Lucky Strike Chooses Weekly Newspapers for Advertising Medium

The American Tobacco Company, after an absence of quite some time, has chosen to use the advertising medium of Weekly Newspapers in behalf of the well known Lucky Strike cigarettes.

The first advertisement of a substantial schedule appears in the Leader this week. We are happy to carry an advertising schedule for a big company like American Tobacco who has had the wisdom to turn to weekly newspapers as a valuable adjunct to his sales and advertising plan.

Services Held Sunday for Mrs. George Bural Thompson III

Funeral services for Mrs. Marjorie Bural Thompson were held Sunday afternoon in the Groom Methodist Church with Rev. C. R. Copeland, pastor of the church, Rev. C. R. Hankins, pastor of the Wellington First Methodist Church, officiating.

Mrs. Thompson, 22, died in a two car collision two miles southeast of Silverton about 7 o'clock Friday evening. Her husband, George Thompson III was released Saturday morning from Swisher County Hospital in Tulla where he was treated for head lacerations and bruises. The driver of the second car was not injured.

The accident occurred on a farm road loop around Silverton. The Thompsons were on their way from their home in Lubbock to pick up their little daughter, Faith Rena, at Groom and also to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson Jr. here in Clarendon. A car driven by a Latin-American, Amel Zamora of Silverton, crashed head-on into the right side of the Thompson car. Vision at the intersection was obscured by high weeds, Zamora was not injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were married Sept. 6, 1958 in Groom. Mrs. Thompson had lived in Groom until she was married and she moved to Lubbock. She was a member of St. John's Methodist Church in Lubbock.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Faith Rena; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bural of Groom; three sisters, Mrs. Billie Chauveaux of Claude, Mrs. Betty McCracken of Pampa and Mrs. Mozelle Ferguson of Yuba City, Calif.

Donley County Fair Dates Are Set

The Donley County Fair and Quarter Horse Show will be held in Clarendon at the fairgrounds on September 15 and 16, says County Agent Flip Breedlove, secretary of the fair.

The program building committee was to meet last week and work out some of the details of the horse show and fair but due to stormy weather only a few of the members were present.

The quarterhorse show has already been approved by the American Quarter Horse Ass'n. and will be held at 1 p.m. on the afternoon of September 15 at the fairgrounds in Clarendon.

The county fair will be on two days, Sept. 15-16 and will feature community agriculture exhibits, Flower Show, Cake Show, Merchants Department, Poultry, Home Economics, Needlecraft, Fine Arts, and the Horse Show.

The program building committee will meet in the near future to work out all the plans. The catalog will go to press in the near future. Ads are now being sold in the catalog and this is the way that the Board pays all the premiums on different departments of the fair. The catalog will be off the press about the middle of August.

METHODIST MEN TO HAVE ICE CREAM SUPPER

The Brotherhood of Methodist men will sponsor an ice cream supper on the night of August 7 in Fellowship Hall of the Methodist Church. Flip Breedlove is in charge of getting all the ice cream and cake together for the occasion.

Breedlove says that he has called numerous members of the Methodist Church to bring freezers of home made ice cream for the big ice cream supper and many will bring home made cakes. The price will be 50 cents per person for all over ten years of age and 25 cents per person for all under that age. The purpose of the home made ice cream supper is to raise money to help out in different departments of the church and is just one of the major activities of the Methodist men's organization.

Everyone is invited to attend. Ice cream will start being served at 7:00 p.m. and will continue until it is all gone. Regardless of the church you belong to, come to the Methodist Church on the night of August 7 and eat all the home made ice cream and cake you can hold for 50 cents, Breedlove stated.

July Moisture Total On Increase

With five days left, the month of July has produced 4.51 inches of moisture through Wednesday of this week. This total is for the official recordings here in Clarendon. Other areas such as Ashtola, Goldston, and Lelia Lake show a much larger total.

Thursday night of last week, the Goldston area received another 2½ inches and it barely showered here in town. The area west and east of Clarendon caught a heavier downpour Friday night than was received here in town.

The moisture totals for July in 1957 showed only .43 inch. In 1958 the total was 6.36; in 1959 it was 7.22 and in 1960 it was 6.13. In comparison with the last three years, we still need two or three more inches to bring the total up to par. Most farmers in the area are ready for the water to shut off for a couple of weeks or so in order for cotton and feed to grow as it should. Sandy fields are already too loggy for plants to do well and need lots of good sunshine.

Another wet weather spell is forecast for around Friday of this week when another cold front is due to invade the area.

Little League Baseball News

Outside of a couple or so rained out games to be made up, the last portion of the Little League schedule has been completed. Until these make-up games have been played, the placings of the teams will be unknown.

The Clarendon Cubs have a match game with the Little Leaguers from Claude at the local diamond next Monday night. This should be an exciting game from start to finish and all local fans should make their plans to see it. An all star game involving the local league will probably be announced next week.

Last Friday night, the Sox lost a close game to Lakeview 7-6 and the Cub-Hedley game was rained out. Tuesday night, the Sox came up with a sweeping victory of 9-7 over Hedley and the Cubs lost a heart-breaker to Lakeview 1-0. This was an exceptionally good game with only 2 errors being recorded in the game.

CONFUSING APPLES AND ORANGES

Some years ago Congress passed a law whereby the first $50 of dividend income is exempt from the individual income tax, and a 4 per cent tax credit is allowed on any remainder. This gave a small measure of relief to shareholders, who are in a special and unfavorable tax position. The federal government taxes them twice directly — first, through the 52 per cent corporation tax on profits; then by applying the individual income tax to any return paid to them in dividends.

Now the Administration wants to eliminate these provisions. One reason for that is that it proposes a new investment credit for business firms that expand.

This move brought an important observation from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee. It was pointed out that to end income tax dividend credits would remove incentives for job creating investments in new businesses. Then the spokesman said: "It would appear that the Secretary of the Treasury is confusing apples and oranges when he states that the proposed new investment credit is a more effective way of encouraging capital investment than is the dividend credit."

"The dividend credit is a means of persuading people to invest in corporate enterprise. The investment credit, or preferably liberalized depreciation allowances, is designed to persuade businesses to use the funds they already have to buy and install new capital equipment."

"Both types of incentives are important, but the investment must first be made in the corporation before the corporation can have any funds to invest in capital equipment."

GEORGE'S WIFE

By "Sarah"

My what a world of difference it makes in dealing with people, and in plants and animals.

Just this week we have had so much advice, if we carried out half of it we would be going in all directions at once. One of our helpers told us, they knew what was wrong with our business but if we were not smart enough to know, they were not going to tell us. Others are very helpful in doing their job without fanfare of any kind.

All of which puts us in sympathy with our young President. We can understand a little better, how too much advice from the wrong source might get us into hot water. The only difference is: we all lose, when his advice is wrong.

We have been reading a part of "Berlin Command" by Brig. Gen. Frank L. Hawley, where he tells of the Russian soldiers laying a stick across the road at the Elbe River, keeping our men out of Berlin for seven and a half hours, until they occupied the territory they wanted. This was orders from the Big Three.

He says, from that day until this we have been pushed around and taken the pushing about. We are always confronted with the threat of force, or world war, and almost without fail we back down and give them what we want. There are no new lessons anywhere in the world to be learned about the Soviets, which we should not have learned in Berlin, but we just do not learn.

We have been told of this many, many times by our son-in-law who was there, but somehow we didn't want to believe it. The defeat our men must have felt at that time, must grow more bitter as the days go by in these uncertain times we live in today.

Gen. Hawley said only last week: "The present situation in Berlin is wrapped up with the whole international situation and all our dealings with the Soviet Union. I'm hopeful that the new President, now that he has seen the face of the enemy in Vienna, will start issuing ultimatums and demand rights be respected instead of continuing simply to defend what rights remain to us in the Germany which we fought so hard to liberate from the former tyranny of the Nazis."

The way things look now, a stick in the road and a dare to cross it, may be the one that broke the camel's back.

BLOWIN' Out the CORNERS

by Uncle Zeb

To the parents: You can take comfort in the statistics that there are only 40 more romping days until school starts. Time has passed so quickly this summer. It reminds us of the old farmer who complained: "Here it is Monday morning, tomorrow is Tuesday, and the next day, Wednesday — the week is half gone and we haven't done a thing." It is the same with us, the summer half gone and seemingly we haven't done a thing. The summer has flown by for you too. Most of the teachers we know are busy busy people during the summer. The final reports and wind-up routine often reaches over the final day of school. Many of the good teachers are doing extra study and preparation for the task of doing an even better job next year. Most of them have a family and a home that needs double attention in the summer months.

To the children: We don't mean to make catty remarks about you for neither group of the above would want to face one day of life without you. You are the spice of life. In fact, you are life. Excuse us for bringing up the subject at all but we just had to tell you about the following letter. It came to a teacher friend we know just about two To the teachers: We bet that weeks before school was out. The writer was about 10 or 11 and a precious young lady. It went sort of like the following: Dear Teacher,

You are the best teacher I have ever had. I love you very much. You are so kind and good to us. I love you a lot. I wish I could have you for my teacher always. I love you. I could think of a lot more nice things to say if I only knew whether I was going to pass or not. Love, Caroline.

Being Smart is often the result of keeping quiet. It's better to keep silent and have folks think you don't know anything about the subject than to speak up and have them know its true. A good way to have a clean mind is to change it once in a while. It's all right to be set in your ways, provided your ways have the right set.

Most everyone would consider it ill manners to talk with our mouth full. Too often, folks feel they must speak up or bust when their head is completely empty.

Before we decide to make a living out of our wits we should be sure that we have the necessary equipment.

Even if we refuse to face the facts, there are certain facts that are sure to face us.

We should pity the fellow who is long on dollars and short on common sense.

The man who decides to be his own lawyer should be sure that he doesn't have a fool for a client.

A wise man gets learning from those who have none themselves. It is said to be all right to let the human mind wander, just so long as we don't follow it.

No matter how wise a person may become, it is all the more reason we should keep looking to a higher power.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could sell our experience for what it cost us.

A wise man has ideals. He may never reach them, but like the stars he will have the benefit of their light.

People can be divided into two classes: those who divide folks into classes, and those who do not. If we could remember to look up to no one; to look down on no one, but rather to look for the good in everyone.

Most of us pass over the good qualities of our fellowman with only a casual glance, but when we get down to his short-comings we spend a lot of time. It seems that the more we compare his bad qualities with the law of average the better we seem to feel about our sins.

Often we are tempted to judge folks by the size of their brain, when we should put more emphasis on the size of their heart. It is easy to place them in a certain social position because of their money, when we should be thinking of the good they have done for the world.

Someone has said that, "All men seem silly to thee and me, and sometimes thee seems silly to me." It is a good thing that our passing judgment doesn't carry any sentence of conviction.

Some people are plus people; giving off more than they take on. Others could well be called minus folks, after dealing with them we feel we have been "taken."

The following quotations about people come from the pen of Mathew Henry:

"We are all naturally men of the earth; made of it, living on it, and hastening to it."

"We burn our master's candles but we do not mind His works."

"Those who would be kept from harm, should keep out of harm's way."

Cattlemen Organized

Forty men organized the Cattle Raisers Association of Texas in 1877 under an oak tree that still stands in Graham, Texas, northwest of Fort Worth.

A stone monument now stands by that Young County tree, commemorating the site as the beginning of this great organization. On the monument are the names of the association's first officers.

DAILY CARE OF HOGS PAYS

Most everyone has heard the fable of the tortoise and the hare, but how many people have realized the truth in this tale? It is believed that many livestock producers, especially hog growers, can learn from the patient turtle.

The swine producer who leaps (harelike) for the bottle of "wonder-drug" when his hogs are ill will fall way behind the thorough patient husbandman who has followed a program of disease and parasite prevention.

True, day to day attention to details which insure the health of a swine herd is not very spectacular, but it is far and away better than reliance on drugs, says Patterson. Treatment alone does not provide the complete answer to the problem of profitable swine production.

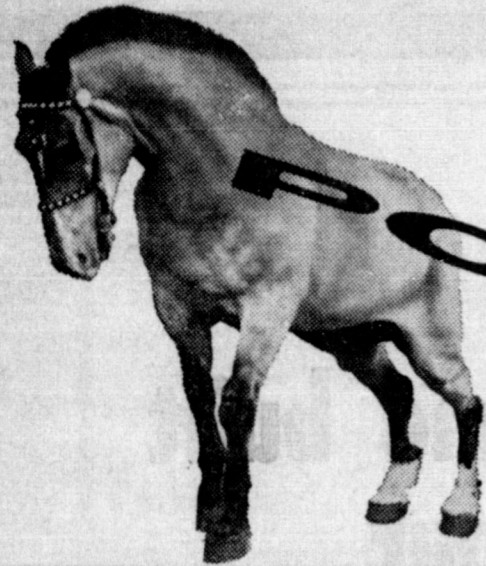

An effective health program for swine must provide a clean healthy environment, prevent exposure of animals to disease-producing agents, provide for early detection and identification of diseases and parasites, provide for early treatment selected and applied on the basis of diagnosis, and include accurate and complete records.

Diseases and parasites cut $15.50 from every $100 net profit realized from hog production. Baby pig diseases cost producers $438 million yearly and hog cholera and erysipelas siphon off $75 million each year. Patterson says these could be cut drastically if proper herd health measures were followed.

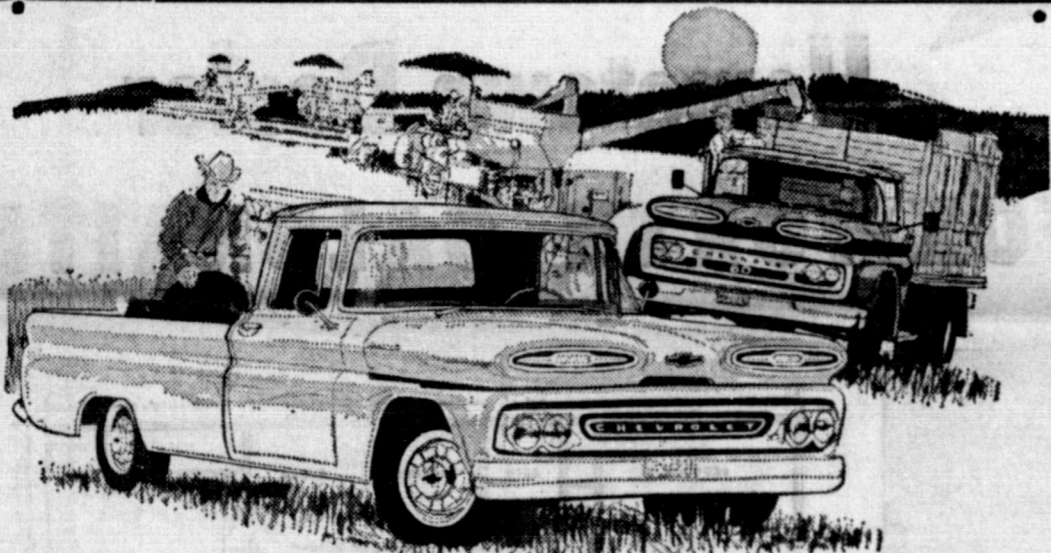

Detailed information on setting up a herd health program can be obtained from local veterinarians. Hog producers can help themselves greatly by getting this information and following the recommendations explicitly.

NOW'S THE TIME to save more truck dollars on the more-for-your-dollar trucks!

Your truck dollars are worth a whole lot more at your Chevrolet dealer's right now! First off, you get a head start on saving because summer's the saving season. Then, with a harder working, easier riding Chevy truck, you're set to save every mile you haul. And, finally, at trade-in time, you can expect an extra dividend because of Chevy's traditionally higher resale value. What could be better?

Summer's the season to get extra mileage from your dollars on the trucks built to give you extra miles of hauling. With Independent Front Suspension, Chevrolet trucks keep going thousands of miles longer because far less destructive jar and shake are transmitted through the truck. Chevy I.F.S. trucks work harder, too, in areas where other trucks have to be pampered. And, with Chevy's wide choice of thrifty 6 and hardy V8 power, you can tailor your truck exactly to your job. So how can you miss—especially now during the summer saving season?

The Reasons for Exploring Space

In general, the public is enthusiastic about the possibilities of space exploration, but occasionally the question is asked, "Why do we want to explore space? What return will such research bring? Are we spending vast amounts of money to satisfy man's natural curiosity about the void beyond his atmosphere, or are there concrete benefits which will accrue?"

The main goal of space research is knowledge. Continued probing of the universe will bring a great accumulation of knowledge as the mysteries of space are unlocked. This knowledge will in turn be translated into benefits to mankind.

In the peaceful application of space research, there are already apparent a number of areas in which tangible benefits can be provided. For instance, there is the field of transoceanic communications, vital to commerce, a good portion of which is handled by cable. Overseas cable messages have increased many fold in the past few years, and they are continuing to increase. The cables now available will soon be saturated and even projected expansion of the cable system may not be adequate to handle the predictable message rate.

One answer to this problem appears to be the communications satellite. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, in cooperation with the aerospace industry, has already launched communications satellites of two different types. One type is the "passive" system, in which radio signals are "bounced" off a satellite in orbit. The signal is transmitted to the satellite, which reflects it to another radio station across the ocean. The other type is the "active" repeater satellite. In this technique, a signal from a ground station is sent to the orbiting satellite, which has its own equipment to receive the message and re-transmit it to the distant receiving station.

Communications satellites are, of course, in their infancy, and a great deal of work remains before they can become practical instruments. Their commercial potential, however, is enormous. Not only could they solve the cable problem, but they also offer less expensive and more rapid overseas message transmission. In addition, they offer the possibility of long-awaited international television.

Accurate weather prediction is another area wherein space research can play a part. The major difficulty in predicting weather has been lack of data on cloud distribution. Only about 20 per cent of the earth's surface is regularly observed. Equipped with television, radar and other instruments, a weather satellite can provide a detailed picture of global weather. This space weather station can give forecasters on earth the complete information they need to provide accurate weather predictions. It is certainly within the realm of possibility that, once man has mastered accurate forecasting, he may be able to do something about changing the weather.

Prototypes of weather satellites have already been hurled into space, and more advanced types are under development.

There is also the navigation satellite. Placed in a precise orbit and equipped with a radio transmitter, it could provide position reports of high accuracy for ships and aircraft. It would, in effect, be an artificial transmitting star whose position is always precisely known, permitting ships and aircraft to fix their own position in relation to that of the satellite. Some experts feel that a device of this type may supplant most existing navigation aids.

World mapping is still another area where space research can provide benefits. Even today, large portions of the earth cannot be precisely charted for lack of an accurate starting point, called a "base line." A satellite, its position accurately known, can provide the needed base line between itself and a point on earth for global charting. It would permit measurements of thousands of miles with almost perfect accuracy.

These are just a few of the practical applications of space research. There are many more. In addition, there are the intangible benefits: more knowledge about space. A scrap of new information about the universe may have no immediate practical application, but as thousands upon thousands of such scraps are accumulated, a complete encyclopedia of space lore will emerge. This storehouse of knowledge will open up new fields for practical application. Thus, peaceful space exploration offers a variety of near-future practical benefits and an unknown number of other applications which time and continued accumulation of knowledge will bring forth.

The products of military space research cannot really be termed benefits, for mankind benefits little from the invention of new methods of destruction. Military research in space is, however a must. As long as the threat of foreign aggression exists, we must continue to develop new methods of defense, and it appears that the next step in warfare is into space. While the Nation's peaceful space exploration program will provide considerable basic knowledge toward the development of defense in space, military research programs must also be undertaken to develop the specific vehicles and techniques for space warfare. It is not yet clear what forms space warfare will take, but the need for investigating the possibilities is apparent.

There is one final why for space research. The Soviet Union has proved masterful in exploiting its space gains for propaganda purposes. To maintain its international prestige, the United States must match or better its competitor's efforts. The Soviets have taken an early lead in the international space competition, but the race will be a long one. The U.S. has the capacity to lead the world in space exploration, but this capacity must be exploited by a strong and continuing program of research.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE 18TH DISTRICT

By Congressman Walter Rogers

Bureaucracy Blocked

One attempt of bureaucracy to gain more power over the American people was effectively blocked on July 20th. A plan to reorganize the National Labor Relations Board was defeated by a vote of 231 yeas to 179 nays. This was a signal victory in several respects. First, it was a victory against the trend toward centralized government. Secondly, it was a victory against the use of executive powers to indirectly amend statutes. Third, it was a victory against the repeated attempts to vest judicial powers in Civil Service employees. It could also be documented as a victory over procedural complexities and complications which sometimes effectively confuse, whether so designed or not.

In order to vote against the proposed plan, it was necessary for the Member to vote yea. Here is the way it works. Under the Reorganization Act of 1949, the President submits to the Congress a reorganization plan setting forth the organization which he proposes. This plan is received by the Congress. If the Congress does not disapprove the plan within sixty days, it becomes effective. In other words, Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1961, proposing to reorganize the National Labor Relations Board, would have become effective sixty days after May 24, 1961. So, you can see, we had a very narrow escape. The Resolution before the Congress is a Resolution to disapprove the plan submitted by the President. Hence, if you are against the plan, you are for the motion and if you are for the plan, you are against the motion. In other words, in order to vote no, I had to vote yea. Perhaps this complicated procedure will be of some help in answering the age-old questions of when is black white, or why are blackberries red when they are green.

This all results from the fact that the procedures under the Reorganization Act having to do with this type of plan actually reverse the lawmaking process laid down in the Constitution. That is, it permits the Executive Branch of the government to write the law and gives Congress the limited power of veto. Under the Constitution, it was intended that the laws be written by the Congress with the veto power vested in the President.

This is a brief resume of the procedural complications involved. These, however, are minor as compared to the complexities and complications with which the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities of the individual were ensnared and entwined in the substance of Reorganization Plan No. 5. There has been a long, continuous, and strong effort by the boards and bureaus to gain more power. One Member of Congress summed this up by saying that a general never had a big enough army, a preacher never had a big enough congregation, and a bureaucrat never had enough power. This particular reorganization plan was advertised by its proponents as designed for the purpose of streamlining the procedural difficulties and getting quick results for parties having business before the NLRB, and they were sincere in their efforts. But, we must not lose sight of the fact that matters before the NLRB, like matters before other regulatory agencies, involve many more issues than the need for a quick decision. A man who might be hung is not too interested in a quick decision, especially one that could short-cut him out of some of his rights.

In my opinion, the basic strength of this government lies in the separation of powers as provided in the Constitution. That is, the three branches of the government — Legislative, Executive, and Judicial — each intended to be a safeguard against the others. It has been encroachments by one branch of the government into the powers of another which has caused many of our present-day problems. I have specifically in mind a number of actions by the Supreme Court in recent years. If Congress permits the Executive Branch of the government to follow such a practice, there would soon be no need for a Legislative Branch.

Reorganization Plan No. 5 appeared on its face to provide ample review of all proceedings. However, a close examination of the proposal, together with existing law, painted an entirely different picture. Had this proposal been adopted, it would have been possible for a Civil Service employee (not appointed by the President, not confirmed by the Senate, enjoying all of the benefits, rights, and protections in the Civil Service Act — including job protection — not answerable nor responsible to anyone other than the Board under which he was serving) to render a decision (involving the rights and privileges of a great number of people, involving millions of dollars, and affecting the lives of countless individuals) that would not be reviewed by the Board created to make these determinations, and a decision which the courts would be powerless to overturn. This seems to be a rather all-encompassing statement but it is, nevertheless, true.

The vesting of powers should always be weighed on the scales of what can be done by its improper use, rather than what might be done by its proper use.

HOUSE MEMBERS BURN MIDNIGHT OIL

AUSTIN, Tex. — House members burned midnight oil in an effort to get a tax bill to the Senate before the mid-point of the brief 30-day session.

In the long, long sessions and seemingly endless succession of approaches, amendments, substitutes and substitutes for the substitutes, it was often difficult to tell who was winning what. Showdown votes indicated that it is still easier for members to agree on what they don't want than on what they do.

Rejected, at least for the time being, was a package bill recommended by the Revenue and Taxation Committee. Its main money-raiser was a sales tax, with exemptions, on items costing $5 or more. It also included more utilities taxes, natural gas taxes, a transfer of funds from the permanent school fund, a revised franchise tax and a book-keeping transfer.

Also turned down were proposals for a 4 per cent corporate income tax by Rep. Bob Eckhardt of Houston and a 1 per cent general sales tax by Rep. Tom Andrews of Aransas Pass.

Rep. Charles Ballman of Borger, chairman of revenue and taxation, was pushing for a package bill that closely tracked Gov. Price Daniel's recommendations at the beginning of the session. It differed from the committee-written package chiefly in that it included a Pennsylvania-type sales tax, applying only to items listed in the bill.

Despite the House problems, an Aug. 8 finish may still be possible. Senate, generally, is swifter and more nearly of one mind on money matters. It agreed on a tax bill in the regular session in approximately one-third the time spent by the House.

Hardest part is getting agreement on one plan from both House and Senate — and finally — from the governor.

SCHOOL BILLS MOVE

AUSTIN — Tex. — A bill to provide more liberal state aid for sparsely populated school districts has been approved by the House Education Committee.

Rep. Sam F. Collins of Newton is sponsor of the measure which would provide $378,000 to pay for 90 additional teachers in rural areas. Most of the extra teachers would be for Negro schools.

Objectors to the bill said it would perpetuate the problem of having school districts too small to provide a strong school program.

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate Education Committee gave reluctant approval to a more economical teacher pay raise plan than the Hale-Aikin plan it already had approved. Sent to the floor was a bill by Sen. Bruce Reagan of Corpus Christi which would give teachers a $600 a year raise this year, $200 more in 1963 and $200 more in 1965. Hale-Aikin provides for $810 a year more immediately.

SEVEN FEB. PLENTIFUL FOODS LISTED FOR TEXAS

COLLEGE STATION — Cabbage pretty well leads the pack of foods expected to be in plentiful supply in February. The winter cabbage crop is moving in volume from an acreage quite a bit larger than a year ago, reports the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

While cabbage is the feature, six other foods will be available in more-than-normal supply this month. These are dry onions, rice, canned ripe olives, peanuts and peanut products, cranberry products and small white beans.

The February plentifuls can provide color, nutrition, flavor, variety and economy to family meals or special occasions.

These foods have been selected for special promotion this month by the food distribution division of the Agricultural Marketing Service.

Grocery stores, newspaper, radio and TV features will make special efforts to encourage wide use of the plentifuls, in efforts to reduce "burdensome" supplies.

Consumers will find it to their advantage to serve plentiful foods often because lower prices usually accompany abundance.

FARM NEWS

from the County ASC Committee

COTTON AND FEED GRAIN

Your fine cooperation with reporters who are measuring crops is appreciated. We hope to have measurements completed on all farms in the near future. Cotton farmers especially are reminded to point out to the reporter any acreage seeded to cotton but flooded or destroyed by other natural causes. It is important that all seeded cotton be measured for history purposes.

Remember to watch the FINAL DATE on your notice of excess acreage if you intend to destroy the excess and place the farm in compliance. The acreage must be disposed of and the rate of charge deposited at the ASCS office on or before the expiration date as shown on the notice of excess. The charge for measuring the destroyed excess is $4.00 for the farm and $2.00 for each additional plot.

Adjustment credit shall be given only for areas of regular shape with not more than four sides.

ACP

Money is available to carry out any of the approved cost-share practices in Donley County. If your farm or ranch is in need of any of these practices, remember to make application for cost-share before you start the practice.

CONSERVATION RESERVE

Periodic checks of the Conservation Reserve acres will continue to be made. Please check to see that fences are kept up and that no grazing or harvesting is done and also that noxious weeds are controlled.

If you have the permission of the County Committee to break out CR land that expires this year, you may do so. You CANNOT plant a crop for harvest and you CANNOT graze these acres in 1961. You may plant small grain (wheat, oats, barley, or rye) that could be harvested in 1962.

WHEAT

The U. S. Department of Agriculture announced that the national average support price for 1961 crop wheat will be $1.79 per bushel, unchanged from the minimum advance support price used in setting county and terminal support rates announced May 19.
