Chained dogs may fall under animal cruelty

Clarendon Aldermen did not act to ban the chaining of dogs during their regular meeting October 25, but the issue is still on the table and may fall under the guidelines of state laws prohibiting animal cruelty.

Animal Control Officer Tony Ballard first expressed his concern about dogs being chained up without food or water in a letter presented at the city's October 11 meeting. Ballard had submitted sample ordinances that would ban or limit keeping dogs on chains.

At last week's meeting, Bobby Wood addressed the board and said he was concerned that a ban would be unfair to people who do not have a fence and cannot afford one but do take good care of their dogs.

Alderman Janice Knorpp said owning a pet is a commitment and said dogs should have a fence, food, water, and attention.

Alderman Michael Tibbets said the city needs to look at state statutes on animal cruelty and recommended the board appoint three aldermen to serve on a committee to oversee that these laws are being enforced.

This item is scheduled to be on the board's agenda when they meet again next Tuesday.

In other city business, aldermen considered and approved a computer maintenance program contract for the Burton Memorial Library. Will Jordan of Cyber Medic will be on call and will respond when needed for $90 per month. Parts and hardware would be additional charges.

Rose Lemley and Rhonda Howell addressed the board concerning brown water coming from their lines in the southeast part of the city. They said they have had water like this since July and can't wash their clothes without them turning dingy. They said they were afraid to drink the water.

Alderman Bobbie Kidd, who is also the general manager of Greenbelt Municipal Water Authority, said the water is safe to drink. Kidd also said the lines need to be flushed for four to five hours.

Mayor Tex Selvidge said the lines in that area do need to be replaced and said City Superintendent Jim Roberts is looking into replacement costs.

Aldermen considered nominating candidates for the Donley County Appraisal District Board and agreed that the board needed new people on it to have better control over the appraisal district. The city only has 389 votes to cast, and Alderman Tibbets moved to cast them as follows:

77 votes for Bobbie Campbell, 77 votes for Brad Dalton, 77 votes for Claude DeBord, 77 votes for Jerry Gage, and 81 votes for Bobbie Kidd. The motion carried. Alderman Kidd abstained.

The board considered the city's contract with the appraisal district and voted 4-1 to approve the contract. Alderman Tibbets was opposed.

The board approved keeping the city secretary as the city's fund investment officer.

City to contractor: Pick up the pace on streets

With some citizens' patience running short, Clarendon city officials met with engineers and contractors last Wednesday to express the growing frustration over the pace of the 2005 street paving project.

Aldermen who attended the meeting say they told representatives of contractor B&B Solvent they want to see more activity and more progress.

City officials said after the meeting they worried that the available warm-weather days were not being utilized. Alderman Mark White told the ENTERPRISE this week the contractor is being hampered by a construction job in Borger, at which concrete supplier Pampa Concrete is having to use all of its available trucks during 24-hour pours. That situation should end soon, White said.

Engineer Che Shadle confirmed that the availability of concrete has slowed progress.

"It takes two concrete trucks to run the curbing machine," Shadle said. "If you don't have two trucks, you can't really run it constantly."

Shadle wouldn't put a firm date on when actual paving would start, but he did say that the curbing will be inspected by his firm before paving begins.

Wednesday's meeting followed the receipt of the first letter to the newspaper critical of the project and followed the regular city meeting October 25 at which Mrs. David Burrow expressed concerns about cars being torn up while driving on streets under construction.

Voters to consider nine constitutional amendments

Voters across Texas will go to the polls next Tuesday to decide the fate of nine proposed amendments to the state constitution.

Donley County voters will cast their ballots in the following locations. In Precinct 1, Boxes 101 and 103 will vote at the Bairfield Activity Center, and Box 102 will vote at Howardwick City Hall. Precinct 2 residents will vote at the county courthouse. Following ballot box consolidation, all of Precinct 3 will now vote at the Lions Club in Hedley, and all of Precinct 4 will vote at the Church of Christ Family Life Center in Clarendon.

Voters should check their registration cards to see where they must vote. Balloting will take place from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Early voting by personal appearance at the Clerk's Office in the Couthouse Annex continues through 5 p.m. this Friday, November 4.

The Texas Secretary of State provides the following explanation of the proposed amendments.

Proposition 1 would create a Texas rail relocation and improvement fund in the state treasury and authorize grants of state revenue and issuance of public debt to relocate, rehabilitate, and expand privately and publicly owned passenger and freight rail facilities and to construct railroad underpasses and overpasses.

Proposition 2 would provide that marriage in Texas is solely the union of a man and woman, and that the state and its political subdivisions could not create or recognize any legal status identical to or similar to marriage, including such legal status relationships created outside of Texas.

Proposition 3 would provide that local economic development program loans or grants (other than debts secured by a pledge of ad valorem taxes or financed by the issuance of any bonds or other obligations payable from ad valorem taxes) do not constitute or create debt. Any provision of state constitutional law that may prohibit or limit the authority of a political subdivision of the state to incur debt does not apply to those loans or grants.

Proposition 4 would authorize a district judge to deny bail to a person accused of a felony, if the person's bail had been revoked or forfeited as a result of a violation of a condition of release related to the safety of a victim of the alleged offense or to the safety of the community.

Proposition 5 would authorize the Legislature to exempt commercial loans from state usury laws that set maximum interest rates. "Commercial loans" are loans made primarily for business, commercial, investment, agricultural, or similar purposes and not primarily for personal, family, or household purposes.

Proposition 6 would increase the size of the State Commission on Judicial Conduct from eleven to thirteen members by increasing from four to five the number of public members and by adding a constitutional county court judge. The additions would ensure that the commission has an odd number of members.

Proposition 7 would authorize new options for reverse mortgage agreements for senior homeowners allowing them to draw advances at unscheduled intervals, if and when needed, and only in the amounts needed, during the loan term. These are in addition to options that would allow a lump sum payment after settlement or regular periodic, equal amounts over a term of years or the lifetime of the homeowner.

Additionally, Proposition 7 would prohibit the agreement from requiring the use of a credit card, debit card or similar device to obtain an advance; prohibit the charge of a transaction fee solely in connection with any debit or advance, after the time the extension of credit is established; and prohibit the lender or holder from unilaterally amending the extension of credit.

Proposition 8 would clear individual land titles in a roughly 4,600 acre area located roughly 14 miles southeast of Gilmer and a separate 900 acre area located north of Tyler.

Proposition 9 would authorize the Legislature to provide staggered six year terms of office for board members serving on regional mobility authorities, with no more than one-third of the board positions being appointed every two years.

Regulation won't help price of gas

By Doug Bandow

Gasoline costs too much in almost everyone's opinion. President George W. Bush is urging Americans to drive less. Other politicians want government to push prices down.

Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., suggests giving the president the power to set retail gas prices. Sen. Byron L. Dorgan, D-N.D., complains that companies are "profiting in an extraordinary way at the expense of the American consumer" and has proposed a wind-fall profits tax.

Eight governors have requested a federal probe of gasoline pricing. Hawaii has imposed controls on wholesale prices. Other states might follow suit.

"We really need to step back and recognize that, like electricity, gasoline is too vital to the economy to be left in the hands of these corporations that have been gouging us," argues Doug Heller of the misnamed Foundation for Taxpayer and Consumer Rights in Los Angeles.

Price controls have been around as long as prices. And price controls have had disastrous effects for just as long.

Heller's argument makes no sense. After all, if ExxonMobil and Royal Dutch Shell could simply conspire to push up prices, they would have done so before now.

Gasoline prices have recently increased for a number of reasons. One is growing demand. The emergence of China and secondarily India as industrial powers is transforming the global market.

Another reason prices are high - and have spiked in response to the damage inflicted by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita - is pervasive regulation. Most important, it has become extraordinarily difficult to build oil refineries.

Both the number of refineries and their total capacity is lower today than in 1980. The last new refinery opened in 1976, even though gasoline consumption has jumped 25 percent since then.

Today, the U.S. must import 10 percent of its gasoline as well as 57 percent of its oil. Thus, even the temporary closure of several refineries by Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Rita sharply inflated pump prices.

Environmental regulations, backed by activists who mix demonstrations and lawsuits, create delays and inflate costs.

One Arizona project begun a decade ago is still at least five years away from completion.

Over the last 10 years the industry has invested $47 billion to comply with new environmental controls rather than construct new capacity, according to the American Petroleum Institute. Compliance with sulfur standards alone cost about $20 billion.

Although the recent energy bill included provisions intended to spur refinery construction, it added a new ethanol mandate - a political payoff to agricultural interests - which will force expensive technical adaptations at refineries. Air pollution rules require different gasoline formulations for "nonattainment" areas, reducing economies of scale.

While consumers target gas stations with their ire, the bulk of recent price hikes have gone to refiners. In contrast, distributors, marketers, and retailers receive just a penny more than in 2004.

Even today, prices at the pump are constrained by local competition. If gas stations could charge as much as they desired, they would have been doing so already.

Government also pushes up prices through taxes, which average 42 cents a gallon nationally. In Hawaii, where the state government has imposed price controls, the combined state and federal tax is more than 50 cents.

High prices might be painful, but they are the most efficient way to distribute goods in short supply. Indeed, the industry attempts to spread gasoline as widely as possible. Wholesalers charge "over-allocation" fees to discourage any distributor from accumulating a disproportionate share of limited resources.

Quite simply: prices rise when supplies fall. That signals consumers to use less and sellers to supply more. Price controls short-circuit the adjustment process and intensify shortages.

That was the experience during the mid-1970s gas "crisis."

Citizens in the world's wealthiest country sat in gas lines because the federal government allocated supplies and restricted prices.

Only when newly inaugurated President Ronald Reagan lifted price controls did supplies jump and prices fall. Federal energy regulation was a public policy disaster that should never be repeated.

The United States also imposed a windfall profits tax between 1980 and 1987. Alas, the WPT discouraged companies from making potentially risky investments.

In 1990 the Congressional Research Service concluded: "The WPT reduced domestic oil production between 3 percent and 6 percent, and increased oil imports from between 8 percent and 16 percent." Replaying the old WPT would replay its effect, helping foreign producers and hurting domestic consumers.

As Hurricanes Katrina and Rita demonstrated, natural disasters can create severe economic dislocations. Adjustments almost always are difficult.

But government intervention always exacerbates the pain. If gasoline seems expensive today, just try turning the energy market over to government.

Cute children carry germs and diseases

I've never had a very keen maternal sense. My little sister had a monopoly on all baby dolls in the house, so I blame her for everything that is developmentally wrong with me. I always got stuck with the very adult looking Barbies for whom I created adult stories.

My play time always included Barbie finding a job, becoming a professional, paying bills, being an advocate for the hearing impaired Barbie whose leg had been mysteriously chewed.

The bizarre part is that kids seem kind of drawn to me. They feel like they can relate to me. They follow me around grocery stores and stare at me in restaurants and at church. It's usually because I'm making faces at them or pretending to use tomatoes for earrings.

Somewhere developmentally I missed a critical link that connects "kids" with "cute." That's not exactly accurate. I do think kids are cute. But I do not want to touch them.

Let me be clear: I don't hate kids. I'm not for child labor or foreign boarding school. I just get very nervous when small people who smell funny and have lots of germs get too close to me.

Perfect example. I was home for the weekend, and I went to church with my parents on Sunday morning. My mother and I were standing near the piano minding our own business when a whole herd of the little cherubs came in.

My mom, bless her heart, her eyes lit up, and she greeted them warmly. "Good morning! How is everyone today?" "I'm sick," one of the older girls responded. I made a mentally note to stay away from that one.

"Oh, no!" my mother replied, handing her a box of Kleenex. "Allergies? I'm kind of sick with allergies, too."

"I'm sick, too!" shouted one of the smallest girls running towards me with open arms. I recoiled a bit but caught myself. "I'm so sorry, Sugar," I said and reached out to pat her head.

"Look! See? I'm sick, too," she said and showed me her Kleenex which was life's lessons

by Carrie Helms

full of infected yellow slime that she had expelled from her nasal cavity.

This where my maternal instinct should have kicked in. I should have wrapped up the Kleenex, tossed it in the trash, and gotten the kid a Benadryl and a fresh hankie.

Instead, I gagged a little and said, "Eewww!" Then I ran and hid behind my own mother, who wrapped up the Kleenex, tossed it in the trash, and got the kid a Benadryl and a fresh hankie.

"Mommy, that was gross!" I said once the child was out of earshot.

"I guess you're not ready to have kids, then, eh?" my mom said. "No. Absolutely no. Positively no. Decidedly no," I said. "A germ factory like that? In my house? Permanently? Are you kidding? There's not enough Lysol in the known universe."

That is why I have chosen to work with high school and college students. By now we've all learned about showers and antibacterial hand soap and deodorant and proper disposal of a loaded Kleenex. So less Lysol is necessary.

Astros deliver historical season to fans

Throughout the history of our great state, Texans have enjoyed many firsts. This year marks another such occasion as we proudly pay tribute to the Houston Astros, the first baseball team from Texas to make it to the Major League World Series.

I have many fond memories of cheering for the Astros in Texas as a student, reporter, and senator. I remember when the Astros -- then the Colt .45s -- beat the Chicago Cubs in 1962 in their first Major League game and when Nolan Ryan became the first Major League pitcher to reach 4000 strikeouts in a career at the Astrodome in 1985. This year the Astros reached a new milestone by winning the National League Championship.

I know the 2005 season will be among my most cherished memories. I called Drayton McLane -- the owner of the Astros -- after most of the playoff games to let him know I was cheering from Washington for my home state team.

The Astros have enjoyed a great season, which has been characterized by overcoming tough obstacles on their rise to the top. As a team, they have risen above many challenges including injuries, slumps, and personal family matters.

Coming into the regular season we were missing four of our key players from last year's playoff run against the Cardinals. Carlos Beltran, our center fielder, went to the Mets; Jeff Kent, our second baseman, to the LA Dodgers; Lance Berkman, our left fielder, was injured and out for the first part of the season; and Jeff Bagwell, our first baseman, was also injured and on the sidelines for the majority of the year.

Late in the regular season, tragedy struck the family of one of the players. On September 14, Bess Clemens, Roger's mother, passed away, ending a long battle with emphysema. Despite his profound loss, and being sleep deprived from staying up with her, Roger Clemens took the mound, dedicated the season to her and brought home a win for the Astros that night against the Marlins.

The Astros began this season with an infield and an outfield that had many holes. The team filled those holes with a free agent and rookies. They rose to the challenge, and the season ended with one of those newcomers as a candidate for Rookie of the Year.

Though many were skeptical about the Astros' chances this season, the team stayed true to the "never say die" Texas attitude. Before long, things began to turn around for the Astros and the fans that never stopped believing.

With so many challenges to Houston this year, including opening our doors to thousands of Hurricane Katrina victims and Hurricane Rita that struck our area, the Astros' success was a welcome celebration. These Astros embody the good character and moral decency of all Texans. Astros players contribute much to the community.

Throughout the peaks and pitfalls of this season, the Astros exemplified the spirit of Texas. Texas' first baseball team won its first pennant race and will forever hold its place in history as the first team in Texas to make it to the World Series. Thank you, Houston Astros. I look forward to next season and accomplishing another first -- bringing home the title.

Resident praises city crew for professionalism

On Halloween morning, October 31, 2005, I got my car high-centered on some dirt in front of my house. We called the city about our problem, and in 20 minutes, Jim Roberts and his crew had us unstuck and on our way.

I would like to commend them for helping me in my time of need. They are handling these trying times on the road construction in a professional manner. I can't wait to have our new roads finished.

Teller Cartel running in California this Friday

Walt and Janice Knorpp will have their fingers crossed this Friday when Teller Cartel takes to the track in Los Alamitos, Calif., for what could be another big win.

The two-year-old American Quarter Horse already has a leg up on the competition after placing first October 21 in the qualifying run for the Golden State Million Futurity, which has a purse of $1.145 million. Teller Cartel covered the 400 yards in 19.61 seconds, beating his nearest competition by a head.

The Teller Cartel Syndicate owns the horse, and the Knorpps purchased an interest in him just before Labor Day last year. In September, Teller Cartel beat 17-1 odds and a muddy track to win the All American Futurity at New Mexico's Ruidoso Downs.

Trainer Paul Jones told Los Alamitos Race Course officials the qualifying results have solidified Teller as a strong contender.

"I think this effort legitimizes him as a super horse," Jones said. "The track wasn't muddy tonight like it was when he won the All American Futurity. He showed everyone what he can do."

Teller Cartel began his racing career in California, running second in a 300-yard maiden race on May 5 and placing third in an Ed Burke Million Futurity (G1) trial on June 4. He is ridden by Cody Jensen.

CISD Trustees approve new teacher's contract

The Clarendon ISD Board of Trustees met in regular session October 10 in the CISD Functional Living Center.

The board approved a motion to enter into an Interlocal Cooperative Contract with Texas Association of Public Schools for the district's 2005-2006 property, crime, general liability, educators' legal liability, and automobile coverages.

The board also approved a contract with Roy Williams to install curb and gutter, approaches, and slab carpet on a hillside surrounding the new parking lot at Fifth and Sims.

A public hearing was held regarding the school's state financial rating. CISD received a "Superior" rating with only one negative indicator, which was that TEA found total tax collections was not greater than 96 percent.

A bid was accepted for a new GMC Sierra extended cab pickup from Suna AutoMall in the amount of $22,468.

The board nominated Dan Hall, Johnny Floyd, and Wayne Hardin for the Donley County Appraisal Board of Directors.

A teacher's contract was offered to Karol Garmon for the 2005-2006 school year.

Friendship Club planning for Thanksgiving

The Howardwick Friendship Club met October 21 with 23 present to enjoy good food and music provided by Larry Pettit, Wes Thomas, and Jimmy Adams with the promise to do it again.

Birthdays for October were Dorothy Arnold and Rava Mc Kinney.

The next meeting will be a Thanksgiving meal with turkey and dressing. Plan on coming out the evening of November 18 to help our community celebrate this unique holiday.

Our son-in-law, Brad Fross, has been a member of the Army Reserve for many years, and it is his turn to be deployed. He left October 22 for Ft. Bliss, leaving his wife, Colleen, and six-year-old son, Ryan, in Wichita, Kan. We made the trip up there to see him off and help make the transition.

Our great-grandsons, three-year-old Erik and 20-month-old Jake, also live in Wichita, so we had a lively time. Add to that an 11-week-old, three-pound miniature dachshund named Stevie Ray, and it was beyond lively.

When I was a stay-at-home Air Force wife, it was months between phone conversations; but with the cell phone plans now available, they speak daily and send pictures and letters by email as often as they wish.

This separation is no fun for either one with the wife taking over full responsibility of the household. She called the plumber out to clean the drain after using all the home remedies, and a few days later the washing machine went out. I just hope she has a good, honest mechanic, because you know she will need him before this year is over.

Darlene Uselton has completed radiation treatments, and Nancy Davis is home more often. Please keep this family in your prayers.

The fire department meets November 10 at 7:00 p.m. at City Hall.

Local Red Hatters meet for fellowship, plan trip to Claude theatre this month

The Twilight Red Hatters met on Thursday, October 27, at the Bar-H Dude Ranch.

Frank and Terri Hommel served delicious hamburgers to twenty-one Red Hatters, who strutted their beautiful red hat and purple duds. Three Pink Hatters, young ones, wore their finest pink hats with lavender outfits.

Evelyn Mann and Pearl Hermesmeyer were birthday girls for October.

The November meeting date was changed due to Thanksgiving and will be held on November 17. The place will be decided later. The December meeting was also changed to December 15.

The group decided to trek to Claude's Gem Theatre for the Radio Show on Saturday, November 19. There is a 7:30 pre-show, and the recording begins at 8:00 p.m. If you would like to attend, please let Peggy Cockerham know by November 14. The cost is $10 each.

The Regional Red Hat Christmas Party will be in Amarillo at the Ambassador Hotel on December 3. The cost is $17 each. Please let Peggy Cockerham know as soon as possible if you will be attending this event as they have limited seats.

Everyone is welcome to join the Red Hatters. They have lots of fun and fellowship.

The ladies from the Assembly of God Church in Clarendon surprised Mrs. Eva Burleson with a birthday party. Mrs. Burleson is 82 years old and is a resident at the Medical Center Nursing Home. She was given birthday cards, balloons, and gifts from family and friends. Everyone enjoyed the cake and ice cream.

Teenagers big market for retailers in US

By MaryRuth Bishop

In five years, spending by American teenagers has jumped from $122 billion a year to $170 billion, sending retailers scrambling to find ways to siphon more of the lucrative pool.

Advertising of clothing, music, and electronics - plus the always-popular snack foods and soft drinks - has long been aimed at teens. Now other industries are trying to muscle into the youth market.

While teens may need tutoring in managing their money, it is clear that they have more money to manage. The average teen spent $101 each week last year, much of it their own money, according to Mr. Wood of Teenage Research Unlimited, a Northbrook, Ill. firm that tracks the youth market.

"If teens can't find a part-time job, they can always mow someone's lawn or hire out for other odd jobs," Mr. Wood said. "If that doesn't work, there's always mom and dad. We've repeatedly found that parents ... hate to say 'no' to teens. They'll likely go without something themselves [rather] than deny their children."

Another factor in the expanding teen market is that the number of teens has risen steadily over the past decade. By 2007, the number of teens is expected to hit 34 million.

Teens are spending money on things that didn't exist five years ago, like cell phone contracts. Today, 47 percent of teens actually own a cell phone, and the average age for getting a phone has dropped from 16 to 14.

Teens are also spending a lot of money on interior design. There was some of this [interior design] stuff 10 years ago, but now they can get a 100-page teen catalog.

Ethan Allan and other home furnishing companies also are expanding their efforts to reach the teen market. So are stores such as Kmart and Lowe's Home Improvement, which did a recent survey in which more than four in 10 teens said they planned to redecorate their bedrooms.

Food and beverages, often laden with sugar, salt, and fat, claim 16 percent of teen dollars. A recent study has found that companies spend $13 billion annually marketing food and drinks just to children and adolescents.

If you can harness that energy and savvy, we really could make the world a better place. We often see teens as too material. But the other side of the coin is that, if we can get them to shop consciously - thinking about the consequences of what they are buying - we could really start an emerging trend.

The major factor has to be leadership and guidance from parents and teachers. By using the old adage of "shopping at home" and creating a budget that includes saving money and shopping wisely, we are equipping our youth with skills that will support their community and themselves.

Cyclones end season for Broncos

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos were in a must-win situation as they took the field against Memphis at Bronco Stadium Friday night. They were playing for a slight chance to move into the playoffs, but they fell short against the Cyclones 7-22.

The Broncos were held scoreless in the first half of play, but they came out hot in the third period as they put seven on the board when quarterback Quentin West scored on a three-yard run and kicked the extra point. The Broncos threatened again but could not get the touchdown to possibly tie the game.

Memphis sealed their victory late in the fourth period, putting the game out of reach for the Broncos. The Broncos put up 122 total yards compared to 266 for the Cyclones. Both teams turned the ball over four times.

"The guys played extremely hard," head coach Gary Jack said. "We just had a couple of big mistakes that cost us the game."

The Broncos finished their season at 3-7 and 2-3 in district play. According to Jack, at least five of the seven losses could have gone the Broncos' way very easily.

"In almost all of the games we lost, we led going into the fourth quarter or were only seven points down," Jack said. "We let those games get away from us by committing too many errors."

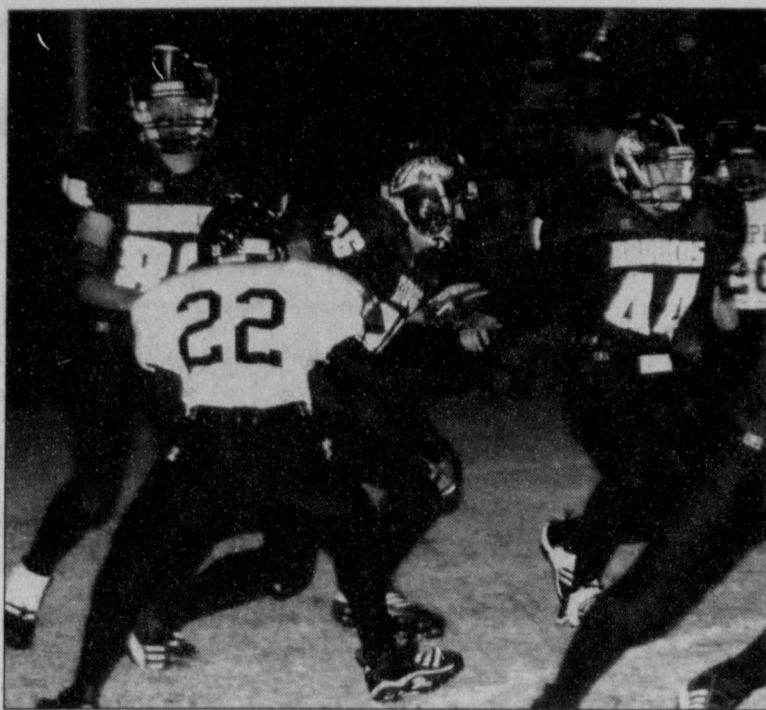

Despite the fact that things didn't go the way the Broncos wanted them to, the guys played hard and never quit.

"All of our guys played their hearts out all season. We are very proud of their effort this year."

Several Broncos turned in good performances against Memphis, racking up several tackles. Brad Sell led the Broncos with 15 tackles and one fumble recovery, and Will Betts was close behind with 13 tackles. John Vaughn racked up 12 tackles, and Danny Derry turned in eight tackles as did Michael Henderson, who also grabbed one fumble.

Alton Gaines had seven tackles and one caused fumble, and Stephen Ford and Cody Scrivner helped with seven tackles. LaDez Captain had five tackles; and Jesse Rodriguez, Derrick Shelton, and Steven Fowler each had three tackles with Fowler getting one fumble recovery. Jeremy Usey and Nathan Gribble helped with two tackles each.

Bradley Sell was listed in error as scoring the lone touchdown against Quannah in the October 28 edition of the Enterprise when in fact it was senior Morgan Robinson who caught the 20-yard pass. We apologize for the mistake.

Polar Bear Tournament to be held at CCC

By Sandy Anderberg

The fall Polar Bear Tournament will be held November 5-6 at the Clarendon Country Club.

The 36-hole tournament will consist of a two-person team and will be flighted after the first 18 holes on Saturday. Entry is $140 a team plus the price of a cart. Call the Pro Shop at 874-2166 to enter the tournament.

The October 19 winner of the men's game out of a field of 11 players was Slick Johnston with a 63. Mike Santos was second with a 67, and Redell Johnston turned in a 69 for third place. Slick Johnston also won the men's game on October 26 with a 67. Ellis Knight and George Washington tied for second place shooting a 69.

Ruth Jackson shot a 69 for first place in the women's game on Thursday, and Bonnie Crofford shot a 64 for second place.

Colts hold Memphis to scoreless 0-0 tie

Defense was the name of the game as the Colts took on the Whirlwinds October 27 at Memphis. The Colts had several attempts to cross the goal line, but failed to convert.

Coach Brad Elam said Jadon Thornton ran the ball well and put together several long runs. The Colts played great defense as well.

Jean West intercepted a pass close to the goal line; and Dillan Wright, Dominique Mason, and Tré Brown had good games on defense as well.

The Colts played their last game of the season this week against Claude. Look for results next week.

Vaccine Found To Prevent Cervical Cancer

Health experts indicate that many women do not experience difficulty when they are infected with a virus called human papilloma virus (HPV). The virus seems to go away on its own. However, medical researchers have discovered that two form HPV are the primary cause of cervical cancer, and work has progressed related to a vaccine that might prevent early stages of this condition.

Recent statistics indicate that more than 250,000 women worldwide die each year from cervical cancer, the largest cancer killer for women ages 25 to 50. HPV is transmitted from person to person by way of sexual contact.

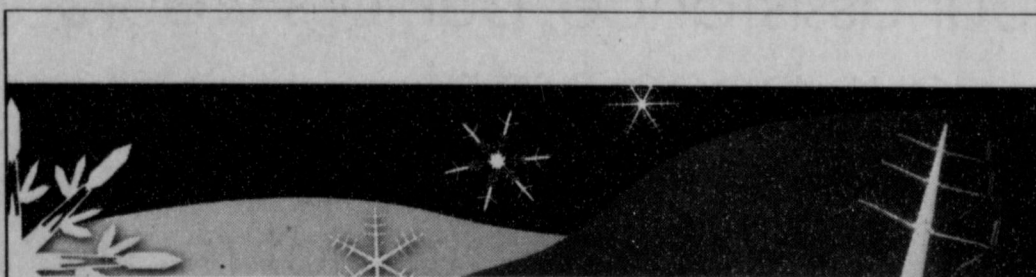

Researchers at the University of Washington evaluated more than 12,000 women, ages 16 to 26, who were not infected with HPV when the 17 month study began. Half the women received three doses of an experimental HPV vaccine, while the other half received a dummy vaccine. All the women who received the study vaccine were protected from pre-cancer lesions and early stage cancer associated with the HPV. There were 21 cases of early stage cervical cancer in the study group who received the dummy vaccine.

the lion's tale
by allen estlack

The Clarendon Lions Club held their regular Tuesday noon meeting November 1, 2005, with Boss Lion Mark C. White in charge.

We had 15 members and one guest: Ashlee Estlack, guest of Lion Roger Estlack.

Lion Bill Lowe received the Distinguished Service Award, and Lion Russell Estlack received a pin for building membership. Both Lions were absent from last week's banquet.

Early registration will start at the college on November 21. The CHS girls will start their season this week with a scrimmage, and the school will be hosting UIL events this month.

The Chamber will help with Late Night Shopping beginning November 17, and the Girl Scouts will light the courthouse square at that time.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Historic farm, ranch applications due soon

AUSTIN - Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs today reminded families that the final deadline for submitting an application for the 2005 Family Land Heritage Program is November 15.

The program recognizes farms and ranches that have been in continuous agriculture production by the same family for 100 years or more. Applications are also being taken for farms and ranches that have reached the 150- and 200-year milestones.

Combs commended past honorees and those who have submitted their applications for this year's program for their hard work in making Texas agriculture the second largest industry in the state.

There is no cost to apply for the recognition, and no purchases are required if the property is accepted into the program. Acceptance into the Family Land Heritage Program does not put any restrictions on the land or open it for the public.

Farms and ranches that qualify will be honored during a ceremony in Austin on March 17, 2006. The history of the farm or ranch will be chronicled in the 2005 Family Land Heritage Registry.

Since the Family Land Heritage Program began in 1974, more than 4,020 farms and ranches in 226 Texas counties have been honored.

Program applications and eligibility requirements are available through TDA, county judges, and on TDA's Web site at www.agr.state.tx.us. For more information, contact Family Land Heritage Coordinator Melissa Blair, Texas Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711 or (512) 463-2631.
