Girl Scouts to hold sports camp

Cadet Girl Scout Troop 43 will help make Girl Scout history on June 21-25 when it hosts the Sports Mania Day Camp in Clarendon at the old gym. The camp will be held from 5:00-9:00 p.m.

Troop 43 and all girls participating are part of "GirlSports 2000," a national initiative of Girl Scouts of the USA (GSUSA) which challenges troops and groups to create and stage an unbroken series of sports and fitness-related events each day of 1999.

"GSUSA launched 'Girl-Sports 2000' to encourage Girl Scouts to keep health and fitness top of mind as the millennium approaches," according to GSUSA National Executive Director Marsha Johnson Evans.

Sewing camp to be held June 23

4-H'ers and other interested young people are encouraged to take part in a sewing camp which will be held on Wednesday, June 23, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at the Panhandle Community Service Building.

Those wishing to participate in the sewing camp are asked to bring $2.00 to help defray the cost of materials and a sack lunch. Come and join the fun on Wednesday, June 23.

City's request is outrageous

Back in April, the Donley County Hospital Board voted to assume control of the Associated Ambulance Aut' prity. This action effectively dissolved the agreement between the county, the hospital district, and the City of Clarendon by which the ambulance service had been run for years.

The ambulances and the offices for the Ambulance Authority have been housed in City Hall for free all these years. But since the city is no longer part of the equation, the hospital district had offered to pay rent on those facilities until such time as new accommodations could be built adjacent to the Medical Center.

The city aldermen took up the topic of rent at their May 11 meeting but tabled the matter so they could look into the cost of utilities. It was stated at that meeting that the city should work with the hospital district any way it could to make the transition smooth.

Flash forward to the meeting of May 25. The Board of Aldermen discussed the rent issue again and voted to charge the hospital district $1.300 per month. Oddly enough, that's the same amount the city (and the other two entities) used to put into the Ambulance Authority every month under the old agreement.

The aldermen should consider that by getting out of the agreement they are already saving $1,300 per month. What purpose does it serve the city to charge such a high rent? If the aldermen really want to work with the hospital district but feel a rent is necessary, they should only ask for a reasonable rent - $500 per month on the high end. Some people have even commented that the city should ask only $1 per month or let the ambulances stay there for free.

The response from the hospital district is that they are seeking other temporary accommodations for the ambulances.

I don't know what could motivate the aldermen to ask for such a high rent, but I hope they will reconsider in the spirit of cooperation. The people's good should be their highest goal, and sticking it to the hospital district does not serve the people's interest in this matter.

Government takes bold steps to end teen violence

Well, the Federal government is really cracking down now. Both the executive and the legislative branches are taking steps that will end all violence among our nation's youth in the same way the Brady Bill brought an end to crime.

Thanks to the actions of impeached president Billy Clinton, if you're fortunate enough to look younger than your years, you will soon be carded before you can see

Stupid stories top the national news

Lately the television and national news columns are littered with outrageous stories. They range from odd to downright stupid. Read some for yourself. In Seattle, Washington, all civilian employees in the Police Department's fingerprinting and photo unit were required to attend a half-hour training session for chair safety. Prior to the educational lesson, two employees slipped off their rolling chairs and hit the floor. One person injured her back and one employee was unable to return to work for several days after her chair injury. Two more employees had chairs just roll out from underneath them.

According to the news report, 26 employees were to report to the chair safety training session.

Perhaps the department's officers should teach the civilians how to eat donuts. That way they could become bottom-heavy and prevent chair runaways.

Here's another one – the Ivy League's Dartmouth College in Hanover, New Hampshire, is evicting all single-sex fraternities and sororities.

College President James Wright hopes the change will foster more "respectful relations" between the sexes.

Obviously, President Wright has never been to a Greek "social" and seen how close the relationships can be.

Dartmouth is the alma mater of author Chris Miller. Remember him? Probably not, but you will surely recall his most famous work – "Animal House." He probably won't be donating to the alumni organization this year.

The news story also reported that the college's trustees did not seek student input regarding the decision. Oops! Nearly half of all Dartmouth students belong to one of the 25 single-sex fraternities or sororities. The change is expected to cost tens of millions of dollars to build dining, housing, and social areas to replace the privately owned Greek houses.

Here's a gem from South America. A kidnapper in Sao Paulo, Brazil, abducted eight kitty cats from 68-year-old Mana Ines Figueiredo. Cut from magazines, the ransom note demanded $42,000 if she "wanted them back alive." The note went on to say that if the police were called, all the cats would be killed.

The Associated Press story stated that Figueiredo owned a total of 29 cats.

She should have told the kidnappers, "Hey, they have nine lives, and I've got 21 more cats." No word on whether or not she paid the ransom.

Finally, talk-show host Jerry Springer testified before the Chicago City Council this past week. The council alleges that The Jerry Springer Show, with its off-duty Chicago police officers serving as security guards, are allowing show guests to assault one another for television ratings.

Springer, whose show is overflowing with bleeped out obscenities, sucker punches, and catfights, said nothing on whether his show is staged or illegal.

Don't police take an oath to serve and protect? Here they are, in front of the American viewers, letting people beat the tar out of one another. And Jerry Springer said his show was not violent nor did it promote violence. With that kind of double talk, you can tell that Jerry was a politician before his talk show stint.

an R-rated movie.

Following Clinton's recent challenge that the entertainment industry to takes steps to limit young people's exposure to violence, the White House announced this week that the National Association of Theater Owners will require photo identification checks of young people wanting to see R-rated movies.

According to the motion picture industry's rating system, people under the age of 17 are supposed to be accompanied by a parent or guardian to be admitted to an R-rated show.

Meanwhile in the Congress, House Judiciary Chairman Henry Hyde (R-Illinois) is trying to stop violence among youth in his own way. According to news reports, Hyde has proposed legislation to limit youth access to video games, movies, and "other items containing violent and sexually explicit material."

Clinton and Hyde both ignore the fact that it wasn't video games and motion pictures that killed those people in Colorado. It was a couple of deranged teenagers.

The only thing that will be accomplished by these measures is that the lives of ordinary citizens will be disrupted. We do not need more rules and regulations in society. All we need is to promote more individual responsibility among our citizens.

Meanwhile...

Rep. Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) introduced legislation this week to establish a Nuclear Security Administration under the Department of Energy to bolster the security of our nation's nuclear arsenal.

With all due respect to Mr. Thornberry, we do not need yet another federal agency. The Department of Energy should be abolished, and the responsibility for our nuclear weapons ought to rest with the Department of Defense.

Certainly bold measures should be taken to correct the security problems that led to the Red Chinese getting their hands on so much sensitive information, but increasing the size of government should not be one of them.

It seems as though not much has been said about punishing those involved with the loss of our nation's secrets. Didn't we used to execute people for things like this? Today the focus is on preventing future losses.

A couple of weeks ago on CNN, I heard impeached president Clinton say, "I think we've learned far more from the Chinese scientists than they've stolen from us." What did they teach us, Billy? Did they show us how to build a better bottle rocket? Did they tell us their ancient secrets of how to construct a really great wall or reveal their closely guarded birth control methods? Or maybe they gave you their secret recipe for sweet and sour pork?

I guess if you pay a man enough, he'll say anything.

Editorials are published periodically by the Enterprise when the Editor or worthy guest editorialist has something to say. Warning labels have bean attached because a few readers found these columns to be "biased" or "colorionated " But then Editorials or "Opinion" pieces usually are. the Chinese government has stolen U.S. military secrets over the last 20 years.

The magnitude of this theft is alarming. China was able to obtain not only the plans to our nuclear weapons, but supercomputers and critical technology that will help them significantly improve their military capability.

In the coming weeks, Congress needs to be asking not only how this security breakdown occurred, but why it took the Clinton Administration so long to act. Congress also needs to look at ways to prevent this kind of espionage from happening again. A good place to start is the Department of Energy, which oversees our nation's nuclear weapons complex. Since 1989, there have been nearly 20 reports critical of the way DOE does its job. Among other things, these reports show a clear link between mismanagement at the Department of Energy and the failure of our security.

I'm pushing a proposal that would Department called the Nuclear Security Administration.

This agency would have one job - to ensure the safety, security and reliability of our nuclear arsenal. It would also have clear lines of authority and accountability. These two elements have been missing from our weapons complex, and have contributed to the security breakdowns that we have seen.

It is critical that we take strong steps to safeguard our military secrets. Establishing a Nuclear Security Administration would help do that and help make sure this kind of espionage never happens again.

Readers speak out about hotel's future

Many kudos on your editorial of this date (June 3, 1999).

When I moved away from Clarendon in 1959, the Antro Hotel was a beehive of activity....Judge Porter not only had his office there, but the dining room downstairs was often utilized for banquets, etc. The hotel was the site of Western Union and a Trailways Bus Station. It may have been getting a little rundown, but it was still a fine, solid building and worthy of restoration.

I came back here in 1983 and saw an ugly hulk where that lovely old building had been, a testament to the foolishness of thinking that anything old had no value.

Whoever was responsible for gutting that building should be condemned to live out the rest of their life in a cracker box. Billie Shaffer via e-mail

Three cheers for Roger Estlack's article in last week's paper. I agree with his comments about our downtown.

We let weeds grow in our sidewalks and streets. The dirt, mud, and trash are often left in front of our businesses. We have many out-of-town people who now stop to visit our antique shops. It is embarrassing when people get out of their cars and can't get to the curb for the water, mud, and trash. The west side of main street now holds water until it evaporates since the construction on Highway 287.

Empty buildings with torn paper and frayed fabric hanging this way and that in the windows... Do we really care about our downtown? We do want those folks who pass through our town to leave with a good impression? We want them to tell others about our town and come back for another visit.

I do wish we did a better job of preserving what our forefathers worked so hard to leave for us.

I also do not want to see the old hotel building torn down. Is there not another course of action that could be taken? I have seen empty shells of old buildings made into small parks with landscaping of benches, tables, walks, and trees for people to stop and enjoy. I realize this takes money to accomplish this and also hard work. Perhaps this could be a project for clubs and people in our community.

We have a great town and great folks, but it takes hard work to keep what we should hold dear.

Bobbie Floyd

We do not want the old Antro Hotel torn down. We need to preserve it like some of the other landmarks in town. The mayor and the aldermen shouldn't be the only ones in the deciding of this. We the people should have our say on it. We think that we should vote on it on paper and either vote 'for' or 'against' like we have on some other things in the past. We do think that the people should have their say.

We hope that the old Antro Hotel will not be torn down.

They could use the tax money that people pay and also the tax money they get when people stay in our motels. And, if need be, we could have fund raiser, because we need that to bring people into our town to see what we have here.

I can remember how the Antro Hotel looked back in the 40s. It was really nice. I used to work there in those days.

Thank you, Editor, for what you are doing. We appreciate you. Keep up the good work.

Buying music on the Internet takes only minutes

TECHNOLOGY UPDATE By Eric Spellmann

I still remember the days when I would drive down to the local music store, peruse the bins of Compact Discs, and eventually find that elusive title from my favorite band. Usually, I would spend hours flipping through CDs. Well, today, I don't have that much time. When I hear a song on the radio I like, I can have the CD ordered within minutes using my Internet connection (at a price that gives the city stores a run for their money).

In the old days, finding music online was a laborious process, involving countless websites, numerous searches, and cryptic search language. Today, I've limited my search to three major sites that seem to carry anything I might want: CDNow, Amazon, and Blockbuster.

CDNow (http://cdnow.com) has a very interesting story. The company was started by a couple of brothers out of their parents' basement. Having no capital, they maxxed out their credit cards to open shop. (Kids, don't try this at home.) Luckily, it panned out, and today they are millionaires.

CDNow sports an easy interface with oneclick access to the "Top 40" bands. What really sets CDNow apart from its competitors, though, is their unique "My CDNow" section. Here, you can tell them what artists and bands you like. The system will then "recommend" other groups with similar sounds. For instance, "If you like Enya, you'll love the group, Clannad." Also, the site will notify you via e-mail whenever your favorite artists release a new album.

Amazon (http://amazon.com), better known for its books, has expanded onto the music scene with a vengeance. With razor-thin margins, they are positioning themselves as the "lowest price" distributor. If you've searched their site for books in the past, you'll find the music section follows the same theme. Items can be placed in your virtual shopping cart for a final purchase later. While CDNow offers "reviews" of each CD, Amazon offers customer reviews. In fact, you can add your two cents worth to any title. Sometimes, hearing the opinion of a "normal" person is more valuable than that of an audiophile.

When I mention the word, "Blockbuster," most of you think "video rentals." However, like format. Blockbuster does have an edge in this Amazon, they've extended their offerings in the musical arena. While not as polished as the websites of CDNow and Amazon, Blockbuster (http://blockbuster.com) does offer quite a selection. I mainly use them as my "third" and final choice for price-checks. Very rarely do I buy something from them.

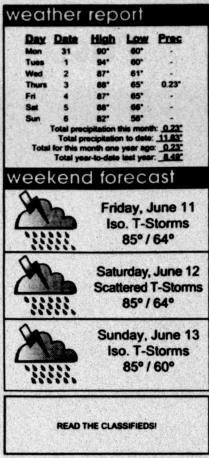

On the Internet, and, more specifically, on all three sites I've mentioned, you can preview many of the tracks on the CDs before buying them. If you buy a lot of music, you know how important this option is. Once bought, you cannot return a CD. Can I tell you how many dustcollecting CDs I have on my shelves?

Listening to a song usually involves having a plug-in on your browser. For CDNow and Amazon, you must have the "Real Player." You can download it for free from http:// real.com. Of course, it automatically comes with the newest versions of Netscape and Internet Explorer. Amazon uses the proprietary "Real Audio" format only. CDNow is experimenting with a higher-quality format called MPEG, as well as supporting the Real Audio area, though. They use the "AU" format. Even older versions of Netscape come with players capable of understanding the format. No downloads required!

Regardless of which store you buy from, you will start to see some standard requirements for stores to compete in this arena: sample songs, easy searches, and qualitative recommendations.

The future holds an even brighter promise: buying individual songs. An audio format I discussed in an earlier column, called "MP3," is sweeping the Net. With CD-quality sound, it is now possible to "download" your favorite songs. How many times have you bought a CD just to get one or two songs? I would much rather pay $3 or $4 per song than $16 for an entire CD! The music industry is fighting this trend, though. Worries of lower revenues have them threatening artists against using this new format. Change is coming, though. Mark my words: Within a couple of years, you'll be able to "design your own CD" over the Internet. See you in Cyberspace!

Columnist reflects on life in Hedley

A lot has happened during the years since I wrote about what happened in Hedley. A lot of the old timers are gone and newcomers have come to take their place, but nothing really changes in Hedley. Just the people they happen to.

Possibly the greatest change will happen in August when the Hedley Branch of Community Bank will close its doors. After approximately one hundred years, there will not longer be a bank in Hedley. I don't know Don Donaldson, who owns the bank, but since he does own it, he can do with it as he pleases.

We've had some nice rains lately. I haven't been out and around and seen the crops, but there's some nice gar-Woordard has tomatoes, peppers, and okra, and Johnny and Eunice Dickson 'ing. have a garden at their house next door

he's already enjoying the fruits of his labor

I'm not a garden person. I always figured there was a reason I don't like yard work. A few weeks ago, I found out why. I was working in the yard and started in the house, and there on my front porch was a huge rattlesnake. By the time I disposed of the snake, I knew why I don't like yard work...there are snakes in the grass. I can't make things grow anyway. I have great results with artificial plants, through, especially African violets. dens flourishing around town. Joyce My girls gave me a pot of them years ago, and they haven't stopped bloom-

My neighbor girls, Julie and to Mother. Abbie O'Neal looks like Kasey Woodard, attended basketball

The family of the late J.W. and Belle Bland got together Saturday. Marie Skaggs reported that about forty-five people were in attendance.

The United Methodist Church held its annual conference in Amarillo last week. Kay Manuel attended as a voting delegate. Hedley Methodists were pleased that Neeley Landrum returned as pastor. Kay told me she visited with Rev. Wanda Hill, who was pastor at Hedley a few years ago. She is now pastor at Cohoma and Big Spring.

I haven't had a chance to find out everything everybody's been doing, but if you have had something interesting happen or some special company visit, let me know. My number is 806-856-5919.

Small town life has its advantages

R.P. and Louise Reed of Kress, Texas, were guests of Weldon and Lavern King on Sunday. R.P. is Mrs. King's brother.

There wasn't a lot of news in Howardwick this past week - a pretty sleepy little place, but it got me thinking about why I love living in a small country involves septic tanks. town so much.

When I moved to the country after being a city girl for 45 years, I discovered good news and bad news about small town living. I like to get the bad news first - the good news last.

The bad news is you only get a weekly newspaper.

The good news is that you can really find out "the news." Big city newspapers waste a lot of space telling me things I don't really want to know, about places I have never heard of. A small town newspaper tells me who got married, what the brides dress looked like (in case I didn't attend the ceremony), and all the relatives they have living in the surrounding area. This paper also tells me what group is having a bake sale, the current project of the Lions Club, goings-on at the Senior Citizens building, and everything affecting me personally. If I want to know what is going on across the Mart, K-Mart, or Albertsons to shop two stoplights, a "downtown" where world, I'll turn on the TV to a channel in easily. I hardly ever watch. If I want to know what is going on in my town, or right down my street, I read my small town newspaper. It's a good system.

The good news is that the septic tank is considered to be "man's work!" When I lived in the city, I never gave any thought to where "things" went when they disappeared down a drain or toilet. Country life opened my eyes. You can't just dispose of any old thing into a septic tank and expect it to cooperate. You have to think about what is biodegradable and what is not - what is dissolvable and what is going to remain intact for the rest of your lifetime. Anytime there is trouble with the septic tank, my husband has to dig and check it out - I don't. Having a septic tank made me far more conscious about our environment and what I do to affect it. Maybe the government should force everyone to have a septic tank. It would change the way people dispose of things they no longer want.

me by name when I go in to do my shopping. The local hardware and gift shop store (a combined enterprise) caters to my every need. They have been known to meet my husband at the store on a Sunday afternoon to fix a flat, so he could go to work the next day. If what you buy doesn't work, you can take it back - even if it is already out of the package - no questions asked. Try that in a big city!

The bad news is that when I get a "Big Mac Attack," I can't just jump in the car and satisfy my craving in fifteen minutes.

The good news is that I can go to a local restaurant and order a burger made to my specifications - no matter that it is not on the menu. I tell them what I want, and that is what I get. The cook will make substitutions and won't charge me a dollar extra for doing so. The waitress already knows that I want iced tea with lemon and extra mustard on my burger. The tatter tots are fresh. There is nothing like eating a good burger with a cold glass of tea in a small town cafe.

There is bad and good news to big cities and small towns, but for me, I The bad news is I don't have Wal- will take my small town anyday. Just people stop on the sidewalk to visit,

Immunization Clinic to be held in Clarendon

An Immunization Clinic offering vaccines that give protection against several childhood diseases is scheduled for June 15 at the Texas Department of Health office from 9:00-noon and 1:00-4:00 p.m. The office is located inside the Medical Center Nursing Home on Hwy. 70 North.

The Texas Department of Health is charging money to help with the cost of keeping the clinic open. The amount of money charged will be based on family income, family size, and the ability to pay.

Hedley Aldermen meet

The Hedley Board of Aldermen met in regular session on June 3, 1999, at 7 p.m.

Debbie Hamilton and Judy Burlin reported to the board on the activities of the Clarendon-Donley County Chamber of Commerce.

Randy Shaw updated the board on the county radio project.

The board accepted the resignation of Alderman Abby O'Neal and considered a replacement for his position.

The aldermen also voted to accept bids for a depository contract.

Checkoff promotes value added beef products

With summer's longer days allowing more time for cooking, consumers are looking for menu ideas.

And the Texas Beef Council helped them get a variety of new suggestions during April, thanks to the $1 per head beef checkoff program. TBC worked with three new product companies to promote their new lines of convenient beef products with radio spots and in-store samplings in Houston, Dallas, and San Antonio. The partners also distributed coupons for their products with each sampling.

The good news is that I have small town stores that may not carry as big a selection, but they make up

Funeral services for Glendora Panhandle Water Planning Group to hold teleconference was held at Citizens Cemetery under Group, a regional water planning group formed pursuant to Senate Bill 1 from the 75th Legislature, will hold a multi-site video teleconference on June 15, 1999, beginning at 7:00 p.m.

> The video teleconference will be held in Clarendon at the Junior High School. Other locations include the Amarillo College Business & Industry Center - 1314 South Polk, Room 120; Spearman High School - 403 E. 1802 E. 16th Street.

> The purpose of the meeting is to provide the public with an update on the status of the regional water plan and the Planning Group's activities and to receive any public comments.

> Topics to be discussed include progress made on the development of the regional groundwater model and the status of the development of the Regional Water Plan for the Panhandle area.

Additional topics include future activities of the Planning Group and milestones in the development of the Regional Plan. Members of the Panhandle Water Planning Group and the consultants assisting with the devel-

The Panhandle Water Planning opment of the Plan will be present and will field questions from the audience.

Individuals wishing to attend or participate may go to any of the four sites. All sites will be linked by teleconference equipment to provide a multi-site, simultaneous meeting. Individuals can participate in the meeting from any of the sites.

The purpose of having multiple sites is to encourage public participation in the water-planning project without requiring interested parties to travel to Amarillo to provide input. Facilitators will be present at each remote site to assist the public and ensure that any submitted comments or questions are received and recorded.

Local Boy Scouts tour old ships

Local Clarendon Scout Troop #433 recently relived a part of history when they participated in the camping program aboard the World War II Aircraft Carrier Yorktown in Charleston Harbor.

The troop became "shipmates" with other troops as they toured Yorktown, World War II Submarine Clamagore, World War II Destroyer Laffey, and World War II Coast Guard Cutter Ingham.

Morning and evening meals were prepared and served to the youngsters in the "Chief's Mess" aboard the Yorktown for the full effect of having lived aboard a famous man-of-war.

Troop #433 also took a boat ride to Fort Sumner in Charleston Harbor where the Civil War began.

Troop #433 is sponsored by First Christian Church and is under the direction of Scout Master James Tho-

Those attending were Dale Askew, Jeremy Tunnell, Nickless Devin, Jeremy Howard, Otis Scrivner, Ryan Carroll, Bret Carter, Branson Carter, Lisle Rowland, and Branson Herndon. The adults who attended were Tommie Saye, Danny Askew, Donnie Carroll, Steve Carter, Kelly Tunnell, and Jeff Howard.

Correction:

In last week's issue, a list of the Clarendon High School band students who went to state solo and ensemble contest was published. The clarinet ensemble of Rachel Papa, Angela Papa, and Kirsten Bertrand was inadvertently left off. They scored a division three.

Kirsten Bertrand recently received the highest honor in Girl Scouting, the Gold Award. She is the first Girl Scout in Clarendon to receive the award this decade.

To receive this award, a Girl Scout must complete many project patches, earn the Senior Leadership pin, the career interest patch, and the Girl Scout Challenge. She then must complete a service project that will benefit the community and show leadership capabilities.

Kirsten chose to make the bleachers at the rodeo arena handicapped accessible as her project. To accomplish this project she had to redesign the existing structure, get the plans approved by the Clarendon Outdoor Entertainment Association, secure the funding, recruit volunteer labor and equipment, purchase the supplies, and oversee the project to completion.

Kirsten was recognized in meeting on April 24, and on May the ceremony.

Kirsten Bertrand of Clarendon received her Gold Award in Girl Scouts at a ceremony held on May 16 at the Clarendon United Methodist Amarillo at the annual council Church. Rebecca King, District Attorney of Amarillo, gave a speak at
