SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

The Tasks Before Us

We have just recently completed this year's observance of Soil Stewardship Week. We hope you are more aware of your responsibilities as a land owner and a citizen of this country.

Our Growing Economy

With increasing momentum, America is moving along uncharted avenues of growth. Our expanding population is at the heart of this growth. Numbering more than 190 million today, it will reach 360 million by the end of the century. The population explosion is creating an unprecedented economic upsurge, exemplified in the new highways, factories, airports, and residential areas springing up across the country.

Resources Under Pressure This headlong growth is unleashing new and difficult problems. Foremost among these are tremendous pressures on the nation's natural resources—our land, water, forests, wildlife, and open space.

For Example: By the year, 1980, we will need 600 billion gallons of water a day. We now use 350 billion gallons daily.

By the year 2,000 our food requirements will double. But our most fertile farm lands are being diverted to other purposes—at the rate of a million acres a year.

Production of wood from the forest resources the U. S. has will have to be doubled by the year 2000.

By the end of the century, the demand for recreation will at least triple.

Stewardship—The Duty of All To meet these demands, Americans must practice stewardship. We must conserve, use, and develop our God-given natural resources more wisely and imagin-actively in the years ahead.

Every citizen is responsible—for every citizen is involved. In spreading metropolitan areas, the construction of homes, highways, and buildings is accelerating land erosion and polluting water supplies. Over 500,000 acres of farm and forest land are being damaged each year through erosion and misuse.

Water shortages, once confined to semi-arid regions, now occur in humid areas. And as our stream valleys become crowded with homes and industries, flood hazards mount progressively. Open space, recreational areas, natural beauty—where will they be found as our crowded cities expand?

READ LABELS TO PROLONG FABRIC LIFE

Piece good departments are a maze of colors, designs and textures that tempt the home sewer into starting her spring and summer wardrobe, says Lynn Parks, Texas A&M Extension consumer education specialist.

With the endless array of fabrics on the market today, it is often difficult for the home seamstress to know what she's buying by looking and feeling.

Too often, the color, texture and pattern to be used influence the selection of the fabric—yet the home sewer also should take into consideration how the finished garment is to be cared for, the specialist says.

Information concerning the care of the fabric usually is tucked deep into the bolt of material, where buyers do not always see it. And, of course, this information stays at the store.

A lot of time and work goes into the making of an outfit. To keep it looking chic, the garment must have proper care. So read the labels to know the characteristics of the fabric being bought. Label-reading is just as important when selecting fabrics for home sewing as it is when choosing ready-made apparel.

After reading the fabric labels, write down special instructions for future reference, the specialist recommends.

LIBRARY NOTES

EDITH BARNES

Another memorial gift has been given to the library in memory of Dr. and Mrs. Sarah Stocking.

Again I hope that you parents will do everything you can to encourage, not make your children to spend part of their leisure time during vacation with books. Also remember don't stop reading to your younger ones as soon as they learn to read.

A brief review for new readers.

A three month membership cost 25c; books can be checked out for 2 weeks at a time, and can be renewed for two more. You pay for books lost or damaged, a fine must be paid for over due books and finally the library is open from 2:00 P.M. every day except Sundays and Holidays.

Things have really been jumping at the library since school has been out. We get more young readers every year and I know they appreciate the summer memberships given them by the teachers and room mothers. We will probably never know how many non-readers have become readers and enjoy using the library because this was done for them. Mesdames: Barrow, Butler, Donald, Hawkins, Johnson, Shaller and Miss Mongole and the room mothers in Mrs. Brandon's room gave every pupil in their respective rooms summer memberships.

This year's Pulitzer Prize Winner for Literature, Shirley Ann Grau's "The Keeper of the House" caused hardly a ripple among our readers. It has been in the library since last December with very few wanting to check it out.

There have been very few calls for it even after the announcement that it had won this coveted award. The only Pulitzer Winner to be read and still read after it won three or four years ago is Harper Lee's "To Kill A Mockingbird." Of course the fact that the movie made such a big splash and won so many Academy Awards did its circulation no harm.

An old winner, 1940, and a perennial favorite of course is John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath." It and "To Kill A Mocking Bird" are on both high school and college reading lists. But in spite of this they are popular with readers teen-age and up, which is unusual as unfortunately most of us shy away from the books that require a little thinking.

To The Taxpayers Of The City Of Clarendon and the Clarendon Consolidated Independent School District

There has been a good response by the taxpayers of the above listed taxing agencies to the notices of delinquent taxes recently mailed. The two taxing agencies have gone for a number of years without any action with regard to their delinquent taxes, but in order to be fair to those people who have paid their taxes as per the provisions of the statutes and in order to have sufficient funds to operate the agencies, it became necessary to adopt a plan to collect the overdue taxes as provided by the statutes of Texas.

It is the plan of the school and the city to collect all delinquent taxes that are due and payable. The laws of the State give the taxing agencies a lien on all property owned by an individual for the taxes on the property for which the taxes are assessed, and this includes a homestead. The lien against the homestead is only for the taxes against the homestead. All other property, either real or personal, held or owned by any person in this State, is liable for all taxes due on real estate, personal property, and poll taxes, and any personal or real property may be levied on to satisfy all delinquent taxes. Courts in this State have upheld the right of taxing agencies to seize automobiles and other similar property and to sell the same for taxes.

The school and city trust that the taxpayers will continue their response and cooperation in payment of delinquent and overdue taxes, and that the payment of the same may be achieved with as little trouble as possible. Notices either have been or are in the process of being mailed at this time. Many taxpayers have contacted the collection agencies and have either paid or made arrangements to pay their delinquent taxes. Instructions have been given to file tax suits against those who make no effort to pay their taxes. All taxes are due and payable to the school at the school administration building and to the city at the city hall.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE 18th DISTRICT

By Congressman Walter Rogers

WASHINGTON VISITORS

June seems to be the most popular month for visits to Washington from the Panhandle folks. A number of family groups, delegations here on business with the Government, and individuals have dropped by the office in recent days. It is always a pleasure to see and talk with visitors and, when possible, to assist them in making their visits to the Capital more enjoyable.

One of the groups here this week was representing Amarillo in its program of developing the Amarillo Medical Center at the west edge of the city. The delegation, which was here to explore avenues of Federal assistance in developing some of the Medical Center facilities, included Mr. Earl O'Keefe, President of the Amarillo Area Foundation; Mr. Emmett R. Johnson, the Executive Director of the Foundation; Miss Louise Evans, editor of the editorial pages, Amarillo Globe-News; and Dr. Robert F. Hyde, M. D. They held several meetings with high ranking officials of branches of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, and also consulted with a Special Assistant to the President. There are several Federal programs providing for direct grants and other types of assistance for which elements of the Amarillo medical complex may well be eligible.

The Panhandle's spelling bee champion, Wanda Carol Blurton of Perryton, made an excellent showing in the National Spelling Bee here this week. I had the pleasure of meeting her when she and her mother, Mrs. John A. Blurton, came by the office before the spell-down began.

It was also a pleasure to have had visits from a number of other persons, coming from all points of the Panhandle compass. Among other recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Thompson of Pampa and their children, Gene, Jim, and Margaret Ann; Mr. and Mrs. James K. Lovell of Dumas, and their children, Jim, Joe, John, Jeff, Nita, and Laura; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lilly of Amarillo, with son John and daughter Marsha, Miss Wanda Pierce of Wheeler and Miss Faye Ann Wofford of Shamrock; Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Johnson, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Johnson, Jr., and their daughter Berkley, of Amarillo; Miss Janet Lewis and Miss Janice Meyer of Amarillo; John Buck of Hereford, with his friend from Notre Dame, Terrence Golden of Dallas (the boys are heading for a summer in Europe); Mr. J. W. Buchanan of Dumas; John R. Dove of Panhandle; Ben Whitfill of Silverton; John D. Aikin and Jay Boston of Hereford and Bruce Parr of Friona, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bruce of Amarillo, and Mr. E. P. Roach, also of Amarillo.

As I prepare this newsletter, I am looking forward to a visit from a group of 19 ladies from Shamrock. They are touring by chartered bus and are on their way to Washington from Williamsburg, Va., the restored colonial town that, like the Capitol itself, provides so much of interest to visitors from the Panhandle. More about their visit next week.

A highlight of the week for me was to have a chance to talk at some length with Mr. Lyle Robinson of Tulla, the manager of the Swisher County Electric Cooperative, who had just returned to the United States from South Vietnam. Lyle was one of six rural electrification experts sent as a team to that war-torn country to determine ways in which, through electric cooperatives, good electric service can be extended to the Vietnamese people. Ninety-five industries would be greatly benefited by the planned extension of service. New industry would be attracted. Lyle reports that one of the major benefits could come as good electric service enables an increase in irrigation for agriculture. I particularly enjoyed talking with Lyle Robinson because of his great optimism for the future of South Vietnam. As all of us are aware, the war now raging is bitter and deadly and the stakes are extremely high; the freedom of all of Southeast Asia is involved. Lyle points out that vast areas of South Vietnam enjoy relative stability while battles rage in other sections of the country, and it is in these areas of calm where economic development is to be concentrated—to the benefit of all the Vietnamese people. Fewer than 100 of the country's 3,000 villages have electric service of any kind; the projects worked out by the team of which Lyle Robinson was a member will go a long way to further progress and a better way of life for South Vietnam's people.

Teach the beginning fisherman the bait-casting rig, first. After he masters it, instruct him in spin-casting. And then spinning.

Finally, give him at least an introduction to fly fishing, if only to complete his education.

Most of the fish he seeks can be taken with a bait-casting rig. It is tops for black bass.

It's also okay for speckled trout and others of the smaller salt-water varieties.

Furthermore, when he goes to the coast, then all he needs is a bigger reel and a longer rod and develop the two-handed surf casting toss. That is if he wants to hurl his bait far out and if he expects something sizeable to hit the lure. Anyway he will be familiar with the gear.

There are times when spin-casting is the preferable method, and there are other times when pinning is better. I use the two arms to designate the closed-face and open face spinning rigs.

Spin-casting — that's the closed face reel — is so simple, easy, and so efficient that it has made rod and reel fishermen of untold thousands who never would have had the patience to learn bait casting. This is an American version of the ancient European thread-lining. It's designed to make everything easier for the angler. And it pretty well does!

At first the closed-face reels were full of bugs. But in today's brands these bugs have been eliminated. I wouldn't want you to be fooled, however, that you can't get into trouble with them.

Trouble comes when you fail to keep a little tension on your line, or when you let the nylon monofilament form into loops and swirls.

When that happens, and the stuff gets bunched up, you might as well figure on cutting out the tangle and starting over. Nothing looks more hopeless than a knotted, tangled mess of monofilament.

But if you've got the time, and the patience, eventually you can untangle it. Best tools for the purpose are small tweezers and Mom's knitting needle.

Moral here is to avoid loose line. Then you won't have trouble with your spin-casting outfit.

One of the disadvantages of the spin-cast reel is that you have to take it apart to see how much line is left on your spool. This is easy to do. And replacing old line with new is a simple operation.

Line deteriorates. So test it frequently. Line is cheap. So change it often.

Now, what about that open-faced spinning reel?

This one mounts on the bottom of your rod, not the top. You hold that outfit in your right hand all the time and wind with your left.

This is the rod and reel Europeans invented a long time ago. U. S. soldiers in World War II brought it home with them. We thought that it was new, but it wasn't. The English, French, Italians, Swedes and Norwegians have been 'thread lining' for quite a few years.

Some anglers like spinning better than spin-casting. There are several reasons. First, your spool is there in plain sight all the time. You can see whether you have the right amount of line, or too little or too much. And you can easily adjust accordingly without taking the thing apart.

Even more important—you can hold the rod in one hand and reel in with the other, without changing hands.

Spinning reels come in all sizes. You can get the ultra-light outfits with their two-pound lines for panfish; or you can get salt-water reels that will take heavy line for the big ones. There are in-between sizes, too.

Also, you can get interchangeable spools for your reel.

If my partner and I are going for the big black bass of lunger size, I use my bait-casting rig. It consists of a stiff five-foot glass rod and an Ambassador No. 5000 reel.

If we're minnow - fishing for perch or white bass, I use an ultra-light five-foot spinning rod with a Micron reel and four-pound line. With this outfit I can use a free-swimming minnow — without any sinker — and cast him well out, then let him find his way slowly down to the depth where the whites are congregated.

My favorite closed-faced spinning reels are the Bronson and the Zebco. I use the Zebco Model 33 reel with matching rod; and the Bronson Model "63" rod and reel combination. Both come packaged in a mighty handy zippered case.

Zebco, a Tulsa firm, produced the first closed-face reel! It's still a leader in the field. The Bronson rig is the one that has the reel built into the handle... a brand new innovation.

With these three rigs, I'm just about ready for anything that might happen in fresh water.

Now, a word about fly-fishing. We think of fly-fishing mostly as something for the trout fisherman. And in Texas there are not very many trout. The fly rod is excellent for panfish. But you've got to remember that there is a back cast. You must have clear space, behind you, or employ some of the more difficult fly-casting tricks.

Fly fishermen are noted for wading in trout streams. There they have open water behind them and they don't risk a snag when the line goes far back behind them while casting. You can use a fly rod when you are fishing from a boat, well enough. But it's not much for bank fishing.

You can catch any kind of fresh water fish, and a good many of the salt-water variety, with fly fishing equipment. Try it sometime and see if you like it. You might go for it. As for me, I still haven't mastered the art of fly fishing. It takes the kind of patience "I don't got."

RURAL AND URBAN GOALS SIMILAR — Rural and urban America share so many common objectives their differences are minute by comparison, says U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Orville S. Freeman. More employment opportunities, improved educational services, better health facilities, better housing and maintenance and restoration of beauty are being sought just as vigorously in the countryside as in the cities, he said. And progress toward these goals in either area accelerates progress in the other.

NEWS FROM CITY HALL

by R. L. Gilkey, Mayor

It was a little surprising that no one attended the public hearing last Thursday with the Zoning Commission and the City Council. Not many persons were expected, but we'd hoped for a few.

Briefly, the ordinance is too long to publish in its entirety. It is, however, a well planned and well written document. If you are interested in reading the ordinance or any part of it, please stop by City Hall and so.

The primary residential district is West of the J. A. Highway. It will be for residences, duplexes and apartments. The secondary residential area will be in the South portion of town and will allow trailer houses as well. The business area will be essentially unchanged. The industrial area will be the length of highway 287 through town and the area East of state highway 70.

This comprehensive ordinance is adequate not only for our present needs but will serve us well in the future. As mayor I wish to publicly offer the thanks of the city to the Zoning Commission. Those members are: Tom Cook, Bill Williams, Mrs. Frank Phelan, Jr., Jake Lamberth, Mrs. Gayle Neal, and K. K. Day. They have spent many hours in hard work for our benefit and it wasn't an easy task. Our thanks to such citizens as these.

In our last meeting the city council considered an ordinance which will pertain to owners of vacant lots. The state legislature recently allowed cities under 5,000 population to pass ordinances requiring such vacant lots be cleaned. The city will have the authority to clean such lots at the owners expense if the owner refuses to do so. With the recent rains and high weeds we're all going to have to clean up our lots to help control the mosquitoes this summer.

R. L. Gilkey Mayor

Taxpayers Respond To Delinquent Tax Notices

Approximately one hundred people who own property in the City of Clarendon or the Clarendon Consolidated Independent School District have paid their delinquent taxes during the past two weeks. Notices and declaration of the intention of the taxing agencies were mailed to these people approximately two weeks ago.

The response of the taxpayers has been very good and officials of the two taxing agencies appreciate the response and cooperation of the taxpayers in the payment of overdue taxes. The city and school plan to proceed with tax suits wherever necessary in order to enforce the liens against the property that delinquent taxes give the taxing agencies involved.

Each taxpayer is urged to check with the school and the city to be sure that the description of the property involved and the amount of taxes assessed against the taxpayer are correct. Due to the fact that many taxpayers do not render their taxes as required by law, taxing agencies are forced to make a rendition and the possibility of an error on such rendition is always present.

COTTON FARMERS OPPOSE SUBSIDY SCHEME

Cotton Farmers all over the Rolling Plains and throughout the Cotton Belt are alarmed about the apparent pell-mell dash to cram government payments down the throats of producers.

These same farmers are tired of hearing non-farm groups say they know what the farmer wants. Cotton farmers are perfectly capable of presenting their own case. Cotton growers repeatedly have registered opposition as strongly as they know how to any change in the present skip-row planting measurement and to prevent direct payments from the government treasury which are closely scrutinized by the urban population.

The House Agriculture Committee, although it hasn't sent a cotton bill to Congress, now appears ready for an effort to cut the national allotment 2 million acres, drastically reduce the skip-row planting and get a direct farmer payment plan enacted into law.

A compensatory payment program would make cotton farmers wards of the federal government. It would, in fact, put them on the federal payroll without civil service status.

Cotton farmers aren't nearly as divided on the issue of compensatory payments as some non-farm groups and trade officials who have been wooed into the direct subsidy camp proffers to have detected.

A direct subsidy plan in its simplest terms, would involve dropping the government loan to around the so-called world price level and issuing supplemented subsidies directly to growers. The low loan level still would be set by the government. The low loan level would act as an umbrella to the world market and other cotton exporting countries would continue to sell just under the price announced by the U. S. The low loan level would not sell any larger volumes of cotton.

Growers fear, among other things, that any compensatory payment plan inevitably would mean limitations on the payments any individual farmer may receive. A direct subsidy program would reward inferiority and inefficiency and would penalize foresight, ambition, and initiative. The inevitable limitations would put a ceiling on opportunity for the genuine farmer.

The Rolling Plains is found to have some of the most efficient, enterprising cotton farmers anywhere. Through their working and acting together, they have made this region one of the great cotton areas in the world.

These remarks were made by Terry Julian, Executive Director of the Rolling Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.
