Sole Survivor Of Church Founders Is Anniversary Guest

Judge John W. Goodwin of Austin, single survivor of the eight men who organized the First Baptist Church here in 1876, attended the services held in observance of the church's sixtieth anniversary Sunday, February 23. He and Mrs. Goodwin were special guests for the occasion and both made brief talks.

Persons from every year from 20 years back were present at the celebration, and some who were members 50 years back stood when members were requested to stand according to the time that they had been in the church.

"The Church and Its Work," was the subject of the sermon delivered by Rev. Karl H. Moore, pastor of the church. Text of the sermon was from Corinthians, "Thanks be to God who always causes us to triumph in Christ." Special music for the occasion was rendered by the choir, and Mrs. Leta Newby Shelton sang a solo.

Mr. Goodwin described the founding of the church and of Howard Payne College on whose first board of trustees he served. Mrs. Goodwin made a brief talk concerning early activities of the church.

Many visitors were present, including former members of the church who now live in Austin, Waco, Fort Worth, Dallas, San Angelo and Santa Anna.

New Hotel Auditor Assumes Duty Here

Willis Taylor, new auditor of Hotel Brownwood, assumed his duties last week. He and Mrs. Taylor moved here recently from Weverka, Oklahoma, where he had been auditor of the Aldridge Hotel for some time. He has been an employee of the National Hotels since 1931, serving as auditor at hotels in Clovis, New Mexico, Big Spring and Weverka.

Joe Johnson, former auditor of the Brownwood hotel, has been transferred to Lubbock as auditor at Hotel Lubbock. Mr. Johnson whose home is here, has been auditor at Hotel Brownwood for the last two years.

Workmen who built the Normandie received a total compensation of $40,000,000.

VARIED NATURAL RESOURCES OF TEXAS TO BE DISPLAYED IN BIG CENTENNIAL EXHIBIT

"The unrivaled natural resources of Texas will be displayed on an elaborate scale as a feature of the Texas Centennial Central Exposition in Dallas beginning June 6. John M. Spellman, director general of the exhibit, said Saturday. "This exhibit," he explained "will be under the joint auspices of the state of Texas and the Centennial management, and will be displayed in the hall of 1936 of the State of Texas Building. This hall has been set aside by the state of Texas commission of control for the housing of the collection of resources. The State of Texas Building, as planned, will be a magnificent structure of monumental proportions, and I feel it is fitting that the exhibit of the wonderful resources of our state should be housed in this building. It is intended to make the exhibit of natural resources as complete as possible and truly representative in all departments.

"The exhibit will, of course, have a high educational value and will also afford an unparalleled opportunity for impressing upon the world that Texas possesses a great treasure house of natural resources awaiting development and providing a foundation for a new era of industrial progress and growth which it is possible to build upon this solid foundation and which should follow in the wake of our great Centennial Exposition.

"It is widely known in a general sort of way that the natural resources of Texas are more numerous and varied and potentially valuable than the natural resources of any other state. Some of these resources have been and are being developed to the great social and financial advantage of the people of Texas. Most of them are in their original condition awaiting management, capital and labor to make them worth what they are destined to be to society generally and the people of Texas, specifically.

"Some of the natural resources of Texas are peculiar to Texas alone. Many of them are here in better shape for development than similar resources elsewhere. Some of the things that are to be developed from the natural resources of Texas as can be supplied by no other part of the world so far as has been disclosed from explorations and investigations.

"The great economic changes that have come over the world in the past decade have indicated and unmistakably indicate now that the development of natural resources where they are to be found is to be the solution of many vexing problems in the field of economics. Transportation, for one thing, will probably never again exist in manner and form to make it economically advisable to carry raw materials far for fabrication and to make long hauls of finished products. This indicated the need for the establishment of industries in logical places where they will best serve the people who produce their materials and those who require their products. It points, for instance, to the fabrication of the cotton crop of Texas largely within the borders of Texas using the fuels and labor and power that are here available and saving long hauls for raw materials and finished goods.

"Close to Top "Farms, ranges and forests were the first and most obvious natural resources of Texas to attract and hold the homeseekers who began to arrive in Texas a hundred years ago. With the addition of petroleum and one or two other products of the mines these resources until now have constituted the materials with which Texas has made progress. Even with this limited use of the state's natural resources, it is probably true as has been estimated that Texas produces as much as $150,000,000 of surplus wealth each year that is largely available for investment in the development of Texas resources.

"The value of Texas farm crops—our crops—is in excess of $1,000,000,000 a year—far more than crops of any other state are worth. Texas stands close to the top of the list of states in relative production of petroleum and its products. Texas is today producing approximately 60 per cent of the production of sulphur in the world.

ably true as has been estimated that Texas produces as much as $150,000,000 of surplus wealth each year that is largely available for investment in the development of Texas resources.

Girl Debaters To Represent School Chosen In Tryout

Betty Jo Sanderson and Iris Seales have been selected as the girls team to represent Brownwood High School in the county interscholastic League meet to be held here March 14. A boys team will be chosen in tryout contests soon. The local teams have made excellent records in practice debates this year and plan to go to Abilene March 7 for entry in a practice tournament to be held there.

In a practice tournament held here Thursday night a local debating team, Bob Wilkes and Robert Allman, defeated two San Saba teams. Other Brownwood teams defeated some of the leading teams of the Oil Belt district in a tournament at Eastland several weeks ago and in a practice tournament for schools in this interscholastic League district held last week.

A federal survey indicated 53,000 subsistence gardens in Kansas for 1935.

DEMONSTRATION CLUBS

Hotbed Planted "It pays to have a hotbed in which to start the vegetables which require a long growing season," Myrtle Evans, garden demonstrator for the Cross Cut 4-H Club said. In this hotbed she has planted cabbage, pepper and tomato seeds and onions.

Improves Yard To add to the appearance of her yard and reach one of her yard goals, Mrs. Roy Newton, yard demonstrator for the Cross Cut Home Demonstration Club, has moved their toilet and planted two honey-suckles in front of it for screening. She has also leveled the rocks used for stepping stones in the back yard, by digging the soil out from under the thicker ones and making them all level with the ground. Mrs. Newton plans to lay a flag stone walk in her front yard.

Furniture Painted Knowing how much a little paint will improve the looks of things Ruby Jennings, bedroom cooperator for the 4-H Club at Cross Cut has painted a bed, dresser and table in ivory at a cost of $1.50 for the paint. She used some three ply board for making new bottoms in her dresser drawers which cost .70 making a total expense of $2.20 for paint and boards. Ruby has made a cushion for a chair and a dresser scarf and plans to paper her room in the spring.

Clto Yard Improved In starting her demonstration Mrs. Odie Pierce, yard demonstrator for the Clto Home Demonstration Club, found that the first steps to be taken were to level, enlarge and enrich the yard, remove the cement curbs from around the narrow beds, widen them and add rich soil for her foundation planting. Some flowering willows were dug up from the front yard and two small cedars moved from the front side of house, several roses were moved from the foundation planting to a rose garden where they could receive proper care. Mrs. Pierce is starting her foundation planting with the following shrubs: Wax leaf ligustrums, low dense privets, California privets, nandinas, euonymus and some flowering shrubs.

Room Improved As a bed room cooperator, Cordelia Keasler, 4-H Club girl at Zephyr, reports the following improvements: She has cleaned the walls, hung several pictures, put up new shades and curtains, and made a shoe bag in her room. She helped take the old paper off the walls in the living room and re-paper, and hung shades and curtains in that room.

The tallest specimen of a petrified tree yet found in Oklahoma 23 feet in length, will be assembled for a geological exhibit at the University of Oklahoma. It was found near Ada.

The officers of the Williams F. F. A. will attend the Brownwood District F. F. A. Officers Training School to be held at the Brownwood Junior High School building March 4. This will be the third such training school held by this district this year. These schools have proven to be very beneficial in teaching the officers of each chapter to carry on their duties as a chapter officer.

The Williams F. F. A. boys have been very busy the past two weeks making rope and running terrace lines, as well as setting one very interesting and beneficial trip on vaccinating sheep for hemorrhagic septicaemia. The boys have made approximately 250 feet of rope including several real good lariet ropes. Most of the rope made has been 1-2 inch in diameter; however some has been larger and some smaller. The boys find that they can make rope for about a third of what it would cost them little labor or time required to make it. The rope making machine is a very simple affair, several of the boys having made one for use on their home farms. In connection with making rope the boys have learned to tie many useful knots and litches.

The interest throughout the Nation in the March 2nd celebrations held in Texas is indicative of a great popular interest in the Texas Centennial celebrations to be held throughout the State later in the year. Apparently the plans of those early in charge of the Centennial are to be realized; millions of people will visit the State during the coming months.

It certainly will be a pleasure for the people of Texas to entertain these visitors. But being a host also implies certain obligations. Not the least of these is the necessity for presenting the best possible appearance to these invited guests.

Much to stimulate this appearance consciousness is being done by the Texas State Highway Commission through sponsoring three beautification contests, announced in Brown county this week.

First of these contests will be the farm or ranch home, located on or adjacent to a state or federal highway in Texas. The home in this county, showing the greatest improvement in appearance by the end of the contest, May 28, 1936, will receive first prize. The only restriction is that the home does not exceed $5,000 in cost.

The second contest is for the most attractive school outside an independent district, and located on or adjacent to a state or federal highway, and the third is for a similarly located service station showing the greatest improvement.

General points to be considered in the judging are general appearance, cleanliness, state of repair of buildings, orderliness, arrangement of plantings, etc.

It is to be hoped that a large number of entries are received in each of these classes in Brown county. The fact that no money prizes are to be awarded is unimportant. It will be a distinction to have the prize winning property this Centennial year, of course, but the greater value to the participant in the contest will be through a knowledge that he is assisting in making Texas a more attractive place for visitors and Texans as well.

The contest can't do the job alone. If it is to be of great value to the State, the cooperation of every citizen is essential. If this is secured, the Texas State Highway Department will have done a great service to the people of the State, and will have accomplished its purpose of "clearing away all unsightliness in Texas."

It was not many years ago that Baby Beef Shows were very popular in West Texas, and throughout the State. But during the years of declining prices and the necessity for sacrificing quality of livestock because of the lowered return, the shows gradually lost popularity. Now they are being revived with a renewed interest born of better times. And this week, Brownwood is to have a Baby Beef Show, sponsored by the Brownwood Chamber of Commerce, and having as entries calves led by the Future Farmers of America chapters in Brown county.

No more important show or contest has been held in this county in many years. In Mason county, where the Baby Beef shows have been held annually, and where they probably reached their greatest importance in West Texas, many ranchmen can point to their experience in feeding out calves for these contests to their real start on the right road in ranching.

Livestock raising is increasing in importance and in profit in Brown county. Shows such as that to be held in Brownwood on Saturdays are of importance in pointing the way to the right methods of stockraising, and are of real benefit to the city and the county.

The Banner has been asked by the Texas Centennial Central Exposition, Dallas, to assist that organization in securing a representative display of old time cattle brands at the Dallas Centennial Exposition. Brands of long ago are particularly wanted, and will be featured in the display, but more recent brands also are wanted and will be given prominence in the cattle brand exhibit, according to word received from Gus L. Ford, in charge of this department at the Centennial.

Cattle brands in Brown county and this section of the state formed an important part of the history of the development of this country. No doubt some of them already are included in the preliminary display which is being arranged in Dallas. But there are many others not now included, which should be called to the attention of the Dallas exhibitors in order that this county be given proper recognition for its part in the early day history of Texas.

The Banner has agreed to lend assistance in securing the information regarding the cattle brands formerly used in this section. We invite our readers to give us such information regarding the early-day brands, and we will forward it to the Centennial authorities at Dallas.

The House of Representatives a few weeks ago passed the largest peace-time army appropriations in the history of the United States. About $377,000,000 was appropriated for strictly military purposes. World peace advocates shuddered, but Chief of Staff Craig said "It is perfectly evident to everyone that troublesome times have again arrived in the world. We do not see how they can possibly concern us. Nevertheless, it is unwise to neglect the lessons of our experience."

And yet, the danger of this country going to war may not be heightened through this prearranged move. As a writer in the current Readers Digest points out, this country has lost prestige in the commercial world during the past few years through a neglect of our military organization. Commercial considerations rule the modern world, and while we had a strong army and navy, our commerce was respected. It will increase in world importance with the rebuilding of our neglected defenses.

THE STORY OF A CANTERBURY BLUE BELL

A SUMMER in Canada on an island in Lake Huron gave the opportunity for tramping miles over beaches of all kinds, smooth sand and stones, sunshine and shade as one's mood would lead. For a lover of beaches this was a paradise.

We discovered one day on an unusually long hike along a rocky shore, a canterbury blue bell growing alone, sans friends of any description. Our first thought was to carry it back, roots and all, to the cottage in the woods and give it a chance to live, with loving care. "No," we argued with ourselves, "others will come this way perchance and love it, quite as much as we."

Soon some children came sauntering lazily down the beach, among them a lad about ten years. Seeing the blooming flower, he came near to it, whipped it off with his stick, and walked nonchalantly on.

Is this not another form of selfishness all too common in pleasure seekers? Surely there can be no thought for the enjoyment of others, when one is marring the roadside's beauty, where thousands pass daily. This crime, for such it is against nature and beauty lovers, is equaled only by the twin sin of putting up unsightly bill boards to advertise hotels, liver pills or what not, in a beautiful nearby field or forest.

What must mother nature think of man's cupidity when she does all she can to beautify her handiwork and he does all he can to butcher it? Isn't there some reverence lacking in the older generation that these things occur? When children see with their own eyes such mutilation, why would they not do the same? We have not as yet included in the education of our youth the refining subtle study of Beauty, beauty not only of nature's loveliness but beauty of human nature as unselfishness, beauty in conduct, beauty in character. Beauty is a thing alive, it is a spirit.

A PARDON BOARD

(Kerrville Times)

The recommendation of Governor Allred for taking the pardoning power, from the Governor of the State and placing it in the hands of a regularly constituted pardon board, we believe to be a wise one.

The duties of a governor of any of our States are now so numerous and so exacting that that official should be relieved of the harassing bombardment of clemency seekers. Relatives and friends and attorneys, of those who have been convicted of crimes, annoy and beset governors almost to distraction, in this day and time. The penalty is scarcely pronounced before the siege begins to convince the governor that he should step in and undo or modify the verdict of the jury.

All of this must detract from the governor his poise and efficiency in dealing with problems of the state's affairs, which crowd upon the Chief Executive for solution. There should be some place of appeal, in case a wrong or too severe verdict has been imposed, (which is very rare) but certainly the governor should be relieved of deciding such an appeal.

A board, charged solely with the duty of investigating and passing upon cases asking clemency would, we think, safeguard justice and meet the demands, of the citizenry for such a possible appeal. Allred's recommendation contains wisdom and we would be glad to see it adopted in Texas.

The latest estimate places the population of Sacramento, California's capital at 101,600, a growth of 1,500 in three years.

The million dollar Texas Memorial museum to be constructed on the Texas university campus as a Centennial year project will be one of the great museums of the world when it is opened later this year. Both the federal and state governments cooperated to finance construction of the building.

One farm in Zapata county, Texas, alone produces more spinach each year than is grown in any other state in the Union. Zapata county is in the rich Winter Garden district of Southwest Texas, Crystal City, county seat and active shipping center is a Centennial celebration city with its Spanish festival planned for March 17.

ON TEXAS FARMS

College Station — "Business men and farmers and ranchmen have a common problem in finding the way to restore agriculture to a paying basis, because as the President of the Galveston Chamber of Commerce so well pointed out in a recent speech 'Civilization begins and ends with the plow and so does prosperity!' Prosperity not alone for farm and ranch families but for the families of men engaged in commerce, industry and other occupations," said Jack Shelton, vice director of the Texas Extension Service and state agent in charge of men's work, in a recent interview.

"No one wants class legislation for the farmer—the thing which affects him affects every agency which sells to him or touches him in any way," Shelton said, "The farmer does not want class legislation nor any unfair advantage for himself either. All that he has ever asked for is an opportunity to produce and market on an equal basis with industry."

"We have been thinking a lot about the new agricultural program as we have been able to catch details of what Congress has been considering. The job is going to be to apply it to local conditions as they are found throughout the State so we have been studying how it could be applied to the Panhandle where the great wheat lands are located; how to apply it to the Plains where cotton and grain sorghums are important crops; how to apply it to the Blacklands—the central cotton belt; how to apply it to East Texas and how to apply it to the Rio Grande Valley."

"As I understand it," Shelton said, "It is just a question of developing a good sound agricultural program in each region and on each farm. Nothing will be required except the application of those practices of soil utilization and conservation which have become recognized as the best for Texas. 'Farmers themselves should have a large part in applying this program. They will know their local conditions and they will know not only the general regional conditions, but special conditions applying to individual farms. 'It is fortunate that there is a great deal of experimental information available to aid in establishing any new agricultural program which may be offered. There are 17 experiment stations placed in strategic positions over Texas, many of which have worked for a long period of years. They have accumulated much tested information which is going to be of great value in establishing what is proper land utilization and conservation,'" Shelton said.

Clarksville — Seventy-four Red River county farmers are pooling their orders for fruit trees this year, with an average of 30 trees per order, according to C. M. Knight, county agricultural agent. Farmers in this county have been buying together for the past several years and have found that they can get trees at a cheaper price; they can have trees inspected before buying; and they can get proper information on caring for their orchards. The trees will be delivered as soon as the weather permits. Plans have been made by the county agricultural agent to hold demonstra-thalle cut off the cuttings one-fourth inch from the bottom bud and one-half to one inch from the top bud, tied them in a bundle and buried them upside down in the ground four inches deep. They were left there about a month. The purpose was to seal the ends over so that the cuttings would take root better when they were put out than if they had just been cut and put in the bed.

Falfurria's — Twenty-eight Brooks county 4-H club girls have planted tomato seeds in paper cups filled with soil or in small wooden boxes in order to get an early start and yet not risk their plants being killed by freezing, according to Miss Louise Hogue, home demonstration agent.

At the first club meeting in January, the girls were given a demonstration on the mixing of soil, preparation of soil for seed, planting, selection of varieties and subsequent care. Each of the girls planted enough seed to have at least 50 plants, which is the co-operators' goal for the year. Two varieties were planted.
