EQIP program meeting to be held here today

Local producers are urged to attend a meeting of the Program Development Group this Thursday, February 5, at 1:00 p.m. in the Clarendon College Courson RFO Center.

The primary function of this meeting will be to develop recommendations about resource concerns as they pertain to the Environmental Quality Incentive Program (EQIP), which is a conservation cost-share program administered by the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS).

The Courson Center is located on the campus of Clarendon College, south of the Bairfield Activity Center. For additional information call (806) 874-3576 ext. 3.

City aldermen agree to zoning change

Clarendon Aldermen cleared the way for an assisted living center to be built here last Tuesday by changing the zoning restrictions for residential areas.

The board voted unanimously to amend Ordinance 207 to allow state licensed assisted living facilities in the R1 and R2 districts.

The change follows a request by Sue Leeper to build a 16-bed center on three lots adjacent to her home on Taylor Street. Under the previous rules, such a facility could not be built on Leeper's property, which falls in the R1 district.

In a second public hearing on the issue last week, city officials read a letter from two citizens opposed to the zoning change, and one citizen appeared in person to speak against the amendment.

Jim and Mary Douglas wrote that they understood Clarendon's need for an assisted living center but that they felt the R1 district should remain residential only for fear of the city losing the ability to attract new homeowners.

Alan Graham addressed the board and asked if any studies had been done with regards to the impact an assisted living center would have on traffic and utilities in Leeper's neighborhood.

"The streets need repair," he said. "I bet you can count 30 potholes just in front of my house."

Graham, who is the administrator of the Donley County Hospital District, said he also understands the need for an assisted living center but recalled that Leeper was on the hospital board when it created a 5-year plan in 1999, which included having assisted living facilities on the Medical Center campus.

He asked why she didn't consider a location near the Medical Center, which is already zoned for assisted living facilities. Leeper replied that she needed it to be near her home.

Other questions raised during the public hearing focused on the appearance and construction of Leeper's proposed building, which is still in the design stages. City Administrator Sean Pate said these issues would be addressed when Leeper applies for a building permit.

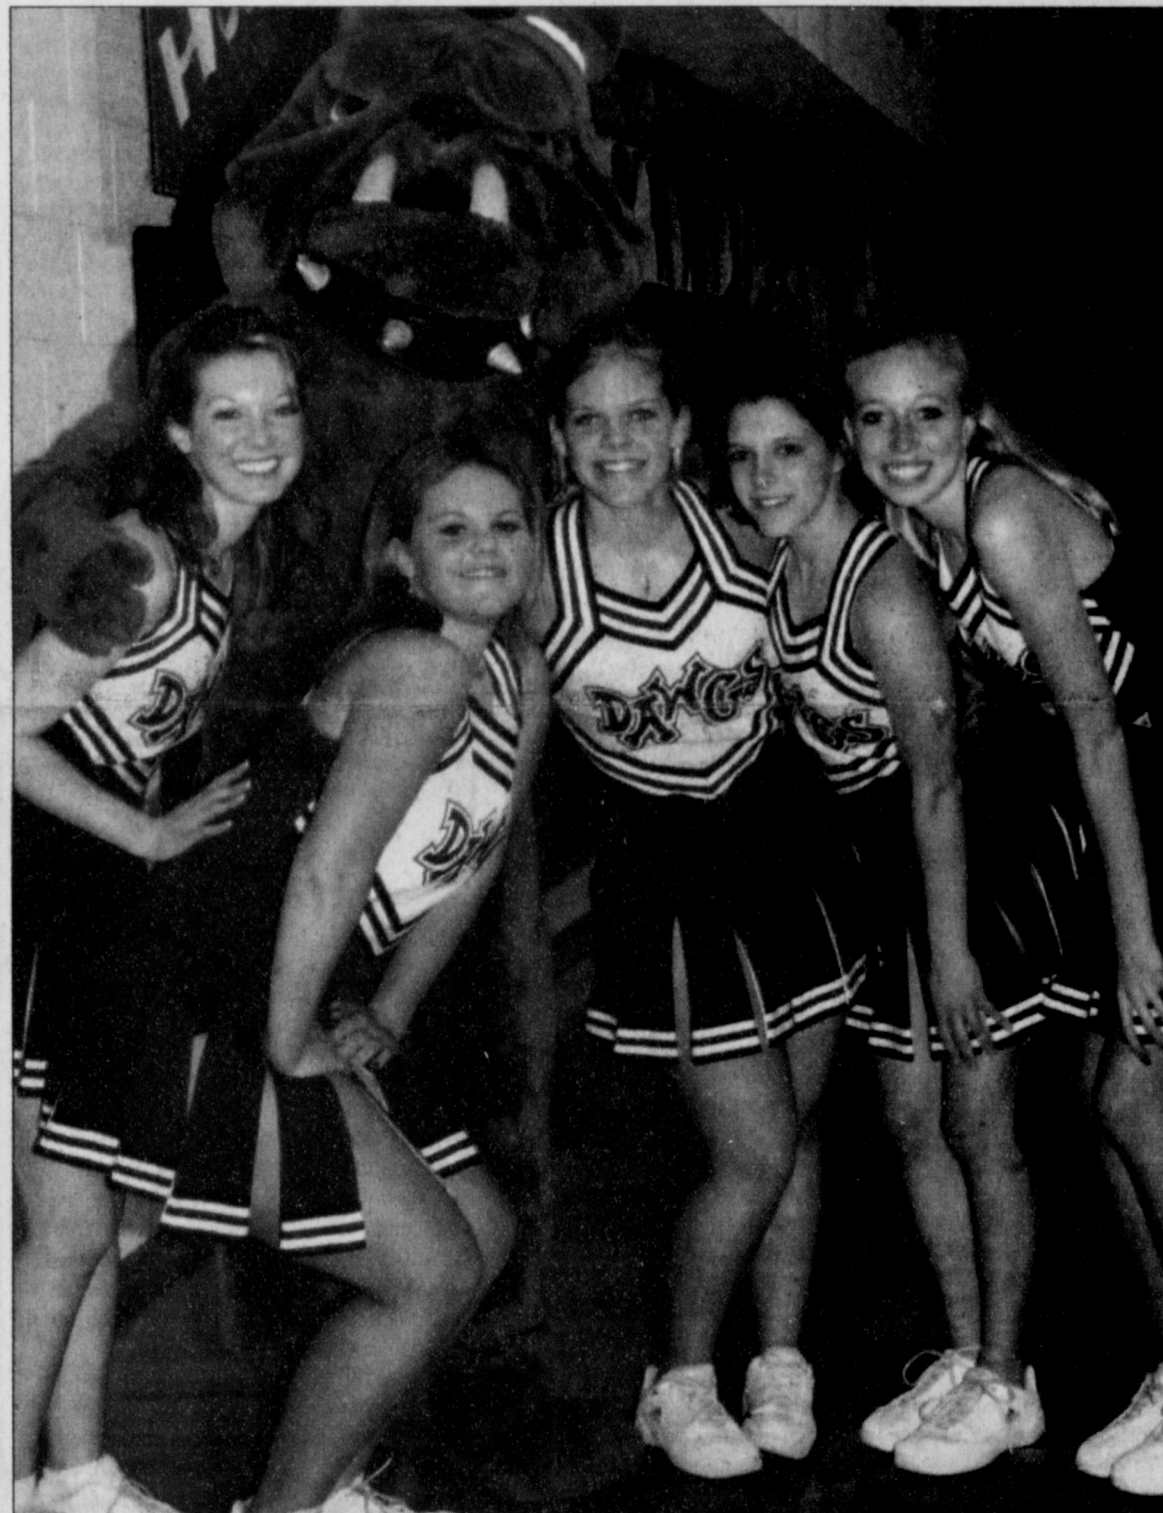

When constructed, Leeper said her Country Cottage Assisted Living Center will employ six to eight full time employees.

In other city business, aldermen heard from Willard Skelton, who addressed lighting needs for the Saints' Roost Museum's annual gun show at the Clarendon Community Center. Aldermen agreed to use $200 from the motel bed tax fund for this purpose. Audit reports for the City of Clarendon and the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation were presented by Gordon Maddox and approved by the board. Alderman Michael Tibbets asked CEDC representatives to explain the expenditure of $65,548 for special projects at the next meeting.

The board voted 3-1 to purchase a pickup from Greenbelt Water Authority for use by the street department. Alderman Tommy Hill opposed, and Alderman Bobbie Kidd was absent.

The board discussed authorizing See 'City' on page 3.

Sheriff's office offers 9-1-1 awareness tips

By Ashlee Kidd & Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

Imagine you are having a heart attack, someone calls 911 for help, but the ambulance looks for you in a completely different town. That's exactly what can happen if you make that call from a cellular phone.

Callers using cell phones to contact 911 need to be aware that calls may not be reaching the 911 operator nearest them.

According to the sheriff's department, cellular 911 calls go to the first available tower, not necessarily to the nearest 911 dispatcher. Calls come into the Donley County dispatcher from Canadian, Shamrock, Wheeler, and Memphis; and cellular calls made from Clarendon have been received by 911 operators as far away as Briscoe County and Hall County.

Donley County Sheriff Butch Blackburn says the problem is particularly bad when it comes to residential cellular or so-called "box phones," which do not provide dispatchers with the same information as landline phones.

"When you call us on a landline, our computer gives us your name and address," Blackburn said. For rural residents, the computer also produces a map pinpointing the location of your home. The same information is not available with a residential cellular phone.

"A lot of people have these now because they are so cheap compared to landlines," the sheriff said, "but people need to be aware there is a reason the price is so low. You don't get the same service."

Blackburn said not being able to locate a caller can be a big problem with kids, who are taught to call 911 but are not taught where they are.

"People need to spend 20 minutes with their kids and teach them - particularly if they have a residential cell phone. Do they know their phone number? Do they know what town they are in? Do they know their address and their parents' names?"

"Knowing this information could save the kids' lives or their parents' lives," he said.

In order to guarantee a quick response from emergency personnel, the sheriff's department advises that a caller should always identify what town they are in and where they are.

If on the road, the caller should be aware of where on the road they are. Be aware of mile markers and road signs and know your license plate number and the color, make, and model of your car.

"It could be the difference in us getting there or not," Blackburn said.

CISD seeks input from community

Clarendon CISD is inviting the public to help advise and plan for the future of local students' needs.

The district wants public advice as to how technology can best fit into its educational program and provide a service to the community. The community technology survey is conducted every other year.

To participate, go to the Clarendon CISD Web page, www.clarendon.k12.tx.us, and click on the link that says Community Technology Survey.

Citizens may also pick up a survey at the Burton Memorial Library or the Donley County Senior Citizens Center and return it to the school no later than February 10, 2004, by dropping it off or by mailing the survey.

The district values local citizens' opinions and appreciates their participation.

USDA releases $1.5 billion for voluntary conservation programs

WASHINGTON - Agriculture Under Secretary for Natural Resources and Environment Mark Rey today announced the release of nearly $1.5 billion in funding for conservation programs on working lands this fiscal year. The distribution of funds to states makes conservation programs administered by the Natural Resources Conservation Service operational.

"These funds demonstrate the Bush Administration's commitment to working lands and to maintaining high environmental stewardship in communities across the nation," Rey said. "The Department of Agriculture remains committed to providing the conservation tools and resources to ensure that the land remains both healthy and productive."

With financial and technical assistance from NRCS, farmers, ranchers, and other landowners will continue to address resource concerns on agricultural working lands, promote environmental quality, address challenges in water quality and quantity, protect prime farmland and grazing land, and protect valuable wetland ecosystems and wildlife habitat on private lands.

The FY 2004 allocations to states include $1.2 billion in financial assistance and $305 million for technical assistance for NRCS Farm Bill programs and other activities. At least $30 million of the technical assistance funds will be used for technical service providers. "This funding will provide positive applications of sound conservation on the ground - at the local level - on America's privately-owned farms and ranches," Rey said.

Now that these funds have been allocated, NRCS state offices will begin writing contracts with farmers and ranchers nationwide. These contracts will help ease the existing backlog in these popular programs improving soil, water, air, and at-risk habitat on working lands. Information on conservation programs is available at <http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2002/products.html>. Landowners who want specific information regarding program participation should contact their local USDA Service Center or NRCS office, located at <http://offices.usda.gov> or in the telephone book under Federal Government, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Better Business Bureau issues warning on e-mail bank account scam

The Better Business Bureau warns of a bogus e-mail, which is circulating, indicating insurance on your bank accounts will be suspended unless you verify your identity.

The e-mail appears to be from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with the FROM line stating simply, FDIC. The subject line is "Important News about Your Bank Account." The e-mail begins "In cooperative with the Department of Homeland Security, Federal, State and Local Governments your account has been denied insurance from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation due to suspected violations of the Patriot Act."

It goes on to say that Tom Ridge has advised the FDIC to suspend deposit insurance on your account until your identity can be verified. It then points you to a link in the e-mail to verify your identity.

The link works only for a short period after receipt of the e-mail. This indicates the culprits behind the scam are moving around fast, trying to avoid detection. The e-mail references several people from the FDIC including Mr. Don Powell who is listed as Chairman Emeritus, which should lend a clue that the e-mail is bogus," said Janna Kiehl, CEO of the Better Business Bureau. Anytime you're in WARNING: The following column is an editorial (i.e. an opinion, a point of view) and may contain ideas with which some readers may freely disagree. It is a satire and is in no way intended to offend cat people or people who hate dogs. It should not be confused with an actual proposal by the Democratic National Committee.

A Democratic Proposal For America

Inspired by the real life Democratic Response to President Bush's State of the Union Address as delivered by Rep. Nancy Pelosi and Sen. Tom Daschle.

Let there be no doubt: the state of our union is strong. Stronger than terrorism, stronger than tyranny, and, yes, even stronger than the Republican Party, which seeks to destroy all that is good and decent about America.

The President spoke of great goals, and America should never hesitate to push the boundaries of exploration. But neither should we shrink from the great goal of creating a more nearly perfect union here at home. Rather than a society that restricts its rewards to a privileged few, we need an "opportunity society" that insures Americans have not just the right to "pursue happiness" but rather the "guaranteed right" to everlasting happiness and freedom from hardship.

As a nation, we must show our greatness, not just our strength. In his time in office, President Bush has transformed America from being a light to the world into being just a missile. But America should not be about just our bark or our bite. It should instead be a place of warm, furry cuddles.

And that's why tonight we are unveiling a new program to restore America's greatness in this new century and make it a national priority to show our commitment to the children who will lead us tomorrow. We propose to guarantee that every American boy and girl (and those undecided) under the age of 18 should have a puppy by 2008.

Yes, it's a bold idea, but one that is worthy of America. Who among us can disagree that the most important thing in any child's life is a cute, cuddly puppy? Who among us can honestly not say that a child who has a puppy feels more loved, is more secure, and is more likely to succeed than a child without a puppy? As Democrats we believe the ownership of puppies is not a luxury, but a basic foundation of a truly compassionate society.

Today, 43.6 million American children - almost all of them from working families - have no puppy. That's over 3.8 million more than when President Bush took office. We cannot continue to call ourselves a civilized society as long as this situation remains unchecked.

As millions of children cry themselves to sleep each night, longing for a their very own puppy, a lucky few have too many puppies. The top five percent of the children of wealthy parents have five or more puppies - whole litters, in fact. This is not fair, and America can't afford to keep rewarding this accumulation of wealth.

From those to whom much has been given, much is required. We therefore propose a redistribution of puppies. Childless adults and families with more puppies than kids will be asked to share their wealth with those less fortunate to insure a more equitable society. It will require great sacrifice for some, but in the end, what we do for others is more important than what we do for ourselves.

The White House opposes our plan, and we understand that. We also understand that a great many Republicans are secretly cat people and that they would like to see our society free of all canine influences. We therefore call for a special investigation to get to the truth of their quest for domestic feline domination.

President Bush's handling of the economy has been detrimental to puppy ownership. The parents of those kids lucky enough to have a puppy have seen their cost for dog food go up each of the last three years. This increase that middle-income families have seen over the past three years is larger than the tax cut they've been promised. This is an invisible tax increase on middle class families.

In Sioux Falls, a woman has told us she can simply no longer afford the cost of food for her daughter's puppy. She told us that the little Schnauzer was going to die - that she was a lost cause. But, she said, we must solve this problem; let's don't turn more puppies into lost causes.

Fellow Americans, we must enact this program. It is fair, it is right, and it will bring happiness to us all. But our friends across the aisle in the Republican Party will tell you it can't be done. They will say that it's too expensive, that not everyone likes puppies, that some people are allergic to puppies, or that those without puppies don't deserve them. We say, "America can do better."

The excuses of those on the right are just that - excuses. This program is not an expense; it's an investment in our children. People with allergies deserve puppies as much as anyone, and their unique problems can be overcome by expanding our program to include free medications for pet owners or by utilizing robotic dogs.

Only when every American child has a puppy - only then - will we have a union as strong as the American people. That's the America we as Democrats want to build because that's the union the American people deserve. The children deserve nothing less.

Thank you for listening, good night, and God bless America.

editor's commentary by Roger Estlack

Candidates should try Super Bowl ads

Super Bowl Sunday has come and gone yet again. To tell the truth, I barely noticed it coming and was equally unaware of it's passing.

I know it is fairly un-American to ignore the Super Bowl, but I couldn't help it. I had a lot of reading to do for class; and if I didn't wash some clothes, I was going to class naked the next day.

Those sound like legitimate reasons to skip.

I attended the first half of my Sunday School class's party and came back to do homework and laundry. I managed to catch some highlights on TV so I'd know who won. I knew people would be talking about it, and I would at least need to know the final score.

I hadn't really counted on the fact that the most important topic of discussion would be who had the best commercials.

No one really watches the Super Bowl for the football. You watch to see the most expensive ads ever created.

These commercials generally advertise beer and potato chips, but sometimes those are the best. Anybody remember the Budweiser Frogs? They debuted at the Super Bowl. Ever hear of a little Web site called Monster.com? Super Bowl ads created that company.

These commercials set the tone for the rest of the year. If ever in your life you have said "Wazzzup?" you have proved my point.

This year, Budweiser outdid itself. The one about the donkey who wanted to be a Clydesdale wins my pick for Best Commercial in the First Half That I Saw.

A close runner-up would have to be the little old man and woman duking it out over the bag of potato chips. Classic.

When I grow up and I have made my millions, I'm going to create the best ad ever and run it during the Super Bowl.

If I decided to run for president, I would save all the campaign money I could and funnel it all into the Super Bowl Super Ad account. Forget advertising in the little primaries like Iowa. Who lives in Iowa, life's lessons by Carrie Helms anyway? No, I would do my little debate thing and my whistle-stop speeches and what-have-you, but the coup de grace would be the Super Bowl.

I would try to summarize my platform in 30 seconds while looking as cool as possible. No goofy wool suits or party pins in this one. This would be 30 seconds of completely uninterrupted get-to-know-Carrie time.

I would have shots of me saving the world from certain nuclear disaster or playing video games with the current president. That way, you can see that I know how to get down to business, but I'm way cool, too.

It only makes sense that presidential candidates would advertise during the Bowl. Super Tuesday is only two days later.

Maybe one Mr. Howard Dean should have run an ad. If he had painted his face Carolina Blue and stood screaming in the crowd like he did in Iowa, he might win in South Carolina. At least they would think he was a fan and not a freak-o.

Bush sets bold vision for space program

In January President Bush set forth a bold and far-reaching vision in search of what lies beyond the stars. By 2015 we will again land on the moon. By 2020 we will set our sights on another landing - Mars. Future generations will determine what follows, but it will undoubtedly be the wildest imaginations of today.

Space exploration is more than a science fiction tale - it is our destiny. Americans have expanded frontiers since the first settlers arrived, so it is entirely fitting that the U.S. lead the exploration of space. That spirit challenges today's scientists and researchers to search for cures for cancer, AIDS and diabetes; develop lighter, stronger and more resilient materials; and create new technologies to transform our military, our economy and our healthcare industry.

As a Houston reporter in 1969, I had the privilege of covering Neil Armstrong's extraordinary first steps on the moon. Growing up with the Johnson Space Center in my back yard and the first generation to plant a flag on the moon, I always held a deep fascination with the mysteries of space. I have been awed by the tremendous discoveries our space program has produced, from insulin pumps to hurricane monitoring systems.

When the Columbia disintegrated in the skies above North Texas last year, I heard the sonic boom as I was walking in my neighborhood and ached for the loss of those astronauts. But beyond my personal connections, I have come to understand that an ambitious agenda for NASA will help secure America's leadership in the 21st century and ensure we continuously push the envelope to discover that which remains unknown. No one exemplifies that spirit more than Texans.

The president's plan is threefold. First, the shuttle will return to flight, and America will complete its work on the International Space Station by 2010, fulfilling a commitment to our 15 partner countries. Second, we will begin developing a new manned exploration vehicle to explore beyond our orbit to other worlds - the first of its kind since the Apollo command module. Finally, the United States will return to the moon as early as 2015 and use it as a stepping-stone for more elaborate missions into space. To achieve this goal, the president is asking for a $1 billion increase over NASA's current $86 billion five-year budget and the reprogramming of $11 billion already allocated. Funding this vision is a priority, but we must not shortchange or under-fund existing programs within NASA. While the costs may seem staggering, the price of inaction is even higher. Consider that investment in NASA has led to the development of CAT scans, MRIs, kidney dialysis machines, and fetal heart monitors, it's a small price to pay for the lives - present and future - saved through these advances.

A renewed vision for our space program will also ensure the continuation of basic research, one of NASA's fundamental tenets. NASA fulfills one of the most critical roles of the federal government. Private industry neither has the financial wherewith nor the capability to conduct basic research on a mass scale. Industry specializes in applied research - the art of crafting real-world products from pure research and keeping the production jobs in America. Everyday applications like satellite television and cellular technology are tangible results of the Agency's activities, but they are merely byproducts of a much greater endeavor. Without their core research, we'd be decades behind in every field.

The mission to Mars will also inspire the next generation of scientists. Those young boys and girls who sat wide-eyed as man first stepped on the moon, grew up to become the scientists, engineers and mathematicians of the digital revolution. Today's youth are more apt to name athletes or actors, rather than astronauts, as their role models. We need to resurrect the explorer's spirit that has lain dormant for too many years.

One year ago, the Columbia disaster renewed questions about the mission of our space program. It also exposed critical flaws within NASA and validated the nagging suspicion the Agency was floundering without clear direction.

The Administration's new proposal will help revitalize the Agency with the vision and mission it has lacked for too long. The initiatives offer tremendous potential to further research in energy, geology, and health sciences, keeping us at the forefront of space exploration and maintaining our economic viability and defense prowess. And it will keep the dream of reaching new frontiers alive. Going to space is mankind's destiny, and leading that effort is America's.

Let's pave some streets

Someone needs to come and pave some of the unpaved roads. I don't like to ride down the streets and hit a bump every five seconds.

They could tear up the streets and pave some of the unpaved ones like they did on McClelland [Street].

Eli Short, Clarendon

Editor's Response: I couldn't agree more, Eli. I sure wish more people felt like you do, but judging from the results of an election we had last September, most folks in Clarendon like our bad streets and want to keep them that way.

Congrats to the paper

I think you all put out a good paper too. The electronic edition is also very good. Congratulations on the recognition. Chuck Stout, Clarendon

Editor's Response: Thanks for the note, Mr. Stout. Our readers and advertisers help make this paper one of the best in the state.

City: Grant to fund new building at recycling center

The city administrator as one of two signatures on city checks, but Pate said he did not want to do this. The board instead agreed to have Alderman Janice Knorpp as an authorized co-signer in the case of the unavailability of Mayor Tex Selvidge or Mayor Pro-tem Mark White.

In his administrative report, Pate said the city's application for a solid waste grant through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission was successful. The city will receive full funding in the amount of $8,000 to construct a 16'x30' metal building near the recycling center.

Pate also said that RCI Technologies had completed the inventory of city property for the new GASB-34 accounting requirements with the exception of dating the city's radio tower on the west side of town. It was believed to have been built in the late 1960s, but no evidence of it could be found in records from that time. City officials will now look at later records after Alderman White recalled putting his handprints in the wet concrete at the tower as a kid in about 1973.

THE DONLEY COUNTY LEADER, Feb. 4, 1954
• When the final tally was made of paid poll tax receipts and exemptions, it was found that there are some 200 fewer voters. That could be partially explained by the number of voters reaching age 60 who no longer have to pay the poll tax.
• The Clarendon College Bulldogs split their two games on the road last week for a second place tie in conference with Odessa and Amarillo while Frank Phillips is in the conference lead.

From Our Exchanges

The Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation will close the Lockney office in April 2004. They plan to reorganize that particular zone and move into a maintenance phase program. Their goal is eradicate 90 percent of the boll weevils in 2001 was reached along with goals of 90 percent in 2002 and 2003. The original goal for total eradication was 2005.

-The Floyd County Hesperian Beacon

A recent survey revealed that Hall County's three cotton gins have finished processing cotton bales for the season and the total is 51,357 bales. The total is about what was expected as farmers saw more bolts mature in the fall as the frost and freeze date extended into late November. Also adding to the number was the changing of several circular irrigation acreage to cotton from peanuts this season with yields exceeding two bales per acre and over.

Pathfinders to mark 95 years next Friday

If you haven't been to a basketball game yet, at either the college or the high school, you ought to take one in. Men's or women's basketball - I'm given to understand they're all playing some really great ball. Check it out.

Last week was about as slow as expected. Good basketball. A few Superbowl parties. Some snow.

Who else was surprised by Sunday afternoon's strange snowfall? All morning, Clarendon got pinhead-sized snowflakes about 10 feet apart - not enough to even get the pavement wet. And between one blink and the next about 1 p.m., the flakes got fat and wet and started falling faster.

A whole lot faster. In thirty minutes, cars sitting outside had a thorough coating of snow. And by 5 p.m., it was all melted off. I guess that's what happens when it snows at above-freezing temperatures. The moisture was greatly appreciated, and the melting was probably more so.

Now that it's February - and when did that happen? I wasn't through with January yet - club activities are picking up again. Art Club is meeting Friday at noon at the Community Fellowship Church. Portrait artist Jan Bell is coming out from Amarillo to present a program.

And the Pathfinders Club will be celebrating their 95th anniversary the next Friday, February 13, with a tea. More about that next week.

So what else is there to talk about? Most February events are going to be clustered around Valentine's Day, and that's another week off so if I talk about them this week, I won't have anything to talk about next week. Or I can mention them, and then bore you by mentioning them again next week.

My sister's birthday is this week. (Remind me to call her if you see me.) There are nine other birthdays this week, but if you want to know who they are, you'll have to find one of the band calendars around town and look. If I start listing birthdays, I'll never do anything else.

This is the time of year when people take up hobbies. They finish afghans or learn how to make those fancy Web page buttons that change when you roll the mouse cursor over them.

A person has to find something to do during all these vicious snowstorms. Hope you're having fun with your pastime of choice.

Edgar Mae Mongole

Miss Mongole will celebrate 100th birthday

Many people in the Clarendon area will remember Miss Edgar Mae Mongole as their third or fourth grade school teacher.

Edgar Mae was born in White Deer, Texas, February 6, 1904. She and her sister, Mabel, attended school at the Bell schoolhouse a few miles south of their farm home. The family moved to Clarendon in 1919. After high school Edgar Mae attended Clarendon College. She and the late Mildred Stewart taught two years in the rural school of Goldston.

She attended Texas Tech in Lubbock two years and taught two years in Muleshoe, Texas, then returned to Clarendon where she taught the third and fourth grade for over forty years. Soon after returning to Clarendon, she spent several summer vacations earning her Masters Degree in Elementary Education at the Peabody University in Nashville, Tennessee.

In 1985, Edgar Mae and Mabel moved to Palo Duro Village Cooperative Village. Edgar Mae is still very active, still driving her car, maintaining their home at Palo Duro Village, and caring for Mabel, who is now in the nearby nursing home.

Edgar Mae is reluctant for such attention, but she is so well loved by her many friends here and close cousin relatives, that there will be a surprise 100th birthday party for her at Palo Duro Village, 9 Hospital Drive, Canyon, Texas, Friday, February 6, 2004, 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. No gifts please, just your presence, or a card or flowers will be pleasing to her.

Zeyens make Howardwick a much safer place to live

As prudent people, we should all have a plan in place in case of disaster. With our Fire Chief Joe Zeyen and his wife, Theresa, working with the Howardwick Fire Department, we all feel much safer out here.

The couple moved to Clarendon from Amarillo in 1998 to be near the lake and fishing. They saw a need with our fire department and joined. With firefighting and paramedic training in California and fire chief experience in Oregon, Joe was a perfect choice for fire chief. He has increased the members from five to the present thirteen and has worked very hard to repair equipment.

Theresa (you know her as the Thriftway checker) is the money-maker in the family. She has written and received four grants in the past three years for the fire department that total over $43,000. With that money they bought much needed equipment - a pumper truck, radios, hand-held radios, SCBA (self contained breathing apparatus), pass monitors, and other equipment.

Certified training is done at the Canyon fire school with yearly continuing education for all the firefighters.

Shannon Miller is the assistant fire chief. There are a number of husband and wife teams that work well together. Theresa says they are one big happy family, and she enjoys working with everyone. If we don't get moisture soon, we can plan on using our firemen overtime this spring.

Working closely with the fire department is the auxiliary known as the "Hot Shots" with Karen Rice, president; Leona Lingerfelter, vice president; and Greta Byars, secretary/

Hedley residents receive visitors over weekend

The snow blew in about mid afternoon Sunday just before the Super Bowl game started and lasted about fifteen minutes. The ground was mostly covered with the fluffy white stuff and was gone almost as quickly. There wasn't a cloud in sight at sunrise Monday.

Things have been pretty quiet around town lately. I guess everyone was watching the ball game Sunday.

I didn't watch it. I'm not a football fan. I like basketball and baseball, but I don't watch them either. I can't see well enough to know which team is which.

I read a lot. I'm next in line for the November 2003 Texas Monthly. I understand it's the issue with an article about Don Haskins. I was in high school when he came to Hedley, but I didn't play basketball.

I read somewhere they're going to make a movie about Coach Haskins' life and cast Ben Affleck as Mr. Haskins. I'm not sure, but I think Ben Affleck is a handsome young man, and if my memory serves me right, nobody would call Mr. Haskins handsome... but he had a pretty wife.

Johnny and Kay Beth Brown came from May, Texas, last weekend to visit his mother, Juanita Brown, and sister, Grace Burkhalter. They went home before the snow got there.

I had a nice visit with Naomi Green one day last week. She came to the Senior Citizens Center with Pearl Hermesmeyer for lunch. Pick and LaQuita Cox visited with the son, Carl, and his family in McLean over the weekend and attended church with them Sunday morning.

A lady called me recently and said, "Have you read all the Bible?" Well, actually I haven't. There are parts of the Old Testament that I've skipped and most of Revelations. I got confused trying to read the Bible from cover to cover.

My mother saw to it that my brothers and I were in church almost every Sunday, and I had some really good Sunday school teachers. The first one that I remember was Mrs. Sims. I also remember Mrs. Hunsucker and Mrs. Beach.

I can't read the Bible now because I can't read the small print, but I have the Bible on tape read by Cliff Barrow. He has such a beautiful voice I could listen to him read all day. I have a small cassette player that I take to Amarillo with me and read during my treatment.

Oh, we have a really good teacher at the Methodist church now. His name is Bill Carson, and I'm sorry to say I almost never stay for Sunday school.

Lady Broncos remain undefeated in district

By Sandy Anderberg

The Lady Broncos added two more wins to their record this past week as they defeated Shamrock and Memphis.

The Lady Broncos took on the Lady Irish at home January 27 and defeated them, 67-43. The Lady Broncos took a commanding lead in the first half of play and continued to increase that lead, wearing Shamrock down with their defense.

Scoring: Lacey Eads 15, Claudia Thomas 15, Jessie Anderberg 10, Shanna Shelton 8, Kaitlyn Howard 7, Haley Shelton 7, Shelby Watson 3, and Jessica Hernandez 2.

The Lady Broncos traveled to Memphis to take on the Lady Cyclones January 30 and came home with the 65-17 win. The Lady Broncos totally dominated their opponent and held them to under 20 points in the game.

Coach Kathy Barton is pleased with their play but realizes the toughest District games are ahead of them. "We have played great team ball," Barton said. "We have had over 15 assists in both games, three people in double digits against Shamrock, and four people in double digits against Memphis. The last three games of District will be tough, and we must work hard to finish what we started."

Junior Destiny Weatheron suffered a knee injury against Shamrock that ended her play for this season, but Barton and the Lady Broncos are committed to being District Champs and will continue to play hard.

"I am proud of how our team came together and stepped up after suffering the loss of Destiny going down with her knee," Barton said. "Destiny has hung in there and been a great support form the bench."

Scoring: Eads 21, Anderberg 13, S. Shelton 12, Thomas 10, H. Shelton 4, Howard 3, and Brittney Hall 2.

The Lady Broncos will host Claude Friday, February 6, beginning at 6:30 p.m. and will travel to Wheeler February 10 for their last regular season game.

Broncos defeat Shamrock, suffer loss to Memphis

By Sandy Anderberg

The Broncos suffered a cold-shooting game against Memphis January 30 and took a 45-64 loss. The Broncos couldn't get anything to fall against the Cyclones and watched as their opponent took advantage of their cold shooting. The Broncos played hard despite the loss and will regroup in practice to be ready for their next District game.

"The things we did well against Shamrock we didn't do very well at Memphis," Callaway said. "Although we played really hard, we didn't play very well. I thought we did a good job making them take tough first shots, but they grabbed 18 offensive boards, which led to really easy second shots. We also shot poorly (only 26 percent)."

Despite the loss, Callaway is optimistic the Broncos still have a play off shot.

"It was really the first time any of our guys had played in a playoff-type atmosphere like that, and I think we were a little taken back by it. I will say that we have the best fans in the district, and they did a fantastic job cheering throughout the game. I would also say not to give up on us as we're not dead yet. If we win out (including a huge game Friday at home against #8 in state Claude), we have a good shot at being in the playoffs."

Scoring: Drew Sell 12, Steven Ballard 7, Chase Thornberry 6, Jeremy Howard 5, Michael Randall 5, Jesse Gowdy 4, Michael Henderson 3, and Andrew Thomas 2.

Earlier in the week, the Broncos took control over the Irish and defeated them 77-52. The Broncos played with great intensity and handled their opponent easily to add to their District wins.

Scoring: Howard 18, Randall 18, Ballard 11, Thomas 8, Sell 6, Thornberry 6, Henderson 6, and Gowdy 4.

The Broncos will host Claude Friday, February 6, at 8:00 p.m. and will travel to Wheeler February 10 for their last regular season game. The Broncos will participate in the Valley Tournament on February 7. They will play Ralls at 12:45 p.m. in the first round.

You're free to worship GOD, ALLAH, BUDDHA, JEHOVAH, VISHNU or MICHAEL JORDAN.

AMEN TO THAT.

Freedom of religion is so fundamentally important to the American way of life that the very first sentence of the Bill of Rights guarantees it explicitly. In 1776, that was a pretty radical concept. (Actually, in some parts of the world, it still is.)

Some said that without state-sponsored religion we would become a Godless society with no moral fabric. Fortunately, quite the opposite has proven true. In America today we have more Christians than Italy, Germany, France and the United Kingdom combined. More Jews than Israel. More Muslims than the entire country of Jordan. And healthy communities of everyone from Buddhists to Zoroastrians. And, because we're free to find religion on our own terms (if we choose to at all), many of us are able to create a deeper, stronger and more personal relationship with our faith than would otherwise be possible.

So whether you worship in a church, temple, mosque or courtside seats at the arena, take a moment to thank the deity of your choice for freedom.

FREEDOM. APPRECIATE IT. CHERISH IT. PROTECT IT.
