ADMIRAL YOUTH ACCIDENTLY SHOTS SELF, PROVES FATAL.

Coy Brown of Admiral died last week from accidental gunshot wound self inflicted. He and another boy were out hunting, and upon deciding to make a several mile journey, they placed the Brown boys gun in dense thicket where it could be safe until their return. Late in the day they returned and the Brown boy reached in to pull his gun out of the brush holding it by the barrel when there was a flash and a report and the boy fell back with a fatal wound in his chest. Coy Brown was a son of John Brown, prosperous farmer of the Admiral community. Interment was made in the Admiral cemetery.

WORK PROGRESSING ON NEW SERVICE STATION

Work on the new service, and filling station under construction by Edwin Neeb, is progressing nicely this week after considerably weather. The main building will be completed in a few days, if the weather is permitting.

MOHLER GIVEN DEATH PENALTY BY EASTLAND JURY SATURDAY

Bob Mohler was given death sentence by jury at Eastland late Saturday after deliberating only three hours. He was convicted of the murder of Hugh Maples in Sept. 1922. Maples as service car driver took Mohler on a trip to meet his family, it was claimed. Maples was murdered and his car confiscated; later his body was found in Coryell county, and Mohler was convicted of the crime Saturday.

North-Childs.

S. E. North of Dallas and Miss Mabel Childs of this place, were married in Dallas last Saturday, where they will make their home. Miss Childs is the daughter of Henry Childs and has many friends and admirers here, many of whom were taken entirely by surprise, as they did not know that she was even considering matrimony, but all will join the Review in wishing for them the best in life.

SEVERAL NEW WELLS FOR LOCAL FIELD THIS WEEK

The Junior Oil Co. have made location and will start rig this work on the T.C. Thorne tract about 2 miles south east of town. This is new territory and is attracting considerable attention.

Sindorf Bros. have started spudding for Schaffner Bros. on the James tract east of town. This is expected to be a good well.

The Stone and Co. well just south of City limits on Barr place is reported drilling at 550 feet. Keen interest will follow the progress of this well.

In the field just east of town, C. O. Moore is drilling at 1800 feet on his Faulkner No. 1. The Pennant Oil & Gas Co. et al are drilling around 1300 feet on their Albin No. 4.

T. B. Slick Faulkner No. 1, is spudding at 200 feet.

Joe H. Shackelford is starting a rig this week for C. O. Moore Acker No. 3, east of town.

F. W. Stone & Co. have material on ground for derrick east of town. In the Cross Cut field, Bob Gillman is building new derrick on J. W. Newton tract, and the Pennant Oil & Gas Co. et al, will start on their Strickland No. 1, in the near future and will drill to a depth of 3,000 feet, it is stated.

With several new rigs going up and others to start soon, the local fields are developing in a manner very satisfactory, and activities are being stimulated with the passing of the week.

REV. STUTTS METHODIST PASTOR WILL SUPERANUATE

Rev. Stutts, Methodist Pastor here, upon his return from annual Conference at Plainview, informs the Review man that he decided to superannuate owing to his health which has not been the best for some time. He states that he plans to move to Abilene in few days. Rev. Tom W. Brabham of Abilene will be pastor here for the ensuing year. He expects to arrive in few days to begin his administration as pastor.

Rev. Stutts has been successful in his work here and his decision to accept a superannuate relation was reached solely on account of health.

The Review has been rushed with extra work this week. One job called for 5,000 double page circulars which the business men of Cross Plains ordered. They are putting on a special inducement feature jointly, for the benefit of the trading public of this section. In addition to this big job, we have received several special form jobs for the local oil companies besides the regular run of business, all of which has taxed us to the limit in our job department. We are now getting many jobs that formerly went to the mail order house. We are prepared to do job printing and the price is not prohibitive, so have your printing done at home. patronize home enterprises—that's the way to build a town. One fellow who complains about folks ordering goods from the mail order houses, informed the editor that he was ordering his printing from a mail order house. Inconsistent? yes. But we showed him the error of his way and now he has his printing done here.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and maybe dependent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a small bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them.

Friend Husband's Fault. Ida and Rose called on me soon after I was married.

He sat down in the next room to read the paper and called out to me: "I saw Ida and Rose today and they said they would call on us, but I hope they don't."

G. O. P. MAJORITY IN HOUSE SLENDER

ONLY FIFTEEN NOMINALLY AND SOME OF THESE ARE LIKELY TO STRAY FROM FOLD.

WHIP WILL HAVE HARD TASK

President Coolidge Evidently Trying to Satisfy the Desires of Those Republicans Whose Loyalty to the Party is Rather Shaky.

By EDWARD B. CLARK. Washington.—A count of the house of representatives as it will be constituted when the members meet in December proves that the Republican leaders must "walk wary" lest they undo the party.

On paper the number fifteen will represent the majority of the Republicans in the next house. This is a small margin and as some so-called Republicans are likely to leave the reservation on the slightest excuse for removing themselves, the majority of fifteen may go the way of early day mist.

The following figures tell the story: There will be 225 Republicans of the name in the house; 207 Democrats; one Socialist; one independent, whatever that means, and one who was elected as a Farmer-Laborite.

Some of the members who were elected as Republicans think along La-Follette-Brookhart lines. Conservative legislation, such as it is presumed Calvin Coolidge, if he should follow the bent of his mind, would be likely to suggest for enactment, would have a hard time of it in securing the sanction of the Republicans acting as a body.

When the table of membership is looked at and there is realization of the unsteadiness of the Republicanism of some of the Republicans, it is easy enough to understand why what ordinarily is considered conservative Republican doctrine probably will be looked upon as something else by some of the progressives who constitute no inconsiderable part of the house body.

Hard Task for the Whip. The Republican "whip" of the next house, if he shall succeed in holding the unruly in bounds, will deserve well of his Republican comrades and of the administration.

There are some vacancies in the house, but it is virtually a foregone conclusion that six of the seats will be won by the Democrats and three by the Republicans, and this result has been taken into consideration in giving the membership figures set down above.

A Democratic victory where Republican victory was expected, or the reverse, would be of small moment when the general situation is considered.

Whether the majority is fourteen, fifteen or sixteen makes little or no difference. The road to the goal of party accomplishment through the house of representatives will be rough in any event.

Coolidge Tries to Please Them. Everything that has been done by the President up to the present time shows that he is trying to satisfy the wishes, if not the requests, of those Republicans who, it is feared, might jump the fences unless heed is given to their pleadings, which on more than one occasion have taken on the form of demands.

An inquiry into the wheat situation in the Northwest, now in progress, is a case in point.

An attempt is to be made this winter by a minority of the majority to secure changes in the transportation act. The West and Northwest particularly do not like that part of the act which virtually guarantees the railroads a certain return.

There are many out-and-out government ownership advocates in the lower house, and there are some in the upper house, if legislation which some persons look upon as being radical once shall get started in the house, no one can tell what may happen, because there are radical Democrats just as there are radical Republicans.

Republican leaders will attempt to do this to placate their brethren in some way so that they will remain with the conservatives on matters considered crucial to party success in the coming election.

It will be a trifle easier to hold the Republicans together because the election is to come on next year. Even those who seemingly only call themselves Republicans realize that the party name will mean something to them in a general election and that if the nominee for the presidency goes down to defeat he is likely to carry with him the Republican candidates for the house, even if at heart they are opposed to the general administrative endeavor.

The thing that the conservative Republicans complain of Time Wastes. Secretary of State Hughes delivered himself of the following in a speech at Providence, R. I.:

"Public officers are forced to give half their time to unnecessary contacts, and a considerable portion of the national energy is wasted by the dominance in America today of a fleeting vision, a thirst for sensation and a relentless need for motion."

This public deliverance of the secretary of state concerns itself with two things—the time spent by public officials in doing work that ought to be done by subordinates, and the alleged sensationalism of the press in dealing with matters of government.

So far as the first section of Mr. Hughes' remarks is concerned, he of course is everlastingly right. The right or wrong in the second section is of course certainly open to argument.

Everybody who visits a government department and succeeds in seeing the chief thereof knows about the "time waste." It may be that an American ambassador home on business of state is engaged with high matters in the office of the secretary.

Twenty times during the conference of moment the door will be opened and an underling will come in with something which he says must be signed. The train of thought and of conversation is broken and the secretary and the ambassador are forced time after time to readjust their mentality and to try to join once more the links of the subject.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 11

SOME MISSIONARY TEACHINGS OF THE PSALMS

GOLDEN TEXT.—Ps. 47, 67, 100. PRAISE THEE, O GOD, let all the people praise Thee.—Ps. 67.

PRIMARY TOPIC.—Everybody Praising God. JUNIOR TOPIC.—Everybody Serving God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—All Nations Called to Serve Jehovah. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Missionary Hymns of the Old Testament.

The Jewish people were called to be missionaries to the other nations. The psalter, their hymn book, is saturated with the spirit of God's grace to the world.

Its dominant note is the call to come back to God. I. A Call to Recognize God's Power (Ps. 47).

Man's first sin was to cast off God. Such abyssal darkness followed that the race has gone on in ignorance of its Creator and Benefactor.

The first and primary need of the missionary is to get the heathen to know God. They must come to know Him not only as a mighty King, but as a personal, tender-hearted being, looking out over the world with compassion, desiring to save and bless man.

His only creature in His image and likeness. Oh, that the heathen knew God as their true and great King whose mighty power He desires to use in salvation and blessing to all!

Let us make this known to the ends of the earth! II. A Call for the Nations to Return to God (Ps. 67).

The central theme of this psalm is the universal diffusion of God's grace. The order of thought in this psalm is that which shall be carried out by the Lord in the completion of His work of grace in the world.

1. God's Blessing Upon Israel (vs. 1, 2). This blessing is necessary in order that Israel may be fitted to make known God's way to the nations.

This grace will be poured out upon Israel in the full coming of Pentecost. When this grace is poured out there will be such missionary activity as has hitherto been unknown.

When Israel, like her national representative Paul, shall go forth in such power of the Holy Spirit in witnessing for Christ, truly nations shall be born in a day.

That which shall be manifested by Israel for their God-appointed task is needed by the church in her witnessing. She needs the Spirit of God to fit her to preach the gospel to the heathen.

2. The Conversion of the Heathen (vs. 3-5). Thanksgiving will be given for salvation offered and accepted. Not only this, but there will be rejoicing in the experience of salvation.

They will rejoice in the fact now that the great and righteous God rules the earth. The new-born soul rejoices in knowing that a dispensation of justice tempered with mercy has been ushered in.

What Life Consists Of. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth." In these words Jesus strikes at the popular error of all ages—the belief that life consists in things.

For nothing are we under deeper obligation to Christianity than for this, that it corrects our easy views of life. Since the first man started heavenward, there have been two conflicting ideals of life.

One teaches that life's values are in the things we get and keep; the other holds that the chief end of man is to develop his highest powers, to live in fear of that which is beneath him, and in reverence for that which is above him.—Rev. C. G. Albertson, D. D.

Neglected Children. It is often difficult to tell which are more neglected—the children of the very rich or the children of the very poor.—Kenneth D. Miller.

Love for the Home. The first indication of domestic happiness is the love of one's home.—Montrosier.

Mothers Advise Their Daughters to Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Keep Them in Health

A Mother's Advice Prevents Operation

Corona, N. Y.—"I had a terrible pain in my left side and had to go to bed every so often. Doctors had told me I must be operated on, but I do not believe in the knife and would rather suffer than go through it. My mother also did not believe in it and she made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it had helped her. It has also helped me for I am better and able to do all my work. I recommend your medicine and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. Busch, Jr., 11 S. Railroad Avenue, Corona, N. Y.

A Sickly Child

Mahoningtown, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day!' I

Another Mrs. Partington. Jefferson had something the matter with his eyes and he told such a long tale of woe about them that his friend became really alarmed. "I say, old chap," he exclaimed, "You ought to see an optician."

But It's a Fact. It is hard to realize that one and his romantic "crowd" of twenty years ago inevitably grow fat, baldheaded and more and more thoughtful of good dinners.

Two persons may be able to live as cheaply as one after they are married—but not while engaged.

gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now she is a healthy, happy, hearty, strong girl and weighs 120 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her 'gym' work, and she works at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and if it will be of any benefit you may use this letter as a reference."—Mrs. GEORGE E. WHITACRE, 621 W. Madison Ave., Mahoningtown, Pa.

Every girl wants to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to do well in school and to enjoy herself at all times. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for young girls just entering womanhood. Mothers may depend upon it. Remember it is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing that can injure, and tends to tone up and strengthen the organs concerned, so that they will work in a healthy and normal manner.

For nearly fifty years it has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value. Let it help your daughter and yourself.

Sir Roger de Coverley. The name is that of a member of an imaginary club, under whose auspices the Spectator was supposed to be edited. Sir Roger is the type of an English gentleman of the time of Queen Anne (1702-1714), and figures in thirty papers of the Spectator. He is noted for his modesty, generosity and hospitality. The name Sir Roger de Coverley was also given to a dancer, similar to the Virginia reel, and supposed to have been the original of it. The title is derived from the English squire described in the Spectator.

MOTHER! GIVE SICK BABY "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Harmless Laxative to Clean Liver and Bowels of Baby or Child.

Even constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Babies and Children love to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the ten or twelve bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels acting without gripping. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits! Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which contains directions.—Advertisement.

For Value Received. A Boston woman relates that during her trip to England she visited a certain place and employed a guide to show her around. After he had explained the principal attractions of the neighborhood, she remarked as she handed him his fee: "I trust that what you have told me is absolutely true. I never feel I should pay for untruths."

Red Cross Ball Blue should be used in every home. It makes clothes white as snow and never injures the fabric. All good grocers.—Advertisement.

Solving Your Problems on Christmas Gift Selection

Breakfast Caps Homemade Furnishings

At Christmas time breakfast caps blossom out in gay colors, insuring the new year a cheerful start. Here are two in the latest modes. Ribbons and lace, as usual, set off numberless dear faces during the coming year. The cap at the top is made of shirred colored net, narrow satin ribbon, lace edging and thin ribbon flowers. Wide point-de-spirit, with flowers at the front and ribbon ties, accomplish the other pretty headpiece.

Exquisite, lifelike roses are made of fine crepe paper and set in millinery foliage and stems. Two or three shades of rose-colored paper are used and every petal carefully shaped and arranged. A rose or two, in a bud vase, makes a lovely gift. Plain toilet-water bottles are painted in wonderful color blends, with sealing wax paints, and flowers made of tape and sealing wax provide a little nosogay for the stopper.

Sealing-Wax Jewelry

The furor for things Egyptian brought in a whole new line of ornaments and costume jewelry that will make novel and welcome Christmas gifts. The tallman pictured is fashioned of sealing wax and glass pendants and hangs from a black silk cord. It is the size of a silver dollar and the Sphinx head and globules are painted on, with sealing-wax paints, in any colors desired.

Egyptian Screen

A regal-looking lady of old Egypt, painted in vivid Egyptian colors on cardboard, makes a fascinating telephone screen, appropriate for a man's room or the house phone. On the reverse side, lists of names and numbers and reports of calls are recorded on removable tablets that slip under narrow ribbon bands.

For Dressing Table

The prettiest new lamp and candle shades are made of plain and pleated ribbon, as shown in the illustration. Plain satin ribbon, in strip together with narrow banding, and laid in shallow plaits, forms the shade, finished with ruffles of picot and plain ribbon. The lamp standard is also covered with the plain ribbon, seaweedly shirred and sewed row on row. This is a dainty and elegant gift suited to a boudoir reading stand or dressing table.

Gay Little Accessories

Ribbons are the most adaptable of all materials for making Christmas gifts. A little container for a powder puff, and a pair of bedroom slippers appear in the illustration, both made of gay ribbons. The container is decorated with sealing wax flowers, and it fastens with a snap fastener. Satin-covered mitts are gay with narrow ribbon frills and flowers. They are held about the ankles with ribbon-covered elastic.

Comforter and Pillow

A soft, narrow comforter and pillow to match, made of satin (or other material) and bound with fancy braid or ribbon, is a lovely gift, especially for old people. Black satin with crettonne figures applied is very hand-

Toys of Yarn

Amusing and grotesque dolls and animals are made of wigs wound with heavy yarns. Millinery wire will answer for the frames or skeletons and may be padded with cotton before they are wound with zephyr or coarse yarn. Beads or buttons are used for eyes. A horse, jockey and dog are pictured.

Condensed Austin News

For the first time in the history of Texas, Supreme Court witnesses have been summoned to appear before that tribunal to give testimony.

A proposed $1,500,000 bond issue for highway construction in Travis County was defeated by 108 votes in a special election held recently.

After a call to pay certain general fund warrants had been made it was found that the deficiency had mounted to $4,100,000, and that it will not be less than $4,300,000 on Nov. 1.

Confederate pensioners will receive $30 for the next quarter, which begins Dec. 1, according to announcement made by the Comptroller. This is the same as paid for the current quarter and is much larger than the average quarterly allowance.

Gov. Neff has been requested by Dr. Atticus Webb of Dallas, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Texas, to appoint from fifty to one hundred delegates to represent Texas at the national meeting of the Anti-Saloon League to be held at Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 17-20.

Mrs. Philip Bosche, who is charged with killing her stepdaughter, Mrs. Eugene Kellersberger, at the Bosche farm near Kopperl recently, formerly resided in Austin. Philip Bosche, her husband, accumulated considerable property in Austin and operated the first steam laundry in this city.

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, superintendent of the Girls' Training School at Gainesville, has been given ten months' leave, without pay, by permission of the State Board of Control, and Miss Cora Goodwin of Denton has been named as acting superintendent in the interim. Dr. Smith will take advance work at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital. She has been superintendent of the training school for several years.

The University regents at El Paso on Nov. 19 will formally accept the magnificent residence of the late Major George W. Littlefield to be used as the home of the president of the university. It is directly opposite the north side of the campus. The acceptance will be subject to the interest of the widow, Mrs. Littlefield, during her life.

The Department of Insurance, according to Commissioner John M. Scott, is in possession of evidence that certain companies writing fire insurance in Texas are resorting to the practice of writing a large risk at a less rate than a small risk of the same classification. This is especially being done in writing automobile business, Commissioner Scott said.

W. E. Riddle, special counsel for Gov. Jack Walton of Oklahoma, has written Secretary of State S. L. Staples for a statement showing the exact number of pardons, paroles and commutations granted by Texas Governors during the last six years. The request will be complied with, but a week may be required to do it.

An agent of the State Comptroller's Department is investigating complaints charging violation by Dallas and Fort Worth physicians and druggists of liquor permit regulations. The investigation will last all week. Comptroller Lon A. Smith said. Liquor permits of physicians and druggists, against whom evidence sustains complaints, will be canceled.

Marshall Hicks of San Antonio, member of the University regents, has been in Austin and said that he expects the regents will consider the University building loan of $3,000,000 when the board next meets, which will be at El Paso on Nov. 19.

By order of the Railroad Commission Lufkin has been selected as a point where hardwood logs and rough-lumber may be stopped in transit to be manufactured into finished products and shipped to points in Texas. The usual stoppage in transit rules and charges are prescribed with special rates on the inbound rough logs.

Kinks in the new State inheritance tax law are being smoothed out by Assistant Attorney General Bruce W. Bryant, who is writing an opinion to the Comptroller interpreting the several provisions of the law and advising as to the exact procedure in its enforcement. He also is perfecting the blanks as designed by the inheritance tax expert employed by the Comptroller.

The Gulf Company paid the State $91,389 as this quarter's 2 per cent tax on gross oil production, as compared to $118,000 paid by the Humble, which had absorbed another concern. These are record-breaking amounts and indicate that oil production in Texas continues heavy.

In his resignation to the Governor as representative from Lamar and Fannin Counties, W. B. Strickland announced that he was removing to Dallas, where he would make his home.

A Good Marksman. Bill Taylor was a particularly tall, thin person; in fact, certain of his friends referred to him as "Bones."

One night a number of his jolly acquaintances joined him in a party. In an unguarded moment one of them drew a revolver, it became accidentally discharged, and the bullet struck Taylor in the leg. Terrified, the owner of the weapon hastened to the house of the nearest doctor.

"I have just shot Bill Taylor in the leg," he exclaimed. "Come quick!"

But the doctor paused on the threshold, viewing the man with admiring eyes. "You mean to say that you actually shot Bill Taylor in the leg?"

"Yes."

"Then all I have to say is that it was a mighty good shot," was the doctor's response, as he prepared to go to Bill—Philadelphia Ledger.

Armistice Day

Five years ago this November 11, word was flashed over the wires that the immense armies of the world which were engaged in a death struggle for liberty and justice, had ceased their hostilities and peace was again hovering over the stricken lands of Europe, which was soaked with the blood of millions, who paid the supreme sacrifice for their native land. The flash and boom of the mighty instruments of war, and the monster death machines of the sea and air were all ordered to immediately cease their work of destruction and the exultant world went wild with joy. All the civilized nations of earth joined in celebrating the day. All people were made to rejoice and give thanks. And to day our pulse beat quickens and the spirit of the day causes us to look upward and thank God that Armistice Day was not delayed.

The business firms will observe Monday, Nov. 12, as Armistice Day, the eleventh being Sunday. This is an annual declaration of patriotism which should never never die.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Crabb entertained a party of friends at a 7 o'clock dinner Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. Dan Wilson. Cards dominos and music were enjoyed till 11 o'clock when with sincere regret farewells were given Mr. Wilson who is leaving to make his home in Temple.

Tom Bryson and sister, Miss Hattie Bryson, left last week for Winters. Tom will have charge of the Bryson farm there for the ensuing year.

rendered by Dan G. Wilson on a most modern slide trombone composed from a five cent horn and a curtain rod. Following this entertainment numerous tables were brought forward and soon everyone was playing Bridge, Five Hundred or Forty-two. From time to time during the evening music was rendered by the Cross Plains Band and several numbers on the violin by Mr. W. H. Davidson. This music program was continued in the ball room where much merriment was added to the evening when couple after couple came forward for an old fashioned square dance only to be continued throughout the entire evening with the modern dances of today.

The guests were arrayed in most beautiful costumes representing the days of Washington, Pocahontas, also the days of re-construction together with those which are often exhibited by the indulgers of modern spookdom.

The house was decorated in Halloween designs and the Halloween spirit was thoroughly visible on the countenance of each guest. The fifty six guests present could hardly realize that it was one o'clock in the morning at the time most dainty and delicious refreshments were served by the host and hostesses and a tond good night extended by all.

The Hon. N.H. Allaman of Cleveland, Ohio was present and joined in the procession.

Halloween Entertainment

Mr. Macon Freeman and the Misses Ruby Henderson and Vernie Crabb entertained in honor of the Cross Plains Band at the home of Miss Crabb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Crabb.

It was on Halloween evening and the spooks and goblins long before the usual hour for such, began making their appearance apparently from the mystic realms of a perfect invisible Empire. There were big spooks and little spooks then goblins and more spooks until seating capacity of the Crabb home was not only taken up but until the scarcity of standing room became noticeable. At the appointed hour all the spooks of spookdom apparently gathered at the entrance of a dark and dangerous looking cavern and started on their perilous journey over a rough and rugged pathway where long since the visible had ceased to exist; a pathway that led to the great unknown and one that ended with suitable electrical surprises to bring even a spook back to the realms of reality.

Immediately after this perilous journey was completed all of the spooks formed in line and a grand march continued from room to room only to end at it's final destination by the removal of masks an a general greeting among the guests.

As a special surprise for the band boys quite a burlesque band had been arranged which played numerous very difficult numbers. The principal part of this entertainment however was a slide trombone solo

Social Event

One of the most enjoyable events of the season was Tuesday night, when Mrs. Virgil Hart, Mrs. Marion Harvey and Mrs. W. C. Wilkinson were joint hostesses in entertaining a number of their friends with a progressive masqueade. The guest assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey, their home being beautifully decorated with Halloween suggestions, and promptly at 7:45 the party motored to the spooky farm house, being greeted there by Mrs. Wilkinson who gave them a warm reception, and after ghost stories, fortune telling, contests and etc., it was announced that kangaroo court was in session; this afforded great pleasure for the spectators in the court, presided over by Virgil Hart as Judge, Joe Shackelford as prosecuting attorney and Porter Henderson as sheriff. Various cases were tried and all defendants found guilty. Sentences were very amusing. Immediately after court adjourned, the dance proceeded; music was furnished by Conlee, Cross and McLean, eleven o'clock the party motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hart, their home being beautiful orange, black and gold shades sounded the key note to the color theme, which was beautifully carried out in symbols appropriate to the Halloween season. While Miss Gyrlee Lewis and Macon Freeman gave several selections at the piano. Delicious refreshments were served consisting of hot chocolate and sandwiches, pickles and olives. There were many beautiful and clever costumes. Miss Hazell Dorr was lovely in a spanish costume; Miss Elizabeth Hart was very attractive in Grecian costume; Miss Gyrlee Lewis was very chic as a Pierrette; Mrs. Marion Harvey wore a pretty oriental costume. Those who enjoyed the lovely affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Joe Shackelford, and Mrs. W. R. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Ludley, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Harvey, Misses Elizabeth Hart, Hazel Dorr, Anna Myrl Scott, Gyrlee Lewis Carrie Gaines, Mamey Bowdoin; Messers Taylor Bond, Paul Harrell, Macon Freeman, Carlton Powell, Glaud Harrell, Russell McGowan, Mitchell, J. D. Conlee, Vincent Hart, Ralph Backingham, Harold Beard, Ben Garner, John Roscoe Bryant, Dan Wilson, and Sam Carson.

$10 ADVANCE PUTS COTTON ABOVE 31c

GOVERNMENT ISSUES ESTIMATE BASED UPON CONDITION OCTOBER 25

Bad Weather and Insect Damage Cause Worse Reduction in Output Than Expected

New Orleans, La.—Advances of $10 a bale have carried cotton above 31c a pound to a new high level for the season on all months in the local contract market. It was the first time in this crop year that the cotton exchange invoked its rule limiting fluctuations in any one session to 2c a pound. December rose to 31.80c and July to 31.10c. The close was strong, at the top, and the net change, compared with the previous close, was a gain of 175 to 180 points. The Government's indicated crop figures of 10,248,000 bales wholly controlled the trading. They were well under general expectations. Preceding the report it was a sagging market and at the lowest was 29 to 25 points down, but the crop figures changed all this and made it the strongest and most active market in many months.

Washington.—A decrease of 767,000 bales in the prospective cotton crop, as compared with a month ago, was shown in the Department of Agriculture's forecast of 10,248,000 bales on conditions prevailing on Oct. 25. The report was the first of its kind ever issued in November and had been awaited with interest by the cotton world, in view of the scarcity of cotton and the diversity of opinion as to the exact size of this year's crop.

The forecast was based on the condition of the crop on Oct. 25, which was 47.8 per cent of a normal, compared with 49.5 on Sept. 25 this year, 52.6 on Oct. 25 last year and 42.2 on that date of 1921, indicating a yield of about 128.9 pounds per acre.

In commenting on the cotton report, the crop reporting board said: "The forecast expresses the probable output interpreted from the present status of the crop on the basis of past ratings, and from the reported percentage picked, percentage abandoned and probable yield per acre. The change in forecast since Sept. 25 reflects the change due to weather and other factors since that date as ascertained by the board from all information at its command."

"Generally unfavorable weather and heavy rains in the Southwest, exceptional damage to grown bolls by the weevil, a result of leafworm ravages; coupled with the heaviest abandonment on record, resulted in a forecast of about 767,000 bales below last month. This is the third short crop in succession, though somewhat above the two preceding years.

FREE SCOPE IS VITAL OVER REPARATIONS

U. S. Participation Futile if Experts Blocked, Says Coolidge

Washington.—American participation in the reparations inquiry hardly will be worth while if the experts' advisory commission is to be prohibited from looking into Germany's capacity to make future payments, in the opinion of President Coolidge.

Commenting on the latest advances from Paris a White House spokesman said that while France was free to attach any restrictions she desired, the question must come back here, so that this Government can decide whether it cares to participate under those terms or not. Negotiations are not far enough along so that the United States can make a definite answer.

Premier Poincare's statements in Paris have been the subject of conversations between Secretary of State Hughes and French diplomatic representatives here.

Rain Benefits Wheat
Kaufman, Texas.—Within the next two weeks all cotton in Kaufman County will be gathered. Much of the land has been turned and many farmers have sown wheat. The slow rains of the last few days will benefit the wheat.

CROWN PRINCE TO RETURN TO GERMANY

Ullies Speculate on Outcome of Prussian-Bavarian Struggle for German Supremacy.

Brussels.—Chancellor Stresemann is planning to permit the return of Ex-Crown Prince Frederick William Hohenzollern to Germany in order to effect efforts of Bavarian Dictator Von Kahr to make Bavaria the principal German State and reinstall the Wittelsbach dynasty.

Allied authorities have learned definitely that this is the situation behind recent reports that the Ex-Crown Prince would leave his Dourain exile and return to Germany.

Stresemann must solve the problem of the Bavarian revolt. Von Kahr is known to desire that German Federal authority be transferred from Berlin to Munich. He is also known to favor the return of the Wittelsbachs, former rulers of Bavaria when it was a kingdom within the German monarchy. Ex-Crown Prince Rupprecht is now head of the family.

It is learned from a source of unquestionable authority that Stresemann has been planning to bring Frederick William back to counteract the Southern move.

Stresemann has declared that he does not intend to bring Wilhelm back "immediately," but has not defined his meaning of "immediately." According to allied information, it would not be surprising if the Ex-Crown Prince returned any time. Whether Stresemann would actually attempt to place the Ex-Crown Prince on a throne, or whether he believes his mere presence would discourage Bavarian monarchist ambitions, has not been revealed.

Allied authorities state that, on the surface, such a move seems foolish, as there is no indication that the Ex-Crown Prince is any more popular in Germany today than he was a year ago.

Their information leads to the conviction that Von Kahr has lost ground in the last few days, as many persons, even in Bavaria, believe he had taken too forceful a stand against Berlin. If this is true it might postpone actual efforts to put the former Crown Prince on the throne. But it is not likely to prevent his return, Stresemann, it is believed, would like to have him present in case of monarchist emergencies.

If the effort was made to place him at the head of a monarchy it would be accompanied by propaganda that this was the only means of solidifying Germany.

RECEIVERSHIP FOR KLAN IS REFUSED

Attorney General Will Take Case to Supreme Court.

Atlanta, Ga.—Judge John H. Humphries denied the petition of David M. Rittenhouse and others for the appointment of a receiver for the Ku Klux Klan. At the same time he denied the petition for an injunction to prevent the distribution of klan funds until the next klonovocation.

The petition for receivership was denied on the ground that the evidence did not justify the appointment of a receiver and the injunction because "there was no immediate, positive, alleged act to be enjoined."

In instructing attorneys to draw up a formal order setting forth his decision, Judge Humphries said: "It seemed to be an inside fight by about 309 members against 1,500,000 other members."

Attorneys for the Rittenhouse faction announced they would appeal to the Supreme Court.

Judge Humphries' decision was announced orally from the bench following two hours of argument by opposing counsel. The formal order will be prepared and signed later by the judge. Neither Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans nor Emperor W. J. Simmons of the klan was in the room when the decision was given.

CHARGE MADE OF ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

Managing Editor and Correspondent of Muskogee Paper to Be Quizzed on Matter

Oklahoma City, Ok.—Taking notice of an article published by the Muskogee Times-Democrat under an Oklahoma City date to the effect that two members of the Senate had been approached in the matter of accepting a bribe to influence their votes in the impeachment trial of Governor J. C. Walton, the Senate directed notice to the managing editor of the paper and the Capitol correspondent to appear before the upper body at once.

No names were mentioned in the article, which aroused the entire membership of the body. They agreed that all were thus under suspicion. The matter will be considered during the afternoon session of the Senate Thursday.

Practically no business was transacted Wednesday by either the House or the Senate. Senator Leedy introduced an anti-Ku Klux Klan bill, which he prepared on the first day of the convening of the Legislature but didn't introduce until later. It prohibits the wearing of the mask and robe and also prohibits congregating of persons for the purpose of whipping or other forms of violating anti-riot and anti-mob law.

House managers and attorneys representing Governor Walton are trying to be ready for opening of the trial against Governor Walton, the time set by the Senate. It is believed, however, that it may be impossible for the defendant to be ready by that time for trial.

NAME J. W. PRENTISS BANKERS' PRESIDENT

Oppose Federal Bonus For Able-Bodied Former Service Men

Washington.—John W. Prentiss of New York was elected president of the Investment Bankers' Association of America at the concluding session of the organization's twelfth annual convention.

An invitation from Cleveland to hold the 1924 convention in that city was extended by Fred S. Barton and Charles A. Ois, and will be considered at the January meeting of the board of governors.

Five vice presidents were elected, including Walter S. Brewster of Chicago, Philip S. Dalton of Boston, J. A. Frazer of Toronto, Arthur Sinclair Jr. of New York and Eugene E. Thompson of Washington. Frederick R. Fenton of Chicago was elected secretary and John G. Brogden of Baltimore treasurer.

A resolution opposing a Federal bonus for able-bodied former service men but advocating relief for those wounded or otherwise disabled was adopted.

Confidence in the "fundamental principles underlying the transportation act" was also expressed in a resolution adopted on recommendation of its committee on railroad securities.

"While the act contains certain imperfections," said the resolution, "it has, nevertheless, proved to be a long step in the direction of the solution of the American railroad problem."

Austin, Texas.—The State Department of Labor requested the Attorney General's Department for an opinion as to the right under the employment agency law to close by injunction placement bureaus or employment agencies, specializing in placing school teachers in employment who have not complied with the law in respect to taking out State licenses, and overcharging school teachers in the way of commissions. The law limits the amount to 20 per cent of a teacher's first month's salary.

The official account disclosed that Mrs. McCormick had invested nearly $1,000,000 in Liberty bonds and raised the estimate of her estate more than $1,000,000. In her will Mrs. McCormick bequeathed $1,000,000 to charity.

The Grand Chartreuse.

The Grand Chartreuse was the original monastery of the Carthusians, founded in 1804. It is situated among the mountains in the French department of Isere, about fourteen miles northeast of Grenoble, and is famous for an aromatic cordial made by the monks, the secret of which they have long possessed. The monastery was despoiled during the French revolution, and the inmates exiled from 1793 to 1810. They returned after the restoration of Louis XVIII (1814).

Before the Stars and Stripes.
The flag which the colonies all used before the Stars and Stripes was adopted was variously known as the congress colors, the grand union flag, and the first navy ensign. It consisted of 13 stripes, alternately red and white, typifying the 13 colonies, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew combined—the national flag of Great Britain—signifying the mother country.

The husbands or the wives or something seem to make young Americans in Constantinople very susceptible to fortune allotment; so much so that the Greek priests have been asked to put the brakes on their marriages and the embassy has felt constrained to go a little slow with facilities. An American gob wanted to borrow an embassy car for his wedding. "Whom are you going to marry, anyhow?" they asked him. CHAPTER XIV —10— Hendricks and Peter.

Ann closed the guest-room door behind her with a careful hand, for almost immediately after his recognition of her, her patient had dropped into a profound sleep. She knew him, too now, and chuckled to herself at the extraordinary turn her life took. She faced on the threshold, a transfigured Fanny. The gentle creature's eyes blazed, her lips were dead white, and she demanded, "when did you kiss that man—and you engaged to Hendricks?"

"It is all over between Hendricks and me, Fanny. I have written to tell him so." "Oh," cried Fanny, indignation engulfing every other sensation. "You have jilted him!—Jilted Hendricks while he is at the front!" Ann nodded soberly. "Yes," she said, "and a good thing for him, too. I would have made him miserable, if we had married. . . . I am everything he doesn't approve of. You know that, Fanny! Even if I had gone on pretending all my life, he wouldn't have been satisfied. Hendricks should marry some one entirely different from me—some one softer, gentler—some one who wouldn't shock him—or demand things he hasn't of him—some one very yielding and sweet—some one like—like you, Fanny!" Suddenly she took in the other's tremulous confusion; her eyes widened as they dwelt on the other girl's crimsoning face. "Fanny Cortlandt," she cried, "you are in love with him yourself!"

Fanny's little hands crept up over her telltale cheeks. All her pitiful defenses were stormed. "I couldn't help it, Ann," she murmured miserably. Ann looked at her in wonder; an unwilling admiration for her friend's steadfastness was borne in upon her. "In love like that," she marveled, "and with Hendricks?" Fanny flared at once. "You mustn't speak of him in that way! He is too good for you! It's he who should have jilted you, Ann Byrne!" Ann nodded humbly. "I wish he had," she said, and sighed. "It would have been so much simpler." "Do you love any one else?" Quite unbidden Ann's mind leaped to Avezzana; for an instant she had a clear vision of his slim figure, and his disquieting gaze. "I don't know," she said, confused. Fanny jerked her head toward the door. "That private? That man in there?" Ann laughed. "Peter?" "Is that his name?" "It is all I know of his name. I used to go to school with him in Milton Center, but I haven't seen him since." She disposed of him thus lightly.

"He saved your life," Fanny interposed sternly. "I know. He was awfully brave. But almost all men are brave, Fanny. War makes you realize that." Fanny nodded; it was impossible for her to remain disapproving. Her shining eyes betrayed her sudden joyousness, and Ann laughed as she flung her long arms about her and kissed her. They each drew back from this unaccustomed caress, embarrassed, all at once, by the complete frankness of their understanding. Suddenly a bell pealed through the house and Ann ran to lean over the stair rail. "I think Joseph is afraid to go," she called back to Fanny. The bell rang again, a quick impatient jangle, and she gathered her floating skirts about her. "See if it waked him," she said, nodding over her shoulder at the wounded man's room, and as Fanny started to obey her, she ran down to open the door. She could see, outlined against the clouded glass pane, a shape that was somehow familiar. There was something about it that made her vaguely uneasy—perhaps it was the set of the military cap which disturbed her—but she was in no way prepared for the revelation she had when she opened the door. "Hendricks!" she gasped, clinging weakly to the big silver knob. And Hendricks it was, big, impressive, and quite evidently indignant.

"Well, Ann?" he boomed at her, startled at her sudden appearance. "I wonder that you can look me in the face." "Hendricks—here in New York! Come in; we shall all be so glad to see you!" She was talking nervously, and pulling him toward the library. She wanted to settle with him before Fanny knew that he was there, for she guessed that a scene was inevitable. "You've had my note," she said. "Yes! That's why I'm here, taking a leave at a time like this!" he stammered. "Ann!" he looked at her, shrinking, guilty and sorry, and his wrath melted. "Say you didn't mean it, Ann," he pleaded. "I wish I could, Hendricks! Oh, my dear, I wish I could, but I am through with pretending! I don't love you, Hendricks. I wish I did, but I don't. I hate myself, but that doesn't make me love you."

Suddenly all Hendricks' stalwart masculine impressiveness broke up before the girl's startled gaze. He looked at her with eyes which were quite obviously filling with tears, and as he swung sharply away, a great sob horrified her. She clenched her hands tight to keep from comforting him, as he stood with his head down on his arm, at the empty fireplace. "I am sorry," she kept repeating futilely. "I'm so sorry."

It seemed a long time before he straightened, and faced her with more dignity than he had ever shown her. "What am I going to do with my life?" he demanded. He blew his nose with a desperation that was somehow not at all ludicrous. "Wonderful things, Hendricks! She had a flashing memory of him at Gettysburg. "Brave things!" Hendricks, too, had a vision of battle, and the seeking, questing, slaughter. "Thank God I have to go back," he said gloomily. This was too much for Ann. She ran to him, and clasped both her hands about his arm. "Don't talk like that!" she cried. "Don't!" Hendricks looked down steadily at her lifted face. "I can't help kissing you if you do that," he said. Swiftly she released her hold, flung her arms about his neck, and drew his face down to hers. She kissed him, with tender lips. "That's for good-by," she whispered, and he whispered in return. "You never were so sweet."

It was terrible: it was beyond her worst dreams of parting. She struggled to hold fast to her resolve; she recalled, wildly, a gaze as desperate and more darkly compelling; she remembered Fanny. . . . Fanny! "Hendricks," she said eagerly, "listen to me. There is something I must tell you." "Don't tell me that you love some one else!" He put up his arm as if to fend off a blow. "No. Some one else loves you." "Some one loves me? What of it?" "This—she adores you! She has always loved you, Hendricks! If I had never stumpled into your life you would have married her, I know. She is so sweet, so pretty! I don't see how you could ever have looked at me.

"I Don't Love You, Hendricks. I Wish I Did, but I Don't."

when she was here." She cast about her for a compelling reason to bring interest to Hendricks' dull eyes. "She loves you so much," she ended flatly. "Who does?" he asked impatiently. "Fanny." "Fanny! Nonsense! Fanny! You must be mistaken, Ann. . . . Poor little Fanny! She has always been fond of me, I know—but love? Well, well—Fanny!" Ann ached to be away from this atmosphere of desperate renunciation. "Think it over, Hendricks," she said crisply, and, taking advantage of his bewilderment, she slipped into the hall and closed the door behind her with a heartening sensation of relief. "That's done," she said clearly.

She stood for a moment, listening and then she turned to the stairs and her forgotten patient. She found Fanny seated by the bed endeavoring to make trivial conversation with the raw-boned stranger, an obviously glad to see her. In spite of all her kindness Fanny could never carry off a conversation with her foundations. "Who was it?" she asked. Ann hesitated for an instant. "It is some one to see you." "To see me? A caller, and the cit in this state? Who is it, Ann?" "I don't know. You had better go down." The girl rose, somewhat flustered. She looked down at her spreading pink checked skirts. "Am I all right?" she demanded. "Yes. . . . Wait a moment." An tuckered in a stray lock of Fanny's smooth hair. "You look sweet," she murmured. Her friend flushed brilliantly. "Don't be silly," she reproved her, wit abashed eyes, as she stole away. Ann, listening, could hear the light tap of her heels as she hurried down the hall. Peter lay looking at her with eagle eyes. Meeting them, she dragged her self back from the engrossing solution of her personal problem, and went to sit beside him. . . . I was good-looking, in spite of his rous beard, she decided, as his stern face softened in a welcoming smile. "Annie," he murmured. "We well!" "How strange that it should have been you who saved me, Peter." "Strange? I don't know; I have a ways thought about you, a lot, at night. I was coming over here to ta a look at the house where you lived, when you—happened along."

"Are you badly hurt? I can't send the servants for a doctor with the streets in this condition, but I'll go myself, if you need one."

Peter's chin, already noticeable, squared itself aggressively above his sheets. "You keep off the streets," he said definitely. "I'm all right! I haven't got my strength back, that's all, and somebody kicked my bad leg."

"I'm sorry. It was all my fault. You must stay here until you are well again. How long a leave have you?"

"Indefinite. I can't go back. They say I'll always limp, if I walk much."

"That a pity."

"Yes, it is like to see the fighting through of course."

"You need a good rest, just out of hospital."

Peter nodded. "I've never loathed my life, but now I'm planning to go to Milton Center to stay with my sister until I'm fit to work again. . . . It's four years since I've been back there."

"Where do you live?"

"Chicago. I was running a machine shop out there when the war began. Got it paid for, too—and was just beginning to make a little money of my own. . . . Kind of hard luck. . . . But I can pick up my business when I go back. I've managed to keep the rent up out of my army pay."

"What does one do in a machine shop, Peter?"

Peter laughed. "A little of everything. Mending things, mostly. I used to do that before I left Milton Center. I worked for a while in the blacksmith shop there, and I kept that sewing-machine you sent Mrs. Allen the first Christmas after you went, in order. I suppose if I fixed it once I fixed it a hundred times," he added reflectively.

"That's a funny business—mending."

"Well, I make things, too—invent 'em."

"You had better talk to uncle about that. Sometimes he buys inventions."

"He won't buy mine! I'm going to have the fun of developing my own ideas. I'd be further along now, except I've had responsibilities. My mother was sick for years, an' then my sister's husband turned out wrong, an' I've had her and her little girl, but he was killed at Missionary Ridge, an' left her with life insurance—not much, but enough. My mother died last year, and I'm free for the first time in my life, free, and in the growing town."

"It sounds exciting. If I had stayed in Milton Center I should have been sorry I wasn't a man, so that I might have worked with you."

"If you had stayed in Milton Center I should probably be sorry you weren't a man, too. I've got no time to fall in love."

Ann laughed, but she flushed under the back-handed compliment.

"You have never been back?" Peter asked.

"To Milton Center? No."

"Kind of mean of you," Ann looked at him questioning. "Mrs. Allen thought a sight of you and your mother."

"I suppose she did."

"Of course everybody knows that you, or your rich relations, sent her money every month, but she'd have enjoyed a sight of you before she died. She used to talk about you sometimes to me; I liked to hear about the way you lived. This man Cortlandt is the kind of man I'm going to be, some day."

Ann laughed involuntarily. "Like Uncle Hendricks?" she cried incredulously.

A dull red burned on Peter's hollow cheeks. "You wait and see," was all he said.

Peter remained almost a month in the Washington square house, as Mrs. Cortlandt refused to let him go until he was entirely recovered. She made a great fuss over him, professing that he had saved, not merely Ann, but also her own Fanny, and, incidentally, the entire Cortlandt house and possessions, from the violence of the mob. She had his leg attended to by the best doctor in New York, and she fed him up with dainties until his lean cheeks took on a softer outline.

She sat for hours by his bedside, talking condescendingly to him about things of which he knew nothing, and at dinner she would say to the two girls, "The most amazing thing about the war is the way it makes people democratic!" She was, nevertheless, inclined to keep rather a rigid chaperonage over Fanny's and Ann's inter-communication. "You never can tell," she said wisely to them, "with people like that."

For the first few days Peter was in the house, Ann slept most of the time. Gettysburg left her exhausted; all she wanted to do was to lie, placid, happy and utterly relaxed, between her cool linen sheets. When she was about again, the riots were a thing of the past, and Hendricks had returned to his regiment. Her life was suddenly drained of excitement. The family doctor, who had advised a week in bed, now insisted on a vacation from her work in the hospitals, and for once Ann was willing to obey. She had literally nothing to do, and was glad of it, as she felt strangely languid and foolishly content. She liked to talk to Peter; she had an extraordinary sense of kinship with him. Perhaps it was because of their bond of early association—no one else knew the surroundings from which she had sprung—or possibly it was a deeper thing than that, a mutual recognition of fundamental qualities in each other. She found that she was able to talk to him of her work in the hospitals, and of all that ghastly week at Gettysburg, with a freedom she had before known only when with her guardian. In return he told her all about the war from a private soldier's viewpoint—a vastly different war, Ann found, than it was when seen through the eyes of an officer. . . . They talked of her mother, too. It seemed that Peter retained the clearest memory of her sweet perfection; that she had been a sort of fairy princess to him, in his little boyhood.

"The day we heard her boat had sunk," he told Ann, "I hid up in the hayloft, and cried. . . . It's the last time I ever did such a thing."

"I wish I had known that, down here in New York. It would have helped a lot."

"It's a good thing you left Milton Center," Peter assured her. "I'm a member of any one with a scrap of ambition. It isn't big enough. I'm glad I got out when I did; I was getting on all right, but, you see, there was a limit to it. . . . In the beginning, out there, I had a pretty hard time to get on my feet, but I was never sorry I went, even when I was hungry. A man has a chance in Chicago; I'll be a big man before I get through out there. You'll see."

He thrust his head forward. There was an eager, seeking look in his eyes; he might have been a poet having an inspiration, and, so stimulated, he was suddenly glorified. Ann realized, all at once, that she had been wrong in thinking him a plain man. There was beauty in the lift of his head, and in the vivid lines of his jaw. He recalled vividly the little boy she had known; he brought her childhood before her, and it became momentarily a vital part of her life. She smiled tremulously into his lit eyes, and he started violently. Lost in his dream, he had forgotten all about her.

"You care very much, don't you?" she asked gently.

He laughed, with sudden harshness. "Care? That's a soft word. I'm ambitious. I suppose I'm determined to get out of the kind of life I've lived. I'm going to work hard enough to earn the right to have other men work for me, and then I'll do something big. . . . If it was had come ten years later, do you think I'd have been a private? No—I'd have outitted a company and gone in a captain, like your Rensselaer. . . . In the ranks! . . . I'm going to get out of the ranks, do you hear me—clear out, in front of 'em."

"Well, don't shout so. It's too hot." Ann's voice was cool, but her gray eyes rested softly on him. She liked the fine sweep of his ambition.

"I wonder," she said, "what you're doing, while you're getting rich and powerful."

Peter broke off in mid-sigh; his look of inspiration suddenly drooped, and his eyes were hungry as they searched her face. "Oh," he said, "you'll be marrying some lucky man."

"I suppose so." Her voice was indifferent; the prospect seemed remote.

Peter talked no more that afternoon; instead, he lay very still, watching Ann with somber eyes.

When the invalid began to get about, Fanny and Ann drove with him around the city, showing him the places of interest, and listening to his dispar-agement of them, in comparison with the extraordinary frontier phenomena of Chicago. Fanny, innately a New Yorker, remained tranquil under these disclosures, and turned a pitying smile upon the provincial young man, but Ann, who, it must be confessed, did her best to follow her friend's lead, was unable to stifle a faint suspicion that there might possibly be something in what Peter said. She knew, however, that the thought was unworthy of her.

"It is a pity there is no opera in the summer-time," Fanny said one day. "It would be nice if you could have an opportunity to hear one, now that you are in New York."

"Oh, I've heard opera in Chicago," Peter assured her. "The year before the war, we had four different companies, a couple of weeks each one. I went once, to 'La Sonnambula.' I didn't like it, though; I'll have to admit that. It was at Metropolitan hall! You've nothing finer than that in New York—at least, not much finer."

But it made no difference what he said, Fanny was imperious.

One afternoon just before he left Washington square, Ann and Peter drove alone, the day was sultry, so they decided to go to Battery park in search of a sea breeze. They were both a trifle uplifted at getting rid of Fanny's determined loquaciousness, but without her they were rather silent as they drove through the miles of arid streets, lined with conservative houses. Now and then the girl pointed out the dwelling of a friend, but for the most part they lay languidly back against the cushions; and her wide hat brim Ann's eyes were dark-shadowed, and Peter's face was white, above his close brown beard. It was really very hot.

At the park entrance Peter insisted that they get out and walk over to the shore. Ann protested a little, smilingly, but finally she lifted her frounced and flowered muslin clear of the wheels, climbed down the precarious folding steps of the barouche, and allowed him to lead her across the strip of lawn to where the river flowed magnificently past them to the nearby sea. A faint breeze from the ocean drifted tentatively over to them, now and then, and Ann sniffed it delightfully.

"Delicious," she said. "Let's sit here for a while." Peter found her an iron chair, and she sprawled at her feet, looking up at her intently. She took off her hat with the raking brim, and sat smoothing the ends of a lace barbe that trimmed it; her eyes were intent on her caressing fingers, her chignon shone in the sunlight. In the opening of her collar her throat was very white—as white as her forehead, under her parted hair.

They sat there for some time; Ann watched the shadows of the trees in the park grow longer, while the late afternoon colors stole into the sky, and Peter watched Ann. Afterward she could not have told what they had talked about, but she remembered that steady disconcerting look. Much of the time they said nothing at all, but a realization that she should miss Peter was borne in on her. She felt very miserable, and she wondered if this time, too, it would be many years before she saw him again; she wished that she might keep him near her always, a comfortable companion. "Life," she said at length, "is horrid."

"Yes," Peter sat suddenly upright and clasped his hands around his sound knee. He turned his gaze, with something of an effort, from the girl's face to the rolling river. "No matter how carefully he plans, a man is always a fool."

She nodded. "Yes—just like a woman."

Peter remained somber. "I had it all planned out. I was going to let all this alone, you know, until I was about forty-five, and had time for it."

"Time for what?"

"Love."

Ann's eyes widened and she straightened in her iron chair. It was the first time the word had been spoken by either of them, and now it lay like a gage between them. "We'd better be going home," she murmured. "It must be supper time." She didn't want Peter to make love to her; she didn't want anything to spoil the perfect companionship of the past four weeks.

He made no effort to detain her. It was not until they were going up the steps of the Washington square house that she spoke again. "I'm about twenty years ahead of my schedule," he said cryptically.

Ann did not ask him to explain.

CHAPTER XV

A Proposal.

Peter's departure made an enormous gap in Ann's life, and she turned confidently to Fanny to fill it. She wanted a good gossip about Hendricks, but to her surprise, she found her friend singularly elusive. Mrs. William gave her to understand that the cousins had been together almost constantly while Hendricks was at home, but beyond that Fanny's mother was for once uncommunicative. She turned a ready purple with resentment at the upstart's treatment of her nephew, but at the same time the culprit fancied that she rejoiced in it. At any rate, Ann thought, Mrs. William's opinion made no difference, it was her uncle's judgment of the matter which she awaited with impatience.

By the time it came she had grown accustomed to the monotony of a life shorn of emotion. She liked the long unspun days of late summer. The sight of the foreign envelope filled her with a strange dread; subconsciously she feared a reawakening.

"Paris, August 20th, 1863.

"My Dear Ann:

"I have received three letters in my last week's mail and I may say that their contents astonish me. I feel an old man and a sad one, after reading them. My sister-in-law I will not dwell on. She wrote me at length of your trip to Gettysburg, and while, at this distance, it seems an unnecessary thing to have undertaken, I feel that I am too far away for judgment. I can only be glad you are safe at home again and thankful that Hendricks is spared to us.

"Your letter told me of your final resolution to break with my nephew. I cannot say that I am surprised, particularly in the light of later events."

"What events?" Ann murmured, at a loss to understand.

"I will not conceal from you the fact that I am disappointed. I had hoped that, as time and the war went on, you might become attached to him; if, however, you cannot care for him, you are right in refusing to marry. I have written him, and should tell you that I told him he will share equally with you in my property. It seems to me but fair to reward in this way, his fine accomplishments as a soldier, and you will, please God, have enough with but half."

"And now, to the more serious matter of the other letter. You have never, in your letters, mentioned knowing a Count Avezzana, and yet he writes me for permission to ask your hand in marriage."

Ann gasped, and hastily reread this amazing statement, plainly written in her guardian's fine legible hand.

"He writes me for permission to ask your hand in marriage and, what is more, he states his belief that you will not prove indifferent to his suit. This I cannot tell, but as he begs me—reasonably enough, owing to the fact that his mission necessitates his expeditious return to Italy—to allow him to approach you at once, you may confirm or deny it in person.

"I have, at his suggestion, made inquiries in regard to him at the Italian embassy here. I find him to be a member of an important Italian family, and personally a favorite of the king. He should, I am told, go far. He has a palazzo in Rome, at present untenable for a supporter of Victor Emmanuel, a more modest establishment in Milan, and an ancient country place in Piedmont, where he was born.

"I can hear only good things of him, but you must remember that he is a native of Europe, where the customs and the ideas differ greatly from those you have known. However, if your feelings for him are of a sufficiently affectionate nature, these differences may be overcome. There are examples of such happy marriages. I am greatly hampered by not being able to talk with you, and by your lack of frankness when writing me. All depends on your feelings toward this young man. I am prepared to receive him as your husband if that is your wish, and I must tell you that you will be making what the world calls a brilliant marriage.

"I will not dwell on what your permanent residence in Italy would mean to me. I am, you must remember, an old man, with my life behind me. You must not consider me in making your decision, except I beg of you, to this extent, Count Avezzana must soon return to Italy, and if he asks, in accordance to his proposal, that you will marry him before he leaves America and accompany him to Europe, I have his letter here—in the present deplorably disturbed conditions in my country it may well be years before I can again return to North America. Until Italy is united my place is there! It seems, therefore, my dear Ann, that, if you are to marry this young man, it must be done speedily, and in that case it will be impossible for me to be present. I find it difficult to believe that the ceremony would be legal without my presence, but such are the sad necessities of war. My work here is incomplete, and I have advised from the President begging me to remain indefinitely, as he is kind enough to believe me to be somewhat successful in my efforts to make public opinion in the Northern states. Therefore, if I may not take part in your wedding ceremony, I may, at least, share a day or two of your honeymoon. I shall await you in Paris with the liveliest anticipations.

"My dear Ann, be sure to act with deliberation and foresight to the end that your best happiness may be preserved. I am writing to the Count Avezzana, giving him my permission to pay you his attention.

"Your affectionate uncle,

"HENDRICKS CORTLANDT."

For a time after reading her letter Ann sat, stunned, without movement and almost without thought. The whole thing was too preposterous to grasp all at once, and her first feeling toward Avezzana was indignation at his having so needlessly disturbed her guardian.

It Scatters Yellow Fever.

The frightful disease, yellow fever, is carried and spread exclusively by a species of mosquito, the stegomyia, which is the common house "skeet of the tropics. It is very tiny—so small, indeed, that ordinary wire screens will not keep it out—and strikingly marked—a silvery white lyre-shaped pattern on the thorax, white stripes on the abdomen and legs, and black and white.

"Don't Love You, Hendricks. I Wish I Did, but I Don't!"

when she was here. She cast about for a compelling reason to bring interest to Hendricks' dull eyes. "Still loves you so much," she ended flatly.

"Who does?" he asked impatiently.

"Fanny."

"Fanny! Nonsense! Fanny! You must be mistaken, Ann. . . . Poor little Fanny! She has always been fond of me, I know—but love? Well, well—Fanny!"

Ann ached to be away from this atmosphere of desperate renunciation. "Think it over, Hendricks," she said crisply, and taking advantage of his bewilderment, she slipped into the hall and closed the door behind her with a heartening sensation of relief. "That's done," she said clearly.

She stood for a moment, listening, and then she turned to the stairs and her forgotten patient.

She found Fanny seated by the bed, endeavoring to make trivial conversation with the raw-boned stranger, and obviously glad to see her. In spite of all her kindness Fanny could never carry off a conversation with no foundations. "Who was it?" she asked. Ann hesitated for an instant. "It is some one to see you."

"To see me? A caller, and the city in this state? Who is it, Ann?"

"I don't know. You had better go down."

The girl rose, somewhat flustered. She looked down at her spreading pink-checked skirts. "Am I all right?" she demanded.

"Yes. . . . Wait a moment," Ann tucked in a stray lock of Fanny's smooth hair. "You look sweet," she murmured.

Her friend flushed brilliantly. "Don't be silly," she reproved her, with abashed eyes, as she stole away. Ann, listening, could hear the light tap of her heels as she hurried down the hall.

Peter lay looking at her with eager eyes. Meeting them, she dragged herself back from the engrossing solution of her personal problem, and went to sit beside him. He was good-looking, in spite of his rough beard, she decided, as his stern face softened in a welcoming smile.

"Annie," he murmured. "Well, well!"

"How strange that it should have been you who saved me, Peter."

"Strange? I don't know. I have always thought about you a lot, anyway. I was coming over here to take

agement of them, in comparison with the extraordinary frontier phenomena of Chicago. Fanny, innately a New Yorker, remained tranquil under these disclosures, and turned a pitying smile upon the provincial young man, but Ann, who, it must be confessed, did her best to follow her friend's lead, was unable to stifle a faint suspicion that there might possibly be something in what Peter said. She knew, however, that the thought was unworthy of her.

"It is a pity there is no opera in the summer-time," Fanny said one day. "It would be nice if you could have an opportunity to hear one, now that you are in New York."

"Oh, I've heard opera in Chicago," Peter assured her. "The year before the war, we had four different companies, a couple of weeks each one. I

Notice From B. L. Boydston

In a conference with my creditors, we deemed it necessary to establish a credit department for the purpose of collecting and eliminating present and future past due notes and accounts. And we have placed these matters in the hands of W. E. Melton at Baird.

All who are indebted to me with past due notes or accounts will please see him, as my Creditors insist that these items be settled.

Respectfully, B. L. Boydston.

Ford Four-Door Sedan

Fully equipped, 6625, 5 c. h. Detroit

Inside and out, the new Ford Four-door Sedan shows improvements of far more than usual importance.

It is lower and sturdier in appearance. New cowl, hood, radiator and apron add size and finish to the front. Sun visor, and wide, well-finished aluminum doors with bar handles perfect the design of the body.

Silk window curtains, deep broad-cloth upholstery; dome light, door lock, window regulators and handles, all finished in nickel, complete a refinement you would expect only at a far higher price.

The car can be obtained through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

PEANUTS BEING MARKETED ON BIG SCALE HERE

Farmers who engage in the peanut industry are hauling in to market this week by big truck and wagon loads, sacked and ready for shipment. The market is considered good, the price ranging as high as to $1.75 per bushel. A number of farmers have engaged extensively in growing this kind of crop here, some making it their principal crop for revenue. While peanuts is a good money crop, it is contended by many that is too drawing on the soil, and for that reason they depend on cotton and other crops. Unfortunately a large per cent of the peanut crop this year has been damaged by handling in wet condition and as a result the market is affected. Peanut growers are urged to see that the peanuts are in proper condition to market before being sacked. It will pay.

New Roadster

Business men—with whom the runabout has always been very popular—are well pleased with the changes embodied in this model.

Always rugged, the car has been made decidedly trimmer and more comfortable.

This result is obtained by raising the radiator and enlarging the cowl; making a decided improvement in looks and providing more leg room.

A well designed top and slanting windshield do their share toward adding a finished, clean-cut appearance.

Make it a point to see the other new models also on display in our show room.
