BACKIN' UP

Editor Haynes of the Miami Chief last week enthused to the extent of an article on keeping the town clean. Being a mere man, he forgot his metes and bounds and is this week backin' up with an explanation that his cleanup article was not intended to apply to, neither did he intend to imply by deed or word of mouth or consciously or unconsciously refer to or even intimate that the said article had any reference to the postoffice building presided over by a lady postmaster. If that explanation squares you, you've gotten out easily brother.

The writer has for some time referred to the trails up the streets on the south side as "scenic highways" because of their similarity to some mountain roads where one almost turns over while driving at a slow speed. It makes no difference what one may think. Some one else may like just what you object to, and in that case it is bad form to howl about it. All of which comes under the head of missionary work, the least appreciated and most abused of any vocation or avocation in existence.

BE A BIG BROTHER

With our schools opening September 4th, only a short time remains for those who are to work their way thru school to make their arrangements. Many young people over the county are sadly disappointed in the failure of Donley county to put over the county-wide idea and save them tuition. As matters now exist, many of these young people—both boys and girls—wish to make arrangements to work their way through school since they will be unable to pay tuition, board and other incidental expenses.

Some of these young people have already been in town to see just what arrangements they might make personally. This is an excellent opportunity for the Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies to do some good deeds. Some of our business men have played the part of "big brother" to a worthy boy or more for the past several years. Some will voluntarily do the same thing again this term, but we need more concerted action and system about the matter.

THE WOMAN PAYS

Recently an old mother visited the Donley county jail to see a son who had gone wrong thru his association with bad company. The sheriff had repeatedly warned the young man in the past that his pace would finally land him behind the bars. The youth spurned the kindly advice of an officer, he disregarded the advice and training of good parents.

Today that young man is held in jail with a felony charge against him. Yes, the mother visited him, prayed and cried to her Maker that she be given strength to bear her burden of sorrow. Prayed that the wayward son might see the light and reform.

The reward of that praying mother and sacrificing father is paid them in humility, shame and disgrace. Her son, no matter where he may be, she continues to fight the temptations of life and pray. Picture if you can the bowed head of a mother aged and gray praying behind prison bars fighting to the last ditch with the only weapons known to pure womanhood—prayer and tears. The woman pays, and pays, and pays.

ENTHUSIASM

The Bonham News in their issue of August 6th carried a wonderful amount of news. A semi-weekly, six pages and seven columns to the page. In addition to the local news, much general news is given. Fair enough.

In looking through the paper one is surprised to find three advertisements. Just two banks and an interurban. Possibly the two banks is all that remains of what was a thrifty town of some four thousand people years ago when the writer visited there.

Should this be the case, the public is fortunate in having an interurban on which to leave. Possibly the electric road has been maintained principally by the general exodus of a disgusted population.

In looking over the paper scanning down the first column on the front at the conclusion of an article giving a report on the cotton situation, we find the following: "Come to Bonham to do your trading where stocks of merchandise are large, where there is a large variety of merchandise to select from and where your money will buy the most."

Any newspaper man who could make an announcement like that backed only by three "ads" of encouragement, has the grit to "sass" his mother-in-law, charge hell with a bucket of water or most anything else requiring super-human effort.

If the merchants have the goods, they will likely keep them, for the present day buying public does most of its window shopping thru the newspaper. If the storekeeper (merchants alone advertise) expects to sit down and wait for the public to hunt them up and search their shelves to find what they wish to purchase, he might as well hit the interurban because the merchants of the nearby towns are sure to get his goat.

Most any newspaper writer's enthusiasm is measured in terms of encouragement received from his home people. Least of all the merchants of Bonham should back their newspaper. They should advertise because it would mean money to do so. The Bonham News exists as a business institution constantly boosting for Bonham and her trade territory. The paper does not expect and will not accept business based on a charitable donation. It exists as a means of bringing the buyer and seller together—nothing else.

TRADE TRIPS

If the money spent on Chamber of Commerce trade trips in west Texas during the past five years had been spent for dairy cows, chickens, seed or the introduction of new fruit varieties, we would be infinitely better off.

Trade trips were first designed to "show off" a town by exhibiting some of the more leisurely inhabitants. As one of our local business men remarked recently, "we don't need anything better to 'show off' our town than a good market." He's dead right. A clean town and a good market for agricultural, dairy and poultry products will advertise it quicker than anything. Also don't forget to be neighborly with all the folks on all occasions.

Farmers Become Entangled In a Mess Of Red Tape Complying With Law

That the new gas law designed to assist in road construction is a good one goes without question. At the same time the lawmakers did not wish to force the airplanes and tractor users to help pay a road tax on gasoline and provided for a refund.

It is this refund that is causing some of them to sit up nights to figure out just when they will be reimbursed for the extra amount charged them at the time of buying the gas.

Take the case of a farmer buying gas for a tractor. He pays the same as the automobile owner does when he buys the gas at the filling station, with the state telling him he eventually may get back his four cents.

He fills out a long form at the time the gas is bought, giving amount, price, purpose, and so forth. Before the 25th of the next month, the farmer reports to the state comptroller the amount of gas he bought last month, and asking for his refund.

The comptroller mails the farmer an affidavit-account form, with the instructions that it be filled out in detail and sworn to before a notary public. The farmer then files this second report, attaching a $1 bill as a filing fee. Incidentally this fee must be paid every time a claim is presented.

Does the farmer get his money then? Maybe.

The comptroller advises him that his claim will be investigated, and if it is regular, and the fellow is entitled to anything, the refund will come down a line of red tape some time in the future.

A. M. King, for many years pharmacist for the Stocking drug store, is taking a well deserved vacation in New Mexico making the trip over the state in company with relatives.

J. F. Waldron, one of the county's best farmers was in from the Chamberlain community the last of the week and stated that they have had enough rain to cause the moisture to meet.

Mrs. Lester L. Amburn and daughter, little Miss Peggy Rose, returned to their home at Hollis Wednesday accompanied by the lady's brother, Jack B. Jones who returned here next day.

Temple of Truth
By the Apostle

The old lady who used to stay at home because she had nothing to wear, now has a daughter who would stay at home rather than wear anything when she went out.

California recently passed a law forbidding cafe men from compelling their waitresses to carry a tray upstairs weighing more than ten pounds, or on level floor of over fifty pounds. All of which suggests some of the snaps girls might expect to find in that wonderful country should they become broke.

In order to ingratiate himself into the good graces of a certain good-looking young lady, Jack Jones has been reading up on psycho-analysis, telepathy, the Einstein theory of what not and a dozen other things with little encouragement. Perhaps some of his friends could suggest something he has overlooked.

The Donley county corn crop is about as flourishing as the Amarillo Methodist college, and with more wasted effort.

If Ring Lardner is a humorist, or McIntyre a columnist, then I'm a dinosaur with wings.

Prohibition has taught us one thing. We may not eat just any old thing, but most of us will drink it.

John Goldston was in boasting about two big rains within three days and stated that he planted beans that morning and stuck his hoe up at the end of the row when he went to dinner. When he returned, all the crop was up bearing and three pods sticking on his hoe handle which was reasonably good for poor land and an hour's growth.

H. C. Kerbow had never had occasion to observe beans closely, but modestly recalled to mind that back in Georgia years ago, after missing a herd of hogs for some days, finally located them in the punkins on the creek bottom, all on the inside. On peeping inside, he saw sows with pigs large as shoats that had never seen the sun.

W. P. Cagle, who hails from old Jack, but never admits it, remembers planting cucumbers in his garden down in Keechi valley. Aware of the danger of becoming entangled in the vines, one was forced to stick the seed in the ground and run. Our friend followed his better judgment, but when he reached the old rail fence the crack would not admit his crawling thru. When he reached back to find out the trouble, he discovered a cucumber in his hip pocket larger than his fist.

G. A. Anderson, while in a reminiscent mood this week, recalled when he lived down in the black mud belt where it rained until his crops were ruined. He was forced to resort to bees which he judiciously crossed with lightning bugs forcing them to work day and night. The bees were kept alive on "jackow". On being questioned further, our industrious informer explained that "jackow" was a powerful stimulant with a powerful kick milked from cows that were crossed up with mules.

All was going along smoothly until Cyclone Davis and Stump Ashby started the prohibition issue which forced G. A. to come west and give up the venture. It was found that the honey produced had a wonderful wallop and the dissipated expression on the faces of the consumers was something awful.

Mose, who got put in jail, found his friend Sam in the next cell. "How long you in jail fo", Mose?" said Sam. "Two weeks," replied Mose. "What am de cha'ge?" "No cha'ge; everything am free." "Ah mean what has you did?" "Done shot my wife." "Yo'all killed yo' wife and only got two weeks, while I got six months for stealin' a chicken?" "Dat's all—den I gits hung."

West Texas Offers Field For Industries

THERE are marked evidences that a turning point is at hand in the distribution of population, that congestion in large centers of population has accomplished all the benefits possible, and further congestion will be harmful rather than helpful.

—While the so-called "drift to the cities" has been going on, things have been happening in the country, too, chief among which are the wide-spread distribution of electric power and the development of fast freight facilities.

—And so, as the disadvantages of metropolitan congestion now begin to reveal themselves, the solution is rapidly at hand in the smaller centers of population—a renewed industrial development of smaller cities and towns seems to be inevitable.

—This is especially true in West Texas. Our cities and towns have every advantage to offer industries looking for new locations—cheaper land, lower taxes, shipping facilities less crowded and ABUNDANT, ECONOMICAL ELECTRIC POWER.

—With 70,000 available horsepower of electricity, its three big generating stations and fifteen auxiliary plants, the West Texas Utilities Company insures uninterrupted service, 24 hours a day and 365 days a year.

We find several smiling faces on the street this cool Thursday morning. The rain was only a light shower in the vicinity of Hedley, but the rain was very general other places, and we hope to get all we need for our crops in a few days. However the coolness of the air will keep the crops from burning so badly.

Gladys Ewen, the cashier of the West Texas Utilities Company went over to Clarendon Wednesday evening to attend a picnic with the employees of the West Texas Utilities. About six o'clock twenty two left for the Country club. On arriving there we all had a nice swim then it was time to eat, and on account of the rain we drove back to the office in town and had a real feed of sandwiches, potato chips, pickles, soda water. Then came the real treat of ice cold water melons and canteloupes. Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Nored were wonderful entertainers, and we hope this will be repeated real soon.

The guests were all seated when the bride-to-be was brought to the rain bow, and was told to find the pot of gold. When the pot was found it was filled with many beautiful and useful gifts. Two cupid's found their way to every one giving out their heart pierced with an arrow. Dainty refreshments of cake and sherbert were served. Dainty little bouquets of flowers were given out which contained a wish to the bride-to-be, they were all read. The afternoon was very pleasantly spent and the guests went away leaving the bride-to-be their congratulations.

The rain that fell Thursday and Friday nights was a welcome to every one that had the good luck to get any. It has rained all 'round us maybe we will get all we need in a few days. It might be a good idea for some one to do as Tack did in Amarillo. I don't think it would be very much trouble to find the snakes, if we had some boys that did not mind to sit out in the hot sun and see that the snakes did not turn over until the sun went down. I don't know if that brought the rain, any way they have had all the rain they need in Amarillo. If it did not bring rain there would be nothing lost but ten snakes.

George Robert Lowe

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lowe of this city departed this life August 7th at the age of eight years, eight months and twenty-one days. The happy little fellow who galloped his pony round to see his playmates waiving goodbye to his parents as he mounted his trusty steed, is today in the angel world, and those parents are sad and the playmates gather and discuss the happy associations with little George in hushed tones.

And yet, those parents are thankful to an all-wise Providence for the happy association and the sweet remembrance of their little one even for the short period. Taken away in life's early morning just as the rays of hope unfolded and parents planned a beautiful, useful future for him whom they devoutly worshiped and loved more than life, today through the mists of the future they, like thousands of others, see the Star of Hope and the guiding hand of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me", take new courage in this hour of anguish and kneel at the foot of the Cross and find pleasure in doing the Master's will. They, too, shall some sweet day again clasp to their bosom the precious little one where there will be no more parting—no more sadness.

The little toys touched by his hand become today as a sacred shrine. Like Little Boy Blue, they await the return of their little master. Those parents today have the consolation of having made life pleasant for the little one entrusted to their care. Today they may recount their deeds of kindness, the care with which they guided little feet in the path of righteousness and feel that they have an increased interest in that "Home not made with hands."

To those who grieve, whose hearts are torn, and who find it hard to again take up the thread of life, we extend our sincerest sympathy. No death in Clarendon occasioned more genuine sincere sadness than that of little George. There is a vacancy in the home and an aching void in the hearts of his loved ones, and the many friends of these good people mourn with them in their great loss.

The Editor.

Bryan-Miller Company Second Anniversary Showing Of Complete Fall Line

The Bryan-Miller company of which Allan Bryan and Clarence Miller are the principal stockholders and active managers, announce Saturday the 17th as their second anniversary. Both men had several years of experience in the business world before entering this particular field, both were well known and stood high in the estimation of the public both for honesty and ability.

As a natural consequence of these advantages, the business has steadily grown from the opening day two years ago until they now number their customers from a large trade territory.

In speaking of the anniversary recently, Mr. Bryan stated that it was the opinion of the firm that the public would appreciate a full line of merchandise at a fair price more than a special program by way of celebration of the event.

New stocks are arriving daily and the showing is equal to any gent's furnishing or haberdashery store in the Panhandle. No items have been overlooked and there is quality behind every article offered, the owners being satisfied that quality is the first demand of the public. The Bryan-Miller company is a distinct asset to Clarendon and this trade territory and is to be congratulated for the wonderful success achieved in the short space of two years.

That $5 Bargain Page

Many firms spend large sums collecting names. The firms advertising on the special page ad in this issue offer $5.00 for the name of any person, payment to be made when the sale is closed. Our readers have all to win and nothing to lose by this novel method. As a matter of fact it is the most liberal offer the firms of any town have made in the Panhandle.

This places the expense money among the friends of the customers where it belongs and where it will build good will. There is no publicity in connection with this plan. No one will know who handed in their name unless you tell them. The idea is to get your list in before some one else beats you to it for the person handing in a name first, has preference over any others who might hand in the same name. This offer closes September 10th, 1929.

CAPITAL WEEKLY PRESS

Vann M. Kennedy
Uncomfortable is that wide section of the body politic that rages against the increasing prominence of commissions and bureaus in our legislature and administrative branches of government. For now we have four commissions, created by the 41st Legislature, at work—wisely, extravagantly, unnecessarily, happily etc.—depending on your humor.

Pen Commission
Most important is the penitentiary relocation commission composed of 18 members, including the members of the State Prison Board and nine members of the Legislature. The functions of this commission are to make recommendations only. They will make inspections of possible sites for the relocation and concentration of the present far-flung prison farms.

Fees, Boundaries
Two other commissions were created to settle boundary disputes between Texas and Oklahoma and Texas and New Mexico. The Texas-Oklahoma matter has been long argued. It has involved the establishment of the 100th Meridian. A survey ordered by the United States Supreme Court gave Texas nearly 30,000 acres claimed by Oklahoma on the East Panhandle line. However, the Boundary Commissioner reported last week that Texas would lose 1,800 acres in a strip near Beaver, Texas.

Car Registrations
That Texas is enjoying a wave of prosperity and growth is evidenced by the large increase in automobile license registrations. Last week there were 4,996 passenger cars registered.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Murrell and children, who moved from here to Wichita Falls, are now residents of Colorado Springs. The J. J. Taylor family also reside there to which place they moved recently for the benefit of the health of Mrs. G. D. Shanks, a daughter of Mr. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Hallmark and children are receiving the congratulations of their friends over the arrival of a daughter Thursday, the 8th.

a maximum of $10,000, a powerful lobby of county officers prevailing against the measure.

Money Vetoes
Governor Moody will have completed slashing of appropriation bills this week. It is his announced intention of eliminating $2,000,000 from the money bills passed by the Third Called Session of the 41st Legislature. At midnight Friday those items not vetoed will become effective, with or without the Governor's signature.

There is much speculation as to which money items will receive the most pruning. Friends of the educational appropriation measures are uneasy. Department heads are in the dark.

Amendments Lose
Even the most optimistic have conceded the defeat of both Constitutional amendment proposals. One, to increase the membership of the Supreme Court from three to nine members, and the other to raise the Governor's salary from $4,000 to $10,000.

W. A. Keeling, former attorney-general, chairman of the State Bar Association, which sponsored the court amendment proposal, has decided from an unofficial canvass that there is no hope of a favorable majority.

Less than ten per cent of the qualified voters participated in the election, according to Keeling. The official canvass of the election will not be made until August 26. Disappointment was rife among the advocates. Chief Justice C. M. Cureton of the Supreme Court was deeply disappointed in the failure of the court reform proposal.

Undaunted, the backers of the proposals will probably seek to have the amendments resubmitted by the Fourth Called Session of the 41st Legislature, which is scheduled to meet next January to consider penitentiary legislation.

Road Contracts
Road contracts aggregating $3,305,369.56 were let last week in a two-day meeting of the State Highway Commission. Nineteen counties shared in the awarded contracts, which were both for maintenance and highway construction. An item of $400,000 was set aside by the Commission to apply to a fund for the construction of inter-state bridges between Oklahoma and Texas.

The Commission will not meet again until September 17. The counties receiving state aid were: Tarrant, Fort Bend, Karnes, Ellis, Dallas, Harris, Montgomery, Wharton, Grayson, Limestone, Burnet, Anderson, Palo Pinto, Henderson, Kinney, Brazoria, Cass, Rusk, and Hudspeth.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Murrell and children, who moved from here to Wichita Falls, are now residents of Colorado Springs. The J. J. Taylor family also reside there to which place they moved recently for the benefit of the health of Mrs. G. D. Shanks, a daughter of Mr. Taylor.

years to bring about prohibition, in order to protect their homes and save their husbands and sons from drunkard's graves, and that the earnings might feed and clothe the family instead of being spent to obtain the poisonous stuff with which men debauch themselves and bring their families to want and woe? Now that the prayers of women have been answered, insofar that prohibition has become a law, they will not stop there, but will continue to pray and fight to help sustain the law and enforce it.

Mr. Hearst, you, being the editor of so many publications, are in a position to render the people of your country great service if you will use your influence for good and encourage the enforcement of the laws instead of encouraging a disregard for them. If you will not advocate the enforcement of the laws, please do not hinder them by decrying them through the press. You can never annul the Eighteenth Amendment, nor even modify it. It is here to stay and even the devils in hell can not annul or destroy it nor break its moral effects.

Before starting out for the hunting trips you have always been accustomed to in your home county, read up on the new laws. There have been a number of changes and especially read the law applying to shooting along highways.

Plover shooting is forbidden for years to come by the federal laws. If you should take a notion to shoot at a plover, turn the gun on your self for the penalty is no worse—in fact it runs into the hundreds.

WHAT IS YOUR REASON?

Robert Quillen, the Arkansas philosopher who contributes some very readable articles on various subjects to a newspaper syndicate, today assays the task of explaining the general lax attendance of the people at church services—members of churches as well as non members.

While he does not mention it, one of the evidences of a greatly changed condition in this country is that now the secular newspaper think it worth while to devote much of their space to the use of those who furnish news concerning religious matters, or who discuss religious conditions, whereas fifty years ago the subject of religion was taboo in most newspaper offices. Now even the editors may express themselves freely on religious matters without giving offense, and may even dare give their views on controverted matters, provided they do so in a spirit of fairness. There are few newspapers now which do not offer an opportunity for those interested to discuss the needs, the failures, the successes, the faults or the excellencies of the church as the agency through which Christ is working for the good of mankind.

Mr. Quillen takes advantage of the opportunity thus offered to give his views on the much-discussed question of why regular attendance at church service has declined. Expressed in a few words his conclusion is that the people do not hear the gospel preached because the ministers have ceased to preach old-time religion. Those who do preach it, he says, proclaim it without logic, or eloquence, or sincerity sufficient to carry conviction. In his opinion neither the automobile, the picture show, the various forms of amusement nor the multiplied attractions offered men and women in their leisure hours, the press or modern business nor the changed conditions of living explain the empty pulpits on Sunday. He lays the blame at the door of the ministers, who fail to preach "the old-time religion."

Like most others who have expressed a similar view, Mr. Quillen fails to tell us what he means by "the old-time religion." He leaves each man to decide for himself whether he means the religion preached when he was a boy, or when the Pilgrim Fathers came to America in order that they might preach as they willed, or the religion preached by Peter at Pentecost, or Paul at Corinth. It is too indefinite to talk about the old-time religion and not definite as to what the old-time religion was or is.

Mr. Quillen is right in believing that there are ministers who do not feed their flocks as they should be fed; but so there were ministers in the days of the apostles. There are ministers who seek to entertain rather than nourish their audiences; but so have there always been. There are ministers who preach moral and social ethics rather than spiritual living but so there were in the days gone by. On the other hand, if Paul determined to preach nothing but Christ crucified, so there are thousands of earnest, sincere, eloquent, learned ministers who preach from week to week the riches of love of Christ and the blessedness of those who accept His leadership and follow in His footsteps. Often it is that the ministers who preach nearest like the fathers of generations gone by gets the least hearing. The "old-time religion" hasn't any more appeal than the new religion to men and women who are not interested in any.—Bonham News.

NINE TABLETS MADE ME A NEW MAN

I'VE SUFFERED FOR TEN YEARS BUT ORGATONE RELIEVED ME

"One day my sister-in-law left me nine Orgatone Tablets, and insisted that I take them, because I had been feeling so badly, but thought that all patent medicines were alike and refused to take them. Finally I decided to give them a trial and they have given me wonderful results," said Richard Ray Gots, of 2400 N. W. 5th St. Amarillo, Texas.

"I had my wife stop at the drug store and get me a full bottle of Orgatone and I'm going to get more. I was always bothered with stomach trouble, and when I ate, would be in misery for several hours afterward, gas would form on my stomach. I had heartburn, and was nervous and worn out all the time. I was in a very general run down condition. I was constipated and took strong laxatives most all the time.

"Since taking those few tablets they have given me more direct relief than all the medicine put together. I have taken in my ten years of suffering. Orgatone has helped me so much. I feel like shouting it from the house tops. I am a new man entirely. Food does not sour on my stomach anymore. I sleep and rest fine every night. In fact, I am just in fine condition. In spite of all my troubles Orgatone has certainly my endorsement. Yes, Sir, when nine tablets can make a man feel as good as I do, after so many years of suffering, I could not say enough for what it has done for me. It is indeed a very meritorious medicine."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Clarendon at the Stockings Drug Store.

Customer: "I want a pair of spec-rimmed hornicles—I mean sporn-rimmed hornicles—confound I mean heck-rimmed spornacles."

CHAPTER VIII

"WOUL'D better quit," said the Prodigal. It was the evening of my mishap, and he had arrived unexpectedly from town. "It just fits in with my plans. I've got Jim to come in, too. I've realized on that stuff I thought, made over three thousand clear profit, and with it I've made a dicker for a property on the beach above Bonanza. Gold hill they call it. I've a notion it's all right. Anyway we'll annex it in due season. You and Jim will have a quarter share each for your work, while I'll have an extra quarter for the capital I put in. Is it a go?"

I said it was. Next day found us all three surveying our claim. The first thing to do was to build a cabin. Right away we began to level off the ground. The work was pleasant, and conducted in such friendship that the time passed most happily. Indeed, my only worry was about Berna. I scowled myself into the belief that she was all right, but thank God, every moment was bringing her nearer to me.

We had hauled the logs for the cabin, and the foundation was laid. Every day saw our future home nearer completion.

One evening I spied the saturnine Ribwood climbing down the hill to our tent. He hailed me: "Say, we want a night watchman up at the claim to go on four hours a night at a dollar an hour. You see, there's been a lot of sluice-box robberies lately, and we're scared for our clean-up. There's four hours every night the place is deserted, and Hoofman proposed we should get you to keep watch."

"Yes," I said; "I'll run up every evening if the others don't object."

They did not; so the next night, and for about a dozen after that, I spent the darkest hours watching on the claim where previously I had worked.

It was the dimmest and most uncertain hour of the four, and I was sitting at my post of guard. As the night was chilly, I had brought along an old gray blanket similar in color to the mound of pay dirt. There had been quite a cavity dug in the dump during the day, and into this I crawled and wrapped myself in my blanket. From my position I could see the string of boxes containing the rifles. By my side lay a loaded shotgun.

"If the swine come," Ribwood had said, "let him have a clean-up of lead instead of gold."

Lying there I got to thinking of the robberies. They were remarkable. All had been done by an expert. Each time the robber had cleaned up from two to three thousand dollars, and all within the past month. There was some mysterious musterook in our midst, one who operated swiftly and surely, and left absolutely no clew of his identity.

I was quiet for a while, watching dreamily the dark shadows of the dusk.

Hist! What was that? Surely the bushes were moving over there by the hillside. I strained my eyes. I was right; they were.

I watched and waited. A man was parting the bushes. Cautiously, crawling like a snake, he worked his way to the sluice-box. None but a keen watcher could have seen him. Again and again he paused, peering around, listening intently. Very carefully, with my eyes fixed on him, I lifted the gun to my shoulder. I had him covered.

I waited. Somehow I was loath to shoot. My nerves were a-quiver.

Proof, more proof, I said. I saw him working busily, lying flat alongside the boxes. How crafty, how skillful he was! He was disconnecting the boxes. He would let the water run to the ground; then, there in the exposed ruffles, would be the harvest. Would I shoot now . . . now . . . now . . .

Then, in the midnight hush, my gun blazed forth. With one scream the man tumbled down, carrying along with him the disconnected ground in a deluge. I must capture him. There he lay in the pouring stream. . . . Now I had him.

In that torrent of icy water I grappled with my man. Over and over we rolled. He tried to gouge me. He was small, but oh, so strong! He held down his face. Fiercely I wrenched it up to the light. Heavens! It was the Worm.

I gave a cry of surprise, and my clutch on him must have weakened. For at that moment he gave a violent wrench, a cat-like twist, and tore himself free. Men were running in from all directions.

"Catch him!" I cried. "Yonder he goes."

But the little man, was shooting forward like a deer. Right and left ran his pursuers, mistaking each other for the robber in the semi-gloom, yelling frantically, mad with the excitement of a man-hunt. And in the midst of it all I lay in a pool of mud and water, with a sprained wrist and a bite on my leg.

"Why didn't you hold him?" shouted Ribwood.

"I couldn't," I answered. "I saved your clean-up, and he got some of the lead. Besides, I know who he is. Pat Doogan."

"You don't say. Well, I'm darned. We'll get him. I'll get into town first thing in the morning and get out a warrant for him."

He went, but the next evening back he returned, looking very surly and disgruntled.

"Well, what about the warrant?" said Hoofman.

"Didn't get it," snapped Ribwood. "Look here, Hoofman, I met Locasto. Black Jack says Pat was cached away; dead to all the world, in the back room of the Omega saloon all night. There's two loafers and the carkeeper to back him up. What can we do in the face of that? Say, young fellow, I guess you mistook your man."

"I guess I did not," I protested stoutly.

They both looked at me for a moment and shrugged their shoulders.

Time went on and the cabin was quietly nearing completion. The roof of poles was in place. It only remained to cover it with moss and shaved-out earth to make it our future home.

More and more my dream hours were jealously consecrated to Berna. How ineffably sweet were they. How full of delicious imaginations! - How pregnant of high hope! O, I was born to love, I think, and I never loved but ore. This story of my life is the story of Berna. It is a thing of words and words and words, yet every word is Berna. Berna. Feel the heartache behind it all. Read between the lines, Berna, Berna.

The Prodigal was always "snooping" around and gleaming information from most mysterious sources. One evening he came to us.

"Boys, get ready, quick. There's a rumor of a stampede for a new creek. Ophir creek they call it, away on the other side of the divide-somewhere. A prospector went down ten feet and got fifty-cent dirt. We've got to get in on this. There's a mob coming from Dawson, but we'll get there before the rush."

Quickly we got together blankets and a little grub, and, keeping out of sight, we crawled up the hill under cover of the brush. Soon we came to a place from which we could command a full view of the valley. Here we lay down, awaiting developments.

On the far slope of Eldorado I saw a hawk soar upward. Surely a man was moving amid the brush. Two men, a dozen men, moving in single file, very stealthily. I pointed them out.

"It's the stampede," whispered Jim. "We've got to get on to the trail of that crowd. Travel like blazes. We can cut them off at the head of the valley."

"Throw away your blankets, boys," said the Prodigal. "Just keep a little grub. We must connect with that bunch if we break our necks."

It was hours after when we overtaken them, about a dozen men, all in the maddest hurry, and casting behind them glances of furtive apprehension.

The leader was going like one possessed. We blundered on behind in the same mad, head-breaking hurry, mile after mile, hour after hour, content to follow the man of iron who was guiding us to the virgin treasure. We had been pounding along all night up hill and down dale. The sun rose, it was morning. Still we kept up our fierce gait. Would our leader never come to his destination? By what roundabout route was he guiding us? We panted and we pelted on, parched and weary, faint and footsore. But still our leader kept on.

Suddenly the Prodigal said to me: "Say, you boys will have to go on without me. I'm ill in."

He dropped in a lump heap on the ground and instantly fell asleep. Several of the others had dropped out, too. They fell asleep where they gave up, utterly exhausted. We had now been going sixteen hours, and still our leader kept on.

It was about four in the afternoon when we reached the creek. Up it our leader plunged, till he came to a place where a rude shaft had been dug. We gathered around him.

"Here it is, boys," he said. Here's my discovery stake. Now you fellows go up or down, anywhere you've a notion to, and put in your stakes. Maybe you'll strike a million-dollar claim, maybe a blank. Mining's all a gamble. But go ahead, boys. I wish you luck."

So we strung out, and, coming in rotation, Jim and I staked seven and eight below discovery.

Then I threw myself down on a bit of moss, and, covering my head with my coat to ward off the mosquitoes, in a few minutes I was dead to the world.

I was awakened by the Prodigal. "Rouse up," he was saying; "you've slept right round the clock. We've got to get back to town and record those claims. Jim's gone three hours ago."

I was sleep-stupid, sore, stiff in every joint. Racking pains made me groan at every movement, and the chill night air had brought on twinges of rheumatism, but we started off.

It was about nine in the morning when we got to the gold office. There was quite a number ahead of me, and I knew I was in for a long wait. I will never forget it.

For three days, with the exception of two brief sleep-spells, I had been in a fierce helter-skelter of excitement, and I had eaten no very satisfactory food. As I stood in that sullen crowd I swayed with weariness, and my legs were doubling under me. I staggered forward and straightened up suddenly. I was near the wicket. Only two were ahead of me. A clerk was recording their claims. One had thirty four above, the other fifty-two below. The clerk looked flustered, fatigued.

It was my turn. "I wanted to record eight below on Ophir," I said. "What name?" he asked.

I gave it. He turned up his book. "Eight below, you say. Why that's already recorded."

"Can't be," I retorted. "I just got down from there yesterday after planting my stakes."

"Can't help it. It's recorded by someone else, recorded early yesterday."

"Look here," I exclaimed; "what kind of a game are you putting up on me? I tell you I was the first on the ground. I alone staked the claim."

"That's strange," he said. "There must be some mistake. Anyway, you'll have to live on and let the others get up to the wicket. You're blocking the way. All I can do is to look into the matter for you, and I've got no time now. Come back tomorrow. Next, please."

The next man pushed me aside, and there I stood, gaping and gasping. A man in the waiting line looked at me pityingly.

"It's no use, young fellow; you'd better make up your mind to lose that claim. They'll fin-flan you out of it somehow. They've sent someone out now to stake over you. If you kick, they'll say you didn't stake proper. Them government officials is the crookedest bunch. Get a stand-in, young fellow."

"Well," I said, "I'm not going to be cheated out of my claim. If I've got to move heaven and earth—"

"You'll do nothing of the kind. If you get sassy there's the police to put the lid on you. You can talk till you're purple round the gills. It won't cut no figure. They've got us all cinched. We've got to take our medicine. It's no use going round bellyaching. You'd better go away and sit down."

And I did.

I had to see Berna at once. At last I had paid a visit to the Paragon restaurant that new and gilded place of resort run by the Winkestein, but she was not on duty.

In the evening I returned. I took a seat in one of the curtained boxes. The place was brilliantly lit up, maty-mirrored and flashily ornate in gilt and white. In the box before me a white-haired lawyer was entertaining a lady of easy virtue; in a box behind, a farrikin quartette from the Pavilion theater was holding high revelry. There was no mistaking the character of the place. In the heart of the city's tenderloin it was a haunt of human riff-raff, a palace of gilt and guilt.

And it was in this place Berna worked. She waited on these wantons; she served those swine. She heard their loose talk, their careless oaths. She knew everything. Oh, it was pitiful; it sickened me to the soul. I sat down and buried my face in my hands.

"Order, please." I knew that sweet voice. It thrilled me, and I looked up suddenly. There was Berna standing before me.

She gave a quick start, then recovered herself. A look of delight came into her eyes, eager, vivid delight.

"Oh, I am so glad to see you again."

"Berna," I said, "what are you doing with that paint on your face?"

"Oh, I'm sorry." She was rubbing distressfully at a dab of rouge on her cheek. "I knew you would be cross, but I had to; they made me. It's just a little pink—all the women do it. It makes me look happier, and it doesn't hurt me."

"Berna," boomed the rough, con tumacious voice of Madam, "attend to the customers."

"All right," I said; "get me anything. I just wanted to see you."

She hurried away. Presently she came hurrying round, bringing me some food.

"When can I see you, girl?" I asked.

"Tonight. See me home. I'm off at midnight."

"All right. I'll be waiting." I wandered up and down the now familiar street, but the keen edge of my impression had been blunted. I no longer took the same interest in its sights. More populous it was noisier, livelier than ever. Success was in the air. Men were drunk with it; carried off their feet, delirious. Money! It had lost its value.

Every one you met was "lousy" with it; threw it away with both hands, and fast as they emptied one pocket it filled up the others.

At midnight, at the door of the Paragon, I was waiting in a fever of impatience when Berna came out. She showed a vast joy at seeing me.

"Tell me what you've been doing, dear—everything. Have you made a stake? So many have. I have prayed you would, too. Then we'll go away somewhere and forget all this. Won't we, honey?"

She nestled up to me. She seemed to have lost much of her shyness. I don't know why, but I preferred my timid, shrinking Berna.

"It will take a whole lot to make me forget this," I said grimly.

"Yes, I know. Isn't it frightful? Somehow I don't seem to mind so much now. I'm getting used to it, I suppose. It's wonderful how we get accustomed to things, isn't it?"

"Yes," I answered bitterly. "You know, I've had several offers of marriage, too, really, really good ones from wealthy claim-owners."

"Yes," still more bitterly. "Yes, young man; so you want to make a strike and take me away. Oh, how I plan and plan for us two. I don't care, my dearest, if you haven't got a cent in the world. I'm yours, always yours."

"That's all right, Berna," I said. "I'm going to make good. I've just lost a fifty-thousand-dollar claim, but there's more coming up. By the first of June next I'll come to you with a bank account of six figures. You'll see, my little girl, I'm going to make this thing stick."

"You foolish boy," she said; "it doesn't matter to me if you come to me a beggar in rags. Come to me anyway. Come, and do not fail."

She was extraordinarily affectionate, full of unexpected little ways of endearment, and clung to me when we parted, making me promise to return very soon. Every look, every word, every act of her expressed a bright, fine, radiant love. I was satisfied, yet unsatisfied, and once again I entreated her.

"Berna, are you sure, quite sure, you're all right in that place among all that folly and drunkenness and vice? Let me take you away, dear."

"Oh, no," she said very tenderly; "I'm all right. I would tell you at once, my boy, if I had any fear. Good-by, darling."

"Good-by, beloved."

I went away treading on sunshine, trembling with joy, thrilled with love for her, blessing her anew.

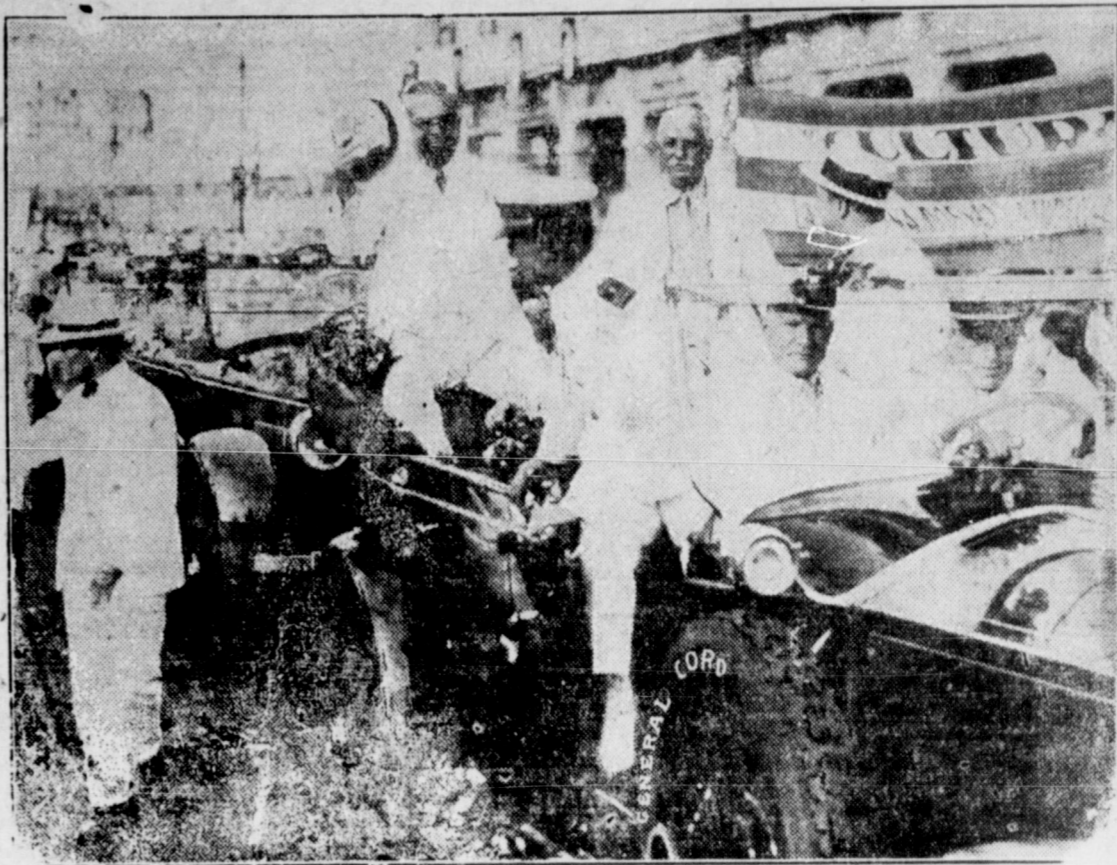

Yet still the rouge stuck in my crop as if it were the symbol of some insidious decadence.

Anxious Wife: "Abie, have you done anything about that Black Hand letter?"

Abie: "Oh, ain't I, though. I turned it over to my insurance company. They got $20,000 tied up in me; let them worry."

One woman and three men were arrested near Parnell Sunday by peace officers after they found three hundred bottles of home brew in the possession of the quartet.
