CONCLUSION

Space exploration will be expensive. Of that there is no question. The fantastic projects contemplated for the next decade, and the even more incredible programs which will follow in later years, will require the most complex equipment imaginable, and complexity is a yard-

A NASA official estimated that his organization's Long-Range Plan will require funding on the order of $12 to $15 billion dollars. The advanced steps beyond 1970 - manned lunar exploration and interplanetary flight - will quite obviously cost even more. At the same time, heavy funding will be required for the military programs. Since the scope of military activity in space is not yet definable, there can be no estimate of costs. Some indication may be found, however, in the fact that the first military prototype program—the hypersonic glidebomber — is expected to cost about a billion dollars.

Whatever the total cost of a continuing program of military and civil space exploration, its need cannot be questioned. The potential benefits to mankind are enormous and the requirement to meet the competition, for reasons of defense and national prestige, cannot be measured in dollars.

The menibers of the space exploration team—the civilian space agency, the military services and the aerospace industry—have the brainpower and the technological know-how to accomplish the current objectives and the nebulous future goals not yet defined. They need behind them an enlightened public, aware of the potential benefit and importance of space research and willing to support it. With such support, the United States need be second to none in space.

Paul Harvey says, there's another message in the sound on the tom-toms other than the obvious one. President Kennedy will run for re-election in 1964 on the campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war" because FDR proved that's potent vote bait.

It's mighty soothing words if true. Mr. Harvey thinks the Berlin crisis has been exaggerated all out of proportion to the specific threat. Berlin is not an acute crisis; it is a chronic one.

A former NATO Commander General Alfred M. Gruenther, calls West Berlin "a gallstone in the Soviet bladder." He says the Berlin situation now is no more serious than any of the several he encountered as NATO chief during the 1950's.

Some think if we were contemplating war with Russia, then nuclear testing would resume immediately. Our accelerated military buildup would be concentrated in modern weapons or mass destruction and annihilation. A foot soldier war against the limitless hordes of Asia, we cannot possibly win. Our masses of marching men is only an easy solution to our unemployment Government by crisis is not new, so they say. Mr. Kennedy first to make use of it, nor will he be the last.

Farmers Favor Wheat Quotas

Texas wheat producers and those in the other 38 commercial wheat producing states voted on Aug. 24 to continue marketing quotas on their 1962 wheat crops. In the nation, 79.4 percent of those voting favored quotas and in Texas, 78.9 percent voted yes, says C. H. Bates, extension farm management specialist. A twothirds majority was needed to did not invent it, he is not the keep marketing quotas in effect. and to make operative the new wheat tabilization program.

For the 10 percent acreage cut, the producer will be paid at the local price support rate for 45 percent of his normal yield. If additional acreage is diverted, payment will be based on 60 percent of the adjusted yield per acre, Bates says.

Farmers can get up to half of their payments when they sign up for the wheat acreage diverted to conservation uses, according to Bates. The balance will be paid after the farm has been checked for compliance.

Bates says that growers who need detailed information on the program should contact the local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committeemen, the ASC office or the county agent. Local meetings will be held in the near future to explain the new program and Bates urges all wheat growers to attend.

In the past year the phrase "draw down pipe" has appeared in farm publications, news articles, and in the language of conservationists. Just what are draw down pipes and what purpose do they serve?

A draw down pipe is usually made of asphalt coated, corrugated metal. If it could be seen it would look like the letter "L" lying on its back, with the shorter part or "riser" sticking vertically through the upstream slope of the dam and the longer part or "barrel" sticking horizontally out of the downstream side. The top of the riser is set two or more feet vertically below the level of the earth spillway. The exact vertical distance will vary according to the height, spillway condition, storage capacity, and drainage area of the dam and the purpose for which the dam is being built.

The purpose of a draw down pipe is much the same as that of

For further realism, this 2,000 pound longhorn vane always faces into the wind, just as did "chunk-floating" rains that hit from Gonzales up the Chisholm

Waterways Designed to

It has been said that waterways are not for the easily discouraged. Possibly this is true. It is definitely true that grassed waterways are not for the landowner who likes gullies or who likes to keep every foot of his land clean even though it is washing away.

A grassed waterway will not solve every gullying or washing problem. To work efficiently it must be used in conjunction with other conservation measures, such used with these measures it will

Waterways are used to carry outside water safely across cultivated fields or as outlets for terraces and diversions. Either way they help to prevent gullies. A well vegetated and maintainad waterway is pleasing to the eye as well as being a soil and land saver, while a gully is an eyesore and a land waster.

Waterways may be vegetated with any adapted perennial grass, such as buffalograss, side oats grama, and switchgrass. In some cases bermuda grass and johnson grass are satisfactory. It is sometimes hard to get vegetation established in a waterway and it may take several years to get a satisfactory cover. This is why it is said that waterways are not for the easily discouraged. Once established, though, waterways are worth all the money, time, and effort expended on them. Interest in waterways has grown in the Donley Soil Conservation District during the past few years. Approximately 20 waterways have been constructed since 1958. Storm clouds of protest boiled up quickly among consumers, Reaction was not so much (23-4c) against the cost of the new tax, but more to the principle, inconvenience and confusion. Natural resistance to any new levy always is evident. And there's certainly nothing "hidden" about a sales tax. Noticeable were strange new surpluses of pennies in pocket and purse. They were bothersome. Arguments also ensued over what is subject to tax, and what isn't.

Although State Comptroller Robert S. Calvert issued bulletin after bulletin explaining what is covered by the tax, it was evident that much time will have to pass before everyone concerned clearly understands the new law.

No one would venture a guess as to how many telephone calls were received by the Comptroller's office during the first week. The multitude of businessmen converging on the Capitol to seek information or lodge complaint gave Comptroller Calvert not a moment's peace.

Meanwhile at the other end of the line - the direct contact point for collection of the extra pennies — clerks, especially those in supermarkets, were equally harried. There had been so little time for them to bone up on the many exemptions and intricacies of the new way of taxing Tex-

He said an automatic processing system soon will be put into service that will quickly spot individuals and business firms failing to file returns, check mathematical accuracy and other data. Center of the tax accounting system will be in Martinsburg, West Virginia, where a master file of business and individual taxpayers will be contained. Returns from district offices will be sent to nine regional centers where data will be magnetictaped to be sent to the computer center for processing.

MANAGEMENT OF RANGE PULLETS DISCUSSED

For all practical purposes, mangaing pullets on the range differs very little from confinement management. A group of pullets that have been well managed in the brooder house should do equally well when turned onto the range.

The first step in transferring birds from the brooder house to the range is to cull the flock for unhealthy or diseased pullets. When culling, care should be taken not to remove a healthy bird vice for patrol purposes, and that looks a little thin and undermen will be equipped with wal- fleshed, because the bird is building her bone structure and this is her normal appearance. By production time, this bird will probably be laying as well as the others. Once the flock has been culled, weather is the deciding factor on when to move the pullets to can be ranged successfully after
