Voters approve freezing taxes

Residents in three separate local elections voted to freeze taxes for elderly and disabled citizens Tuesday.

Donley County voters overwhelmingly froze taxes at the county level and for the Clarendon College District.

The freeze passed at the county ballot by a margin of 758 in favor to 420 against, with 49 percent voter turnout.

The vote at the college district was closer but still a clear majority with 371 ballots in favor of the freeze and 259 against it. That election drew only 24 percent of registered voters.

In the third election, the margin was even closer as voters in the City of Clarendon approved freezing taxes in that jurisdiction by only 11 votes. There were 193 in favor of the freeze, and 182 against it.

The City of Hedley did not have an election on this issue, but the Board of Aldermen there voluntarily enacted a tax freeze last month.

With these freezes now approved, the ad valorem taxes on qualified homesteads will become fixed on January 1, 2007, with tax statements that are issued in October of next year.

The tax freeze places a cap on the dollar amount of taxes for those that qualify, according to officials with the Donley County Appraisal District.

"If the tax rate goes down, the taxes go down; but if the tax rate goes up, the taxes can't go above that ceiling," Chief Appraiser Paula Lowrie has said. "Of course, if you build a new garage or make improvements, then your taxes are adjusted and frozen at a new level."

The tax freeze would only apply to declared homesteads and would not apply to business property or personal property, such as cars, boats, and planes.

Each of the entities in Tuesday's election placed the measure on the ballot after receiving petitions from the Donley County Concerned Citizens in August.

Prior to Tuesday's election, officials with all three entities had expressed concern over how a freeze would impact their future revenues.

DCSB plans centennial open house

Few businesses make it to their 100th anniversaries, but the Donley County State Bank is one that has reached that milestone today.

The bank was chartered on November 9, 1906, and has operated under its original name and largely been run by the same family ever since — two characteristics that are also rare.

The centennial of the bank will be celebrated this Friday at 1:30 p.m. with Texas Banking Commissioner Randall S. James and a representative of the Texas Bankers Association on hand for cake, giveaways, and an open house.

Among the items on display will be an original gold leaf sign that dates back to 1906 and advertises the bank's original $50,000 in capital.

"It was one of two signs that was on the exterior of the bank until March 1918," bank president Walter B. Knorpp, Jr., said.

The capital was increased to $75,000 in March 1918. Today it has a capital of $400,000 with a $1 million surplus and more than $5 million in undivided profits, Knorpp said.

Visitors to the bank can also view the 1917 short horn cattle portrait by Henry Sawyer that was the inspiration for the short horn that was the bank's logo for many decades. The bank's modern logo also echoes the short horn design.

The Donley County State Bank originally occupied a building with oak teller booths on the corner of Kathy May, Lindy Craft, and Walt Knorpp display some of the history of the Donley County State Bank that will be shown during the bank's centennial open house this Friday.

Kearney and First Streets where the old Antro Hotel façade still stands. The original officers were H.D. Ramsey, president; P.R. Stephens, vice president; and Wesley Knorpp, cashier. The first Directors of the bank included Thomas S. Bugbee, John C. Knorpp, Wesley Knorpp, H.D. Ramsey, P.R. Stephens, C.T. McMurtry, and J.L. McMurtry.

The bank moved to its present location at the corner of Kearney and Second Street in January of 1917, and it was at this time the oak motif was replaced with marble counters and tellers' cages. In 1956, the bank was remodeled inside and out to its current appearance.

Knorpp prides himself on the fact that four generations of his family have been associated with the bank. His great-grandfathers, John C. Knorpp and T.S. Bugbee, were founders of the bank. His grandfather, Wesley Knorpp, was also a founder and served as president from 1920 to 1949, and his uncle, W. Carroll Knorpp, started at the bank in 1928 and served as its president from 1960 to 1995.

"During the Depression, a lot of the big ranchers were having trouble, and the Donley bank was financing their land and cattle," Walt Knorpp said. "Some of them came in to give up their land and cattle, and my grandfather (Wesley Knorpp) let them keep it. He told them, 'Things will turn around,' and they eventually did."

Carroll Knorpp was one of the people who were instrumental in the building and development of Lake Greenbelt, and he was credited with closing Clarendon's banks on Saturdays. Prior to his influence, local banks stayed open until noon on Saturdays. He also was noted for caring for those who worked for him like they were his children rather than his employees.

In addition to stories about the bank, several items from the bank's history will be on display Friday, including the bank's original charter, historic pictures, a letter from Will Rogers, and newspaper accounts of the 1930 bank robbery during which several employees were shut up in the bank's vault.

Johnson, Trout win election

In the only two locally contested races Tuesday, Donley County voters in Precincts 1, 2, and 4 returned the incumbents to office.

Justice of the Peace for Pcts. 1&2 Jimmy Johnson (R) fended off a challenge from Democrat Connie Havens and won re-election, 408-275.

Precinct 4 voters gave their commissioner, Bob Trout (D), another term in office and chose not to write in the name of his challenger, Claude DeBord, by a margin of 181 to 79.

Other local races were uncontested and results are as follows: County Judge Jack Hall (D) 987, County Treasurer Wanda Smith (R) 1065, County Attorney Landon Lambert (R) 980, County Clerk Fay Vargas (D) 1006, Pcts. 3&4 Justice of the Peace Ann Kennedy (D) 446, and Pct. 2 Commissioner Donnie Hall (R) 318.

Donley County voters vastly preferred native son US Rep. Mac Thornberry (R), choosing him over his challenger Roger Waun (D) by a margin of 1.

Local voters also wanted to give Gov. Rick Perry (R) another term, giving him 538 votes to 292 for independent Carole Strayhorn, 258 for independent Kinky Friedman, and 170 for Chris Bell (D).

Complete local election results are printed on page eight.

State confirms two West Nile cases, one death

West Nile virus has caused one human death in Donley County, state health officials reported this week, urging people to take necessary precautions.

Family members of a Donley County woman had previously said that she was suffering from the disease in an Amarillo hospital. The woman, whose identity cannot be published due to privacy concerns, died before the Texas Department of State Health Services had confirmation of her case.

"Our biggest problem is that we get lab slips in, but they aren't specific to West Nile and we have to wait for additional results," said Karen McDonald with the TDSHS regional office in Lubbock.

McDonald said the local cases were confirmed on October 30.

"There have been two documented cases of West Nile virus," she said. "One resulted in a death. Both are in high-risk group — over 50 years old."

Family members had said last month that the woman's husband was also exhibiting symptoms that might indicate West Nile, but McDonald could not comment on whether the confirmed cases were related.

"I can't verify that," she said.

Dr. John C. Howard said West Nile virus is in Donley County to stay, and he urged people to take steps to avoid mosquitoes, which transmit the disease to humans.

"It is endemic now, and mosquitoes will control the level of activity," Howard said. It's going to be a recurring problem, and avoidance is our best defense."

West Nile virus is carried in birds and transferred to humans by mosquitoes. The virus has an incubation period of three to 14 days with a week being the average. Health officials recommend people watch out for mosquitoes at dusk and dawn, use a repellent containing DEET, and wear clothes with long sleeves and light colors to avoid being bitten.

Howard also recommends people get rid of any standing water around their homes.

McDonald said even though temperatures are falling, mosquitoes will still be active on warm days.

"People need to be aware," she said. "The risk will not diminish until the average daily temperature drops below 70°F."

CC women to host regional tourney

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon College Lady Bulldogs will host the Region V West Volleyball Tournament this Friday and Saturday, November 10-11, at the Bulldog Gym.

The CC women have had an up and down season but have received national recognition to brag about.

"We were recognized last week when we received votes for a Top 20 Program," said head coach Jonea Rima, referring to the November 1 NJCAA Poll. "We were not able to break into the top 20, but at least our program is being recognized on the national level."

This week's tournament will be the first athletic event played on the new floor of the Bulldog Gym and will also include Frank Phillips College, New Mexico Military Institute, and Midland College.

CC is sitting third place at 3-5 in the pre-tournament standings of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. Topping that list is Frank Phillips with a perfect season at 8-0; and Midland is second with a record of 6-2. Rounding out the top five are New Mexico Military at 2-6 and Western Texas College at 1-7. The top four teams have earned the right to advance to the tournament.

"Currently, our program has an overall record of 19-14," Rima said.

"And our Conference record is 3-5."

The action will get underway Friday, November 10, at 6:00 p.m. as Frank Phillips takes on New Mexico Military. The Lady Bulldogs will play Midland College at 8:00 p.m. The Championship match will be Saturday, November 11, at 2:00 p.m.

Those players receiving recognition this season are Ashley McMullen (soph) 17th in the Nation in digs; Roni Mendoza (fresh) 16th in the Nation in assists; Keila Ah Mow (fresh) 44th in the Nation with service aces; Thonya Joseph (fresh) 41st in the Nation with blocks; and Shealee Coulter (fresh) 50th in the Nation with service aces.

Do this before Tehran gets nuclear bomb

By Ted Galen Carpenter

Few Americans want Iran to get nuclear weapons, but as European Union leader Javier Solana conceded, the European-led negotiations to stop it are going nowhere fast. Unless there is an unexpected breakthrough – and soon – our leaders face a set of highly imperfect options. The best by far is to try to strike a grand bargain with Iran.

Washington should offer to normalize diplomatic and economic relations with Iran, and pledge to refrain from efforts at forcible regime change. In exchange, Tehran would be expected to open its nuclear program to rigorous, on-demand international inspections to guarantee that no nuclear material was diverted from peaceful purposes.

We have little to lose by proposing a deal – unless we let negotiations drag on endlessly. Making an offer to Tehran and indicating that it would remain on the table for a maximum of six months would have no significant downside. If the Iranians rejected the proposal – or if they simply stalled – all other options would still be available. If they accepted the agreement, we would have a reliable way to prevent Iran from joining the ranks of the nuclear-weapons powers.

Consider the alternatives. The use of pre-emptive air strikes against Iran's nuclear installations is the worst, most dangerous strategy. Weekly Standard Editor William Kristol lobbies for such strikes with an almost unfathomable disregard for their likely consequences. "Yes, there would be repercussions," writes Kristol, "and they would be healthy ones, showing a strong America that has rejected further appeasement."

Yet even fellow hawk Charles Krauthammer admits that attacking Iran would have highly unpleasant results. According to Krauthammer, the costs of such an attack "will be terrible." He predicts that oil prices would spike to at least $100 and possibly as much as $150 a barrel, triggering a global economic recession "perhaps as deep as the one triggered by the Iranian revolution of 1979."

At most, such strikes would delay, not eliminate, Tehran's program, and at the cost of thousands of Iranian civilian casualties. There is also a grave risk that Iran would retaliate with terrorist attacks and perhaps even more drastic measures, such as trying to close the Strait of Hormuz to shipping altogether, preventing any Persian Gulf oil from getting through.

Attacking Iran would also further alienate Muslim populations around the world, creating the very real prospect of a war of civilizations. If the United States attacks yet another Islamic country, most Muslims from Morocco to Malaysia will be convinced that Washington is out to destroy their way of life.

Another alternative is to intensify efforts to subvert Iran's clerical regime. The United States already has a modest program designed to do that, embodied in the Iran Freedom Support Act, but Americans who assume that the clerical government can be easily dislodged from power are indulging in the same fantasy they embraced about the supposed ease of nation-building in Iraq. We should not repeat that folly.

According to enthusiastic proponents of regime change, such as American Enterprise Institute activist Michael Ledeen, Iranian public opposition to the mullahs is so strong that a U.S. propaganda offensive combined with financial and logistical assistance to prospective insurgents would topple the regime. Ledeen boasts, "Give me $20 million, and you'll have your revolution."

Iranian dissidents themselves, while hardly enamored of theocracy, are also wary of a U.S. political embrace. Iranian human rights activist Emad Baghi complained recently: "We are under pressure from both the hardliners [in Iran's judiciary] and that stupid George Bush."

A U.S. subversion program would have unintended negative consequences, undermining the domestic legitimacy of the Iranian dissidents who might otherwise gain power some day. And even if the effort to topple the mullahs somehow succeeded, there is no certainty that a democratic Iran would choose to remain non-nuclear. The threat of further proliferation in the volatile Persian Gulf region would remain.

The Bush administration's most likely initial response will be to seek a U.N. Security Council resolution imposing economic sanctions on Tehran. But as we've seen in Iraq, North Korea and elsewhere, sanctions have a poor record of getting regimes to abandon high-priority policies. Even if Russia and China could be induced to overcome their reluctance to endorse meaningful sanctions, such measures are unlikely to halt Iran's quest for nuclear weapons.

If all else fails, the choice remains to accept reluctantly Iran as a member of the global nuclear weapons club and rely on the deterrent power of America's vast nuclear arsenal. While that strategy is not without risk, the United States has successfully deterred other volatile and unsavory regimes, most notably Maoist China during the Cultural Revolution. That course, however, could not prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons throughout the Middle East. Iran's neighbors would seek to counter Tehran's new capability in kind, and Washington would clearly like to avoid that outcome.

Alas, U.S. policymakers have no silver bullet. They have only a choice among problematic options. Some choices, though, are clearly better than others. Pursuing a grand bargain is the best option available, and we should at least give it a shot.

Texas' lighthouses should be preserved

By US Sen. John Cornyn

Throughout history, lighthouses have enjoyed a mystique that goes well beyond their practical uses. They're a symbol of strength and a beacon of hope along the beauty of a seacoast – a haven in a storm. They represent the adventure of a seafaring life and provide a predictable guide to those who brave the dangers and uncertainty of the sea.

Among the original Seven Wonders of the Ancient World was the lighthouse on Pharos at the Alexandria Harbor in Egypt. History says a "wood fire burning on the top was visible for about 29 miles."

America's first lighthouse was built in Boston in 1716. Our image of lighthouses still runs to craggy, rock-strewn ocean coasts.

But the Texas Gulf Coast is home to lighthouses with great histories of their own. Their stories include uncoordinated assaults of war, storms, neglect, and erosion. Most lighthouses that survived have now been made obsolete by modern-day technology. But at the dawn of the Civil War, there were a dozen lighthouses operating along the Texas coast.

Though some 80 percent of Texas's coast is protected by seven barrier islands that protect the mainland from waves and storms, the need for those early lighthouses was clear: navigation problems included narrow and shallow channels, unpredictable sand, and mud and silt bars.

The first illumination was actually a lightship. In 1849, a schooner was moored about one mile outside Galveston Harbor to mark a hazardous shelf of sand and silt. Its fog signal was a bell, rung by hand, and a single lantern, containing eight oil lamps, was hung on its mainmast. Over time, of course, these lighthouses evolved from the use of oil to kerosene – eventually to electricity.

The lightship eventually sank, was raised, and sank again. A second Galveston lightship was moored in the harbor in 1870, and did its job for 35 years, withstanding the infamous hurricane of 1900. Dredging now keeps the harbor entrance clear.

Several lighthouses played a minor role in the Civil War. Their height was useful for surveillance, and both sides tried to stop the enemy from using the illumination.

One landmark lighthouse at Sabine Pass served the deepwater ports in Beaumont, Port Arthur, and Orange. It was considered a Texas lighthouse, but in actuality sat 600 yards outside the state line in Louisiana. Sabine Pass was the last lighthouse to go dark during a Union blockade of the southern coast in 1861.

Federal troops stole the Sabine Pass lighthouse lens, but it served through the war as a lookout post and provided an edge for southern forces in the Battle of Sabine Pass in 1863.

The Aransas Pass lighthouse also saw Civil War action. Confederate forces tried to destroy the structure, including detonating two kegs of black powder at the base in 1861, but it survived.

The Bolivar Point lighthouse, ushering ships between Galveston and the Gulf, was also leveled by southern sympathizers. Following the war, a second lighthouse was constructed out of brick, with a steel façade and painted with white and black bands so it could easily be seen during daylight hours. This structure notably withstood the powerful hurricanes of 1900 and 1915, respectively.

Both landmarks are now in private hands. The structure at Bolivar Point was sold by the federal government to the Boyt family after World War II, and the Aransas Pass lighthouse has been carefully restored by Charles Buti, president of the HEB food chain.

The Aransas light, also known today as the Lydia Ann, still serves as an aid to navigation.

According to one historical account, caretakers Rick and Cameron Pratt still activate a light every night, and the station's flags are lowered to the drone of bagpipes – a fitting ceremony for a venerable landmark.

Today, only two other Texas lighthouses remain operational. The U.S. Coast Guard operates a lighthouse at Sabine Bank, which sits in the Gulf of Mexico. It also keeps a lighthouse at Matagorda Bay in a State wildlife refuge.

The Texas State Historical Association (TSHA) has created a new website devoted to Texas lighthouses and lightships. No lighthouse preservation effort exists in Texas, but the TSHA is helping to raise awareness about the significant role played by lighthouses in our state's history.

Congress okays a long wall to nowhere

By Daniel T. Griswold, Cato Institute

At a White House ceremony on Thursday, President Bush put his signature to a bill authorizing 700 miles of additional fencing along the U.S.-Mexican border. The bill supposedly demonstrates the determination of Congress to stop illegal immigration; but like much of its other efforts, the fence legislation is more symbolism than substance.

The 15-foot-high fencing with barbed wire and stadium lighting will cost at least $1.2 billion and may not be completed for years, if ever. And even if built, America's recent history of pouring more and more resources into enforcing current immigration laws offers little hope that the fence will stem the inflow of undocumented workers.

The federal government has tried for two decades now to curb illegal immigration, with spending and border-patrol personnel up dramatically since the late 1980s. In the 1990s, the government erected miles of fencing through major urban corridors such as San Diego and El Paso. The fences only diverted the flow of humanity into more remote desert regions while the actual number of illegal immigrants entering the country each year and total number here has just kept growing.

The response of Congress to this obvious policy failure has been to spend more on the same failed policies. The same Congress that funded "the bridge to nowhere" in Alaska has now funded a "wall to nowhere" on our Southwest border.

Even if all 700 miles of fence become a reality, more than 1,000 miles of the U.S.-Mexican border will still be unfenced. The fees smugglers charge will continue to rise, along with their sophistication. More anonymous bodies will pile up in morgues as workers enter through even harsher terrain. And those immigrants who enter will tend to stay longer because of the high risk and expense of re-entering.

Even if we could fence all 2,000 miles of the border with Mexico, illegal immigration would continue because of visa

"overstayers." A third or more of people living in the United States illegally actually entered the country legally and then overstayed their visas. On a typical day, 800,000 Mexicans enter the United States through 43 legal ports of entry along the border. They come to shop, visit relatives, and conduct business. The large majority goes back home within a few days, but a minority stays and disappears into the general population.

Drastically reducing legal entries from Mexico would be an economic disaster. Mexico is America's second largest trading partner, and expanding trade and investment ties depend on expanding cross-border visits. Mexican shoppers and tourists have fueled economic growth in U.S. border communities. The only lasting solution to illegal immigration will be to offer a legal alternative.

If congressional leaders truly want a "secure border," any enforcement efforts must be combined with comprehensive immigration reform. A temporary worker program of the type supported by President Bush and approved in May by the U.S. Senate would allow peaceful and hard-working people to enter the United States legally instead of illegally.

A temporary worker program would allow foreign-born workers to enter the United States temporarily to fill jobs – in such important sectors as construction, retail, hospitality, food processing and agriculture – that an insufficient number of Americans are available and willing to fill. It would offer an alternative means of entry for workers from Mexico and other countries who are now tempted to enter the United States illegally to help support their families back home.

Such a program would lower the inflow of illegal immigrants by expanding the channel for legal entry. In the 1950s, the U.S. government dramatically expanded the number of temporary visas available through the Bracero program for Mexican agricultural workers. The result was an equally dramatic fall in illegal entries to the United States. When Congress ended the program in 1964, illegal immigration began to climb again and has not stopped since.

Our own experience teaches that border enforcement alone without real immigration reform is doomed to fail. If it is ever built, the 700-mile fence will stand only as a monument to the failure of Congress to learn from that experience.

Extension expert offers advice to avoid catching flu

COLLEGE STATION – Cooler weather brings seasonal events: football, falling leaves and ... flu shots.

Influenza – 'the flu' – is not an easy condition to self-diagnose, said Texas Cooperative Extension experts in a recent edition of Health-Hints Newsletter. Many other diseases and conditions start with the same 'flu-like symptoms' of fever, headache, extreme tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, nasal congestion and body aches.

"One of the ways influenza ... can be distinguished from other viruses, such as a common cold, is that flu usually comes on suddenly," said Dr. Carol Rice, Extension health specialist.

A doctor will be able to provide an accurate diagnosis, Rice said.

"If you do have the flu, your doctor will not prescribe antibiotics – drugs like penicillin – because antibiotics can only treat bacterial infections, not viral infections," said Janet Pollard, Extension associate for health.

The doctor may be able to prescribe an antiviral drug which could help lessen the symptoms, shorten the duration of the illness and reduce contagiousness, Pollard said.

"Antivirals, however, must be given within two days of the onset of symptoms to be effective, so be sure to see your doctor right away," she said.

Other than that, Rice said, the four best ways to self-treat the flu are: Get plenty of rest, drink plenty of clear fluids such as broth and juice, don't drink alcohol or smoke tobacco, and take the right medications, whether over-the-counter or prescription.

"The best way to deal with the flu, of course, is to never get it and if you do, to avoid giving it to others," Rice said.

To accomplish that, the experts advised: Washing hands often and correctly.

"Use soap and warm running water, rubbing your hands together to remove any germs," Pollard said.

For children to get the right amount of washing, have them sing "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" or recite the alphabet while washing. Once the song or recitation is done, so is the washing. Adults should wash their hands for at least 15 seconds, including wrists and between fingers. Hand sanitizers that contain alcohol can be used if water is not available, Pollard added.

Covering the mouth whenever you cough or sneeze.

"When covering or wiping the nose or mouth, use paper tissues that can be thrown away after each use," Rice said.

Keeping the sick person away from others

– the flu is contagious.

"Stay home from work," Rice advised. "Have children stay home from school or other activities where they might expose others. Try to rest in a room by yourself, away from other members of your household to keep your family well."

Getting vaccinated.

The two types of vaccines are inactivated influenza vaccine – also known as the 'flu shot' – and live, attenuated influenza vaccine, also called LAIV, Pollard said. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has recommendations as to who should get which vaccination.

"Ask your doctor about which flu vaccine is right for you," she said. For more information about this and other health issues, visit Extension's Family and Consumer Sciences Web site at <http://fcs.tamu.edu/> and click on the link to "Health."

H-wick seeks volunteers for Christmas decorating

November 11 is Veterans Day. As I typed that sentence I realized how many veterans there are in my immediate family beginning with my husband. The list continues with my brother, two brothers-in-law, son, son-in-law, and grandson-in-law. Go back a generation and it includes uncles, cousins, and so on down the line.

Almost any family can tell about the veterans in the family, so we have a day set aside to honor this group. It was originally called Armistice Day and honored the veterans of WWI because the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month was when WWI ended.

In later years it was renamed Veterans Day to honor all veterans. So fly the flag proudly and say "thank you" to all who served.

Attention all volunteers! Christmas lighting in the park is December

3, and it's time to put up the Christmas scenes. As anyone who has helped with this project knows, it takes muscle and time, and nice weather makes the job more pleasant. Buster Baird has been in charge of the lighting for the past few years but continues wearing the cast on his foot and leg and is unable to work, so we are recruiting. If you can help, call me at 874-2886.

Nancy Davis had knee surgery and is tied to the machine from outer space, so stop and say hello when you are out and about.

Author details journey of orphan train kids

To me, a fascinating part of our history is one which may not be too familiar to many of us...the "Orphan Train Era".

Between 1853-1929, approximately 200,000 children and adults participated in a most unique migration...that of taking homeless children from city to rural villages to experience a decent life with hope for the future. They received encouragement to accept free instruction in useful trades in which honest livings could be made.

The idea of an Orphan Train originated with two New York ministers, Charles Loring Brace and Van Buren Van Arsdale. These courageous and enthusiastic gentlemen were responsible for the establishment of child-placing agencies from New York to the American West.

Among many assisting agents across country was Charles R. Fry, heading New York Children's Aid Society, who laid the groundwork for a "Placing-out system" after orphan trains reached various destinations. This benevolent gentlemen conducted nearly 50,000 children out of crime infested New York streets... children to whom police referred as "street rats" as they begged for scraps at back doors, explored garbage cans, and lived under stairways or in packing boxes. Many were abandoned by prostitute mothers. Mr. Fry traveled 30,000 miles a year for 30 years on boats, trains, in horse-drawn buggies in all kinds of weather, seeking homes in 10 mid-west states for these children.

After reaching planned destinations, orphan train riders were taken to a hall where rural residents needing help with farm work came with offers of good homes and security. Farmers and their wives opened their hearts as well as their homes, giving love eagerly and freely.

After placement, Mr. Fry continued to check on the children's welfare and happiness. If they were healthy and happy, they remained. If not, he changed them to a new home. If they were rebellious, a gentle warning of a New York return usually solved the problem.

Of many children who Fry placed, two grew up to be governors, and six became legislators. Others became bankers, lawyers, doctors, teachers, clergymen, businessmen, and held other productive jobs.

Fry's statement exemplifies his dedication and concern for children. "I try to be to the weak, strength; to the discouraged and disheartened, encouragement; and to all, a defense and protection."

In short, a friend in need, journeying up and down, always in calling distance, so that our little ones may surely feel that they are never really cast off."

Orphan Trains still existed during 1930's, some stopping and passing through Donley County. Readers might recognize names in Burton Memorial Library's three volumes of Orphan Train Riders: Their Own Personal Stories compiled by Mary Ellen Johnson who contacted

check it out
by Mary Beth Nelson

every available source for assistance in locating Orphan Train riders or relatives. The personal stories are heartwarming, some sad, some happy. I wouldn't attempt to review any of them because there's no way I could convey emotions of those who contributed their own stories.

After Johnson's organization of Orphan Train Heritage Society of America (OTHS) in 1987, letters and press releases for information were mailed from which she began receiving responses. In 1992, the Orphan Train Riders Research Center was opened.

Research writer Marilyn Irvin Holt explains into depth "how the system was established and how it functioned into the third decade of the 20th century" in her book, The Orphan Trains.

The Clarendon College Theatre Department has announced the opening of "Accommodations," a comedy in three acts written by Nick Hall, produced with special arrangement with Samuel French, and directed by William R. Huey.

Performances will be Friday, November 17, and Saturday, November 18, at 8:00 p.m., and a matinee will be on Sunday, November 19, at 2:30 p.m. at the Harned Sister Fine Arts Center.

Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students. Admission is free to all Clarendon College regents, administration, faculty, and staff; CC students; and high school theatre groups.

The Historical Quilt Project will meet November 11 at 10:00 a.m. at the Church of Christ Family Life Center.

Senior Citizens make pancake breakfast plans

The Donley County Senior Citizens Center is having a pancake breakfast on November 11, 2006. The breakfast will start at 8 a.m. and continue to 10:30 a.m. The cost per person is $5.00.

DCSC, which has been in service of the Clarendon area since 1979, relies on donations and fundraisers to supply the much needed funds to keep its doors open.

DCSC provides area seniors with weekly activities as well as being a very important part of the Meals on Wheels program in Clarendon.

An average of 30 people daily receive their noon meals via the Donley County Senior Citizens Center. This is an increase of 75 percent in the last three years, according to the director, Marlee Sharp. "In some cases the volunteers for the Meals on Wheels program are the only people the recipients see during the day. We are a part of something very special here at the center," Sharp said.

The DCSC also offers lunch from 11:30 to 12:30 Monday through Friday for everyone in the community. There is not an age limit. You can be 9 or 99 to enjoy lunch at the center. Lunches include favorites such as Mexican Pile-On to roast beef with all of the fixings. Call-in orders are welcome.

The cost for lunch is a suggested donation price of $5.50 for guests 59 and younger, and $3.00 for guests 60 and above.

You do not have to be members of the center to be able to participate in the lunch meal or to become a Meals on Wheels participant. However, if you would like to become a member or find out what the center is all about, contact Marlee Sharp at the center at 874-2665.

The Clarendon Lions Club held their regular Tuesday noon meeting November 7, 2006, with Boss Lion Jim Shelton in charge.

We had 22 members and two guests this week: Ashlee Estlack and Benjamin Estlack, guests of Lion Roger Estlack.

Lion Myles Shelton reported that the Lady Bulldogs will host the regional volleyball tournament this weekend, and noted that former Lion Jerry Hawkins passed away early this morning. Services are tentatively set for Sunday. Lion Tex Buckhaults said the college meats judging team won the national championship recently.

Lion Monty Hysinger said the Lady Broncos are getting their season started. The junior high UIL meet is coming up, and basketball tournaments will be starting soon.

Lion Marvin Elam said Howardwick's new fire truck will be here this week.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Panhandle farm, ranch symposium to be November 30

AMARILLO – The 22nd annual Panhandle Farm and Ranch Management Symposium will be November 30, said a Texas Cooperative Extension agent. The event will be in conjunction with the Amarillo Farm and Ranch Show in the Grand Plaza.

cal modes of action, Jack Lyon, retail account manager for DuPont; Alternative fuels/energy, Dr. Steve Amosson, Extension agricultural economist, Amarillo; and Pesticide laws and regulations, Levon Harmon, Texas Department of Agriculture.

Quail hunting has positive impact on rural economies

WICHITA FALLS – Leasing land for quail hunting has a positive impact on many rural economies in the state, said a Texas Cooperative Extension economist.

"The economic impact of hunting in Texas exceeds $1.5 billion annually," Jason Johnson, Extension economist based at Stephenville. He addressed a capacity crowd at the recent Red River Quail Symposium in Wichita Falls.

"Quail are the third most hunted species of game in Texas, ranking behind deer and dove, based on the number of active hunters," he said. "But quail rank fifth behind deer, dove, duck and wild turkey in terms of the number of days spent hunting. This suggests that insufficient quail habitat or the distance to suitable quail habitat restricts hunting activity for this game bird."

The recent Red River Quail Symposium included two ranch tours and a one-day seminar on landowner resources for habitat and hunting management. Hunting's economic impact reaches beyond landowners and into other sectors/businesses that cater to the hunting and travel industries. In many areas of Texas, hunting is second only to Friday night football in terms of visitors and money drawn in to local communities, Johnson said.

"Approximately 65 percent of Texas hunters come from urban areas, so this economic impact is essentially an urban-to-rural transfer," he said. "According to a United States Fish and Wildlife Service survey, the average Texas hunter spends more than $1,300 each year on hunting and travel amenities."

A 2001 survey of Texas Quail Unlimited members revealed more specific information about avid quail hunters in Texas, he added.

"The typical Quail Unlimited member responding to our Texas survey was a middle-aged, affluent white male," Johnson said. "Most were college graduates, and 42 percent reported household incomes above $125,000. They lived in rural areas, small cities and medium- and large-sized urban areas."

"The relevant point is that the average expenditure per hunter responding exceeded more than $10,000 each year on quail hunting," he said.

"That's money spent on lease fees, dogs, vehicles, transportation, feeds/feeders/food plots, lodging, guns and ammunition, meals and other expenses. A large portion of these expenditures, averaging around 40 percent to 50 percent, are made in the destination county of the quail hunt."

Evergreen trees block the wind

For a tree row to an effective windbreaker or barrier, species selection is critical. Evergreens should be used exclusively in windbreaks made up of only one or two rows of trees. Since evergreen trees are densely branched and retain their foliage, they provide year-round protection.

Arizona Cypress, Eastern Redcedar, and Rocky Mountain Juniper maintain their lower branches and thus provide better protection.

All three are generally available through the Donley County Soil and Water Conservation District; however, the Arizona Cypress is usually in short supply. The Texas Forest Service usually sells out before we can place an order. Therefore, if you are interested in placing an order for evergreen trees, especially the Arizona Cypress, call Mike at 874-3561 ext. 101 or come by the NRCS office at 4th and Sully as soon as possible. Pecan trees are also available for order again this year.

Drugs in the News

New Treatment For Diabetes Approved

Last month, the US Food and Drug Administration announced that it had approved a new treatment for type 2 diabetes. The drug Januvia (sitagliptin phosphate) is the first in a new class of anti-diabetes medicines. It is reported to improve the body's own ability of lower blood sugar that is too high. Januvia is used alone or in combination with certain diabetes medicines when diet and these other drugs alone do not provide adequate blood sugar control. The new drug seems to work in 2 different ways. One is to prolong the activity of certain proteins that causes the pancreas to produce more insulin, while also sending a signal to the liver indicating that it should stop producing glucose. According to some reports, Januvia causes few side effects, which may include diarrhea and sore throat.

Type 2 diabetes is the most common type of diabetes, affecting 20 million Americans. This is a condition in which the body does not produce enough insulin to transport sugar to the cells, or body cells ignore the insulin that is produced. If blood sugar levels remain high for too long, the heart, kidneys, and nerves can be damaged.

Irish defeat Broncos

By Sandy Anderberg

After fighting hard all season, the young Bronco team will only play for pride in their next and final game of the season next week at Quanah. They had hopes of keeping their season alive Friday night in Shamrock with a win, but it was not to be as the Broncos fell to the Irish 7-27.

Shamrock's Derek Stone ran the opening kickoff back for an Irish score to grab the early momentum from the Broncos. Clarendon got back in the mix as they answered back in the first period to tie the game when senior Bradley Sell scored on an 11-yard run. Alton Gaines added the extra point.

But the Broncos allowed two scores in the second period to put Shamrock on top by 12 points before the break. The Irish added one more score in the last period to seal the game.

"That kickoff run-back really set the tone for the whole night," coach Gary Jack said. "The tempo of the game was changed in just the first few seconds."

According to Jack, the Broncos played hard but just could not get things to go their way.

"The guys played hard, and it just didn't happen," Jack said. "We were a little banged up from the Wellington game, and we had to move a few kids around."

Jack credited several players with good games.

"Brad (Sell) had 19 tackles," Jack said. "He had a really good game, but his body has taken a beating this year. We moved Devin Noble to linebacker, and he did a good job for us and had seven tackles. Scott Fowler had one of his better games of his career, and John Vaught had eight tackles, a blocked kick, and two sacks."

Also receiving credit from Jack were Alton Gaines, who had nine tackles and one sack; Derrick Shelton with five tackles; David Gordon with six tackles; and Tre Brown, who racked up three tackles and two sacks.

The Broncos will host Quanah Friday, November 10, at 7:30 p.m. at Bronco Stadium.

With it being the last home game, the seniors will be honored at the annual Senior Night to be held before the opening kickoff.

Santos sets club record at CCC

By Sandy Anderberg

In the midst of the Polar Bear Two-Man Low-Ball Tournament, a local hero has emerged a champion in every sense of the word.

Long-time greens keeper of the Clarendon Country Club Mike Santos put together two outrageous rounds of golf to not only win the tournament, but also shot a 60 on Saturday and a 63 on Sunday for the two 18-hole rounds.

According to Santos, those two rounds were the best rounds he has ever shot.

"Mike has worked for the Club for 24 years as green keeper," CCC member Maxine McLaughlin said. "We are very proud to have Mike on our staff, and he does an outstanding job of keeping the course in great shape."

Santos, who is a zero handicapper and the 2006 club champion, has been playing golf for 25 years and is a regular on the course when he is not working. His work prevents him from playing every day, but he normally plays at least once a week and is a regular each Wednesday for the men's weekly game. Congratulations, Mike, for shooting 21 under par. Santos lives in Howardwick with his wife and family.

Santos and his partner, Wendol Miller, were the winners of the championship flight out of a field of 22 teams with a 122 in the 36-hole low-ball tournament. Second place went to Ricky Guy and Heath Barnett with a 124. Gary Brewer and Forrest Lloyd and Pete Sierra and Monty Mills tied for the top spot in the first flight with a 132.

The winners of the second flight were Kelly and Chris Linquist with a 137, and second place went to David Majors and J.B. Lemon, who turned in a 144. Bo Morrison and Steve Jamigan shot a 149 for first place in the third flight, and Jarad Lax and Bob Kelly shot a 153 for second.

Closest to the pin on number 15 was Redell Johnston at 5'11", and Bobbie Kidd had the longest putt on number nine at 14'1 1/2".

Be sure to take advantage of the beautiful fall weather each Friday at the CCC with free green fees with the paid price of a cart.

Correction:

Last week's ENTERPRISE misidentified a picture of a Hedley student at the Moving Vietnam Wall in Shamrock as Charlie Widener. The student was in fact Brayden Bennett. We regret the error and any confusion it may have caused.

Tech students from Donley County receive interscholastic scholarships

LUBBOCK - From a pool of around 700 applications, 61 students from Texas Tech received Texas Interscholastic League Foundation scholarships for their achievements in advanced levels of UIL competitions during high school. Samantha Myatt from Clarendon and Stephen Howard from Hedley are some of the scholarship winners for 2006. Myatt and Howard both received the Welch scholarship for academic success in high school. To be eligible, each student had to advance to the state competition level in UIL sometime during their high school career, said Lynn Elms, the director of the University Interscholastic League at Texas Tech. The average scholarship awarded is about $5,000. "These students are all intelligent, all team players," said Elms. "they are interested in making the grade, and they are passionate about their subject." The criteria by which the Texas UIL foundation awards the scholarships includes a successful academic performance during high school, high college entrance scores, and successful participation in UIL academic competitions. The UIL scholarship recipients were honored at a banquet at Texas Tech University on Oct. 23.

Celebrating 100 Years

The Donley County State Bank opened its doors on November 9, 1906, and made it a tradition to treat the people of our community with courteous, professional service.

As one of Clarendon's oldest businesses, we have always been a strong supporter of the community; and we have enjoyed helping generations of local families with their banking needs.

We invite you to join us Friday, November 10, at 1:30 p.m. as we celebrate a century of serving our friends and neighbors.

The Donley County State Bank opened on the corner of First and Kearney Streets where the old Donley Hotel facade still stands. Shown here are a Baptist minister, H.D. Ramsey, Fred Chamberlain, and Mart Kelley.

Bank employees stand beside the new marble teller booths after the Donley County State Bank moved to its present location in 1917.

The Donley County State Bank as it appears today on the corner of Second and Kearney Streets after being remodeled in 1956.
