Musical At Methodist Church Sunday Nite

A musical program, "I Wonder," will be presented at the First United Methodist Church at 7 p.m. the evening of Sunday, February 7, by the Youth Choir of the First Baptist Church of Memphis, Texas under the direction of Ed Shubert. The public is invited to attend. "I Wonder," written by Ronald K. Wells, is a story of an atheistic professor with one goal—to destroy the faith of the few Christians in his class who believe in the Bible. He begins his ridicule in solo "God Is Dead" and in the background is the quiet murmur, "I Wonder, I Wonder." As the program progresses the professor challenges the "fairytale" of Genesis. He derides students for bringing Jesus Christ into their arguments and points to technical miracles of today and the chorus answers by calling us to minister as Christ did and they tell in song of active mission programs. When the church is attacked, they sing using again the words of Scripture and blending the text, "If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sin and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." The music builds to a climax in the song, "I believe." The First United Methodist Church extends an invitation to one and all to worship Sunday evening, February 7, at 7 p.m. and hear this wonderful Youth Choir in the presentation of "I Wonder."

Inside The Legislature with

Rep. Tom Christian

The two areas causing the most discussion concerning the current controversy in the Capitol center around:

1. The proposed ethics and financial disclosure bills currently being introduced.

2. The resolution proposed by Rep. Curtis Graves of Houston asking Speaker Gus Mutscher and certain committee chairmen to step down until an investigation can be held into the areas of alleged misconduct.

There is a great deal of support in the House for disclosure, a measure which has been two decades late in coming. The question now revolves around which bill will be acceptable.

Ethics bills have been introduced by Rep. Jim Nugent of Kerrville, Charles Patterson of Round Rock and Maurice Angly of Austin. A simple resolution sponsored by Sonny Jones and Bill Blythe of Harris County has also been read in the House.

Probably gaining the most backing at the moment is a move toward voluntary disclosure that has been signed by fifteen members of the House and Senate (fourteen of whom are Democrats).

This includes a simple form providing a listing of loans obtained, stocks bought and sold, all assets in real property, a standard balance sheet showing assets as of Dec. 31, 1970, and the source and amount of income in the past two calendar years.

This statement is to be signed and filed with the office of the Secretary of State.

The move is gaining support among House members simply because most do not wish to pass judgment prior to hearings on the case at hand.

The Graves resolution is crowding legislators to make a decision before results of the Securities and Exchange Commission investigation are revealed in the Federal District Court in Dallas.

Another point in this matter of disclosure is to decide whether the people want disclosure laws to be applied just to primary state officials. Or do they wish them applied to all persons in positions of public trust from the school system to the courthouse.

Another point to discuss is the difficulty in obtaining information from the so-called public records that are already required to be filed with the Secretary of State.

As it stands now, anyone wishing to check records filed with the Secretary's office, such as campaign expenditures, is required by statute to register his name, address and who he is representing. To copy these records, he must duplicate them by hand unless he wishes to pay $1 per sheet to use a copy machine located in that office. These records may contain anywhere from 20 pages to several hundred in major races. The average citizen does not have the time or money to pursue such an investigation.

The office of the Secretary of State explains that this is a protective measure passed by the Senate to prevent people from copying the lists to sell to potential candidates. They also concede that it prevents most other people from copying the list, which is probably what the Senate had in mind in the first place.

Inquiries concerning legislation should be mailed to:

IRS Answers To Taxpayers Questions

Q—My job requires me to keep in fairly close touch with some of my customers. To do this I must use my own car. Are my car costs deductible if I'm not reimbursed for them?

A—The use of your car on company business is a deductible expense to the extent that you are not reimbursed by your company. Driving back and forth from home to work, however, is a personal expense and not deductible.

Many taxpayers find that the standard mileage rate of 12¢ per mile for the first 15,000 miles and 9¢ a mile thereafter, is a convenient way to figure this deduction. It only requires a reading of your speedometer at the start and end of your business driving. Parking fees and tolls may be added to the mileage costs.

If you prefer, you may deduct the actual expenses of operating your car. Include depreciation, insurance and similar costs but be sure to prorate them between the business and personal use of the car.

Q—For some years I've provided a home for my father. If he moves to a nursing home because of ill health will we still be able to claim him as a dependent?

A—A close relative does not have to be a member of your household to qualify as a dependent. In the situation you describe, as long as the other dependency tests are met you may continue to claim your father as a dependent.

Furthermore, if your father is in a nursing home primarily because of the medical care provided there, the entire cost of his maintenance is considered a medical expense. If personal or family reasons promoted the decision for him to enter the home, only those expenses specifically for medical care will be considered deductible medical expenses.

Q—Can I deduct the pledge I made to my church's building fund drive?

A—No, however, you may deduct the amount you actually

A NEW TWIST — An experimental off-road combat vehicle called TWISTER climbs out of a lake in California after a swimming test. Propelled by water-jets when in water, the two-body, eight-wheel vehicle can swim six miles per hour. Each TWISTER body has its own engine. During this exit from the water, the rear body is pushing with water-jets while the front wheels grab the ground for traction. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. developed the vehicle and the Army Tank-Automotive Command at Warren, Mich., is testing the TWISTER for possible military use.

paid this year on your pledge as a charitable contribution. That part of your pledge which is paid in succeeding years may be deducted when paid.

Q—How does a farmer handle conservation expenses for tax purposes?

A—You may deduct some of these costs but must capitalize others. The cost of structures or facilities subject to depreciation must be capitalized with the costs recovered through annual depreciation allowances. This covers such items as water wells, pipes, tiles and concrete dams.

You may elect to deduct, within certain limitations, the costs of drainage ditches, diversion channels, earthen dams and ponds along with certain other expenditures. If you deduct these expenses you must do it the first tax year you have such expenses.

Details are contained in Publication 225, Farmers Tax Guide. It's available free from your County Agent or by sending a post card to your IRS District office.

"Physician assistants" will be hired for VA hospital and clinical work to allow doctors to make more efficient use of their time.

Y-KNOT TWIRLERS

The Y-Knot Twirlers met for their regular dance Friday evening, January 29, with Audrey Brown calling, and by popular demand, one tip was called by L. L. Wallace.

We were happy to have Alton Knox, one of the new students, bring his family to visit with us. If the local dancers were a little quiet this week, it could have been because some had been dancing four nights this past week trying to help the two classes combine. Their efforts were rewarded.

The students are doing a good job and now both classes will meet Tuesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m. Come see their progress or visit our regular dances on Friday.

Turkey Vulture An Exercise in Tolerance

Despite a multitude of traits which man might find loathsome in the turkey vulture, biologists tell us this scavenger earns, if not our respect, at least our tolerance.

As unappealing as the vulture may seem, he is preferable from a health point of view to the mess on which he feeds.

The ecosystem, it seems, is blind to what we might consider the vulture's faults. Whatever works is fine, and the vulture performs his function of cleaning up nature's leavings with both efficiency and gusto.

His digestive system is geared to destroy, and therefore keep from spreading bacteria which would make other creatures deathly ill, and it has been suggested the vulture might have within its digestive system a secret serum that could cure many of the infectious maladies of man.

Turkey vultures are classic examples of natural adaptation. Their naked heads are free of feathers so the purifying rays of the sun can kill bacteria clinging there.

As further protection against infection, the turkey vulture's excrement has an antiseptic quality, and his inability to expel it past his legs aids in killing bacteria he might harbor there.

Being comparatively weak birds whose hooked beaks lack even the strength to tear flesh from a freshly dead animal, turkey vultures must resort to other means of defense. When frightened away from a carcass, they disgorge the contents of their stomachs to lighten their load so altitude can be gained rapidly.

They also regurgitate food to feed their young, and the young soon pick up this trick to repulse. During a 45-day nesting period the male turkey vulture sits in attendance with the hatching female.

Two or three blotched eggs laid in a rotten log, a stump or on a dark ledge mark the beginning of yet another generation of scavengers.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cross and Annette visited in Amarillo Sunday with Mrs. Cross' brother, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Lemons and Donald. They all attended services at the Central Church of Christ.

POW Plight Concerns Easter Seal Director

Concern for other people is Gilbert Muddell, Jr.'s job. Mr. Muddell is West Texas area Director for the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults, and recently he has become concerned with the plight of Prisoners of War.

At the present time there are over one hundred thousand men missing in action who may be dead or prisoners of war. Their actual plight is unknown to the U. S. Government or families.

A campaign is underway to locate ex-prisoners of war and with them work toward the release of prisoners in Vietnam. An ex-prisoner of war himself, Muddell knows of existing conditions. He has worked with charitable organizations for the past 15 years and for the past two and a half years with the State Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas. In this work he travels 87 Texas Counties.

Though traveling throughout this number of counties, Muddell finds it hard to locate ex-prisoners of war. Any former prisoner-of-war wishing to contact Gilbert Muddell may write to him at 1811 Lawson Lane in Amarillo, Texas 79106.

Any physically handicapped person in Donley county may apply to Mr. Wesley Knorpp. He and the Easter Seal Society will make every effort to supply the need.

It is hoped that all former prisoners of war will contact Mr. Muddell.

Cotton Specialist Makes Suggestions For Weed Control

Next year's cotton yields can be influenced by soil management and weed control practices during the upcoming winter months. Timely land preparation, says Fred C. Elliott, Extension cotton specialist, is the first step for a successful weed control program.

Uncontrolled winter weeds, he adds, are moisture and plant food robbers, both vital to top production. In addition to regular land preparation, Elliott lists as major weed control methods those that can be carried out with machinery or through the use of chemicals.

The mechanical methods include bedding and rebedding, bed shaping, Roll N' Cultivator, row disk, hippin' ridger, do-all and in West Texas the bed knifing tool does an excellent job.

Elliott says cotton producers have a wide choice of materials available for chemical weed control. Two are soil incorporated herbicides, Planavin and Treflan. Many growers, he adds, look with considerable favor on these materials and they can be applied beginning in late November or in December in South Texas. A popular method of application is with the roto-tiller or roto-vaerator. They may also be incorporated into the soil by broadcast disking with the tandem disks. These herbicides keep winter weeds under control if conditions are normal until planting time.

Under high moisture conditions, he adds, it is often necessary to treat again just before planting for the control of early Johnsongrass. DSMA alone or in combination with a material such as Karmek is excellent.

For those who do not wish to use soil incorporated herbicides, mechanical methods are recommended.

Elliott offers these cautions if fall applied incorporated herbicides are used. If lower amounts of water are used, calibrations are very important. Application equipment should be checked daily for nozzle wear and accuracy of pressure gauges. Excellent tools for applying Planavin and Treflan on a band basis are the roto-tiller incorporator used in combination with a bed shaper, thus doing two jobs at the same time.

Elliott notes that local county agricultural agents have available a revised publication on weed control in cotton and also fact sheets on other subjects dealing with cotton which growers should find valuable.

Youth Need Guidance When Given A Gun

Youngsters sporting new guns after Christmas time need more instruction than just how to load and fire them.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials remind Texans that even the smallest single-shot .22 can be a deadly weapon, so parents who give firearms to youngsters should be sure they are familiar with safe gun handling.

A formal firearms handling course would be appropriate; where this is not possible, some individual instruction from an experienced shooter might fill the bill.

Also, the younger fry shouldn't be allowed to use guns except when accompanied by a responsible adult. Guns and ammunition should be locked up when not in use.

Another reminder to weekend plinkers of all ages: only four species of birds remain on the "unprotected" list. They are the English sparrow, raven, starling and crow.

A new gun can be a source of pride and continuing pleasure for the young sportsman if he tempers its use with an awareness for gun safety.

Clothes For Children That Teach

Clothes that teach as well as adorn have been introduced for boys and girls, announces Joanne Thurber, Extension clothing consumer education specialist at Texas A&M University.

The clothes include word-letter association groups. Denim pants sets are labeled with the letter "D" and a picture of a dog. Other outfits have letter appliques that teach the alphabet. The letters are upside down so the child can see them.

Some of the garments in the group have red and green "stop" and "go" signals to help teach fundamentals of traffic safety. The clothes also have a manipulation group, with big zippers, buttons, buckles and snaps to help teach the child how to dress himself.

Miss Thurber reminds that it is important to recognize the time when a child is ready to dress himself. His spontaneous interest will be evident when he is ready, but if he is not given the opportunity, that interest will quickly be stifled.

Between 15 and 18 months, the average child begins to show a real interest in putting on his clothing. But interest may vary. One day he may insist upon putting on his own shirt, while the next day he may refuse to try.

By the age of three, a child should be able to fasten different types of garment closures, provided they are not too small or are not located in hard-to-reach places. A child gets much operation of these fasteners, he increases his feelings of independence and self-sufficiency.

An important fact to consider, Miss Thurber suggests, is that clothes for a young child should fit his personal needs and interests — not his parents' likes or dislikes. In addition, his clothes should be the correct size, be styled for freedom of action, be sturdy, be suited to the weather and be appropriate for self-dressing.

Increase Agriculture Income In Texas

A program to increase Texas agricultural income by more than a billion dollars by 1976 was announced by Dr. John E. Hutchins, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, in January of 1970.

This goal calls for $3.76 billion in total cash receipts by the end of the 1976 crop year, not including government payments; and was determined from projections by Extension specialists and individuals in the agricultural industry. A committee of agricultural economists with the Extension Service studied past production records and made projections for 1976 based on current trends and expected improvements in technology and marketing.

Projections on an individual county basis were made by program building committees, made up of businessmen and producers. The expectations were then organized along county, Extension district and economic area lines to give producers across the state "something to shoot for."

In addition, annual goals were determined for the various agricultural commodity groups to allow a yearly measure of the program's success.

Texas presently accounts for about five percent of the total national agricultural cash receipts. But to achieve the goal of "3.76 in '76", the state must claim almost ten percent of the projected national increase in the coming years. Extension specialists and county agricultural agents are scheduling meetings with producers throughout the state to help them with new advancements in technology and marketing in their particular areas.

Veterans who plan to begin GI Bill enrollment in high school or college should contact their nearest VA office immediately for assistance.

Plan Now For 1971 Pastures

With rising land costs and favorable cattle prices, beef cattle producers should plan to improve pastures during 1971, says Neal Pratt, Extension agronomist.

Pasture improvement signifies many activities to different individuals, but can be explained as any method or combination of methods to improve the productivity and profitability of an acre of pasture.

Pasture improvement starts with a soil sample to determine fertilizer and nutrients needed to grow more forage. Then applying the nutrients when forage species start to grow is essential, says the agronomist.

Pasture improvement also includes weed control. Chemical weed control usually is the most economical and longer lasting, although mowing can be beneficial in removing matured grass which cattle have refused to graze.

Pasture improvement may also include establishing new species of grasses and legumes. Many high-producing species are available for use in Texas and should be used when establishing new pastures, says Pratt. Performance of certain species in a specific county can be furnished by the county agricultural agent, he notes.

Using efficient, productive livestock is also essential in conjunction with pasture improvement. When a landowner invests in better species, weed control, fertilization, and other aspects of pasture improvement, this investment should be utilized by efficient livestock for maximum profits. Keeping accurate records of calving percentages, weaning weights, and calving dates are essential for making accurate management decisions.

Plan now to increase profits through pasture improvement during 1971, advises Pratt.
