the nation's top drivers — Buick Motor Division's team of professional test drivers.

These expert drivers, operating at the General Motors Proving Grounds test track, Milford, Mich., have been driving day and night, summer and winter, for more than 33 years without a lost time accident. In this period, they've logged many millions of miles on new dent. In this period, they've logged many millions of miles on new

A. E. McManama, general supervisor of Buick's road test depart-ment, says there are certain fundamental rules followed by Buick's driving team for safe winter driving:

Snow and rain: "Both cause wet highways and wet highways are a hazard. Even more important, though, visibility is cut down by either element, and this is the factor that determines your safe driving speed."

Ice on highway: "It depends on the traction you are getting," says McManama. "If we're not getting traction, we get off the road."

Safe speeds: "A good rule of thumb in rain or snow is cut your speed 10 to 15 mph below the 'Safe' speed," says McManama.

Clean, clear windows: "If your car stays outdoors at night, a cardboard or newspaper over the windshield (let the wiper blade hold it in place) will prevent your windows from frosting. In driving, an open vent will prevent your windows from steaming. Every window, plus the outside rear view mirror, should be clear."

Getting out of a skid: "If you're driving properly, you won't get into a skid." points out the Buick supervisor. "But if you do, DON'T touch the brakes. You have to steer yourself out of it, and you can do this only by keeping some traction."

Warming up your engine: "You should idle the engine a couple minutes to circulate the oil. Don't race the engine during this warm-up. When you start, do it at a reasonable speed. In the new Buicks, watch the green light on the temperature indicator. When this goes off, your engine is warm, and you can also turn your heater on."

Drive a clean car: "Winter darkness is more difficult to drive by than summer darkness. You don't have the light penetration. A car that becomes covered with salt and road dirt is difficult to be seen by an oncoming driver, particularly against a dull gray winter background. Keep your car clean for your own safety, as well as the car's protection."

McManama sums up safe winter driving in two words - "Be conservative."

"If you think 55 mph might be safe on a wet road, then cut your speed to 40. If there's any question about being able to stay on an icy road, then pull off the road.
"If winter drivers will just remember that they can't operate the way they do in summer, their motoring will be much safer, and more enjoyable, in spite of the weather," McManama says.
