Camp Cibola provides Girl Scouts with facilities

Camp Cibola of the Quivira Girl Scout Council was purchased from the Clarendon Country Club in about 1971. The Camp was formerly the Old Country Club, and now serves as facilities for the Girl Scouts in ten Panhandle counties. Camp Cibola is approximately 42 acres, and is used all year by the Girl Scouts. It is used for a day camp, troop camping and leaders training programs.

The Camp has a mess hall, carekeeper home, craft house, swimming pool, archery range, and three different housing units for the girls. One unit is just regular cabins, one is an Indian Village and the other is a circle of Wagons.

The first carekeeper at the Girl Scout Camp was Mr. and Mrs. Jim Woody. Mr. Woody had just retired from Phillips Petroleum Co., his love for children and his ability to fix things, made him an ideal carekeeper. Mr. and Mrs. James Brieting are the present carekeepers.

In July they have three weeks of Resident Girl Scout Camping, the first week is a leaders and helpers training program, the other two weeks are for Girl Scout Camping. "You do not have to be a Girl Scout to attend the camp, but you do have to be a girl," stated Paula Goff, Girl Scout Field Executive for the Quivira Girl Scout Council.

The girls arrive on Sunday afternoon and leave Friday night, some of the girls like it so well they sign up for both weeks.

There are approximately 60 girls each week of resident camp, the cost for the week is $90 for each girl. The basic programs taught at the camp are Red Cross swimming lessons, archery, canoeing, which is taught at Bitter Creek Ranch, camp fires, cooking out and crafts.

The first week of Camp the theme was "Indian Lore", and most of the crafts pertain to Indian culture. The second week, the theme is "Teddy Bear and Me", the smaller girls brought their teddy bears, and they plan on having a Teddy Bear picnic and see a Care Bear movie.

Six girls are assigned to one cabin, teepee or wagon, and an older girl is also assigned to each group. They help the girls get ready for bed, get up in the morning, dress and get to breakfast, and spend some time with the girl if she becomes homesick.

They have a flag ceremony each morning and evening, which all the girls attend. Girls may work on badges, such as cooking, swimming and camping out. Because the dining room is so small, they have to eat in shifts, the first one must be up at the mess hall about 7:50 and the second group comes in at 8:50. Lights are turned out at 9:30.

Girls range from 6 to 17 years old with most of the older girls helping as camp aides. Those who help, get a reduced rate on their camp fee.

Clarendon Girl Scouts who attended the first week are: Jana Breiting, Cara Breiting, Christal Green, Megan Williams and Toni Breiting.

Girls attending this week are: Carla Moore, Jana Breiting, Corey Kornpp, Jessie Rogers, Liza Tull, Margaret McNabb, Lindsey Eads, Annie James, and Heather Shields.

AREA GIRLS ENJOY pool at Camp Cibola.

Handbook prepared for cow-calf operators

A new "Cow-Calf Management Handbook" has been developed by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in cooperation with two livestock industry groups to assist Texas ranchers in increasing their competitiveness and profitability under current economic conditions.

Ronald Gooch, Donley County Extension Agent, notes that most successful cow-calf operations depend on a high percent calf crop weaned, high total pounds of beef produced by the herd, and a competitive market price for quality calves. All of these factors must be balanced against a reasonable and competitive cost of production, Gooch says.

To succeed, ranchers today must study all technological, financial and marketing tools carefully in an attempt to optimize return to an operation, Gooch says.

Gooch notes that cow-calf producers have many opportunities to cut production costs and increase returns by accessing research-based technology and applying financial management and marketing information included in the handbook.

The handbook, which contains over 100 topics divided into seven major sections for convenient reference, is designed to serve ranchers who operate under Texas conditions. The materials are assembled in a three-ring binder for ease of updating by producers.

Grants for development and publication of the book were contributed by the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo and Hoechst-Roussel Agri-Vet Co., which is headquartered in Somerville, N.J.

An office copy of the handbook has been placed for reference in each county Extension office, Gooch says. Producers who wish to inspect the book, secure order forms, and place orders for the book -- which is priced at $40 per copy -- may do so by going by their local Extension offices.

Dedication of new fire station set for Sunday, August 2

There will be a dedication of the new fire station on Sunday, August 2, at 2 p.m. Phillip Stroud, minister of the church of Christ will preside at the dedication service.

The fire station has just been completed at the cost of approximately $41,000.00. The ambulances will now be kept at the fire station: Donley County, City of Clarendon and The Donley County Medical Center each paid $3,500 as they each share the cost of keeping the ambulances.

The Volunteer Firemen have already raised approximately $10,000 which leaves approximately half of the total cost of building the new fire station to be raised. The firemen are really appreciative for all the help the citizens of Donley County have contributed.

This will only be a dedication service, as there is still a lot of work to be done on the inside of the station. A formal open house will be in October during Fire Prevention Week.

The firemen would like to express a special thanks to Jiggs Mann, who donated all the gravel for the concrete in the fire station floor. Also to James Owens, who donated a pair of handmade boots, given away July 4th. "There are just too many people to thank, it would be impossible for us to name them all," stated David Pitts, an officer in the Firemen Association.

Wondell Luttrell was the contractor for the building.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment. No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persis-

PREPARE TO GO

My soul thirst always for a time and place where we can set down in the presence of God and his Son and feed from the truth of God's word. Oh to be like him, to be like him is my prayer. To see His goodness around me and you. Where everyone is happy and contented. Where sin has no place to raise its ugly head or be seen. For sixty years I have been on this earth. Thirty-five of them, I have tried to follow Jesus's teachings. I have not always succeeded in that life, but through His love and forgiveness and leading and the help of a lot of people who took time to pray and fast and kept faith, I have made it this far. My prayer is that you who reads this will come to know Him in all His greatness. To except Him as Father and Lord of your life. Don't wait until you are old, do it now and learn His will for your life.

The world paints a beautiful picture for you to look at and try to catch. Jesus gives you a life full of His grace and love that will take you through eternity to get it all. He tells you and me that He goes to prepare a place for us. Someday He will come again and take us to that place to live forever with Him. Don't you want to go? It will be worth it all. My love is for you. I look forward to seeing you in His presence in the home He has given us forever. AMEN

STAY CLEAR OF POWER LINES

HAVE RESPECT FOR POWER LINES — BOTH THOSE OVERHEAD AND THOSE UNDERGROUND — ANYTIME YOU'RE DOING A JOB THAT REQUIRES YOU TO WORK NEAR THEM.

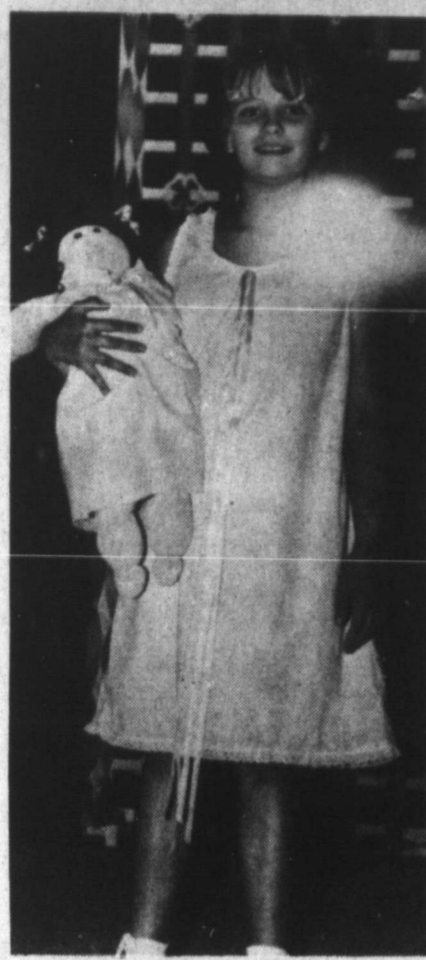

- Check your clearance carefully when you're carrying a tall pole or pipe on a tractor, or driving a truck with a raised bed, or operating machinery such as cranes, booms, hay loaders and well drilling rigs.
- Make sure you know the location of underground power lines before you install irrigation systems or unclog drain or sewer lines. Even routine projects like digging post holes or planting trees can be dangerous if you get too close to power lines.
- Fallen power lines also are extremely dangerous. If you see a line downed by a storm, high winds, car accident or other mishap, call WTU. Meanwhile, stay away from the wire and anything it touches — and keep others away, too.
- Don't trim or cut down trees near power lines. This is work best left to experts.

By Dorcas R. Hardy Commissioner of Social Security

Are you confused by letters that you get from the Social Security Administration (SSA) or other government agencies? Have you been asked to complete forms that were difficult to read or understand?

At the Social Security Administration, we send out more than 250 million letters and forms each year. The letters, which we call notices, go to beneficiaries and to individuals who are interested in our programs and their future Social Security benefits. We also send out millions of forms asking for information that we use to pay beneficiaries the correct amounts.

I am glad to report that we are making improvements in our Social Security letters and forms. We are doing this through a special task force that is improving how we communicate with the American public.

We have already completed our first challenge—setting clear standards on how our letters should look. These standards are based on sound principles of effective communications and on established printing standards. We are also using these standards to make our forms easier to complete.

Many of our letters are of poor quality because they are produced on outdated printers. We are replacing our old printers with new laser printers, which can produce letters to meet our new standards and improve the physical appearance of our letters. Laser printers produce professional quality letters which are easier to read. Making the letter look better solves some of our problems, but we still have more to do.

Our second challenge is to say what is necessary without giving too much information and without using jargon or long, difficult words. Our standards say that when writing to the public, we will use a conversational style, simple words and short sentences.

In following these standards, SSA is on the leading edge of what is happening in written communications today—at least in the government. Computers prepare some of the letters that you get from mail advertisers and private businesses. Many of these seem to be written just for you. Computers produce many Social Security letters, too, and our goal is to tailor the letters to the recipients in a similar way.

In the business world, if companies do not get their messages across to customers or possible customers, they could very well go out of business. Our messages are just as important to get across to the people that we serve. Our letters carry vital facts about benefits as well as the rights and responsibilities of individuals under the Social Security law.

To get our message across, we are learning to write more like businesses do. We now know that the best way to do this is to write the way people talk. We are changing our letters to reflect this style.

To get a reaction to our new style, we are testing our new letters with people who get Social Security benefits and supplemental security income payments. The tests are held in focus groups in different parts of the country. Similar focus groups are used in the business world to test commercials or the market strength of products. Preliminary tests showed that beneficiaries are enthusiastic about the new letters.

We are working toward the goal of making all our letters clear, readable and accurate. Because we send out millions of letters, we know that we have a lot of hard work ahead of us. Improving all our letters will take time, but, we are gaining ground.

Windfall Profit Tax repealed by Senate, Boulter says

By a vote of 58-40, the U.S. Senate voted to repeal the windfall profit tax, as move characterized by Congressman Beau Boulter as "a first step" in aiding the domestic oil and gas industry.

The Senate action, in the form of an amendment to its trade legislation, would eliminate an automatic tax on oil that is triggered when prices exceed $19 a barrel.

Boulter said the windfall profit tax, which was instituted at a time when oil prices were soaring, is patently unfair to oil patch states like Texas.

"In view of the recession throughout the oil patch and our nation's growing reliance on overseas oil, Congress must adopt a coherent national energy policy," Boulter stated. "The industry has already paid more than its fair share of taxes."

"The elimination of the windfall profit tax is a significant first step in an effort to fortify our domestic petroleum industry," Boulter added. Repeal of the tax is one provision of a comprehensive oil and gas package that Boulter and Senator Phil Gramm recently introduced in Congress to aid the domestic petroleum industry.

That bill, the National Petroleum Security Act of 1987, would establish tax incentives for exploration and marginal wells and provide for the expensing of geological and geophysical costs among other things.

According to Boulter, the United States may be more than 50 percent dependent on imported crude within the next year, and, Boulter added, "there is a growing consensus that this dependency places our military security and national economy at risk."

The House version of the trade bill passed earlier this year contains no repeal provision. A House-Senate conference committee will have to iron-out differences between the two bills.

Boulter, however, is optimistic that the repeal of the windfall profit tax will survive the conference committee. The congressman vowed to fight any attempt to remove this part of the trade bill.

Cotton Fleahopper major pest of cotton

The cotton fleahopper, a major pest of cotton, attacks the crop during the early fruiting state and can cause heavy damage.

Fleahoppers migrate in from weed hosts and feed on small pinhead-sized squares, says Ronald Gooch, Donley County Extension Agent. Damaged squares turn black and fall off, so heavy infestations can prevent or delay fruiting of the cotton plant.

Scouting of cotton fields is critical to determine fleahopper damage, says Gooch. When plants are setting less than 75 percent of their fruit and fleahoppers are present, insecticides should be applied to control the pest.

The economic threshold for fleahoppers during the first three weeks of squaring ranges from 25 to 35 fleahoppers per 100 plants. This varies with the variety, weather conditions and available moisture. Producers should check plants to see if they are setting fruits with the numbers of fleahoppers present within this range.

For information on chemicals recommended for cotton fleahopper control, contact the county Extension office, notes Gooch.
