Final Speech By Last President Of Republic Of Texas Is Uncovered

The speech of Anson Jones, third and last president of the Republic of Texas, made on the occasion of the change from a Republic to a State of the Union, was discovered by Rep. H. Grady Perry recently in Austin. It was in its original form, written in long hand and thanks are due him for the typed manuscript of an important and interesting document.

Gentlemen of the Senate and of the House of Representatives: The great measure of annexation, so earnestly desired by the people of Texas is happily consummated. The present occasion, so full of interest to us, and to all the people of this country is an earnest of that consummation; and I am happy to greet you as their chosen representative, and tender to you any cordial congratulation on an event the most extraordinary in the annals of the world, and one which marks a bright triumph in the history of republican institutions. A government is changed both in its offices and its organic law—not by violence and disorder, but by the deliberate and free consent of its citizens; and amid the most perfect and universal peace and tranquility, the sovereignty of the nation is surrendered, and included with that of another.

There is no precedent for this and hence forward "Annexation" is a word of new import in the political vocabulary of America, to form a subject for the speculation of the Statesman and the intellectual labors of the Sage. Nations have generally extended their dominions by conquest; their march to power involving bloodshed and ruin and their attainment of it often followed by suffering and calamity to a despairing and subjugated people. It was left for the Anglo-American inhabitants of the Western Continent to furnish a new mode of enlarging the bounds of empire by the more natural tendency of their free government. Whatever objections may have heretofore urged to the territorial enlargement of the Union, those objections must now be regarded as overruled and as being without practical effect. Annexation is the natural consequence resulting from congenial impulses and sympathies; and the operation and influence of like sympathies and impulses is destined as soon as can be important or necessary to settle all conflicts in relation to the claim of the United States to any territory now is despoite on this continent.

In accordance with the provisions of the new constitution adopted in the Convention called by me on the Fourth of July last, a State government is now perfectly and fully organized and I as President of the Republic, with my officers, am now present to surrender into the hands of those whom the people have chosen, the power and the authority which we have some time held. This surrender is made with the most perfect cheerfulness, and in respectful submission to the public will. For my individual part I beg leave further to add that the only motive which has heretofore actuated me in consenting to hold high and responsible office in this adopted and beloved country, has been to aid by the best exertions of such abilities as I possessed, in extricating her from her difficulties, and to place her in some safe and secure condition where she might be relieved from the long pressure of the past and repose from the tolls, the sufferings, and threatened dangers which have surrounded her. I have considered annexation on favorable terms as the most secure and advantageous measure for Texas and as affording the best prospect for the attainment of the objective I had in view, and have accordingly in definite capacities labored most assiduously to open the door in the United States to its accomplishments. In this I succeeded. I sincerely wish the terms could have been made more advantageous, more definite, and less fraught with subjects of future dispute; but as they proved entirely acceptable to a vast majority of my fellow citizens, I felt it to be my imperative duty, so soon as that fact was known, faithfully and promptly, to carry into full effect the will and the wishes of the people. Texas Poll Shows People Want No New Taxes Levied

By Joe Belden
AUSTIN, Texas, May 21.—If the Texas Legislature winds up its session without new taxes, after having approved more spending than ever before, some members may look upon this as a feat of financial wizardry. But not "the folks' back home." They expect it.

For here is what a statewide survey just completed by The Texas Poll shows:
1. Six out of every ten adults believe present taxes bring in enough money to pay for everything that is needed.

2. At the same time, six out of every ten say there is need for spending more money—for schools, roads, old-age pensions, hospitals for the insane, health, and a number of other things.

3. As for saving money, only a small minority can advise state officials how to do that.
"Thanks to a surplus of funds that has been built up in recent years, the Legislature may be able to satisfy public demands without levying new taxes. At least that seems to be the goal of leaders in the legislative saddle. The next few days may tell whether or not they succeed."

4. "Suppose you were a member of the Legislature and you found it necessary to raise more money for the government. What types of taxes would you be inclined to vote for?"
Wouldn't vote for any type .. 8%
Don't know any types .. 39%
Mentioned one or more types of taxes .. 53%

The top economy suggestion, made by 3 per cent of the adults questioned, is to reduce personnel. These people said too many persons are on the government payroll who don't earn their salaries. Another two per cent felt that old-age pensions and other welfare expenses could be reduced. Other suggestions, each offered by at least one per cent of the persons interviewed, were "cut out or reduce overlapping boards and bureaus," "cut out waste," "get rid of old-age pension investigators," "reduce business regulation," and "stop spending so much on roads and parks."

In answer to the second question, 29 per cent said more money should be spent on education. More should be spent on roads, said 18 per cent; more on old-age pensions, 7 per cent; hospitals for insane, 4 per cent; health, 3 per cent; relief to the poor and handicapped, 3 per cent; veterans bonus, 2 per cent; housing, 1 per cent; and miscellaneous other things, six per cent.

If it became necessary to raise more money, the taxes on natural resources should be increased, said 16 per cent of the adults interviewed. Other taxes favored were liquor, beer and wine, by 9 per cent; luxuries and amusements, by 7 per cent; sales tax, by 7 per cent; corporation tax, by 4 per cent; gasoline tax, by 3 per cent; cigarette tax, by 3 per cent; and income tax, by 3 per cent.

Miscellaneous other types of taxes were proposed by 8 per cent. A number of these said various forms of gambling, especially betting on horse races, should be legalized and taxed. Most Texans, however, would probably disapprove of this. In a recent survey, 53 per cent of a cross section of adults said they would vote against a bill making it legal to bet on horse races.

WET FIELDS DELAY PEANUT GROWTH AND PLANTING

Wet fields delayed peanut planting in most southwest producing areas during the past week, reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration.

Many poor stands of new crop peanuts were reported in South Texas, as wet weather affected growth. Farmers in the northern part of the state were ready to resume planting when weather conditions became favorable.

Shelled peanuts weakened slightly this week under slow demand. Occasional sales of shelled No. 1 Spanish peanuts were reported at 17 cents per pound. Prises eased about one-quarter of a cent from a month earlier, but remained in line with this time last year.

The Commodity Credit Corporation continued to sell stocks for crushing. As a result, some peanut meal and oil were available. Peanut meal of 41 per cent protein content stood at $53 per ton, f.o.b., about $22 to $25 per ton lower than a year before.

Peanut oil was quoted around 12 cents per pound for prime crude of 5 per cent refining loss. This week's price fell 7 to 8 cents a pound below last year's quotations.

the most primitive methods. Some of them heated huge rocks which they pushed into the holes until they cooled and then hauled them out with the melted gravel. This was a long and tedious project at best.

The start of aviation in the territory can be easily traced to an itinerant school teacher named Ben Elelson who came to Fairbanks in 1922. He had been in the air corps during the previous war and had gotten his pilots commission a few months before the armistice. In 1922 he convinced the businessmen of the town of the practicability of flying and they bought a plane. On February 21, 1924, Elelson made the first commercial flight with mail and goods to the town of McGrath. Within the next few years several companies bought planes and began flying mail and passengers to almost every point in the territory. Among these pilots who are well known today were Noel Wien, Joe Samson, Joe Crossen, and A. A. Bennett. During this period every rule in the book of flying was abused and disapproved by these handy men who seemingly could "put a propeller on a box and make it fly".

Ben Elelson re-entered the army and acted as a pilot for the Stefansson polar expedition in 1926. In 1928 he joined Wilkins and made the first flight across the top of the world into Norway. He was a true pioneer of arctic flying. In 1929, when he was only 32 years of age and already a colonel, he was called to the territory to help in a rescue mission to a stranded Russian ship in the Bering Sea. He took off for his search in a blinding storm and was not heard of for three weeks until his wrecked plane and frozen body were discovered.

Another of the early fliers, Joe Crosson, who also participated in this mission, and was equally famous as a rescue flier. In 1933 he was the last man to see Will Rogers and Wiley Post alive as he saw them take off from the bank of the Chena. A few days later he was summoned to fly their bodies from Point Barrow to the States. This flight gained him nationwide recognition.

made their first flight in the territory and started a service that has grown with the years.

During the thirties the town began to build up and modernize. In the summers of 1937 and 1938 almost 100 new homes were built, and in 1939 many buildings of size were being constructed. Among these were the Lacy Street Theatre, the Lathrop Building, school addition, and new University building, and several churches. A sewer system, water mains, street paving, and other modernization projects were under way. By that time Ladd Field had been approved and ten million dollars had been appropriated for its building.

Also in 1939 came a boom to the isolated prospector in the form of a radio station, KPAR, which was built by Captain A. E. Lathrop. The radio has improved the lot of the prospector immensely by providing the bulk of his diversion and entertainment during the long months of isolation.

World War II affected Fairbanks drastically as it did most all communities. Of course the town had its share of young men who served, but the main effect was from the influx of people and business from the nearby military installations.

Ladd Air Force Base was started in 1940 as a center for cold weather testing operations. When the war in the Pacific started and the Japanese began to advance toward Alaska, the field was enlarged and strengthened as a defense measure. Later in the conflict it and neighboring air fields were used as transfer points for planes being ferried to Russia. The U. S. Air Force would bring them to Fairbanks where Russian crews would take over and pilot them the rest of the way.

All of this meant more jobs for civilians in the town and more for the merchants. Many families came in connection with the construction and operation of the field and stayed in the territory after the war. Many other servicemen who were stationed here liked the town and have returned as civilians.

This improvement is by no means over as yet and with millions of dollars being appropriated every year for construction in the area, the present looks secure for the town.

During the war the mining interests were forced to halt their operations completely. Not only were they short of personnel, but equipment was impossible to get, and that they were using was confiscated by the army to build roads.

Since the war the mining has reopened and bids well for the future. The boom of business and high wages do not seem to be over or near an end.

This seems to be the story of Fairbanks as I see it. The main question now is what the future will bring. In gold mining, which has always been the mainstay of the town, the present deposits are estimated to last 25 more years at the present rate and some are being opened every year. Other minerals are also being developed and should boost industry even more. One of the most important of these is the oil deposits which are being investigated to the north of here. If they are ever opened the town will be vitally affected. Alaska's first oil refinery was placed in operation in 1912; the last burned down in 1933 after a number of years production of excellent gasoline and distillate. The areas other than the Naval Petroleum Exploration on the Arctic slope near Point Barrow known to contain oil, but from which there has been no commercial production are Yakataga, Lower Cook Inlet, Cold Bay and Arctic Coast and future studies may reveal that Alaska's reserves of oil shale are among the worlds largest. Samples from some of these known deposits have yielded as high as 122 gallons of crude oil per ton. The wells from which the company obtained its oil were relatively shallow, few of them being more than 1000 feet deep and none more than 2000 feet. Products of the refinery gasoline and distillate were of especially high quality and found a ready market, particularly by the fishing fleets.

IS There A Carpenter In The House?

If the man of the house is handy with carpenter tools, he can do much to improve an old, inconvenient kitchen.

Mrs. Bernice Claytor, extension home management specialist of Texas A&M College, says that often an improvement in storage facilities and work space of an old kitchen is just a matter of simple carpentry, requiring tools and materials familiar to a farm carpenter.

"Whether remodeling or building, she says, 'plan on cabinets for food preparation utensils, materials and serving. Storage space for work clothes and cleaning supplies helps greatly in keeping the house more orderly.'

Cabinet units can be grouped or built individually between doors and windows that so often break up wall space in an old fashioned kitchen. The most difficult construction program in good cabinets may be the drawers; if the farm shop does not have a routing plane for cutting grooves for the drawers, Mrs. Claytor suggests that this work usually can be done at a local lumber yard.

"Sliding trays are more convenient for base cabinets than shelves," she says. "Such trays will save a great deal of tire-some stooping and reaching to the back of a space nearly two feet deep. Adjustable shelves are most economical if cabinets are to be of the service we expect them to be." Many families in Texas have the problem of remodeling old farm-houses, but the large number of new homes which are being built means that great deal of thought needs to be given to the planning for new kitchens, too, Mrs. Claytor concludes. Check your kitchen plans before the house is built to be sure that all time and work saving features are included.

I have done and in the executing of this work, I am happy to add, I have received the cordial support and co-operation of every member of my cabinet and of every officer of the government at home and abroad whose services I have had occasion to employ in connection with it. Annexation has met with no impediment in Texas nor has any been attempted by the Government and I believe I am justifiable in saying that it has been accomplished in the very safest and best manner practicable, and at the very earliest possible period of time. I know of no course which could have been adopted which would have effected this objective one single day earlier. In the meantime I have obtained from Mexico a formal acknowledgment of our nation's independence, thereby removing the principal objection to the message on the part of the United States.

Satisfied that the happiness and welfare of Texas are placed in a strong and secure foundation, and that she will now find many friends better qualified than myself who will take care of her interest, the motive to which I have alluded as having actuated me in holding offices no longer operative; and in retiring now to private life I but indulge my individual wishes, and

I lay down the honors and the cares of the Presidency, with infinitely more of personal gratification than I assumed them. The confidence and the favors which the partiality of my fellow citizens has bestowed upon me merit and receive my gratitude and my heartfelt thanks. Whatever injustice may have been done me in moments of excitement, I indulge the belief that when correct information is disseminated in regard to my whole course, the public mind will settle down into proper conclusions and that my fellow citizens will then judge me rightly. At least, I have the approbation of my own conscience, a reward in itself above all price, and I repose upon the assured belief that history and posterity will do me no wrong.

I am happy to congratulate you gentlemen, upon the universally prosperous condition of our country at the present time. Our foreign relations have all been closed in a manner satisfactory, I believe, to all the governments with which we have had intercourse. The frontier is quiet and secure and the husbandman sows and reaps his fields in peace. Industry and enterprise have received new quantities and a new impulse—a market is found at home for nearly everything our

HARDENING OF ARTERIES, PAINS IN LEFT ARM AND SIDE—

"Please send another bottle of Liquid Garlic, also send a bottle to my sister-in-law, Mrs. Hulda C. Dutton, 45 Atwater Terrace, Springfield, Mass.

"I have some good reports to make on the effectiveness of garlic used. Mr. Turner, Texaco dealer here has taken two bottles and is much better, his blood pressure down about 60 points. Mrs. W. F. citizens have to dispose of, and a large and very desirable immigration to the country is now taking place. The expenses of the government since I have been in office have all been paid in an undepreciated currency—a very considerable amount of debt incurred by previous administrations has been paid off, and a surplus of available means sufficient to defray the expenses of the government, economically administered for the next two years, at least, is left at the disposition of the State, and I venture the belief that without resort to taxation, the public domain, if properly husbanded and disposed of, will raise a fund sufficient to liquidate the entire national debt upon equitable principle, besides providing for the future support of the State government, a system of common schools, and other institutions for the intellectual, moral, and religious improvement of the rising generation. With such a population as Texas possesses, characterized as it is with great intelligence and enterprise, and with such elements of prosperity as she now possesses, a genial climate and a fertile soil, it will be her own fault if she does not reach an importance and a social elevation, not surpassed by any community on earth.

Detailed reports from all the different Departments and Bureaus, showing the transactions of the government since the last annual meeting of Congress, are made out and will be handed to his Excellency, the Governor, for transmission in due time to your honorable bodies. The information which these contain will show the manner in which the public affairs have been conducted since I came into office, and constitute in part the necessary data upon which to predicate your future action. It does not come within the province of my appropriate duty to make any suggestions or recommend any measures for your consideration. This task now belongs to another and will, I am satisfied, be discharged with faithfulness and ability. I may, however, express the fervent hope which I have, that your important deliberations, commenced under such favorable auspices may result in the promotion of the permanent welfare of the State of Texas, and that your labors may be crowned with abundant blessings.

WHEN A KITCHEN IS PRACTICAL and PRETTY

... OF COURSE—IT'S Electric!

There was a time when you had to choose between a pretty kitchen and a practical one, but not nowadays. An All-Electric Kitchen is both practical and pretty. It is practical because you base your plans on an Electric Range, Electric Refrigerator, Electric Dishwasher, and plenty of electric outlets for the convenient use of electric mixers, waffle irons, toasters and many, many other electrical appliances. Around these appliances you build "Electric Time-Saving Centers." This equipment does so much of your work for you automatically that you'll have more time for leisure. And it's pretty, because there's practically no limit to what you can do decoration-wise with an All-Electric Kitchen. If you plan to build or remodel, our Home Service Department will be glad to help with your kitchen plans. When a kitchen is both practical and pretty...

OF COURSE—IT'S Electric!

A MODERN KITCHEN INCLUDES

Refrigeration Center, built around your electric refrigerator which provides ample food storage and large freezing capacity. Adjacent work surfaces provide space for food preparation.

Dishwashing Center, featuring electric sink with automatic dishwasher and garbage disposal unit. The Electric Dishwasher handles not only dishes and silver, but pots and pans as well—washes them shining clean, and dries them without wiping.

Cooking Center, with electric range as central unit. The Electric Range provides safety, better meals—due to controlled heat—coolness, easier cleaning, durable, reliable simplicity, and beauty plus economy of operation.

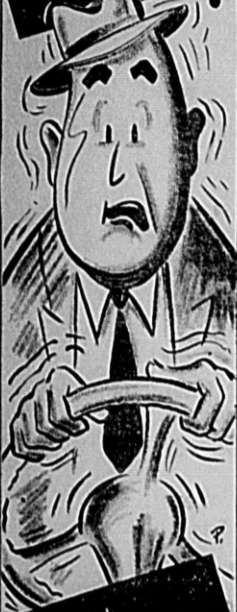

ADEQUATE WIRING: This simply means: 1. Large enough electric wires. 2. Enough circuits. 3. Plenty of outlets and switches.

Doctor Says Take It Easy In Hot Weather

The State Health Department advised Texans Saturday to "be your age."

This is especially true during hot summer months when over-exertion may be dangerous, says State Health Officer George W. Cox.

"While a young man in prime physical condition may benefit from a fast game of tennis, older men and women have been known to collapse and suffer serious heart attacks following such a game. The same thing applies to golfing, swimming and other vigorous sports," Dr. Cox said.

Persons of middle age should never participate in activities requiring violent physical exertion, and should confine their physical exercise to such bounds as their doctor prescribes."

Mother Wins Long Fight To Have Son's Body Sent Home To Texas

A Texas mother has won her long fight to have the body of her son, killed in action, returned to the Lone Star State.

She is Mrs. A. J. Herron of Dallas, who gave four sons to the armed services.

Jack C. Herron was her youngest. He joined the Air Corps in 1943—he was 18—and was sent to Italy where he became radar man and observer on one of the 12th Air Forces night-fighter planes.

His pilot on the missions was Lt. Wesley E. Kangas, a Californian.

Herron won the Air Medal twice. On April 20, 1945, he sent Mrs. Herron a Mother's Day card in which he said the war was going well. "It looks like the beginning of the end," he wrote.

Two days later, Herron and Kangas crashed or were shot down. The advancing Fifth Army found their bodies, burned beyond recognition in the Po Valley.

Mrs. Herron and her husband moved to Australia a year later. While there, she heard that bodies of the war dead were being brought back to the United States. She returned, alone, to Texas to be here when her son's body arrived. She returned by way of Italy where she learned that the Army had never been able to determine which was the body of Herron and which the body of Kangas. There were the two graves. One was marked "Lt. Jack C. Herron or Lt. Wesley E. Kangas." The other: "Lt. Wesley E. Kangas or Lt. Jack C. Herron."

And on reaching Texas in the summer of 1948, Mrs. Herron was advised by the War Department that bodies which could not be positively identified were not to be returned to the U. S. for burial.

Mrs. Herron implored the War Department to renew efforts at identification, and this was done. But at length the department informed Mrs. Herron that the efforts had failed.

In desperation, the brown-eyed, 66-year-old mother wrote a letter to Secretary of State Marshall last fall, outlining the situation.

In a short time she received a reply from Secretary Marshall's office—saying that something would be done.

And it was. Saturday, Mrs. Herron said the War Department had advised her that her son's body is en route to the United States. It will arrive in Texas early in June.

"I'm so very thankful," Mrs. Herron said. Her husband will not be here for the reburial services. He expects to return to Dallas from Australia about October first.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond French and children, of San Angelo, visited in the home of his mother, Mrs. Bert Brown here during the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth White, Odessa, Mrs. Whaley Jackson, children, of Sipe Springs, and Mrs. Clois Clark and children, of Stephenville, visited in the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. here over the week end.

Big Ranch Deal Is Made Near Coleman As Witt Place Sold

One of the largest business transactions in history of Coleman County was announced last week when the purchase of the M. K. Witt ranch, comprising 1,800 highly improved acres, was made by Hayden Hargett, clothing store owner. Consideration was said to be in excess of $130,000.

The ranch is located four and one-half miles west of Coleman and is one of the best improved places in the southwest. The deal is complete and Hargett has assumed operation of the ranch.

The purchase includes the land, livestock, crops, improvements and equipment. Mr. Witt would not sell his famous Palomino stallion, Pirate Gold, but he wanted him to remain on the ranch and be buried there, so he gave Mr. Hargett the stallion with that understanding. Pirate Gold is 16 years old, and has received international acclaim.

Things don't just happen, somebody makes them happen.

GRASSHOPPERS

Grasshoppers have been reported to be very active around Putnam, Cross Plains, Baird, Clyde, and all over the county.

The new insecticides, chlordane and toxaphene, give quicker and better initial control and continue to kill longer than the old standard sodium fluosulfate bait. The new ones are particularly effective when applied as sprays or dusts on succulent growth along roadsides, railroad right-of-ways, canal banks and field margins and fence rows. They are very good applied as sprays or dust to such crops as young cotton and corn, or rank growing alfalfa.

Chlordane and toxaphene applied as sprays give higher initial kills, and continue to kill over a longer period, than equal dosages of dusts. When using sprays, apply 1 pound of technical chlordane or 1 1/2 pound of technical toxaphene per acre. When using dusts, apply 1 1/2 pounds of the technical chlordane or toxaphene per acre.

These dosages have given high initial kills and residual action lasting to 3 weeks under a wide variety of conditions and are recommended to farmers for general use. Slightly lower dosages are effective against newly hatched grasshoppers, but if some eggs are still unhatched and long continued killing action is desired the dosages recommended above should be used. A slight increase in the dosage of both sprays and dusts may be necessary late in the season, when most of the grasshoppers are adults and vegetation is maturing.

Chlordane and toxaphene are manufactured as emulsion concentrates, wettable powders, and dusts of various strengths of the technical material. Emulsion concentrates and wettable powders may be diluted with water to suit available spraying equipment. Whatever the formulation or dilution, the quantity of technical material applied per acre should conform to the stated recommendations.

Following are recommendations that can be used:

Chlordane—Use 1 quart 45% emulsion or 2 pounds 50% wettable powder per 50 to 100 gallons water to spray one acre.

Toxaphene—Use 1 quart 55% emulsion or 2 1/2 pounds 40% wettable powder per 50 to 100 gallons water to spray one acre.

When dusting you can use 15 to 20 pounds per acre of either a 10% toxaphene or chlordane dust. This amounts to 1 1/2 pounds of the technical material as recommended above. 10 pounds of 20% toxaphene would be the same amount of technical poison also.

Do not wait until the hoppers move into your fields. Get them while they are still on the edge of your fields in the hatching area.

These new insecticides are better in bait materials than the old ones. Chlordane at 1/2 pound and toxaphene at 1 pound have consistently given at least as good kill as 6 pounds of sodium fluosulfate per 100 pounds of dry bran and sawdust.

R. B. McGowen, Jr., who is to graduate from Texas A&M this week, visited with his grandmother, Mrs. George Scott, here last week end.

Only Four Kinds Of Poisonous Reptiles Are Found In Texas

Don't kill that snake; it may be a friend of yours, warns University of Texas Zoologist W. Frank Blair. An authority on Texas wild life, Dr. Blair says there are only four poisonous snakes among the many that live in the state, but most people kill every snake they see regardless of its species. He points out that the coral, rattlesnake, water moccasin and copperhead are the four poisonous types, but for everyone of them, there are 10 non-poisonous snakes that help mankind by eating harmful insects.

His advice is: Learn to recognize the poisonous types and kill them, but let the others alone.

What you are when no one is looking is what you are.

Relatives will live beyond your means if given the chance.

HOW TO SHOOT A RIFLE

By ARTHUR E. COOK
National and Olympic Rifle Champion

Positions

There are four standard shooting positions in the target game that also can be adopted to field use. They are: prone, sitting, kneeling, and standing. Prone is most accurate and, in the order named above, they become increasingly more difficult. Learn your aiming and trigger control habits in the prone position.

In target shooting always use the gunslung to help hold the rifle in the prone, sitting, and kneeling positions. After loosening the sling you will find a loop in the top end which you can fit snugly around the bicep of your left arm. While you are in position the sling, running from the upper left arm to the upper sling swivel of the rifle, will brace the V formed by the bent left arm. Properly done, this eliminates most of the muscular effort of holding the rifle.

Illustrated above are the four positions. In prone, sitting, and kneeling the shooter should half-face to the right of the target. In standing he should be at nearly right angles and shoot over his left shoulder.

(This instruction based on the book "HOW TO SHOOT A RIFLE," published by The National Rifle Association, Washington, D. C.)

Always keep the action open until ready to shoot!
