

TEMPLE OF TRUTH
By the Apostle

The College Hill widow says to keep a man's love for you fresh and glowing forever, marry the other fellow.

Some fellows who never spoke to you before in passing, have a change of heart when they become candidates for some office, even to tipping their hats to a lamp post.

A smart alec remarked the other day that tub bathers on a farm never changed the water until it jelled. When the Apostle lived on the farm, he hit the creek during warm weather and dusted off like a hen in the winter.

When will we learn not to get old too soon and to learn too late?

The GW violated all military tactics Saturday when she grabbed a shotgun and worked over a rat that had killed sixty-odd chicks. Some women are great on defense and even a rat has a poor chance.

The most disappointing expression: "Yes, I've heard that one before."

A farmer brought four dozen eggs to town Saturday and had to borrow four more to pay for the gasoline burned in making the trip.

If you are behind with your subscription, take advantage of the egg offer explained in our advertisement in this issue before the offer is withdrawn. This is only one of the many ways we are trying to neighbor with our readers.

The only way to gain a good reputation is to be good, and that won't work in politics.

Some of these sharp-tongued gossipers ought to be arrested for "totin" concealed weapons.

A little boy watched a local beauty parlor operator singe hair recently and after several minutes looked up and said, "she's huntin' 'em with a light."

A college expert in making a speech to a bunch of poultrymen said, "you can't get eggs without a hen."

"We do", said a little boy. "How?" asked the speech-maker. "We keep ducks", said the little boy who appeared pleased that he had told the learned man something he did not know.

"That is a skyscraper" said the man on top of the bus.

"Stop until I see how it works" said an old lady who wanted to get her money's worth.

Meat pome—
I never sausage eyes as thine
And if you'll butcher hand in mine
And liver 'round me every day
We'll seek some ham-let far away
To meat life's frown with love's caress
And cleaver road to happiness.

We always did think that the teeth of Little Red Riding Hood's wolf would look great in a tooth paste advertisement.

Dentist—"I am out of gas."
Lady in chair—"Gosh, do dentists pull that old line too?"

An ant was gazing longingly at the carcass of a dead horse when a bootlegger's car passed. A case of wet goods fell off breaking the bottles. The ant quenched his thirst, then grabbing the dead horse by the tail yelled "come on, big boy, we're going home."

This is the season of the year when the bright young "college" boy drops around with an arm load of magazines wanting you to do something to help him to get to college when that is the last place he expects to go. Saturday a demure miss of the Easter egg tribe—hard boiled and all painted up—dropped in to enlighten the Apostle with the fact that he could have his name announced over KOA at Denver and get a magazine for a

Here's Record-Sized Mexican Lion

Ira Woods of Dilly, Texas, champion mountain lion and wildcat hunter of that region, has bagged the record sized lion of his busy season: This big cat weighed just over 150 pounds. Nine dogs treed the lion and Ira's little pop-pop did the rest. Woods has bagged 18 of these cats in the last two years.

year all for one dollar. What kind of a darn thing will bob up next?

The married children of the family have a book on diets which is saving them quite a bit on chuck bills. The GW has always wanted some kind of a reducin' diet and what should the old Apostle face for breakfast Sunday morning but prunes—just prunes. After the family racket stopped and the dust settled, he fried his own eggs. She was fair when she said I could take my choice—eat 'em or leave 'em—and I left.

How's this for a new one? A man came in to pay his subscription and said that he hid some bills in the refrigerator and his wife served them chopped up in lettuce salad to a bunch of club women, and had nothing left to dig up.

Ed Wheeler ruined 3 acres of cotton Tuesday when he grabbed a book out of the hand of a book agent and beat him over the head with it. The title of the book read, "How to Make a Farm Pay a Profit."

A perfectly sensible lady told the Apostle this week that she was going to organize a domino or bridge club especially for the benefit of "clicking upper platters." She had been wearing false teeth ten years and had formed a habit of keeping time with music by clicking her plates and claims to know a lot more who do the same. She got along fine with her plans until she sneezed and the way that plate sounded when it hit the concrete floor, boys next door thought some one had fired a shotgun.

Anybody want white rats? Every three weeks we have a new batch. Don't crowd, there will be enough to supply all comers without any one feeling like they have been "short-potted" on the deal. Cash or what have you.

The Apostle is in receipt of a lot of publicity from a district candidate in which he "howls from the housetops" the fact that he is the teacher of a Sunday school class, and he wants me to tell the folks about it.

I have too much regard for the sanctity of churches and the Christian religion to be a party to any attempt to drag it into politics, or to further any man's candidacy by giving publication to an article that would in any manner create prejudice, or create dissension between neighbors.

The above subject reminds me of the platform of an East Texas politician several years ago who could not run on his granddady's reputation, and thought up something new for that day and time. Here it is:

"Always a democrat. A self-made man. Didn't come to this county running for office or running from an officer. Look me over. Smoothe mouth but sound as dollar. City broke and safe with women and children. Work single or double. Hook me any place. Believe in immersion when it rains and sprinkling when it's dry. Give me your vote and don't forget to knock all my opponents. I am the only honest man in the race, and own the best pack of hound coot dogs on the creek."

The Apostle is the luckiest man this side of Arkansaw. Red hair is coming into fashion this summer and the GW has red hair. It has been aburn for all practical conversation for a long number of years, but can change to red on a moment's notice if the fad hits here—and it will sooner or later.

Our young folks are our inspiration and hope. This week the Leader will carry the story of a little girl only eleven years of age who won first prize in a bedroom contest. She learned something practical in the way of beautifying a home. We need more practical common sense in our homes. She made unsightly things change into things beautiful by the magic touch of her hands. She did greater things than she expected when she started the task. Don't fail to read the story in this issue where Jessie J. Tomlinson tells in her own words how she overcame obstacles that stood between her and success

The man who formerly walked up to the back door for a "hand-out", now tells a different story that runs something like this: "Lady, could you help a good man get his wife a job?"

MISSIONARY CIRCLES ENTERTAIN

Missionary Circles One and Two of the First Methodist church entertained on the church lawn Wednesday evening to a large audience seated comfortably in chairs.

A log cabin constructed from cedar posts, the well and the "old oaken bucket" and gourd dipper, as well as other scenery added much to the attractiveness of the songs and plays illustrated. The program and arrangement was directed by Mrs. U. J. Boston who was ably assisted by Mrs. E. B. Bowen and Mrs. Cal Merchant.

Various eras in American history were illustrated beginning with the Pilgrims in which the courtship of Miles Standish played an important role. Eight young ladies danced the minut of 100 years ago.

Before the Civil war scenes were illustrated by a number of dummies who sang the old war time songs of "Old Black Joe", "Swing Low Sweet Chariot", and "Shout All Over God's Heben."

The Old Oaken Bucket was sung as the singers sat on the well curbing described above. Three soldiers and a sailor illustrated 1918 in the American history and a couple better illustrated 1925 by singing "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" in a swing. 1932 was illustrated by a group of young folks singing modern songs of the present day.

The ladies are due a lot of credit for the arrangement and the success of the program which went over in a great way without a hitch.

Ice cream and cake was served at the conclusion of the program.

Mrs. Jim Heckman has returned home after a visit of several days as a special nurse at Pampa.

*CHAMBERLAIN*

There was a fine attendance at Sunday school Sunday morning. A light shower fell here Monday. Notwithstanding the busy season quite a few from here attended the Crimm revival, and as a result there were more than twenty conversions from this community. In our estimation Crimm is the greatest preacher in America. His courage is akin to that of Eliga, and his boldness is near that of John the Baptist who lost his life because he told King Herod of his wrong living.

Morris Millsap and lady and Frank Boehinger visited relatives at Pampa for the week end.

Johnie Beard and family attended Sunday school here Sunday.

Candidates are rather plentiful and mothers should have a heart, and keep the babies face clean.

N. Dingler is gunning for the Guy who started that breeches story on him. It seems that Noah grew up in Erath county in the days before highfalutin language and fandangled names were common among all the folks. The story goes that Noah dropped by one afternoon to pay an account at the store, and to his astonishment he found his merchant had him charged with one pair of pants, well at this our friend just reared up on his hind feet, pulled his hair, spit out a little brimstone and said I never bought any pants, and there was never such an implement on my farm, and about this time the Irish in the merchant became riled and he said Noah Dingler what the dickens is the matter with you; you have at all times paid your honest debts, and you know blamed well you got these breeches, then Noah said, oh of course I bought the breeches and am ready to pay for them, but you said pants.
