saddest news that has come from Cross Plains a long time in last week's Review, sat down to lunch mother me the paper and as she asked me if I had known the lady by the name of Coppinger in Cross Plains, I sure very well.

said, "Well she is dead."

As the paper read the account death and friends, as I read mind ran back to along in when I was Ford dealer, at the building where Garrett Co., now is, and I could see setting at the typewriter out the letters as she work.

Driving her little Ford from her home at Cottonwood ways came in smiling rain.

was always cheerful, I know times she didn't feel her best smiled just the same.

finished reading of Maymie's looked up at the top of the and there I read of the pass- a man whom I believe was the best friends I ever had, first moved to Cross Plains. I met Taylor and Fos in the bank as they loaned me along to operate my business with. But it was before I met Broad, and bustle and bustle of the oil days of the Pioneer boom I got very well acquainted for several years.

few years I lived there I got ting him better and better, more I knew him the more him. I used to go over to and chat with him almost. I learned a lot from his philosophy. I have gone his home and visited him times. I loved to talk with him, he was jolly, full of life and had a sincerity that of us have these days.

I go back to Cross Plains me (which I hope to do) Broad—Brod and Maymie er, and so will Cross Plains such wonderful characters as thick as we wish they. But can't you imagine Brod ymie getting over yonder etting Uncle George Klutz, eeb, Glenn Adams, Griff es, Clarence Ramsey, George and other of Cross Plains, zans, who have passed on. ou know they are having a if they have all met up. ead and Maymie will live on in the hearts of those who em.

Fifteen Escape Injury In Bus Collision

PIONEER F. F. A. BOYS ESCAPE INJURY WHEN SEDAN STRIKES BUS

Fifteen passengers of a Pioneer school bus sustained only minor scratches Sunday morning when the vehicle was struck by a light sedan one half mile west of Palo Pinto. Three of the four occupants of the car were carried to a hospital for emergency treatment.

The bus, carrying eleven Pioneer F.F.A. boys and four instructors from the school, was en-route from the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show in Fort Worth.

The bus was negotiating a hill in second gear, when the other car came over the hill on the wrong side of the road. Driver of the bus, after ascertaining that the car was not going to take the right side of the highway, attempted to avoid a collision by swerving to the left. The car struck the bus on the right side, just in front of the door. Both vehicles were badly damaged.

ONCE LOCAL WOMAN EXPIRES AT GORMAN FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Funeral services for Mrs. J. E. McGlothlin, 56, former Cross Plains resident, who died in a Gorman hospital Friday, were conducted from the Rising Star church of Church of Christ Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. McGlothlin suffered an attack of appendicitis late in February, and, however, a heart complication caused physicians to decline an operation. She was carried to a Rising Star hospital where she remained until Monday of last week, when she was removed to Gorman. Her condition grew steadily worse and she expired Friday afternoon, March 12, at two thirty.

Survivors include the husband and four children: Cecil McGlothlin, of Bryan; Mrs. Fay Parnell, of Albany; and Hershel and Loua Ray of Rising Star; also her brother, two sisters and two step-children.

Mr. and Mrs. McGlothlin moved from Cross Plains to Rising Star in 1932.

PAYS TO KNOW EVEN IF YOU'RE NOT IRISH

Sheriff Michael Breen, of Joliet, Ill., shamrock, clay pipe and all, stepped into the bullpen of Will County jail Wednesday and asked:

"How many of you men are Irish?"

Six prisoners stepped forward. The sheriff asked:

"And do you know what day it is?"

One prisoner said:

"Wednesday."

The others chorused:

"St. Patrick's Day."

Said the sheriff:

"You five may go free."

After the five left (the flow who said Wednesday stayed) the sheriff asked the jailer:

"What were those men's names?"

The jailer answered:

"Schmidt, Cohen, Ozajowski, Guiseppio and Lopez."

The man who stayed?

His name is O'Brien.

JOEL M'CREA IS IDEALLY CAST IN 'BANJO ON MY KNEE'

A newspaper story written by dyed-in-the-hat newspaper people may account for the fact that "Labeled Lady," which comes Sunday and Monday to the Liberty Theatre, is an entirely new angle on the profession of journalism. A comedy, it deals with the gargantuan efforts of a metropolitan newspaper to block a law suit.

Most star-studded production since "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight," its cast is headed by Jenn Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy and Spencer Tracy.

The original story was written into an 88-page manuscript by Wallace Sullivan, Chicago newspaper featured writer until he went to Hollywood to write for the screen. It was adapted to the screen by Maurine Watkins, long a star reporter on the Chicago Tribune who came to fame and Hollywood after writing the play, "Chicago"; and Howard Emmett Rogers and George Oppenheimer, veteran scenarists.

Situations and characters which only a reporter would be likely to know, animate the sprightly story of an heiress who brings suit against a great newspaper and one-time reporter who is rehired by his paper to defeat her.

These are the roles played by Miss Loy and William Powell, Miss Harlow and Tracy play an affianced couple who sacrifice their romance for a time, to the good of the cause.

The largest newspaper city room yet attempted by motion pictures took its place among the Culver City settings comprising the background of "Labeled Lady."

CHURCH TO BE HOST FOR QUARTERLY MEET

Regular quarterly conference of the Pioneer circuit will be held at the Victoria Methodist church Sunday, when Presiding Elder J. B. Curry visits the church. He will deliver a sermon at the 11 o'clock preaching hour, luncheon will be served at the church at noon, and conference will be held in the afternoon.

Rev. R. M. Burton, pastor of the Pioneer circuit, will fill the pulpit at the Pioneer church Sunday morning, however, he will dismiss in time to be at Victoria for lunch. He urged that members from other churches in the circuits make special plans to visit the Victoria church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Westerman visited their daughter in Brownwood Sunday.

DEBATE TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD HERE SATURDAY MORNING

Although Callahan county track and field meet is not officially docketed until next week-end, first round eliminations will get underway here Saturday morning at nine o'clock when the debate tournament is to be held in Cross Plains high school auditorium. Simultaneously tennis, volley ball and playground ball eliminations will be held in other parts of the county.

A high spot of this week-end's schedule at the local high school will be Sunday afternoon at two-thirty when choral singing contests are to be held. No data was available yesterday as to how many choirs would be entered, however, the Review was assured that some splendid singing would be offered and that the entire public is invited to be present.

The track meet proper will get underway here Friday morning, March 26, with a number of literary events scheduled at that time. All athletic events will be held Saturday, March 27, at the track which has been constructed just North of the cemetery.

Presentation of awards will take place Saturday night in Cross Plains high school auditorium.

Ten teams are entered in the two divisions of the debate tournament Saturday morning; this includes girls divisions, Putnam, Cross Plains, Clyde, Oplin and Baird. In the boys division are, Baird, Oplin, Clyde, Cross Plains and Putnam.

LITTLE AND PLACKE MAKE CITY TICKET

A petition nominating T. D. Little for reelection to the city council was filed yesterday with J. C. Chapman, City clerk. The name of Lewis Placke had previously been submitted.

Unless there are additional nominations Little and Placke will be opposed for the two council places in the election to be held April sixth.

County Agent's Column

Ravens, Rabbits, Devastation

Probably the most devastating menace on the farms of Texas today other than soil erosion is that carried on by rabbits and ravens. Even if our soils are protected and water conserved to the extent that beautiful crops may be grown it matters but little if they are then to succumb to the rabbit or the raven.

In making provisions to protect our wild life we will continually be handicapped especially with those birds that nest high in the trees as long as the raven is left to rob the nests. Farmers in Calhoun County are signing a petition which will be submitted to the State Legislature in hopes of drawing to their attention the ever increasing devastation caused by the rabbit and the raven. It is almost impossible to grow velvet beans, Austrian winter peas, soy beans and English peas because of the cotton-tails and jack-rabbits. Farmers report that one jack-rabbit can cut down, at least, 300 feet of either of the above mentioned crops in one night and not only can do it but do that very thing. The Farm and Ranch of this week has a very good article along this same line.

Two weeks ago the county agent mailed out to all surrounding counties a type of petition that is being circulated in Calhoun County to the various county agents asking their cooperation in calling the attention of the legislature to the problem. No one county can cope with the situation. Ravens pay no attention to county lines, neither do rabbits. Rabbit drives are only of local importance. They migrate quickly. Let's all write our lawmakers in order that they may appreciate the menace and take such appropriate measures as would be commensurate with the problem.

CHARLEY BARR HAS GOVERNMENT JACK

Charley Barr of Cross Plains extended to the county agent an invitation to visit his farm and inspect a fine government jack that was provided from the racing funds last year. Although Mr. Barr received the jack late in the year he obtained services on 31 mares. There are now some 5 colts that are good ones from his matings. He has made 12 services this year and expects the total to run somewhere past the 150 mark before the year has closed.

Mr. Barr has a very good stallion which is the same age as the jack, both being eight years old. He reports that colts from the stallion are especially good and every owner is proud of the service. Mr. Barr is especially well equipped to handle such needed business for farmers of our county and is to be commended in his work. He has good service lots, is well located near the highway and has adequate traps to hold the mares over if necessary. In addition Mr. Barr is enthusiastic in his work and is an old timer in horse and mule production.

Tractors are finding more and more a place on the Texas farm but will never be able to do all the work required of horses and mules. A good horse or a good mule today pays its owner a very neat income and should be found on any farm where livestock production is carried on. A $150 mule can be grown on about the same feed as two steer calves and the price is slightly in favor of the mule and takes far less attention.

1937 Sign Up Is In Full Swing

Farmers who plan to enter the farm or ranch program are asked to come into the office at their earliest convenience and sign the work sheet for 1937. Records are on file in the office on most every farm which has grown cotton, peanuts, corn, and wheat during the past four years, therefore, if the farmer will supply the production history for the past year, 1936, it is but a simple matter to get the work sheet in good shape now. Every farmer is urged to sign a work sheet on his farm even though he should later find that he was not able to fully cooperate because the signing of the work sheet places one in the same position as one having an insurance policy—if you need it you have it—but if you do not have it no matter how badly you need it you can't get it if you wait until the closing of the program has come.

There are many benefits to the 1937 program that were not available for the 1936 plan. For instance, all pasture land in excess of 1/2 of the cultivated acreage will set up an allowance for the farm of 50 cents for each such acre and may be gained by terracing, contouring the fields, or contouring the pastures. Also one dollar per acre will be granted to each farm for all acre of commercial orchard that was on the land on January 1, 1937; also one dollar for each acre

'KNOCK-KONCK'S HELP BAXTER TO STARDOM

"Knock, knock," is an old old game to Warner Baxter. He played it years ago—and for money.

The famous Twentieth Century-Fox star, who appears with June Lang in "White Hunter," now showing at the Liberty Theatre, had, however, his own variation of "knock, knock."

"I would go up to a door," said Warner, "and go knock-knock with my knuckles. If I talked fast and convincingly I came away with a life insurance policy signed on the dotted line. If I didn't—well, I learned that I still had not achieved the infallible approach and I would continue the knock-knock game at the next house."

"Occasionally my prospective customers would try to inveigle me into playing a game of their own which I called bow-bow. The game started when I encountered a would-be customer who did not believe in insurance under any conditions and who owned dogs."

"Seriously, though," Baxter added, "the experience I gained when I sold insurance policies as a young man, just out of school, taught me a lot about human nature that has since been of tremendous help to me in my screen work. An actor isn't an actor and cannot portray character convincingly until he knows people—all kinds of people, and the easiest way to know them is to try to sell them something."

which was planted to any of the vegetables or truck crops in 1937, which includes principally watermelons, cantaloupes, tomatoes, sweet and Irish potatoes and turnips. The orchard land contains those in nut trees, fruits of all sorts, berries and vineyards.

Sudan grass will be counted a soil conserving crop and may be grazed. It cannot be cut for hay or cut for seed as was done last year but it may be left entirely on the land and secure both Class I and Class II payments.

Some farmers misunderstood certain sections of the 1936 plan which will be in force again in 1937, and the county agent hopes that these misunderstandings will be cleared up in the mind of every farmer because any man is disappointed if he plants a certain acreage to soil conserving crops with the understanding that it will pay a certain price and then later finds he has failed in some way to gain the benefits.

On figuring the benefits on the soil conserving checks that have recently been distributed in the county the county agent has found that many farmers made the proper number of acre diversions but failed to take the proper amount of those acres from each respective crop. For instance, all grants were based on the proposition that cotton bases in 1936, must be diverted, at least, 20 per cent and not more than 35 per cent, and that the general base crops must be diverted not more nor less than 15 per cent of such acreage in excess of the feed needs for the farm. Some farmers cut 50 per cent of their cotton base but were allowed only 35 per cent for payment then the amount that should have been diverted from the feed base was not diverted but actually the feed bases were overplanted. In that case the farmer lost heavily from having cut too much from his cotton base and not enough from the general base. The county committee realized that many farmers had done that but were powerless to change it because the entire state was given a quota from the national allowance of the 440 million dollars appropriated by the Congress of 1936.

No such misunderstandings will come if the farmer will sit down with the county agent or any of his assistants and work out his acreage with him and then abide by the plan. This is simply the same kind of a proposition that works in every kind of human behavior—to get the most from it a strict adherence must be observed. Farmers who knew their exact acreage when they signed the work sheet and planted their crops in accordance with the plans outlined through the county agent last year are receiving the maximum of benefits and those who failed to do so have found they have received a penalty.

When farmers can receive a cash benefit by growing sudan or peas in addition to receiving the crop either in the form of grazing or returning it to their own soils for future profits surely they can afford to be partners with the government in such a cooperative program.

CHAPTER III

SYNOPSIS
 CHAPTER I—Victoria Herrenden, a vivacious little girl, had that came when her father, Keith Herrenden, lost his fortune, gentle, unobtrusive soul, he is employed as an obscure chemist in San Francisco, at a meager salary. His wife, Magda, cannot just herself to the change. She is a beautiful woman, fond of pleasure and a magnet for men's attention. Magda and Victoria have gone down at a summer resort and she joins them for the week-end. Magda leaves for a bridge party, using herself for being such a "nobody." Later that night Victoria is grief-stricken when she sees her parents quarrelling. The Herrendens return to their small San Francisco apartment. Keith is not approve of Magda's mad life and they quarrel frequently.

This is my little girl, Mr. Manners. Come, it was to be Ferdinand! Victoria said, his voice and accent betraying the Latin. "It was not," Magda countered softly, smiling. She was in some soft and cool and pale blue; had time to dress, time to go to shades and set the flowers at advantageously. "Are you going up to Heeln's?" Victoria was presently asking. He paid attention to Victoria. Magda looked at her head. "You're not?" she demanded surprised. "My little spare tire," Victoria's mother said, her arm about her. "But good gracious, take her! She's girl must be about her age."

"No," Magda said, gently shaking her head. "Not just now, anyway. But it must be lovely up there. I've never been there, you know. Phyllis was telling me of a place—the Braverman place on the water—" "But that's just the place I am going to buy!" Ferdinand Manners exclaimed. When Magda presently came out of the room to bring him a Spanish shawl, he asked Victoria if she knew that she had a beautiful mother. He bent his head over the shawl. "Yes, it is a fine shawl," he said. "It does the man offer you?" Victoria was shocked. Was she going to sell the famous old shawl? She saw that her mother wanted her to know. "It offers me three hundred—three hundred dollars. It's edged with fur and wrapped. They'll take all this. Magda ran her fine thin hand through creamy silk fringes so that they looked like cotton. A week later Victoria brought a great box just delivered from Marsh's; the shawl was inside and been changed into a sumptuous evening wrap with a border all day about it of soft white fur. This gift her mother did not like. She put it away in the trunk that always stood in the room; there was a small closet in the apartment.

At the same week, on another sultry night, Keith Herrenden came in looking tired and pale. At a'clock, apparently more than half-worn by the burden of the day, he sank into the chair in the sitting room that was the dining room, where Victoria was already settling the table. "I brought you a little present," he said, his face suddenly lit with a smile. "It's not much, but—" "What?" "An Emporium box; a white jacket, unlined, with a smart blue stripe about the collar cuffs. The tag was still on it. He explained that she was free to change it if she liked. Victoria sent a quick apprehensive glance toward her mother. The jacket had cost thousands of dollars, but the rest of the great crate of flowers, fresh flowers were everywhere deep in her mother's trunk was a beautiful shawl with its new color of pure white ermine.

Keith Herrenden stood fingering the jacket. The staring "$3.95" tag was in her hand, as the shawl had been a few days sweet, Keith," she said, her tone low. But it was a minute she was crying bitterly, senselessly, at the window, with her shoulders to the room. "I mind me," she said thickly, "crazy. Don't pay any attention to me!" "I'll be damned if I understand sometimes, Magda," Keith said.

It was on this night that there was the first talk of sending Victoria to a boarding school. Victoria rose on a bound of joy at the thought.

This seemed to be a time of thrilling plans. It appeared almost immediately that she and her mother were going up to Tahoe to visit Anna Brock. Mrs. Brock was an old friend who had a daughter Catherine; Victoria and Catherine had known each other, not very intimately, all their lives. They had always rather shyly liked each other.

"Dad, will you be up at all week ends?" "That's a pretty expensive trip, Vic."

"But once? If we can afford to stay there, surely you can afford to come up once?" "I'll try."

"It isn't going to cost us very much," said her mother. "The cottage belongs to Anna's sister, and our food won't be much."

"Oh, are we sort of boarding, Mother?" "Something like that."

Keith Herrenden, putting them on the train, gave Victoria a little box in parting.

"That belonged to my mother, and her mother before her—you've seen it, the pearl and onyx set. I want you to have it."

Victoria clung to him. "Dad, you're not going to have much fun. I wish you were going!" And she called back to him over her shoulder: "I'll write you—I love you!"

For the first day or two Mrs. Brock and Magda talked together confidentially and inexhaustibly. Catherine and Victoria did not care, for they were embarked upon the most enchanting adventure of their lives. All day long, and far into the beautiful summer nights, the two girls talked and laughed, swam and cooked and walked together, giggled their way through adventures that supplied them with endless material for laughter and reminiscence.

The little cabin was on the east side of the lake. It was so small that the happy party had the feeling of living out of doors.

A mile or two to the west was the hotel, in a settlement of informally grouped lake homes; the Brock place was all by itself, with a little triangular sandy beach of its own. Anna and Magda and the two girls concocted for themselves the sort of meals that women love in summer: salads, bowls of berries, boxed cookies, fruits.

Victoria's beautiful mother had for a friend one of the homeliest of women. But Anna Brock had an odd abrupt charm of her own, and she was extremely brilliant. She spoke French and German, and in September she was going to New York to teach Latin in a boy's school. And then Catherine—joy of joy!—would be placed with Victoria in the San Rafael boarding school. They would still be together!

"Mother, how can we afford that?" Victoria asked one day.

Magda and her daughter had swum out through the shallow clear water to a great rock and were basking on it.

"This is a good chance to talk to you, Vic, without Anna or Kitty's hearing," Magda said, by way of reply, after a moment's hesitation.

"Vic, I don't want you to feel badly about this," her mother presently began. "I'm getting a divorce from Dad. We're in Nevada—did you realize that? Aunt Anna's cabin is well over the line and on that day when we took a long drive we went to Reno and arranged it."

"My darling, of course. And he'll come to see you at school, take you out to movies! Why, I'm writing him today, and I'll put your love in."

It seemed less strange the next day: Dad and Mother separating. Still Victoria tried to adjust her thoughts to all the amazing angles of this new turn of affairs, thought that she would go and see Dad often, too, if she could get away from school. And perhaps next year he and she would have their little dream house on the shore for a few weeks, and cook waffles and scrambled eggs.

This was late August. It was in early October that Victoria, slim and busy and happy in the dark blue Dominican uniform, with the dazzling collar of her bluejacket's blouse turned back at the neck, and the pale blue scarf that marked her as a freshman blowing in the autumn wind, was stopped as she was racing in Catherine's wake across the school playground. "Letter for you, Victoria," said Sister Beata, extending it in a clean cool hand.

"Oh, thank you, sister," Victoria gasped, seizing it. It was from her mother, who was down in Santa Barbara with the Arnolds. It told and Ferdinand Ainsa y Castello Manners, "for you may as well have his whole name, my darling, although I've only got the first and the last on my new cards," had been married that day at noon.

Her father came to see her now and then, on Sundays. They were oddly silent, oddly ill at ease with each other.

Victoria saw her stepfather only in flying glimpses for the remainder of her school life. He and her mother were at the big Manners cattle ranch down in the Argentine for two years, and when they came back Victoria was preparing for a second trip to Europe. Mother Raymond had written to her mother about leaving her in the school there for the final year of French and music and culture generally and Victoria had only one real visit with her mother before it was time to go.

Ferdinand Manners had leased the big Chalmers place in Burlington; Magda was back among her friends again and giddy with happiness and triumph.

Victoria spent a somewhat bewildered yet happy Easter vacation there, exploring all the garden paths and all the big rooms.

She came back to California at another Easter time, eighteen years old, and ready to graduate with her class. Her mother met her in New York, and they made the transcontinental trip together.

Ten weeks later Victoria's hand some bags were packed again, and she went down to the Chalmers place for the summer.

The beautiful Chalmers house was open to summer breezes and filled with summer flowers; the Chinese butler, discreet in his purple and blue silks, motioned her upstairs. Another Oriental took her bags; her mother's maid, in her mother's maid, who had crossed the continent with them a few weeks before met her at the top of the stairs. Vic asked to see her mother.

Magda was in her magnificent bedroom, a large airy apartment flanked by an enormous bath, by a complete dressing room, by an aving-lunged upper balcony.

Victoria found her mother stretched on a couch by a window; she was not reading the magazine she held, and her eyes were absent tears. At the sight of the girl she began to cry again, and they clasped each other closely.

"My darling, you're home at last,

If you knew—if you knew how I've wanted you!" Magda sobbed. She instantly regained control of herself and smiled with trembling lips, straightening the collar of Victoria's blouse as the girl knelt beside her. "Was it all wonderful?" she said. "It was perfect. And at the end we all cried because we weren't all going to be back in September!" Victoria laughed. "But, Mother dearest, you're not well?"

"I've been feeling—wretchedly. Something," Mrs. Manners said hesitantly—"something rather horrid happened last night, and Ferd was arrested." Her eyes filled again, she straightened the collar again. "It was all rather horrid, and it'll all be forgotten this time next week," she said cheerfully. "So let's not talk about it!"

"Arrested!" Victoria echoed, aghast. "Why—what happened?"

"There was an accident. I don't know just what happened," Magda said, her eyes watering. "It was all so horrible! He had been drinking, of course, and he was driving May Fince home—they were both in the car asleep, right near where the smash was."

"Who were?"

"If it had been anyone but May" Magda sighed. "However, they say the poor fellow'll get well, and Ferd can stand the damages. He was all smashed up, the man they ran into, and it's a miracle they weren't all killed! But if he'd been with anyone but May!" "Who's she?"

SERVICE AND SAFETY

Most men and women measure the worth of a bank, not by intangible values, but by specific instances of assistance given and services rendered.

Because of this, we measure our bank, not alone by abstract aims and ideals, but by its usefulness, day in and day out, to customers and to the community as a whole.
