Civil Defense Releases Storm Signal System

Mike McCully, Civil Defense coordinator, has released the storm warning system to be used here now that the tornado season is approaching or in the event of any disaster.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has released the following Safety Rules in regard to Tornadoes.

If you are near a tornado cellar: When time permits, go to a tornado cellar, cave or underground excavation which should have an air outlet to help equalize the air pressure.

If you are in open country: Move at right angles to the tornado's path. Tornadoes usually move ahead at about 25 to 40 miles per hour.

If in a city or town: Seek inside shelter, preferable in a strongly reinforced building. Stay away from windows!

In schools: In city areas: If school building is of strongly reinforced construction, stay inside, away from windows, remain near an inside wall on the lower floors when possible.

News From Clarendon College

HERE AND THERE

It seems that this week spring has finally arrived. This fact is evident by the abundant number of tennis players who have been using the local courts. Although many students are participating, many more are just sittin' around and looking. I hadn't realized that tennis was such a spectator sport!

The grades for the last nine weeks have been received by the students this week. Oh, the sadness of it all! A few grins were seen, but the majority of the faces seemed to reflect the true amount of studying done this semester.

Spring fever has evidently hit many of the students up on the Hill. Maybe this is just a passing fancy, and everyone will be back to normal a little later in the year.

Oh, yes! I heard a good Knock, Knock joke. Ask someone to say "Knock, Knock," then counter simply with, "Who's there?" This has a tendency to leave people at a loss for words. It also cuts down know-it-alls.

THIS AND THAT

Two of the Groom boys are on the casualty list at the present time. Lynn Barker underwent an emergency appendectomy last week and Butch Brown suffered extensive injuries in a rodeo mishap. Both of these boys have been active in planning the Aggie Club rodeo and it's too bad that

A FRONT TIRE BLOWOUT!
WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

First, most drivers feel that they know how to handle a front tire blowout. Second, they feel like it can't or won't happen to them.

Suppose one of your front tires blows out, what would you do?

A blowout on a front tire "steers" the front wheel away from the path of the car's center mass. The center mass is the point around which the weights of all other parts of the car are in balance. The retarding force of the blowout tire causes the center mass to swing forward around the blowout wheel, which acts as a pivot. As the center of mass goes forward, the lateral distance between the pivot wheel and the center of mass becomes greater. The greater this distance becomes the more difficulty a driver will have in preventing the car from changing ends.

After the blowout, a driver's first and main job is to steer against the pull in order to keep the center of mass behind the blowout wheel. He must do this quickly and firmly, keeping the car headed in the same general direction. If a left front tire blows out, keep the car on the right side of the road or the lane you are in. If there is no traffic in the immediate area, you should try to steer it onto the shoulder. If a right front tire blows out, the car will be on the shoulder before long. You should try to keep it from going into the barrow ditch.

FIREBALLING is the word for this cloud of thundering smoke boiling up around Launch Pad 17A at Cape Kennedy. Smoke pouring upward out of the fireball is peaked at the top like whipped cream. These dramatic fire and smoke patterns were touched off as a Delta rocket launched the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Explorer XXVI.

GARDENING TIPS

With the approach of spring, the thoughts of many thrifty homeowners turn to vegetable gardening.

However, suburban dwellers are often at a disadvantage because of limited land area. They should follow certain gardening techniques to make best use of available land, says County Agent Ronald Gooch.

A garden plan on paper enables one to make the most efficient use of the garden area. Group the crops so they will mature at about the same time. As one crop is removed, another may be planted in its place. Follow each crop with an unrelated one to avoid buildup of disease and harmful insects, suggest the county agent.

Make the earliest plantings at one side of the garden and work across with later-maturing crops until it is complete.

Vegetables that may be considered for successive plantings are: early-season lettuce, radishes, onions and turnips; mid-season—green beans, southern peas, tomatoes, cucumbers and peppers; late-season—fall tomatoes, cauliflower, and late varieties of lettuce and turnips.

Parts of the garden shaded by trees or buildings during the day should be planted in leafy vegetables, such as lettuce, collards and spinach, which best tolerate shade. Fruit-bearing and root crops should be planted in the part of the garden with the greatest amount of sunlight.

Plant perennials, such as asparagus and artichokes, along one side of the garden so they will not interfere with seasonal crops.

Many vegetables can be decorative as well as useful by interplanting with flowers and shrubs. Bell peppers, eggplant, okra, tomatoes, and others can be attractively placed in flower beds. Beets, carrots, spinach and cherry tomatoes make attractive borders for the beds. Cucumbers and pole beans can be planted along fences.

Limited-area gardeners should consider planting vegetables which cannot be purchased fresh and at reasonable prices, advises the agent.

BOLL, WEEVIL SURVIVAL DOWN IN HIGH PLAINS—Early surveys indicate the effectiveness of the all-out campaign started last fall to stop the westward move of the cotton boll weevil. Ground trash, collected during January in a 9-county area, showed an average of only 281 live bill weevils per acre, compared with 2, 650 found during the same period last year.

FORT ORD, Calif. (ANF)—One of the new recruits at Fort Ord, Calif., is an ideal campaigner. He's happy in the field, he forages for his own food, and he has a self-replacing uniform.

He certainly gives a hoot about his job. In fact, he can be distinguished by his hoots. He's a hard-working screech owl... named Hoot.

Hoot rules the roost at Sandstone Ridge, the 4th Brigade's light vehicle training area. Brought there by Sgt. Robert A. Mitchell, Hoot was quickly adopted as mascot of the instructors.

He's impartial in picking his favorite perch. A flash of two big eyes and Hoot hops to the shoulder of the nearest instructor. There's usually an affectionate nibble on the ear-of the obliging noncom.

Life is not all pleasure for this military bird. His mission is to act as pest exterminator for the area. While the instructors spend only three days a week on the ridge, Hoot—perhaps with an eye on a specialist rating—works overtime.

RANGE DROUGHT PLANS

Drought is common in ranching country but the damage it does may be offset by good range management. Range management balances plant growth over a period of years and insures a continuous forage supply. A good range management program will include stored feed such as hay and silage as well as forage reserve resulting from wise grazing use. This reserve forage is by far the cheapest feed a rancher can have when drought occurs.

Less than three-fourths of normal rainfall is considered as critical for maintaining range forage production. Weather stations in the western part of Texas average two years out of five in which precipitation is less than three-fourths normal. On a statewide basis rainfall is below normal more years than it is above.

Ranchers who have maintained reserve forage on the range or who have sufficient feed at the beginning of the present drought will be able to maintain their livestock with little additional outlay for feed. The time to prepare for the next drought is during favorable years. Ranges should be only moderately used during years of high forage production. This moderate use will give a reserve feed supply which can be utilized during drier years.

A period of good range conditions for plant growth is the time to overhaul your range management program and consider the following: 1. Balance the stocking rate with forage production. 2. Store silage and hay for emergencies while plentiful and not too expensive. 3. Set up a systematic plan for controlling brush. 4. Reseed abandoned fields and abandoned areas to adapted forage plants. 5. Watch the weather. Rains during the warm season produce grass. Below average rainfall during the growing season warns of less forage production for later use. 6. Building up the range and maintaining a forage reserve is much cheaper than sacrificing animals on a low market, or using up the rancher's savings and credit for necessary feed.

Bobby Lewis, Janet Goodman,

Have you stopped by a modern dump ground lately? It is amazing how fast one fills up during these days. Towns have a problem of disposing of the trash and junk. We couldn't help thinking how different things were during the terrible thirties. Folks just didn't buy very much in the way of new things and didn't throw away even that much. If it was made of tin and had a hole in it we would stuff in a piece of cloth and make a slop bucket or a chicken watering pail. Old tires were cut into for water and feed troughs. Large cans were used for hen nests. If it was solid metal it was sold to the junk dealer. If the item was not good enough to use but too good to throw away we kept it thinking that times might get worse. Come to think of it we always brought back more from the junk ground than we carried away... Be honest with me, wasn't this the truth with most of you?

Another shocking thing is the way most television programs are being kicked about for the coming year. Looks like the viewing will be slim pickin. Funny thing about people, recently some good friends moved across town, and we were looking forward to some good old fashioned visiting. Now we hear that Peyton Place will be on three nights each week next fall. This will just about disrupt normal social activity. This is one show that came back 50% stronger than this year. Some folks think it is a bit on the low side, but it doesn't seem nearly as bad as the average television movie, and not anywhere near as rough as most hometowns in this modern day....

Another thing that has changed a lot since the depression is that salesmen almost never stop you in the field anymore. It used to be common practice for one to be waiting on the turn-row. This must mean that times are a lot better these days.

Uncle Jay Bob says that the very next time a would be politician comes by asking for a vote that he is going to ask him if he really wants the job. It seems that the last several who came by and were elected started right in wanting the job to be better. They asked for more pay, a shorter work week, a more comfortable place in which to do less, and some extra helpers to join in the enjoyment.

We still have a few extra stamps from Greece.... These came to us from our friend, James Young, a G. I. stationed in those parts. Send a self addressed and stamped envelope and we will send at least one to the next ten folks who write in...

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE 18th DISTRICT

By Congressman Walter Rogers

GOVERNMENT VERSUS THE GOVERNED

The basic right of private ownership of property is being seriously challenged. The method being used affects only a few people at a time, hence the subject has received little publicity. It is the exercise of the right of eminent domain by the Federal government. Eminent domain has been defined by the Supreme Court as "the right or power to take private property for public use." More precisely, it is the right of the nation or the State or the sovereign power, or of those to whom the power has been lawfully delegated, to condemn private property for public use, and to appropriate the ownership and possession of such property for such use on paying the owner a due compensation to be ascertained according to law. This right or power in the sovereign to take private property is supposedly justified on the existence of a common necessity and interest of the whole community that overrides the basic right of the individual. The exercise of the right of eminent domain by the sovereign is usually and commonly called "condemnation". I was taught in law school that condemnation was a harsh procedure because it was the action of the all-powerful government taking property from a private citizen without his consent. It is true the private citizen is entitled to just compensation; however, the owner of the property might not want to sell it for any purpose. Since such action by the government was unusual and harsh, it was generally taught that there must be a present need for the use of the property for public purposes; a present need or necessity that completely overshadowed the rights of the individual owner.

or any other purpose. It was subsequently determined that a grave mistake had been made and that an airport couldn't be located at this site. The government officials then moved further up the Potomac and chose a place near Chantilly, Virginia (which is the present location of Dulles International Airport). They started condemnation proceedings against the landowners in that area. Some of the landowners at the Chantilly site were the identical landowners who had been kicked off of their land at the Burke site. They told the government that they would be most pleased to trade their Chantilly land to the government for the land that had been taken away from them at Burke, or that they would repurchase the land at Burke from which they had been ejected at the same price that they had been paid. The government officials advised them that this could not be done, even though the Burke site had never been used for the purpose for which it was condemned. These citizens who were being ejected from land which they owned as private owners twice in a few short years by their own government, were told by government officials that the land at the Burke site had increased in value due to the expansion of the city of Washington and its environs, and that if they wanted their former homes it would be necessary that they pay the Federal government a profit. Several of us in Congress tried to correct this situation but we were overruled.

We are presently undertaking another movement to put a stop to Federal bureaucracy trampling on the rights of individual citizens in this manner. We hope to be successful this time.

In recent years there has been a marked change in the thinking of government officials on this subject. A school of thought has developed on the theory that "anticipated" needs of the government should be ample justification for taking private property from a private citizen. In other words, if government officials think that the government might need some land for highways, reservoirs, building sites, recreational purposes, military establishments, or any other purposes in the future, condemnation proceedings would be justified to take the property and hold it in government ownership until a need arose. This is in direct conflict with the basic proposition that there must be a present public need and necessity for the property. However, this conflict does not deter the government-minded bureaucrats, many of whom have been raised in government, and have never had to meet a payroll or past due rent in their lives.

An excellent example of the wrongs that can occur under such thinking took place within the shadow of the Capitol. Some years ago government officials decided that a new airport site was needed near Washington. They chose what was called "The Burke Site" in northern Virginia near the Potomac River and very close to the Capitol. They condemned this land, ran landowners off the land whose families had occupied it for some 200 years. This property was then held by the government without being used for airport purposes

FARM NEWS

From County ASCS Committee

1965 COTTON PROGRAM

As most of you already know, the 1965 Cotton Program sign-up has been extended until April 9. The Department of Agriculture extended the sign-up period in order to give cotton farmers more time to plan their farming operations.

This leaves only one day for you to come in and talk with us about the program and its provisions and to sign up to participate if you so desire.

This extension of time does not apply to the Feed Grain Program or revising intentions for the Wheat Program.

FEED GRAIN STATISTICS

Sixty percent of the feed grain farms containing 68% of the total base in Donley County are signed up for participation in this year's program. Producers on 336 farms plan to divert a total of 17611 acres. This is 30% of the total feed grain base in the county. The average diversion per farm is 45%.

Please remember that if you plan to carry out clean tillage on your diverted acres you must have the approval of the county committee to do so. You may sign the application forms at the county office at your convenience.

WHEAT NOTICES

All initial measurements for wheat have been made and notices will be mailed out to producers very soon. If there is any excess wheat or other wheat you wish to destroy, it must be destroyed and reported to this office by May 1.

OTHER NEWS

New terraces have been constructed on the Harvey Blanks farm—Lloyd Leggett of Hedley did the work. An old terrace system was improved and enlarged in the course of maintenance at their own expense. They are to be commended for these conservation measures carried out on the farm.

Raymond Waldrop, Hall Hardin, Winnie Kerr, R. O. Osburn, and H. C. Shaw, Jr. have recently installed underground irrigation pipe on their farms to conserve water and prevent erosion.

Norville Hamilton of Quitaque, Texas, recently bought the W. C. (Bill) Johnson farm near Hedley. Mr. Hamilton has carried out several ACP practices, including stockwater tanks and diversion terraces, and made many more improvements on his farm. We're very pleased to welcome Mr. Hamilton to Donley County.

RODEO DANCE BAND ANNOUNCED

The Clarendon College Aggie Club wishes to announce the selection of an excellent western-style band to provide the music for the dances that follow each night performance of the Junior Rodeo to be held April 23-24. This band is billed as Jay Riley and the Country Boys, and those who have heard the group perform will verify that it is one of the top western bands in the county today.

Jay Riley, leader and vocalist is a native of Clarendon and is a recording artist for Capitol Records, Nashville, Tennessee. Jay is a versatile singer, specializing in many of the past and present favorites of the country field and featuring many of his own compositions. Members of Jay's band are carefully selected, rating highly with musicians of all the big name western bands.

The Aggie Club feels very fortunate to have booked this group, and the club is confident that all country and western music lovers and dancers will thoroughly enjoy every minute of the dances. The price of admission will be $1.00 per person for each performance.

NEWS FROM CITY HALL

All qualified voters were reminded last week that "Vigilance is the price of liberty." Sometimes we forget that we don't just have the obligation to vote; it is a privilege, as well as a civic duty.

True to my "campaign promises," I will write a column each week so that you, the taxpayers, will know what is going on and how the city is spending your tax dollars.

Have you ever wondered just what is the difference between the alderman form of city government and the councilman form? Both systems are equally good forms of government. Until recently Clarendon has had the Council, composed of a strong mayor and two city councilmen. Now we have a system with a weak mayor and five Aldermen. But there is not a great deal of difference really. I sincerely believe that we changed, not because we were dissatisfied with the form of government, but because we were dissatisfied with the way things were going. Therefore, we voted for a more progressive group of people to head our government, five new aldermen.

However, this system can become as ineffective as any other type of system. If we are unhappy with these aldermen in the future, then let's change the people, not the type of government. Under the system which we now have, the mayor carries out the city ordinance as prescribed by the five aldermen. The mayor is the judicial arm of the government, not the legislative branch. In fact, the mayor, under this system, doesn't even have a vote, unless there is a tie in the vote of the aldermen. However, a good mayor can be an effective tool. He can work with and counsel with the aldermen, suggesting ordinances if he sees that they are necessary.

The citizens of Clarendon have shown that we are for progress. Now I don't mean spending money, but trying to make Clarendon a good place to live, for young and old people. Let's not kid ourselves that "everything will be great when we get the dam," or "everything will be great if we can get a small factory." The dam will ultimately be a fact, but that won't change a thing. Our businesses will not miraculously increase. There is no factory that is going to solve our problems.

Those of us who had the good fortune to attend the Chamber of Commerce banquet and heard Mr. Covell, know our problems and how to solve them. Clarendon will continue to lose population and lose business until we do something about it. Yes, it is up to us alone. Once that we have stopped fighting among ourselves and started to solve our problems, we can hope to interest an industry and promote facilities at the dam-site. And we won't be able to interest anyone then, unless we go out and make them aware that Clarendon is a growing, thriving town that will help others—not a town looking for help.

My opponent made a statement to me a few weeks ago that made a lot of sense. "The people of Clarendon must stop fighting each other and work together for the good of the city."

WELL, HOW ABOUT IT? LET'S DO IT!
