had she flung herself down on her bed and fallen into dreamless sleep, Vic wondered.

"But I'm just magnifying the whole thing into an absolute burlesque!" Victoria told herself. "It won't happen that way! Spencer will die of an operation, Quentin can sign a certificate about that anyway, and Cudworth won't talk, he's got his own professional reputation to protect, he doesn't want to be mixed into any murder trial! She'll go away, and this time next year we'll be worrying about something else!"

She could reassure herself for a moment; then the solitude and silence of the night began to work their spell again, and Victoria felt with a sort of desperation that if Quentin didn't come out of that room pretty soon...

The amah appeared presently, looking like a little old mahogany carving in a black-and-white cotton coat.

"Fix room for nurse," she whispered, and Vicky was glad to go with her to the spare room, help her in the warning human business of making beds and arranging towels. He wasn't dead yet, anyway? Before they had finished, Quentin and Dr. Cudworth joined them.

Quentin looked exhausted; his hair was tumbled, and his operating gown, one of Miss Pierce's aprons put on backward, was spattered with red. He took off the apron, and was in his sleeveless flannel undershirt; with a towel he wiped the perspiration from his ashen face and smiled wearily at his wife.

"Excuse my appearance, Vic," he said, sitting down panting. "My Lord, but that was quick work!"

"How is he?" Vicky asked. "But even before she asked it, the blood had come back to her heart and she had time to feel an almost frightening first ecstasy of hope.

"He's doing remarkable," Dr. Cudworth said. "And he can thank your good husband here. You are, in my opinion, a genius, Dr. Hardisty."

"Oh, Quentin, there isn't really a chance?"

"Magnificent constitution, and his own feeling will help," Quentin still ghastrly pale and breathing hard, said to the other doctor. And then to Vicky, "Everything is as good as it can be; better, I would say. He opened his eyes and looked at me; it didn't take him five minutes to get his bearings."

Vicky sat down in a winged chair and put her hands over her eyes and began to cry, and Quentin, leaning over to pat her on the back laughed with tears in his own eyes.

"I'm ash-shamed of myself!" she stammered, looking up to smile through wet lashes. "But—but it saves us all! It saves us all, Quentin. I've been sitting out there alone, thinking and thinking."

"Did she come out at all?" the local doctor asked in the pause. "Mrs. Morrison?"

"She's probably packing," Quentin said. "I imagine she'll get out right away. It would be the best thing all round if she did."

"Oh, but Quentin, the relief!" Vicky's eyes shone like stars; it was too good to be true, too good to be true! "If you hadn't come back from the hospital," she said with a shudder. "If you'd still been in Germany! Quentin, will there have to be an investigation now, will there be any talk of poison?"

"I don't think so," Quentin said somewhat uncertainly, looking at his colleague. The other doctor repeated the phrase more decidedly. "I'm extremely glad to wash my hands of the whole thing," Dr. Cud-cover that Serena had been reading. "Serena! Spencer's better. They think he will live. Quentin wants to speak to you."

Silence. The room's mistress lay as she might have lain in a moment of sleep. She was lying on her back, her beautiful hair loosened and falling in a cascade over her shoulder, one arm hanging relaxed over the edge of the bed. Vicky's heart suddenly rose into her throat, and she felt her knees weaken.

She dared not turn her back on this room. Instead she backed slowly away, heard the men emerging from Spencer's room; turned to show them an ashen face and clutch at Quentin's arm.

"Oh, Quentin, she's only asleep, I guess, but don't go in there. Don't. She's lying on her bed—she didn't go to bed—I spoke to her and she didn't stir."

"What's the matter, Vicky?" Quentin asked, surprised, weary. "What did she say? Has she faint-ed?"

He went toward Serena's door, Vicky, with a little gasp of fright, followed along beside him. Again she looked at the rosy beauty of Serena's room; the pink lights of delicate pink silk, the litter of beautiful luxurious nothings with which Serena had surrounded her self, a rabbit-skin rug, silver frames and vases, tortoise-shell fittings mounted in gold for the desk at which Serena wrote only late notes.

"Wait a minute!" Quentin said sharply. He went to the bed, touched the figure lying there, gripped the unresponsive shoulder with a big hand and shook it. "Serena!" he said. And then, turning to Vicky and the other doctor, "Look here!"

"What is it?" Cudworth asked, advancing into the room. "Dead!" Quentin said.

"Oh, no, Quentin!" Vicky was clinging to his arm. "Oh, no! Who would do it, who would do it?"

"She's done it herself, eh?" Cudworth asked. He stooped and picked from the floor something that glittered brightly in the soft light. "It did you, my lady?" the old man queried, staring down at the dead woman with a shrewd light in his eyes.

"Suicide," Vicky whispered.

"Killed herself?"

"She thought he was dead, didn't you see?" the other man supplied suddenly. "The Chinese woman had come out of his room. It was while we were all in the hall there, while back, when we all thought that poor Morrison had no chance."

"I thought, from the way you all talk—" Quentin said, "that he was! I was amazed when Amah said he wanted to see me, and originally she must have thought so, poor woman."

An hour later Victoria and Quentin walked across the Morrison side garden, and through the gate into the lane and through their own gate. A perfect spring dawn was strengthening over the world now; it was four o'clock; the east was flushed with exquisite delicate pink, against which shoals and gulches of delicate silver and gray and pebbly gray cloud made long bars.

"I feel—reborn," Vicky said. "Reborn. I'm terribly grateful, Vic, Quentin said."

"Oh, grateful! If you know what I was thinking of all night long! Every horror that anyone can imagine seemed to be sweeping over me. I had you in jail; I had us all moving to some remote place."

"Perhaps you think I didn't, Vic, while we were working over him. Perhaps you think I'd taken my life and destroyed it with my own hands. But thank God it's all over now!"

"Yes, she did it herself," Quentin muttered. "Look there!" Vicky's eyes found the little round violet puncture of the bullet hole in the flawless marble temple. Serena's sleeping face was pale and the once scarlet mouth was placid, but the black and white hair and the beautiful pale gold hair was loosened into a careless cascade that hung in a web over the side of the bed. There was a horrible sprawling relaxation in her position, a dreadful mysterious slowness in the colorless lips that made Vicky tremble.

"Is there anything to do, Quentin?" "Not now." He did not turn from his contemplation of the wreck of what had been so soft, so lovely and alluring and fragrant and warm only a few hours ago. "No, it was instantaneous, Vic," he muttered.

"Killed herself?" "She thought he was dead. You see?" the other man supplied suddenly. "The Chinese woman had come out of his room. It was while we were all in the hall there, while back, when we all thought that poor Morrison had no chance."

"I thought, from the way you all talked," Quentin said, "that he was! I was amazed when Amah said he wanted to see me. And certainly she must have thought so. Poor woman!"

An hour later Victoria and Quentin walked across the Morrison side garden, and through the gate into the lane and through their own gate. A perfect spring dawn was strengthening over the east now; it was four o'clock; the east was flushed with exquisite delicate pink, against which shone and glistened of delicate silver and gray and pale gray cloud made long bars.

"I feel—reborn," Vicky said. "Return. I'm terribly grateful, Vic," Quentin said.

"Oh, grateful! If you know what I was thinking of all night long! Every horror that anyone can imagine seemed to be sweeping over me. I had you in jail; I had you all moving to some remote place."

"Perhaps you think I didn't, Vic, while we were working over him. Perhaps you think I didn't have a chance to think how I'd taken my life and destroyed it with my two hands. But thank God it's all over now!"

County Agent's Column

Hairy Vetch and Misses Yellow and Bur Clover

Two fine members of the Legume family have recently moved into Callahan County and the county agent is hopeful that they will be accorded a most welcome reception especially on the farms that are sandy to mixed soils.

On an inspection trip this week the county agent saw twenty-two acres of hairy vetch in the pecan orchard of Ross Wolfe and found that it had totally covered the land so that neither grass nor weeds had been able to grow in its midst. It was growing on moderately fertile, sandy soil. It came up in September and protected the soils against erosion by both wind and water and has newly seeded itself so that from now on there will be no need for further planting of seed.

There are many species of wild vetch growing in the pastures of Callahan which show that the plant is well adapted to this section. It should be planted in every orchard in Callahan County and it is one of the best of the builders that men may plant on their soil conservation acres. Along with the vetch was growing colonies of bur clover. This little legume has shown itself well adapted to the soils and moisture conditions of Callahan. It is a rich plant for cattle to graze. It will smother out all other vegetation and comes in early in the Spring before all other grasses or weeds have a chance to get started and it provides an abundance of fine grazing, rich in protein.

A chance specimen of annual yellow clover was grown in the flower bed in front of the court house this Spring. This plant is being preserved in the office of the county agent and shows what may be expected from this legume.

Ranchmen and farmers interested in growing a good pasture should, when passing through Clyde, stop at the yellow school sign just west of the Clyde business section and inspect the colony of creeping bur clover growing around and near this school stop. It has smothered out Bermuda grass and has matured millions of seed. A suggestion would be that each person passing that colony rake up a few of these seed and scatter them about his farm or ranch and watch the tremendous growth that this little plant will make. Every person then who owns an orchard should mix these two legumes, hairy vetch especially for the orchard, and plant them this Fall. Seed may be thrown on at the land now and it will come up at the proper time. Samples of all three plants are on exhibition in

JACK HOLT, WHO IS AT LIBERTY TODAY, HAD AN ODD CAREER

Consistently cast in colorful roles—such as the foreign correspondent in "Trouble in Morocco," showing Friday and Saturday at the Liberty Theatre—Jack Holt, star of this newest Columbia comedy-drama of the Foreign Legion, has had a life packed with thrills and tinted with the hues of some of the world's most romantic spots.

In other words, Jack Holt's biographer, when he comes to write the life of this romantic and adventuresome screen player, will not have to grope for drama or gild the life of facts. He will have a world of genuine material from which to draw.

Civil engineer, prospector in the Yukon, fur trapper in the wilderness of Alaska, big game hunter in remote sections of South America, vaquero on the high mesas of Mexico, cow-puncher in America's Northwest and a stunt rider in early pictures—these are just a few of the high spots of Holt's thrill-packed life.

Prune Berries Now

There has been a good berry crop this season and if it is to be repeated another year the proper pruning should be done now. Cut off all old growth that was put up in the early spring last year that bore fruit this year. Leave only the new canes that have grown up this year. These new canes are the ones that will bear the fruit next season. All old growth that is left on the bush becomes a drawback to the plant as it will die this winter and only saps the moisture and plant food for the remainder of the season. Of course, all the weeds and grass should be kept out of the berry patch all summer. Grass in the patch during the fall and winter never do much, if any damage but anything that retards the development of the canes and the subsequent development of reserve plant food in the new plants will hinder the crop the coming year. Plants should not be too close on the land even if kept clean for the best fruit. Thin the plants to, at least, four feet apart in the row.

More Grasshopper Bait Promised

The past week has seen the greatest drive to treat the intruders of grasshoppers ever undertaken in this county. The government furnished a car of bran and 5000 pounds of sodium arsenite that was distributed to those farmers who were troubled with the insect and these farmers in turn have bought additional poison and bran to help in the campaign. The records on file with the county agent show that up until Tuesday morning, June 22, there were 352 sacks of bran distributed to 200 farmers.

C. H. Gable, assistant State Grasshopper Leader, spent Saturday with the county agent and located a surplus car of bran that will be divided 50-50 with Eastland county. This will allow Callahan an additional 200 sacks or 10 tons more bran. Farmers must match the allotment pound for pound, however, and mix the poison in the bran before it is given out from the mixing station at Baird. It is suggested by the government that hulls be used since they are cheaper and do just as well. The Extension Service has found that molasses mixed with the poisoned bran will attract the insects and keep the mash wetter. In the North where much grasshopper work has been carried on it seems that the addition of syrup or other ingredients do not pay but in the South it is hotter and drier, thus a different situation exists. Black strap molasses may be purchased locally for a sufficient supply will now be on hand by the time this reaches the reader that as many pounds may be delivered to each farmer as he is willing to match. A slight mixing charge will be made to defray labor cost and unloading charges but that item is very little compared with the value of the materials obtained.

The reports on file show that 14,000 acres of cotton are being treated and 2,000 acres of feed are being protected or a total of 16,000 acres are being protected by poisoning.

HERE'S WHY FIRESTONE ALWAYS GIVES YOU SO MUCH

More for your Money

Higher Quality Raw Materials! More Efficient Manufacturing! Lower Distribution Cost!

These All Combine to Give You Extra Values at No Extra Cost

FROM the day of its introduction, the Firestone Standard Tire has more than lived up to its name by setting a new high standard of tire values. Hundreds of thousands of car owners have already bought it because they saw in it more value for their money.

"How does Firestone do it? How can they build so many extra value features into Firestone Standard Tires and yet sell them at such low prices?" The answer is simple—Firestone controls better-quality rubber and cotton supplies at their source, keeps manufacturing costs low by efficient factory methods and sells in such huge volume that distribution costs are held to a minimum. That is why Firestone has been able to give you such extra value features as Gum-Dipping, two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread and eight extra pounds of rubber to every 100 pounds of cord, at no extra cost to you.

Make no mistake about this! The Firestone Standard Tire gives you the blowout protection of Firestone's patented Gum-Dipping process. Its scientifically designed tread gives greater non-skid protection and longer wear. And those two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread guard against punctures.

Before you buy ANY tire at ANY price, see today's top tire value—the Firestone Standard Tire. Don't risk your life with thin, worn tires on your Fourth of July trip. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires.

Vol. 28 CROSS PLAINS, TEXAS

55TH PICNIC

Home Town Gossip

There's a new version of the old Cook Robin story in Cross Plains this week. Instead of the former, who killed Cook Robin, it's now, "Who got the post office?" Applicants received their examination grades Tuesday and tension has been running high since. In the meantime, Willis Brown is still the local stamp merchant.

Cross Plains' biggest event of the year—the annual picnic and all settlers reunion—comes off Thursday and Friday of next week. The fireworks are whipping things into shape to make the celebration as attractive as possible in an old year when there are no candidates to poll a political show.

Right here we'd like to put in a plug for Ed Strich, manager of the Valley Shows which are to be here during the picnic. Big Ed is a gentleman of the old school, just one of the finest fellows ever to pilot a carnival troupe down the open road.

Watching him from afar several years ago this columnist saw him approach three penniless kids, who because of lack of funds were not enjoying the picnic. He took them in hand, escorted them to the merry-go-around, ferris wheel, sleds and pony arena and another ride on the ground, letting them stay on each until their youthful hearts were content. Then to the lemonade stand he carried the trio for refreshments to culminate possibly the happiest afternoon the three kids ever experienced.

It was a small thing of course, but it told a beautiful story: one of love, understanding, character and all that's fine and good.

Yes, such a big, honest heart beats in that chubby chest of Ed's and personally we're mighty happy to see him back in the 'ol home town.

If there's a doubt in your mind as to whether or not Cross Plains is the best grain market in this part of Texas, just stroll down by the public weigher's scales and on to the rail road tracks. Enough wheat is being shipped from here to feed the starving Americans a good many months. And incidentally, the highest prices we've heard of anywhere in the world were paid for wheat in Cross Plains this week. This probably sounds like money but just ask buyers in any neighboring town. They'll admit we're correct. Or, better still, dip the markets in your daily paper then investigate the price in Cross Plains. How our local buyers are doing it we don't know, but they're certainly popping the market.

Visitor Here Wins $100 In National Baby Name Contest

A check for $100, for fourth prize in a national contest was received Monday morning by Mrs. Ila Fred, of Anarillo, who is visiting in the home of her sister Mrs. C. D. Hudson.

The contest was sponsored by a soap company and the object was to suggest a prize winning name for a baby. Mrs. Hudson had an abundance of soap wrappers, one of which had to be included with each name; so, she and her sister submitted some thirty or more suggestions, using the names of the various members of their family. For this reason, they did not know yesterday whether the prize belonged to both of them or was one of three individual entries made by Mrs. Post.

First news of the prize came in the form of congratulations from a lady at Breckenridge, however, the same mail brought the $100 prize.

WHEAT BRINGS $1.09 HERE THIS WEEK AS BIGGEST CROP MOVES

Largest grain crop in recent years is moving to market in Cross Plains this week, Public Weigher I. B. Loving announced Thursday morning that 46,075 bushels of wheat had been sold in Cross Plains from the present crop. Indications are that at least half that amount is yet to be marketed.

Top price for the week up to "press time" Thursday was $1.09 for wheat. The market, however, was reported slightly lower. Grain marketed in Cross Plains this season has brought consistently one and two cents more per bushel than in neighboring cities, according to farmers, buyers and Western Union quotations.

Deposits in the Citizens State Bank here continue to show effects of the bumper grain crop selling at a better than average price. C. C. Noel, cashier, said yesterday that each day brings a new high for the bank's deposits. They are now around $150,000.00, several thousand more than any time before in the institution's history.

Cross Plains buyers are pulling grain from as far as 25 miles in all directions. Several truckloads were bought from a Moran farmer here early in the week.

DISTRICT MANAGER FOR W.T.U. EXPIRES

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mitchell and daughter Patsy Ruth returned late last week from San Antonio, where they attended the funeral of P. P. Sheppard, 62, district manager for the West Texas Utilities Company, who died after a stroke of paralysis.

Mr. Sheppard had been in ill health since suffering a stroke the past fall while attending a football game in Cross Plains. He had never regained his health and while his death was sudden it was not entirely unexpected. He had been with the West Texas Utilities Company since 1918—the year it was formed. He was for several years manager of the Stamford district, but was moved to Cross Plains when the removal of P. W. Campbell to Abilene about seven years ago. He was a frequent visitor in Cross Plains and had many friends here.
