County celebrates beautiful Fourth

Day of celebration marked by cool weather, attendance up for July 4th barbecue

Attendees at the 1997 Saints' Roost Celebration were greeted by unseasonably cool weather for the Independence Day festivities.

Temperatures during the afternoon did reach into the 90s, but the morning activities on the Courthouse Square were very pleasant due to a early morning rain and a slight breeze. Some folks even complained that it was too cold in the shade and had to move their chairs into the sunshine to get warm!

July 4th was, of course, the highlight of the three-day celebration which began with the first night of the rodeo on July 3.

More than 1,550 people were served a delicious barbecue lunch on the Square by the members of the Al Morah Shrine Club. That number reflects an increase of about 150 people over last year.

This year's July Fourth Parade was chaired by Linda Gray and the Shriners Khiva Temple of Amarillo won the award for the Best Floot. The Best Antique Vehicle was also won by the Shriners "New Yorker." The Best Riding Unit went to the parade's perennial Color Guard of Donnie Hall and Johnny Hill. Chamber of Commerce Secretary Pat Archuleta reports that plans are already under way for next year's parade. You may mail suggestions to the Chamber at Box 730, Clarendon, TX.

The Chamber's Cow Patty Bingo contest was won by Linda Robertson. The cow didn't actually do its thing in the allotted time, so a winner was drawn at random.

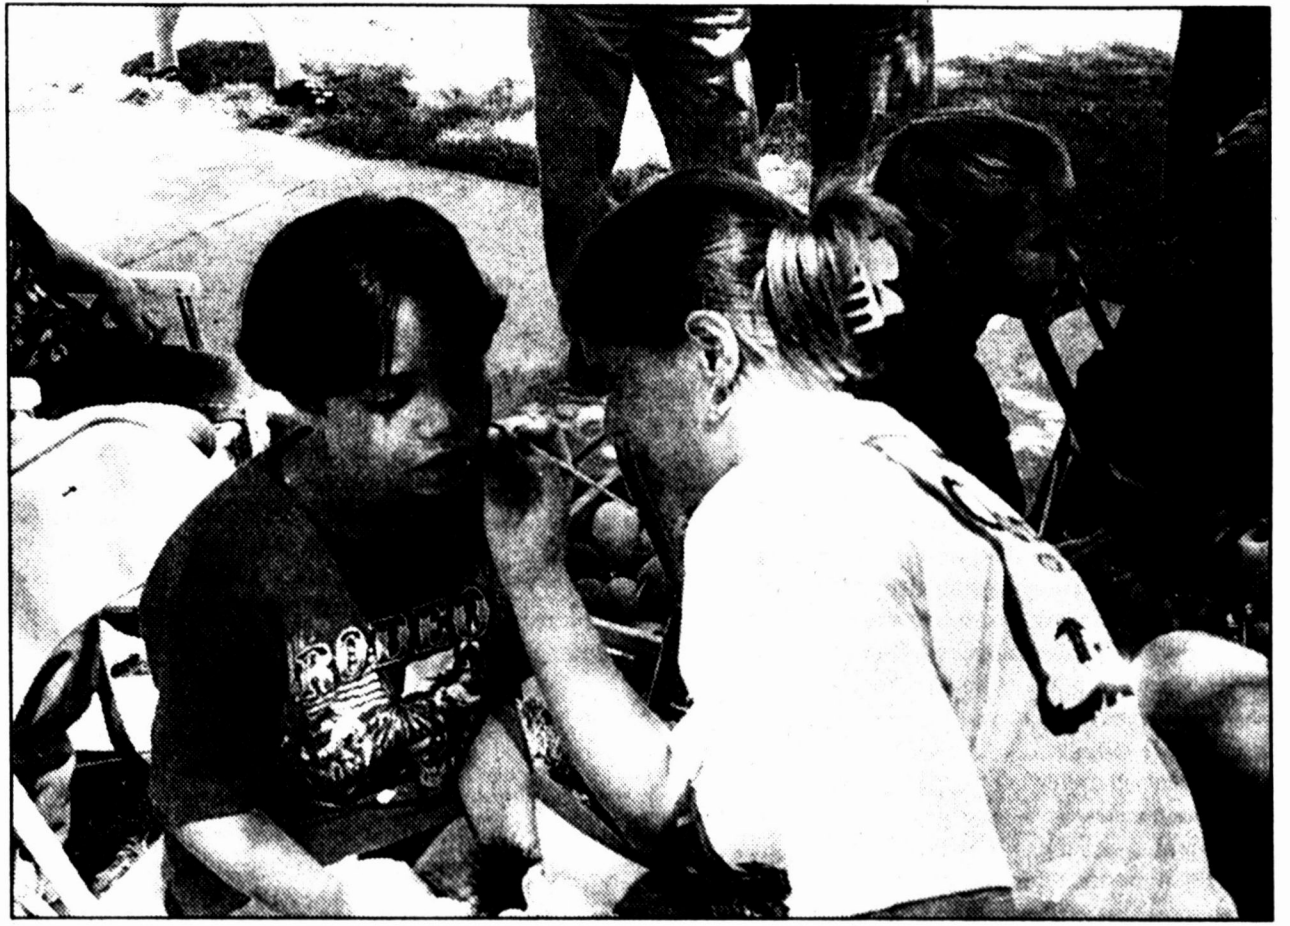

For more information on the Saints' Roost Celebration, please see related photos and stories in this issue of the Enterprise.

Turtle Race has worldwide appeal this year

The annual Hensons Turtle Race drew a big crowd from all over the world last Saturday as part of the annual Saints' Roost Celebration.

According to A.R. Henson, people attended the event from as far away as Singapore.

One hundred and eleven turtles were entered in the 0 to 4 years age group, but Cody Stavenhagen's tortoise "Speedy" beat them all. Cody is the son of Steve and Michelle Stavenhagen of Amarillo.

In the 5 to 8 years age group, Chase Bray and "Super T" beat 97 other terrapins. He is the son of Kelly Seales of Lubbock.

Clarendon's Bryan McFarland competed among 74 turtles to win the 9 to 14 years age group. He is the son of Chandra Holman.

All of the winners will receive a $50 savings bond from Hensons.

Turtle Race winners this year were Bryan McFarland of Clarendon, Cody Stavenhagen of Amarillo, and Chase Bray of Lubbock.

City of Hedley holds three meetings

A final public hearing was held at 7 p.m. on July 3, 1997, at the Hedley City Hall regarding the sewer system improvements recently completed with a Texas Community Development Program Grant. Karen Babcock, project administrator, presented a financial summary for the project and explained the costs associated with the project.

At 7:10 p.m. the City of Hedley held a public hearing for the 97-98 budget. After some discussion, a motion was made by Janie Hill that the budget be approved as presented. Kari Lindsey seconded, and the motion carried with a two to one vote, Johnny Dickson voting against.

At 7:30 p.m., the City Council met in regular session.

The council considered the need for sidewalk repair in front of City Hall on Main Street. Janie Hill made a motion to have the sidewalk replaced with the city providing the labor and equipment to demolish and remove the old concrete. Kari Lindsey seconded, and the motion carried with a two to one vote, Johnny Dickson voting against.

The council considered the need for a City Marshal and Municipal Judge. Johnny Dickson made a motion that the Council appoint a Municipal Judge and City Marshal. Motion died for lack of a second.

After which the council unanimously voted to adjourn.

Gramm announces USDA loans to aid family farmers in Donley County

WASHINGTON — US Sen. Phil Gramm has announced that farmers in Donley County are eligible to apply for low-interest emergency loans from the US Department of Agriculture to help recover from crop losses caused by excessive rain which fell earlier this spring.

For those who cannot obtain credit through normal channels, the Agriculture Department's Farm Service Agency will make loans available at below-market interest rates to family-sized farm operators, said Gramm, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

In addition to Donley County, Gramm said the following additional areas have been named as contiguous counties and therefore are eligible for assistance: Armstrong, Briscoe, Carson, Collingsworth, Gray, Hall, and Wheeler.

The Farm Service Agency, which supervises agriculture loan programs, is charged with providing aid to the farmers and ranchers in order to assist their economic recovery from natural disasters.

Enrollment up at Clarendon College for 1997 second summer session

Enrollment for the 1997 Summer II Term at Clarendon College was up nine percent over last year, according to college registrar Beth Johnston.

The college registered 223 students for its second summer term, which began June 30. That represents an increase of 21 students over 1996.

For the Summer I and Summer II terms combined, the college experienced a 9.2 percent increase over 1996, registering 684 student this year versus 636 students last year.

"Any time you experience an increase in enrollment these days and times, it's very gratifying," Dr. Scott Elliott, Clarendon College President said.

"I attribute the increase to not only the quality of instruction at the college, but also the fine job of our Student Services team as well as the coordinators with whom we are blessed to work at our off-campus sites - folks like Reneessa Klink in Wellington and James and Virginia Anglin in Childress."

Elliott again particularly saluted the work of Ms. Johnston, who orchestrates the registration process, as well as all of the administrative staff.

"All of those folks put in a lot of extra hours, especially during registration periods, and they make the process work very well," Elliott said. "That's not an easy chore when you're registering at multiple sites all over an expansive service area."

Clarendon College's Summer II term will conclude Friday, August 8. The 1997 fall semester will begin August 27.

Old Settlers pick Crawford for honors at 1997 reunion

This year's Old Settlers Reunion saw a slightly lower turn out than did the '96 event.

Sixteen Old Settlers joined the crowd on the Square for old fashioned pickin' and grinnin' music played by local musicians.

Floyd Crawford of Amarillo took home the honors for being the oldest settler and having traveled the longest distance.

Mr. Crawford said he moved to a farm north of Hedley back in 1926. His children attended school at Naylor, and for a time they lived at Martin before the family moved to Amarillo in the 40s. He said at the age of 95 he is still singing in his church choir and he still mows his own yard.

Other attendees at this year's Old Settlers Reunion were: Ralph Grady of Clarendon, L.A. Watson of Clarendon, Rose Lee Watson of Clarendon, Johnnie Key of Amarillo, Rachel Key of Amarillo, Clara Mae Carter of Clarendon, Vada Morrison of Clarendon, Iva Boydston of Hereford, Leo Hall of Friona, Mary Jane Smith of Clarendon, Ethel Dingler of Clarendon, Mark Allen of Clarendon, Vivian Allen of Clarendon, Olace Hicks of Howardwick, and Madelyn Hicks of Howardwick.

Floyd Crawford, age 95, was the oldest settler at the 1997 Old Settlers Reunion held on the Square July 4th.

County Should Retain Smith

The Commissioners Court meets less than a week from now, and there is still the nagging question of why Wanda Smith should be removed from her position as County Treasurer.

Yes, she made a mistake. Yes, the law says declaring to run for another office equals an automatic resignation from her county post.

But does the law require the commissioners to act so quickly to remove her? No.

In fact, technically they could just put the whole thing off until the next general election.

Let's consider the law for just a moment.

Someone once said, "There are times when men of good conscious cannot blindly follow orders." I would extend that to include not blindly following the law either.

In a syndicated column in the Amarillo Sunday News-Globe, Walter Williams eloquently addressed the topic of natural law as being the "moral principle undergirding our Declaration of Independence." Natural law being that which descends from God to humanity and supersedes the law of governments.

Williams points out that Germans who aided the Jews disobeyed the law and that Americans who aided runaway slaves disobeyed the law also. We should remember, too, that the Founding Fathers disobeyed the law with their treasonous actions against the British Crown.

As far as I know, there is still a law on the books in Texas forbidding people to carry pliers in their pocket. It dates from the days of the Range Wars when fence cutting was a major problem. Today no one pays any attention to the statute, but it is still illegal.

In a nutshell, silly laws, and more especially morally bad laws, ought not to be obeyed and should not be enforced. As Cicero put it, "The people's good is the highest law."

Which brings us back to Wanda Smith.

In all the time since this controversy arose, I still have yet to hear of any one claiming that she has done a bad job as treasurer or acted in any way inappropriately.

How then are the people of Donley County served by removing her from office? How then is Justice served by removing a good woman from her livelihood? And most importantly, how is Democracy served by having the will of the voters of Donley County overturned?

Wanda Smith was duly elected and reelected to her position by the people of this county. And barring any wrong-doing on her part, she should continue to serve until the people choose to remove her from office.

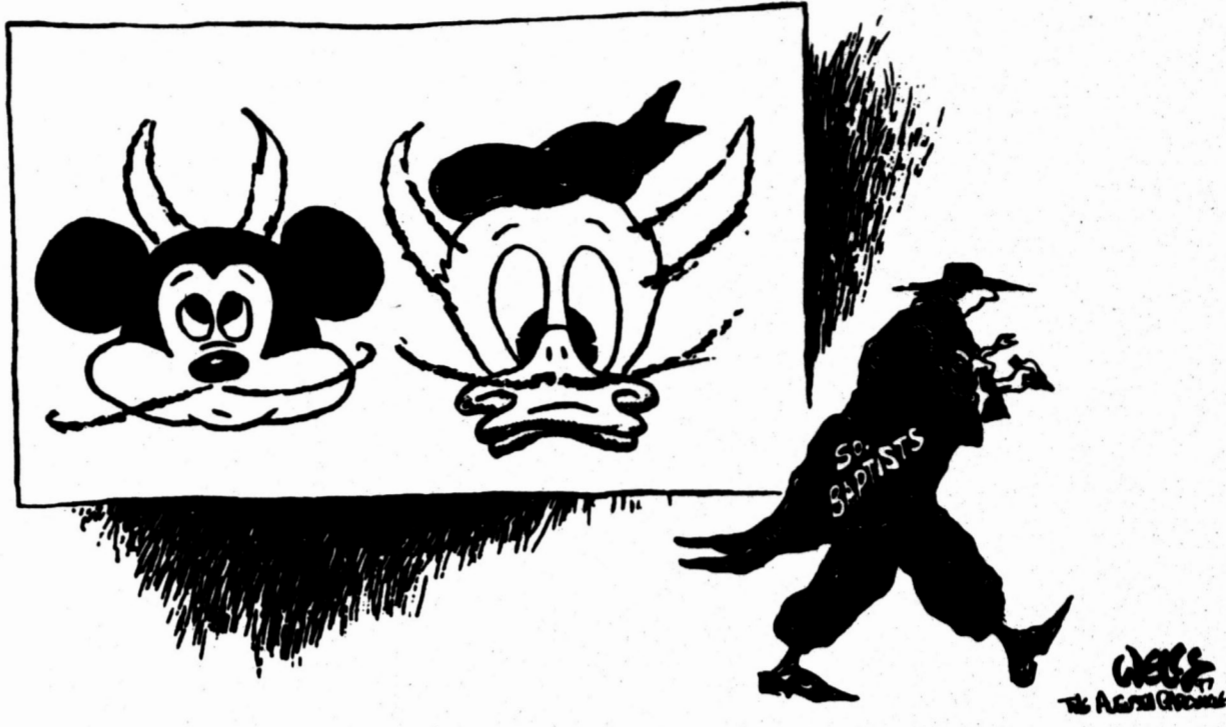

It is becoming apparent that only a handful of citizens, as few as two or three, are actually opposed to Mrs. Smith.

Remember last year's debacle of the city putting up those stop signs at one citizen's request? It was a silly thing to do, but it was peanuts compared to the Commissioners Court removing an elected public servant on the whims of a inconsequential minority of citizens.

It is the position of this newspaper that Wanda Smith should be allowed to serve out her term in office. It should be the voters, not a small band of nay-sayers, who should determine her fitness for the office.

We implore the County Commissioners to do what is right in this matter, to do the moral thing demanded by natural law, to do what is in the best interests of the People of this county and what is ultimately in the best interests of Democracy. If need be, table this issue continuously for the next 16 months until the general election when the voters can decide it for themselves. Until then, keep Wanda Smith in office.

The Commissioners Court will meet Monday at the Courthouse Annex. All citizens are encouraged to attend.

Letter from Judge Christal:

Commissioners violated the law also

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to you, the citizens, friends, and supporters during the 25 years I was elected to serve you. I feel that much has been accomplished during these years through grants, building improvements, and county finance. Through the years I have had splendid cooperation of the Commissioners Courts and very efficient and dedicated elected officials and co-workers. Without such cooperation, nothing could have been accomplished. We have, of course, had opposition, but such opposition has been overcome.

Now, to address the problem at hand. The Commissioners should not condemn and act on a technical violation of the law by another office holder when they themselves are in violation of the law. They have been in violation of Transportation Code, Art. 251.005, which went into effect in September, 1995. The law requires each Commissioner to make a sworn report on all roads, bridges, and culverts, etc., to Commissioners Court and then turn the reports over to the Grand Jury regularly. This law was called to their attention about four months ago. Looks to me like they should be required to pay for their violations the same as other elected officials. They also may have been in violation because of two more serious actions, which could be pursued by the public. They could be subject to removal from office the same as removing the County Treasurer from office.

Now, concerning the action of the Commissioners Court on Article 16, Section 65, of the Texas Constitution — the part that says certain elected officers automatically resign office by announcing their intent to run for a different office. The Commissioners Court does not have to take action. There is no set time in which the vacancy is to be filled, and the law further provides, according to the Attorney General's opinion, that the "resigned" official shall continue to serve until a successor is appointed and qualified.

Due to the pressure put on one or two Commissioners from two or three unhappy citizens, they felt like they had to start taking applications for County Treasurer. What bothers me is why let two or three unhappy citizens out of 3,969 citizens tell the Commissioners Court what to do? Sounds like something is wrong. Why are they acting on it now when the law has been in violation for over 38 years and no harm has been done to the people or the County?

If the Commissioners Court is so anxious to act on this, why should the public not be willing to file on the Commissioners' violations? Perhaps the voters should take a lot more interest in the County, City, and Hospital District to see what needs to be corrected.

I think we should start cleaning our own back yard before trying to condemn and clean the backyard of others.

W.R. Christal

Editor's Note: The text of the portion of the Transportation Code referred to by former judge Christal is as follows:

- (a) A county commissioner serving as a road supervisor shall make a sworn report to each regular term of the commissioners court showing:
 - (1) the condition of each road or part of a road and of each culvert and bridge in the commissioner's precinct;
 - (2) the amount of money held by overseers available to be spent on the roads in the precinct;
 - (3) the number of mileposts and fingerboards in the precinct defaced or torn down;
 - (4) any new road that should be opened in the precinct;
 - (5) any bridges, culverts, or other improvements necessary to place the roads in the precinct in good condition, and the probable cost of the improvements; and
 - (6) the name of each overseer who has failed to work on the roads or who in any way neglected to perform the overseer's duties.
- (b) The report shall be entered in the minutes of the commissioners court to be considered in improving public roads and determining the amount of taxes imposed for public roads.
- (c) The report shall be submitted, together with each contract made by the court since its last report for any work on the road, to the grand jury at the first term of the district court occurring after the report is made to the commissioners court.

Ed.: Examination of the minutes of the Donley County Commissioners Court from January through March 1997 shows no evidence of road reports being given by any of the commissioners. In the April meeting, a report was filed by the commissioner for Pct. 4, and in May all four commissioners submitted reports. The minutes of the June meeting were not available at press time.

Letter supports stand on Smith

Dear Editor,

Mega Dittos on your editorial "Courthouse Sees Another Official Exit." It's time somebody speaks up.

[Courthouse Sees Another Official Exit: County Commissioners decided Monday to find a replacement for Donley County Treasurer Wanda Smith. It is a shame that good people have to leave their posts due to an "oversight," and it is maddening that there is no allowance for a person to make a mistake. In my humble opinion, once Mrs. Smith withdrew her name from the hospital district ballot that should have been the end of it. Good public servants are hard to find. I personally have never heard any complaint about the way Mrs. Smith did her job; unfortunately, I cannot say the same for the county commissioners.]

It seems like every few years, America goes through an energy crisis when supply goes down, prices go up, and people get pinched at the pump. It happened last year, and it's likely to happen again in the not too distant future unless we reduce the amount of oil we get from overseas.

It's hard to believe, but America currently imports more than half the oil we use every day. Oil imports constitutes the largest part of the nation's trade deficit and costs the US economy $60 billion dollars each year. It also costs us in jobs and revenue.

Over the past 15 years, 500,000 jobs have been lost in the oil and gas industry nationwide. And in Texas, where oil and gas production once provided 28 percent of State revenue, it now provides only seven percent. The only way we're going to reduce the amount of oil we import from abroad is to increase the amount we pump here at home.

This past week, I introduced legislation that would help us do just that. In a nutshell, my legislation would give producers an incentive to open back up inactive oil and gas wells by giving them a federal tax exemption on any profit they might make. The bill is modeled after successful legislation that's been enacted here in Texas and is another example of Washington taking a lesson in good government from the states.

There are over 900,000 inactive wells nationwide, and over 300,000 in Texas alone. So while the bill won't solve all of our problems, it will at least help us make a dent in it and cut the number of barrels we import from abroad.

Study seeks to save most crop water

Bushland - Researchers at the USDA-ARS Conservation and Production Agriculture Laboratory are looking for ways to save every ounce of water needed to grow crops.

USDA's agricultural engineer Arland Scheider, who is part of the study, said the work involves water runoff from low energy precision application (LEPA) irrigation systems, where it is being measured from both diked and undiked furrows.

Runoff from the 30 feet wide space is collected at the lower corner of the plots and then measured. Schneider said with open furrows and full irrigation using LEPA, at least 40 percent to 50 percent of the applied water could run off the plots.

Furrow diking resulted in 2 inches more soil water storage in the upper 3 feet with LEPA irrigation and 1 inch more with spray irrigation after seven seasonal applications.

Donley County Senior Citizens hold bake sale

The Donley County Senior Citizens July 4th Bake Sale was the most successful bake sale we have ever had! Our seniors donated 49 baked items for us to sell. Donley County residents know what great cooks our seniors are and lined up to buy all of the goodies! We really appreciate everyone who donated baked items - some brought two or more items.

We appreciate everyone who came by our booth and bought goodies, many paid more for the items that they were priced. We appreciate each one of you who helped make our bake sale so successful. We had two beautiful dolls made by Onita Thomas that were given away. Helen Myers won the doll dressed in white, and Patsy Hill won the doll dressed in red.

We were glad to have Dorothy and Shirley Pitts and Ruth Perkins' brother and sister-in-law visiting at the Center last week. Our condolences go out to Blaine Butts and to Nancy Davis. They each recently lost a brother. We appreciate Sisters Two Deli for being so good to bring donuts.

We are planning a fund raiser meal on every second Thursday of the month. Dear Donley County Producers:

With the 1997-98 Conservation Reserve Program becoming a reality and another sign up coming up in November, many of you will have new contracts that will require you to seed new fields of grass and forbs mixtures that will meet the specifications set forth by your government agencies.

We would suggest that you get a list of grasses and forbs that will be allowed from your Natural Resource Conservation Service, which most of us know it as the Soil Conservation Service. Confer with them as to what will be required for your contract and suited to your soils and cover crops.

After you have this information, we will be better able to give you an idea about the cost of your mix per acre and the total establishment cost per acre.

We appreciate the opportunity to give you a cost estimate and hope that we can provide you with the seed and seeding needs during this very important time.

We have been in this business for 12 years supplying your needs at a competitive price and we want to serve your needs for this very important conservation reserve establishment.

We realize the importance of this and do not take our commitment lightly, as you will have to live with what you plant for at least 10 years.

Horse regulations set for July 1

License tags. Renew them every 12 months, and you can go just about anywhere, anytime.

Get your horse tested every 12 months for Equine Infectious Anemia (EIA), commonly called "Coggins" or "Swamp Fever," and you can take your animal just about anywhere, anytime.

After six months of requesting voluntary compliance with the EIA testing requirements, inspectors from the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC), the state's livestock health regulatory agency, are ready to start checking test papers July 1.

TAHC inspectors will drop by randomly at fairs, events, rodeos, roping competitions and trail rides to ensure that all equine (horses, donkeys, mules, asses or other members of the horse family) have been tested within the past 12 months for the viral disease, EIA. Owners or riders are to have with them either their animal's original EIA test document, called a "VS 10-11" form, or a copy of the form that has a second, original signature by the issuing veterinarian.

An EIA test within the past 12 months is also required when equine are privately sold, explained Dr. Terry Beats, TAHC executive director and state veterinarian. He said sellers and buyers can decide who will pay for the test, which runs around $20-25 for an accredited veterinarian to draw and submit a blood sample, complete the necessary test record, and the cost of the laboratory work.

"When equine are sold at livestock markets or at regularly scheduled horse auctions, the test is not required, but the buyer will be informed that the health status of the animal is uncertain," said Dr. Beats. For several months earlier this year, TAHC commissioners and an appointed ad-hoc committee representing the equine industry struggled with this issue, he said.

"Market owners were greatly concerned about potential loss of business, if a test had to be run prior to selling a horse. The business owners also worried about the expense of setting up a laboratory at the sale. The compromise worked out with the markets will require notifying the buyer that the animal is untested, and a TAHC disease information sheet will be stapled to the receipt. The pamphlet urges the owner to quarantine the equine until a negative test is obtained and discusses the consequences of having an infected animal," Dr. Beats said.

"The TAHC has worked with markets to identify horses with back tags and since 1997 has been testing Texas horses at the two Texas slaughter plants that handle equine," he explained. "This testing allows infected animals to be traced back to their home premise, where additional infection may be found. Our field staff will also be checking markets for compliance with the regulations after July 1."

"More than 550 infected equine have been detected in Texas since September 1, 1996," Dr. Beats pointed out. "Of course, we're testing record numbers of equine this year, because in the past, mostly animals going out of state or to a multi-state competition were tested. Now with widespread testing, we're getting a clearer picture of the disease situation and finding reservoirs of infection that otherwise might never have been detected.

Until 1997, about 80,000 Texas horses were tested for EIA each year. In the first five months of 1997, January through May, nearly 100,000 equine were tested during the EIA testing regulation "phase-in" period when voluntary compliance was requested, said Dr. Beats.

"Just looking at an equine will not tell someone if the animal is infected. In some cases, the infection causes an equine to develop fever, weight loss and severe anemia. However, many infected equine have symptoms only when they are overworked, stressed or injured, and then they may recover," he said. "Finally, there are animals that show no signs of illness. These unapparent carriers' still can be instrumental in spreading infection."

"All EIA-infected animals should be considered dangerous, as they pose a threat to 'clean' equine. There is no effective vaccine, treatment or cure for EIA," said Dr. Beats. "Infected equine must be permanently identified and are restricted under quarantine to their premise."

He explained that as long as infected animals stay on the premise, all other equine on the ranch or farm also are quarantined. Infected equine can be removed by having them euthanized, or having them permitted to a research center, a market for sale to slaughter, or for direct shipment to slaughter. Sixty days after infected equine are removed, the remaining equine on the premise can be tested again. Dr. Beats said that if those equine test negative for EIA, the quarantine is lifted, and the animals may be moved freely.

Texas author to speak at Texas History Exhibit in Panhandle

There is, in the state of Texas, one surviving Lone Star flag known to have flown in the service of the Republic. It was carried to the Mexican border with troops on a mission from President Mirabeau Lamar. This was in November of 1839, the same year of the flag's design and adoption. On the return journey, the entire detachment was killed, perhaps by bandits, and the flag was taken to Ciudad Camargo, Mexico, where it hung in the police station for many years.

This flag is among the many historic artifacts depicted in a photo-and-text panel exhibit celebrating the 150th anniversary of the annexation of Texas as the 28th state of the United States. This exhibit will be on display from July 2 through July 24 in Panhandle in a free-admission public humanities program sponsored by the Carson County Square House Museum.

Entitled "Annexation: Celebrating 150 Years of Texas Statehood," the panel exhibit has been organized by the Texas Humanities Resource Center, Austin, with support from Exxon Companies, USA. It includes 24 panels of photographic images and fascinating captions detailing the conditions of life in Texas during the era of the Republic and the intensive political maneuvering that took place while it was debated whether to admit Texas into the union.

The show is based on an exhibition of original artifacts and actual documents organized by the Capitol Complex Visitors Center, Austin. Because the historical materials are so important to Texas history, and many are in fragile condition, the original exhibition has been replicated in photo-panels for travel throughout the state. James L. Haley, an author and Texas historian living in Austin, served as guest curator for both the original exhibition and the panel show. He has written an interpretive text that addresses all the major issues related to Texas annexation. Separate panels are devoted to slavery, encouragement of European immigration, international treaties, the Mexican War, and the unique disposition of lands within Texas boundaries. There are pictures of such treasures as Mary Maverick's diary, Sam Houston's passport, Santa Anna's snuff box, and a teapot presented to President Houston by the Empress of China.

To celebrate the showing in Panhandle, historian-curator Haley will give a talk at 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, July 13 at the Museum. No stranger to the history of the Texas Panhandle region, Haley's book, The Buffalo War: The History of the Red River Indian Uprising of 1874, is considered one of the definitive works on the last of the Comanche-Kiowa Indian wars. A 1985 book tour for his Texas: An Album of History took him through Amarillo, Pampa, Borger, Dumas, and Dalhart. "I'm looking forward to renewing some old acquaintances," he said.

Haley's topic Sunday will be "Digging up History." "What people most like to hear are war stories from doing research into Texas history, and I've got some pretty good stories. But I also try to build bigger themes on that, because fewer people study history seriously these days. That troubles me. People think they've got their own problems, and they don't see history as anything relevant to their daily lives. They couldn't be more wrong. If I tell the right stories on Sunday, I think they'll want to learn more," Haley said.

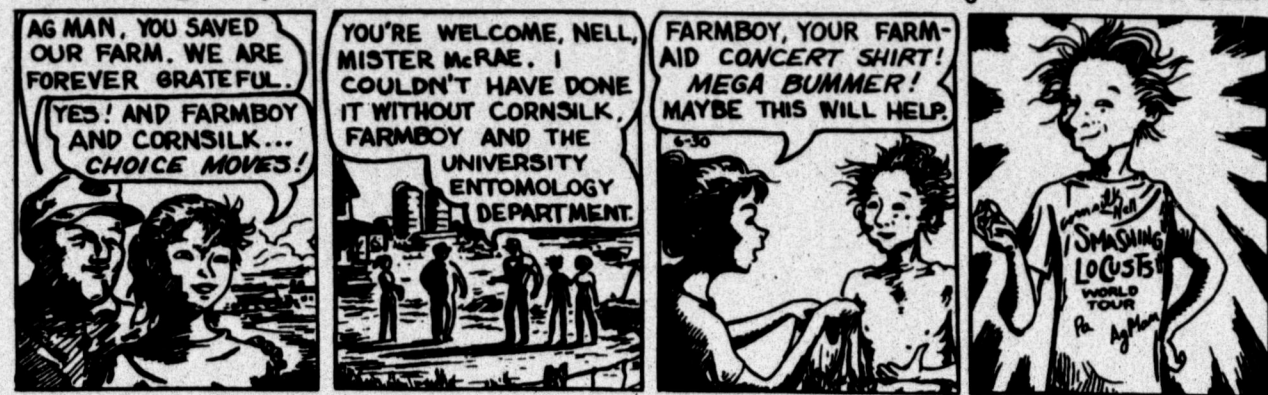

The photo exhibit and James Haley's lecture are supported in part by the Texas Council for the Humanities, a member of the Federal/State Partnership of the National Endowment for the Humanities. "Annexation: Celebrating 150 Years of Texas Statehood" can be viewed in the Square House gallery, and the lecture will be held across the street in the Hazlewood Arts and Education Building auditorium. Both the exhibit and the lecture are free of charge. It's an experience you will never forget - and you'll always regret if you miss it.

Comptroller Sharp urges businesses to consider telecommuting to save time

AUSTIN — State Comptroller John Sharp recently urged Texas businesses to consider the option of telecommuting as a way to save money and increase their employees' morale, predicting that within 30 years, approximately 40 percent of the US workforce, or 50 million people, will be telecommuting.

"About 9 million American workers telecommute today, and that number will grow to 20 million during the next three years," Sharp said. "Employers looking for a way to reward their employees can use telecommuting to help their employees reduce daily expenses. This can have a big impact on employee moral."

"When you can reduce the amount of time you spend commuting, you can improve your quality of life," Sharp said. "Telecommuting can free up time to spend with their families - another way many people enhance their lives."

The Comptroller said research has shown that some of the most suitable tasks for telecommuting include data entry, writing, processing and coding, programming, telemarketing, customer service, research, editing, billing, bookkeeping, budgeting, drafting, and auditing.

Commenting in the latest issue of his award-winning monthly publication, Fiscal Notes, Sharp pointed to studies showing that telecommuters consistently out-perform their peers by 15 to 25 percent.

Still, telecommuting may not be a perfect fit for everyone, Sharp stressed.

"Workers who require minimum supervision, are well-organized, and self-motivated tend to perform the best," Sharp said. "There are often distractions at home-television, for example, or noisy neighbors - that don't exist in an office environment."

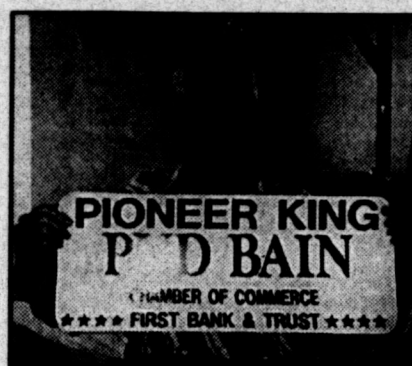

"Telecommuting also help reduce traffic congestion which helps reduce air pollution," Sharp said. "Employers say it reduces employee absenteeism and turnover, creates increased job satisfaction, and decreases shortages of office and parking spaces."

"Workers also like it because they spend less money on gas, lunch, and parking," Sharp said.

One key factor for success, Sharp noted, is the level of support management is willing to commit with training, technology, and flexibility. Keeping employees "in the loop" and giving them the tools they need to do their jobs has helped ensure the success of telecommuting.

Telecommuting was spurred in the early 1990's by amendments to the Clean Air Act, a federal mandate that requires large companies to reduce the number of employees traveling to work by car. There will be increases in telecommuting due in part to expanding methods of telecommuting. Technological improvements and declining costs for setting up home offices will continue to create opportunities for home-based business entrepreneurs.

The practice of telecommuting was also furthered by technological advances, which made home offices financially feasible.

Where's the King and Queen?

by Don Stone, Clarendon Chamber of Commerce

Where's the king? The queen? The car went down parade avenue, but with a driver and signs on the car only. Answer: In the scramble of getting the parade lined up, no one made arrangements to pick up the celebrities. So when there was a "no show," the driver (commandeered off the street) decided the parade must go on.

What to do next? Go to the queen, apologize, and make her picture with the sign. Then post the signs in her front yard. Then go to the king, apologize, post a sign on the walls of his room at the nursing home and one in the dining hall. Finally, apologize in the paper and print their pictures. "Sorry, Pud Bain. We goofed!" "Sorry, Gladys Hommel. We erred!"

Hope You Had A Great Fourth of July Dataline: McAllen, Texas. Greetings from the other end of Texas, down in the Rio Grande Valley where the deer are called muy grande, the senoritas are pretty, and only mad dogs and Englishmen venture outside during the midday heat.

For you anglers who enjoy outching black bass, I have found a saltwater fish that you are going to love. It is called redfish, and the Texas coastal waters, from Padre Island near Brownsville all the way up the coast to Louisiana, are loaded with this tasty, hard-fighting gamefish. After being nearly wiped out by decades of excessive over harvest by the commercial netters, the redfish have rebounded in astronomical numbers, due to the assistance from Texas Parks and Wildlife and private funding from concerned anglers who organized the Gulf Coast Conservation Association.

The popularity of saltwater fishing is at an all-time high and growing. It is easy to see why. While searching for redfish, one is apt to catch delicious flounder or trout. Anglers can fish in a boat or wade the shallow flats, using lures or livebait. Tackle can include spinning rods, bait casters, or fly rods. In short, anglers can expect to catch a meal of tasty fish with just about any kind of equipment, and success is the norm not the exception.

Like many fishing trips our venture began at 4:30 a.m. with a short drive, in this case to Port Mansfield, a small but certainly not a "sleepy" fishing village.

This pre-dawn drive passed quickly as we consumed a Big Gulp of coffee and a breakfast burrito what did anglers and hunters eat for breakfast before the advent of the breakfast burrito at the local convenience store?) and started telling fishing stories. Not everyone can catch fish, but I have never been fishing with any Texan who could not tell a whole passel of stories, each story unique in detail but always similar because of that optimistic spirit that I believe is the universal trait of anglers throughout the world.

My Fourth of July saltwater fishing guide was Rick Garfield, my brother-in-law, and his thirteen year old son, Graham.

At 5:30 a.m. we unloaded Rick's boat, which draws only six inches of water and is designed for fishing that bays that are protected from the Gulf of Mexico by the fragile strip of sand called Padre Island.

We made quick stop at Harbor Bay Baitshop to pick up another cup of coffee and couple of pints of live shrimp, just in case the redfish refused the hit our lures. We could have saved our money. The fishing was excellent, and while a huge 27 inch trout was boated on a live shrimp that was suspended below a noisy popping cork, at least twenty-five hungry trout, flounder, and redfish couldn't resist a leadhead jig tipped with Rick's secret tournament bait.

a four-inch long red and white plastic shrimp tail made by V&W Bait Company. I suspect that other plastics might have worked, but Rick secretly ships in these special baits from Houston and we were under strict orders "not to tie one on until we were out of sight of the other boats at the bait shop." Saltwater guys have secret baits just like us bass anglers.

Rick's first honey hole was a short twenty minute boat ride up the Intracoastal Canal to a huge, huge grassy flat that was spotted with pockets loaded with hungry fish. We drifted with the wind and chunked our imitation shrimp at the holes in the grass.

Like most anglers, we initially tried to keep track of who was catching the most and the biggest fish, but thanks to several hours of fast and furious action the count was lost and each angler staked his claim to the bragging rights. And, of course, since I am the author of this column, let the record show that I easily caught the most keepers.

It was a great day of saltwater fishing, and I can see why so many anglers are getting hooked on redfish. They hit like a freight train, fight like wild steer, taste better than a walleye, and best of all, there are millions of them in Texas waters just waiting to stretch your line.
