

thereby cause accidents. His second invention backs up the first. With a revolving windshield, the driver would be thrown through the front and given a chance to run rather than be cut by glass when the other fellow hits his car going 90-to-nothing. His auto body would be helmet shaped and the driver would wear a helmet. That's personal protection for the autoist not later than 1941. The factory will be located next to the oil mill on north side.

COME HITHER, BOYS.

The reader will possibly recall a neighbor at some time who knew him only when he needed him. Or possibly that neighbor would become 'miffed' on occasion. Then all speaking terms were off until the neighbor's liver or something got right again. So it is with state candidates. They get in office and then forget practically everybody until they are needed again at election time. Then they begin to pull the "Come Hither" appeal for help. You may think that you have to jump at the beck and call of a blozo on occasion, but the writer is just not built that way. Why, darn 'em.

BEST DRESSED GIRL SEES ONLY PRACTICAL SIDE

AUSTIN.—Good looking shoes and hose; a simple dress; a flawless complexion and hair with a sheen—combine and you have the recipe for "well dressed," is the advice of the University of Texas' best-dressed girl, Helen Draper of Pampa.

Miss Draper, member of Alpha Delta Pi, horsewoman, was named by students this week as the campus' best-dressed co-ed. Descendent of Texas ranchers, she chooses simple clothes for school, town, or formal party. She prefers real jewelry to costume, wears hats only when compelled to, and "loves" shoes.

Secretly she has ambitions to design clothes or own a dress shop with the hope that she may influence women to choose clothes which enhance their appearance in preference to those which are merely fashionable.

Miss Peggy Word Becomes Bride of Mike Stricklin, Sunday March 3rd

On Sunday morning, March 3rd at nine thirty, the marriage of Miss Peggy Word, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Word, to Mike Stricklin, son of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Stricklin, took place at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of the immediate families, and a number of relatives and intimate friends.

The house was decorated with plants and flowers, and the rites took place before a bank of ferns, above which, on the fireplace mantel, stood the old family clock that has looked down upon three generations.

Charlie Word, brother of the bride, sang "Because," accompanied by Mrs. Millard Word at the piano, who then played the beautiful Mendelssohn Wedding March. Jo Word, the bridesmaid, entered followed by the bride with her father. They were met by the groom and his attendant, W. G. Word, Jr., and the conventional ring ceremony was conducted by Rev. M. M. Miller, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city.

The bride wore an ensemble costume of dusty pink with dark blue coat, dark straw sailor hat, and accessories to match, with a shoulder corsage of sweetheart roses. The bridesmaid wore dark blue with a corsage of orchids and cream roses. The men of the party each wore a white carnation in the lapel of his coat, and the mothers of the bride and groom had shoulder corsages of white gardenias.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal couple left for a brief honeymoon in the New Mexico mountains.

FARMER IS PESTERED WITH FLOCK OF BEAVERS

Recently D. D. Howe residing two miles north of Shamrock noticed signs of beavers working on his willows. He presumed that a pair had taken up with him. Soon his timber bordering Middle Fork of Red River began to vanish rapidly. Mr. Howe appealed to game warden Polly O'Neil who set a trap and immediately picked up an older beaver and four young ones. Since taking these to new quarters, signs appear that the rodents have a following at the old home wading in on the willows.

We bid you welcome in the name of our Master. If you have a church home, and are only an occasional worshipper with us, the welcome is just as cordial.

If you have no church home, and find our services helpful, we invite you to make this church your home and worship with us.

Under any and all circumstances, please remember that to all our services in our house of worship, you are welcome.

A series of pre-Easter services will be had in our church beginning March 17th, each night through easter at 7:30.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to take this means to express my sincere thanks to my neighbors and friends for their sympathetic understanding in the recent loss of my dear sister. Especially do I wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Fred Buntin and Dexter Todd for their many favors and extreme kindness. Lacking in words to properly express my feelings, the few lines below may convey, in a measure, the thought I wish to convey.

It is my joy in life to find, At every turning of the road, The strong arm of a comrade kind, To help me onward with my load. And since I have no gold to give, And love alone to make amends, My only prayer is while I live, God make me worthy of my friends

Refrigerated Food Lockers

COLLEGE STATION, March 7.—Refrigerated food lockers, within the next few years, are going to bring about a big change in many Texas farm families' way of living.

The change will be all to the good, believes H. H. Williamson, director of the Texas A&M College Extension Service. "We've tried to find the weak spot in the food locker plan, but so far we haven't been able to find any," he said.

Advantages claimed for the refrigerated food locker system include:

- Saves family $50 to $100 a year.
- Makes fresh meat, vegetables and fruit available the year around.
- Aids in providing balanced diet.
- Makes for improved health.

Refrigerated food lockers have been operating in the Mid-West and Pacific Coast for several years with marked success. Three years ago a group of Hale County farmers went to Oregon, Washington, and Idaho to study dairy cooperatives there. They kept running into food locker plants and heard a lot about the service they were giving farmers.

When they got back to Plainview, they built a 250-locker plant as a department of their cooperative creamery. The plant was so successful that another 250-locker unit was added in the fall of 1939. Now there are refrigerated locker plants—mostly cooperative but including some commercial set-ups—scattered over the Plains country, among them, plants at Floydada, Falls, Petersburg, Tahoka, New Home and Brownfield; there are a few scattered in other parts of the state.

Mrs. A. L. Chase left Sunday to spend several days with her daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Stegall and family at Wicket.

Mrs. E. E. Finklea and Martha Van Shaw of Amarillo spent Sunday here with her brother, G. E. Norwood and family.

Miss Lottie E. Lane spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. W. V. Thomason and family in Henrietta.

Mrs. J. R. Porter left Wednesday to visit her brother, Bob Powell in Houston.

Cow Country

(Millions of Texas longhorns and hundreds of thousands of Texas horses followed the Cattle Trails to northern markets after the War between the States. The Texas cowboy of those days is still a national character, and his speech, his ways, his lore have ridden the trail from Texas to wherever cattle wear a brand.)

South Texas and the frontier furnished the cattle for the early drives, but in 1876, the cattle industry jumped hundreds of miles to the west. The buffalo and the Indian were disappearing from the plains.

These two impediments to the cowboy's progress are closely associated. The buffalo was the beef of the Indian's larder, and as the Kiowas and Comanches of the plains were anything but agriculturists, the buffalo was very nearly the rest of their larder, too. Where the buffalo drifted, the Indian followed, and treaties and soldiers were powerless to prevent his doing so—poor Lo had to eat.

The buffalo ranged in herds made up of millions of animals. The Indians, of course, were far less numerous—they roamed in bands of only a few hundred. The cattlemen could probably have coped with the latter, but against the buffalo, they were powerless, for the buffalo ate the grass. They were comparatively unmolested for many years. In 1869, a train on the Kansas and Pacific Railroad had to wait from nine in the morning until five in the afternoon for a herd to cross the tracks.

Then, about 1870, an English firm of tanners had an idea; they wrote to a correspondent in Kansas asking him to secure a few buffalo hides with which to experiment. One of the hunters had a few hides left over after supplying the English order and sent them to a New York tanner. This man's experiment was successful; the hides tanned to perfection. New York asked for more.

The request in a distant city on the Eastern seaboard spelled doom to the shaggy millions of the West. "By rail, wagon, horseback and afoot, the pot hunters poured in." The buffalo country resounded to the crack of the heavy Sharp's rifles, and teamster's wagons left the frontier forts and trading posts piled high with hides. In 1873, the hunters came to Texas from Dodge City, Kansas. Considerable inroads had been made in the great herd on the northern plains, but the demand for hides was still heavy and so the southern buffalo was doomed to follow his northern cousin.

The Indian attempted to protect his "cattle." In 1874, a party of hunters was forced to defend itself at "Dobe Walls, a supply point and depot, against an attack by Quannah Prier and his warlike Comanches. They stood the Indians off, and the trade went on as merrily as before.

Fort Griffin was a center. There the first big firm of hide traders, the Moor Brothers, established their headquarters in 1875, there hundreds of hunting parties outfitted themselves, and from there hundreds of hides were shipped East to become laprobes for the dandies of that day.

A typical outfit consisted of three men—one killed and two skinned. Their equipment included a wagon pulled by mules or oxen, one or more Sharp's rifles (44's or Big 50's), ammunition, butcher knives and whetstones. Generally there was also a saddle horse or two, but these were used for scouting, not the chase. Buffalo hunting was a business, not a sport, and the easiest way to kill buffalo was to "make a sneak" and shoot. Within a few hours, a good hunter could kill enough buffalo to keep his skinner busy for a day. A good day's work for a skinner was from twenty to forty hides, for which he got 25¢ each.

The hunters went back to headquarters when their wagons were full. There the freighters took over. A typical freight outfit was made up of two wagons pulled by six yoke of oxen; in the lead wagon, the freighter carried 200 hides, in the trail wagon about 150. When he reached a place where the going was bad, he uncoupled the wagons, pulled one through, then came back for the other. At one end of his journey was the buffalo country, at the other a railhead. Fifteen hundred outfits were on the range west of Fort Griffin in 1877; more than 100,000 hides were taken in December of that year and in January of '78.

The slaughter was wanton and it inspired a number of organizations to protest. The noble bison received a great deal of sympathy in the East from ladies who rode the cold roads of that region snugly wrapped in a buffalo robe. He was, however, a natural resource of sorts, and as such he warranted the attention of the Texas legislature. Laws for his protection were advanced; The hide-hunters were in disrepute. No less a personage than hard-headed Phil Sheridan came to their rescue. "Send (the hide-hunters)," he told the legislators, "powder and lead . . . Then your prairies will be covered with speckled cattle and the festive cowboy, who follows the hunter as a second forerunner of civilization."

So it turned out. With the departure of the buffalo, cattlemen drove their herds into the new country thus opened, new little towns grew up around the waterholes, and the "festive cowboy" transplanted himself from the brush country to the plains.

Like all pioneers, the early cowmen had their troubles. The first one, Colonel Charles Goodnight, was visited by Indians in 1878—Comanches and Kiowas under Quannah Prier, their leader at "Dobe Walls. The Indians were hungry, they were looking for buffalo and failing to find any they were substituting Colonel Goodnight's beef. He took a friendly offensive, met them, sympathized with them, furnished them with beef, temporized with them until troops arrived. The soldiers might as well have stayed at home. By the time they arrived, Colonel Goodnight and Quannah Prier had cemented a friendship which lasted until the latter's death in 1910.

There were no more Indian troubles, but others there were in plenty. The new country, as new country always does, attracted many undesirable characters; there were disputes over the range, there were thievery and inclement weather. The trail herds from South Texas made trouble; as they drove through the ranges, the Westerners said, the South Texas cattle infected the range with the Texas, or Spanish fever. The way in which the plains country met this difficulty is typical of those parious times. One rancher wrote a trail driver forbidding him to cross his range; he said, "should you attempt to pass through, be kind enough to tell your men what they will have to face as I do not wish to hurt men that do not understand what they will be very sure to meet. I hope you will not treat this as idle talk. My cattle are now dying of the fever contracted from cattle driven from Fort Worth. I simply say to you that you will never pass through here in good health."

The weather was an enemy less susceptible to such measures. When the Texas north began to howl, nothing stood between the cattle on the plains "and the North Pole but a barbed wire fence and it blew down last year." The cattle followed the path of least resistance and let the wind blow them hundreds of miles southward. Then they had to be rounded up, separated, and driven back to the home range. To prevent this, the cattlemen organized line camps and employed line riders, whose duty it was to ride the southern line of the range and turn back the cattle when they began to drift with the wind. Frequently these cowboys would be out in a howling blizzard for as long as forty-eight hours at a time.

But it was not all ride, ride, ride. They had their fun, those men of the cow country. Since the horse figured so largely in the life they led, it was natural that horse racing should be a favorite sport. A wedding was always a source of much merry-making. There were barbecues, too, and, infrequently dances. For the most part, though, the "boys" amused themselves with the usual horseplay of healthy men who live in the open. Sometimes visiting cowboys, with a little too much firewater under their belts, emptied their six-shooters at the man as they rode out of town; they called this "shooting up the town." People were rarely hurt by such high-jinks, but the frontier editors protested anyway; the noise, they said, disturbed their sleep. Less reprehensible was roping and "canning" dogs, hogs or goats. One editor approved this amusement. It was, he said, "commendable . . . as it at-fords the boys lots of amusement and keeps them out of other mischief."

The invention of barbed wire in 1873 presaged the doom of the open range. The ranchers used it first to help their line riders; the first fences were drift fences to hold the cattle on the range. As the grass became crowded, more and more land was put under fence, hard feeling and friction arose because of fencing, and men were killed because of a night's work with a pair of wire cutters. But free land was an anomaly in a rapidly settling country, and it was inevitable that West Texas would be divided up and fenced. With the fences, the old free life of the plains disappeared. It still lives, however, in the hearts and in the stories of men with whitening hair on West Texas ranches; and in the Texas cowboy it has given to the world a character who will live as long as red blood flows in the veins of men.—Taken from Texas Memorial Museum Bulletin.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen germ laden phlegm, increase secretion and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

CREOMULSION for Coughs, Chest Colds, Bronchitis

A lot of things have happened to Charlie McCarthy since he has been in Hollywood. But it wasn't until he landed right in the midst of Universal's "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," showing Saturday at the Pastime Theatre, that he received his first black eye.

Just how Charlie sustained the discolored orb still is a mystery, although there are whispered rumors that W. C. Fields, his avowed enemy, had something to do with it.

McCarthy himself, when questioned, declined to make any comment other than: "I have a slight suspicion as to the guilty party and when my suspicion is confirmed I will deal with him in my own way. By the way, did you ever see a nose turn from red to black?"

Mrs. Edwin Andrews, who has been staying with her mother, Mrs. J. W. Rowland during her illness, returned to Vernon Saturday.

A Modern Linerider
—on the Range—

"We're on guard day and night!"

THIS MODERN LINERIDER—so like the old-time cowboy—has a mortal enemy too. The cowboy waged a continuous battle against the rustler. The lineman's big fight is against depreciation—and the ravages of wind and rain, heat and cold.

Just as the soil is worn away by erosion . . . just as a herd of cattle or sheep can be depleted by theft or disease, so does the electric line suffer from depreciation and the elements.

The lineman is constantly at work on the lines entrusted to his guardianship. Repairing and replacing old poles. Repairing and replacing old wires. Destruction by a sudden storm—or damage by a run-away car or truck—must be repaired in as short a time as possible.

Day or night—the lineman is subject to call. The light of a flashlight may be his only illumination while atop a 50-foot pole, working on high voltage lines.

He is one of the hundreds of men and women, working "behind the scenes," who help make Electric Service efficient, dependable and economical here. On him we bestow a title of honor—"A Modern Linerider."

MRS. HAYS ROBBINS IS STILL IN AMARILLO HOSPITAL

Mrs. Robbins is said to be steadily improving in St. Anthony hospital. It is said that she will be removed to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Seat, very soon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Haile and Cal Merchant saw the stock show Wed.

Injury Results In Youth's Death

An injury sustained by his leg several weeks ago while skating, resulted in the death of N. L. McKee, 15, Monday.

He was a patient at Adair hospital for quite a time, and apparently showed improvement. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George McKee, and a grandson of Mrs. N. L. Jones of Ashtola.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church here at 10 a. m. Wednesday, Rev. H. C. Gordon, the pastor, officiated, assisted by Rev. A. S. Forch.

He is survived by his parents, one sister and three brothers. The brothers are George Harold of Borgert, and Raymond and Jimmie, and sister Doris Marie, who reside with their parents.

The funeral service for N. L. was held two years to a day after the death of his grandfather, N. L. Jones of Ashtola, whose initials he bore.

The Buntin funeral home had charge of funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Eva Atteberry and daughter, June, visited in Plainview the weekend with Miss Mildred Atteberry, who is in nurse training there.

Tice Funeral Rites Monday

PIONEER MOTHER RESIDED IN THIS SECTION NEAR HALF CENTURY

Funeral services were conducted for Mrs. Nannie Holland Tice at the local Baptist church at two o'clock Monday afternoon. Rev. J. Perry King, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. Milton Evans of Plaska in conducting the service.

Misses Alice Finchum, Cleo Murff, Pat Myers, Irene Cheek, Joe Wood, Sidney Powell, Mary Welch had charge of the flowers.

Attending the casket were Star Johnson, Zack Salmon, Luther Kelton, Dewey Myers, Joe Wood and Sidney Powell.

Nannie Holland was born in Polk county, Arkansas in 1882, was converted and became a member of the Baptist church in 1892. She was a member of the Ashtola Baptist church at the time of her passing in Dallas March 3, 1940.

She became the wife of Tillman Tice in 1902. Six children were born to them. The husband and five children survive, all of whom attended the services here Monday.

The children are J. D. Tice, Amarillo; Mrs. Edwin L. Murff, Brice; Mrs. C. R. Clark, Dallas; Mrs. Odell Barker, Ashtola; Tillman James Tice, Dallas.

C. J. Holland of Brice is the only brother. The sisters are Mrs. Lizzie Jones of Durant, and Mrs. Lee Thurman of Hollis, Okla. Eleven grandchildren also survive Mrs. Tice.

The body was returned to Clarendon from Dallas by the Buntin Funeral Home who had charge of funeral arrangements here.

HOLLANDS MOVE BACK TO ASHTOLA FARM

He just can't get it out of his system. A few years ago, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Holland moved to Amarillo to be near their children. They recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary there. Then straightway moved back to the farm southeast of Ashtola. "I defy the world to starve me to death on a farm," Mr. Holland laughingly stated in the Leader office Saturday. They have a flock of hens, some cows and plenty of ambition to get along. No finer citizens ever lived in old Donley county than Mr. and Mrs. Holland.

Pioneer Judge Dies Tuesday

SERVED HIS PEOPLE AS LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER OVER FORTY YEARS

With the passing of Judge William Andrew Davis here at 2:30 Tuesday morning, there came to an end the eventful life of one of the Panhandle's most outstanding citizens and law enforcement officers.

A brief funeral service was held at the family home at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon. The funeral cortege then went to Clarendon where services were conducted by Rev. H. C. Gordon, pastor of the Clarendon Methodist church. The services were held in the Methodist church of Clarendon. Interment was made in the family burial plot at Clarendon, the Masonic lodge having charge of the last service.

Surviving are his wife; four daughters, Mrs. Lee Curry of Summerfield, Mrs. John Black of Clarendon, Mrs. Anne O'Conner of Denver, and Mrs. R. A. Baker of Amarillo; and a sister, Mrs. N. E. Bruce of Wichita Falls.

Twelve grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Judge Davis was a native of Marsh-town, Tennessee where he was born February 22, 1858. His family moved to Georgia in 1860, then to Gollin county, Texas in 1880. He married Mary D. Rogers there in 1887 and came to Armstrong county in 1889 and homesteaded near Clarendon.

He helped to organize Armstrong county in 1890, served as county commissioner and then as deputy sheriff. In 1906 he was elected sheriff, serving two terms. Clarendon became the family home in 1916. He was elected justice of the peace here in 1935, and was faithfully serving at his post of duty in the courthouse January 30th when stricken with influenza. Judge R. Y. King took him home. He continued bedridden until his death March 5th.

Judge Davis and his good wife were inseparable. They each took an active interest in Masonic and Eastern Star, Odd Fellow and Rebekah activities. He aided his wife in her church work. They did much charity work and in that respect they seemed to agree on the course to take in every detail. At the time of the recent flower show here, Mrs. Davis had flowers on exhibit. The Judge helped carry those flowers to the Club Room.

As a family man, he was not only a kind husband, but a loving and indulgent father. His life was closely interwoven with the interests of his children. They in turn loved him dearly and gave him constant attention during his last illness.

As a friend and neighbor his loyalty was never questioned. He was sympathetic with erring humanity as a law enforcement officer, but firm. He never came to the place in life to compromise with wrong living. His life was made up of good deeds, for that reason, he will live long in the memories of his wide circle of friends as well as those near and dear to him.

The Kelso-Womack funeral home had charge of funeral arrangements.

WILLIS A. SUTTON

Among the featured speakers at the Northwest Texas Conference for Education in Canyon March 8 and 9 will be Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools at Atlanta, Ga. He is one of the nation's leading administrators and is in great demand as a speaker.

WORLD WAR VETERANS TO BUY SOLDIER'S HOME

A Bluebonnet sale will be staged by the Legion Posts of Texas on April 21st, San Jacinto Day, for the purpose of securing funds with which to pay for the Confederate Home at Austin.

Early in 1939, the legislative committees of the American Legion, United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, working in unison, secured the passage of a bill by Senator Houghton Brownlee of Austin dedicating the use of the Confederate Home of Texas to the soldiers and sailors of all wars.

The Veterans Central Home Council was then formed by members of these organizations to carry out the purposes contained in the bill. The best proposition that has been worked out, the Council believes, is the sale of Bluebonnets, made in Texas, on April 21, 1940, to raise additional funds.

The Veteran organizations of Texas, in their several state conventions, pledged a sponsor fund of $1.00 per member per year for three years for the rebuilding of the Home, totalling $103,000.

Local committee work is headed by F. E. Caraway as chairman, for Aubyn E. Clark Post of the American Legion.

MUSEUM GETS LOAN OF 6,000 INDIAN ARROW HEADS

A collection of over 6,000 arrow heads picked up in the vicinity of Portales, was loaned to the Portales Museum by Lee Johnson, former resident there, and now superintendent of the Wink, Texas schools.

The collection is probably the largest of its kind, and is certainly the largest collection yet reported from that area.

D. H. Reed, of ENM college, announced the loan of the collection together with a donation toward the building of the museum received from Mr. Johnson.

Mrs. D. E. Wadsworth and children will go to Dalhart this evening over the Denver to visit her mother.
