Comedy And Drama Mixed With Thrills Portraying Real Life in Two Worlds

Tenth grade pupils of the Chamberlain school will present their last play of the season on Thursday evening of June 7th, at 8:15.

"No-Account David" is the title of the dramatic story of a young crook who, entering an old lady's home to steal, sees and falls in love with Jean, the village school teacher. Of course plenty of things happen after that.

There is plenty of comedy in the play as well as the more serious moments. The members of the cast and their coach are using this play as their 'goodbye' to the school to which they have been loyal many years, and they are striving to bring to a climax the best play ever presented there.

The public is cordially invited, and there will probably be no admission charge according to information given the Leader for publication

DISTURBING THE DUMB.

Often the local publisher gives several dollars worth of space to a musical or local performance and when the manager comes in for the final write-up, he brings a mimeographed copy of the program.

Speaking of beating the publisher out of a small program job, how about the school department head who expects the local publisher to boost him first, and his school second all through the year while he gets his announcements from 'afar' and mimeographs every printing job possible while he is going through the term? Of course all this happened in the other fellow's town.

BROTHER TUGWELL RUNS AMUCK.

A statement that "one of the oldest and quietest roads to contentment lies through the conventional trinity of wine, women and song," attributed to Rexford Guy Tugwell, coauthor of the famous drug bill and assistant secretary of agriculture, so moved the congregation of the Rose City Methodist Episcopal church of Portland, Oregon that they have demanded his resignation or retraction.

What else could be expected of a brain truster who would believe that the government should prohibit all forms of advertising for being classed by Tugwell as an economic waste? Well, he's due for plenty of advertising on his wine, women and song theory.

PAGING OUR NAVIGATORS.

Different publishers have a variety of views as to just what constitutes news value. We of America would never think of covering our front page with advertisements as they do in England, and most of them classified at that.

Reading in a Kentucky exchange last week, an account was given of where a young couple was driving along the highway when the young man lost control of the machine. Out here we would have said the old baby went to hunting acorns. Back there it was more modestly put. When he lost control of the machine she naturally speeded up a bit, broke off two fence posts and rammed a telephone pole breaking it off fifteen feet above the ground. The car was demolished and the couple died from the effects of 'losing' control. That would have been a black headline or front page streamer in Texas, but in old Kentucky they lammed it under the obituary head on page three and let her go. They may be used to such things back there, but we have more or less regard for posts and poles out here, though we admit life itself is rated very low.

THE RECORDS OF THE SENATOR-CANDIDATES.

The inquiry into the records of state senators, present and former, who are candidates for state office this year, may well begin with the called session of the 41st legislature,

At that time the practice of utilities and other interests of hiring legislators as attorneys hadn't developed to the stage it has since reached, but it was already beginning to cause a bad smell at Austin. In an effort to clear the atmosphere, Senator W. D. McFarlane of this district introduced a resolution setting forth the rumors and gossip about senators who were corporation-hired, and calling for the appointment of a committee of five senators to get at the facts and make them public.

That resolution gave the state senate a splendid opportunity to set itself right. The senators who were not on the payrolls of selfish interests naturally were ready for that fact to be known. The senator who was hired by special interests naturally wasn't keen to see the relationship made public. The resolution provided a fair and forthright test of senate sentiment on the question. The public was entitled to draw the conclusion that those who opposed the resolution were either on corporation payrolls themselves, or in sympathy with, and ready to condone, such a practice.

The resolution was defeated, 14 to 12.

Among the 14 who voted against it were Senator Joe Moore of Hunt county, now a candidate for lieutenant governor; Senator Clint Small of the Panhandle district, now a candidate for governor; Senator Edgar E. Witt of Waco, now a candidate for governor.

Senator B. F. Berkeley of Alpine, now a candidate for lieutenant governor, voted for the resolution; Senator John W. Hornsby of Austin, also a candidate for lieutenant governor, also voted for it.

Senator Walter Woodul of Houston, now a candidate for lieutenant governor and Senator Walter Woodward of Brownwood, now a candidate for attorney general, were recorded as "absent, excused."

So much for that phase of the records of the senator-candidates for state office. Later some other excerpts from the records will be given. (From Wichita Falls Daily Times of May 22, 1934.)

Candidate for Attorney General

The only man ever elected to a third successive term as district attorney in Dallas County and one who set a national record for the number of 99-year sentences assessed for robbery, McCraw is a candidate who really did something about the subject of crime, instead of talking about it, when he was in office. He rid Texas

As president three times of the District and County Attorneys' Association of Texas, McCraw made a number of recommendations for bettering our criminal laws and complicated procedure, few of which the Legislature chose to adopt, so that criminals might be put, and kept, where they belong. Among these recommendations was that the District Attorney should be allowed to comment on the failure of a defendant to day. testify in his own behalf. He also, like others who have headed that organization, pleaded that a group of criminals charged with the same identical crime should be tried together instead of separately and at great expense to the State. He was, and is, in favor of giving the district judges of Texas some "real authority and making them something besides mere umpires" in court. This last, he says, is the thing to do first in changing our court system so criminals can be taken care of quickly, as they should be.

In talking of crime, McCraw nows whereof he speaks. In one

The next year, 1928, out of 272 criminal cases tried, there were only 10 acquitals, and of the body at the pioneer gathering cases appealed, only three were reversed. One of the death penalty cases went clear to the United States Supreme Court, and was Arkansaw sent us a dandy little affirmed. It takes a real lawyer to

When he first ran for district attorney in 1926 he won the nomination in the first primary over two opponents. He was unopposed for his second term, which upset a county precedent more than a generation old. Another was upset when he was elected a third time. He did not run for a fourth term. but retired to practice law with his first assistant, Tom C. Clark.

In the famous audit of county officers in 1931-an audit that ruined several political careers in Dallas-McCraw's office was given a "clean bill of health", a fact his friends are proud of. He filed civil suits that brought thousands of dollars back to the county from its officials and ex-office holders. A point being made by McCraw, who in politics is a liberal, is that because of the vast amount of work the Attorney General is required to handle, the candidate selected for that office should be a vigorous, hard working man in the prime of life as well as a capable lawyer, and not "an old fashioned politician". It is an office, he says, "that should not be used as a political trading post, nor one with a back door to favored interests. "The Flame of Remembrance"

It is hoped that Memorial Day will always be precious to the people of this country. But most precious of all Memorial Days should be those few remaining anniversaries on which the comrades in arms of those whose deeds we commemorate and whose graves we decorate still walk before our eyes, and still speak to us.

Beneath the Arc de Triomphe at the head of the Champs Elysees in Paris burns by night and day a flame of fire. Over the grave of the unknown soldier of France it

At Arlington we have interred the unrecognized and unrecognizable remains of the unknown soldier of the United States of Ameri-

On Memorial Day we lay wreaths on the graves of multitudes of men and women who gave their lives for the common good. In this generation it is not the personal glory of kings and emperors, won by unhearlded sacrifices and slaughter of millions of people that this day memoralizes, but it is the courage and sacrifices of the common soldier that receives homage.

Contemptible the greed and pride and false philosophy that have causeed most of the wars, but all honor and praise to the idealism and bravery and selfabnegation of the men and to the men themselves who gave their lives for the cause that they believed to be just and right.

How shall we best keep our covenant with our dead? By adopting the program which the radical, bolshevist and the unbeliever are thrusting upon us? I hardly think so. For that implies the overturning from their ancient foundations of our homes, our schools, our churches and our laws. Rather let us be up and quit ourselves like men and repair the breaches in the foundations of the ancient institutions upon which it has pleased God to build nations which endure. Let us live to promote the things for which our heroes died. Thus we show our appreciation to those who have passed on before us.

"JACKASSES"

Two fool jackasses-Say! Get this dope, Were tied together with a piece of rope; Said one to the other, "You come my way, While I take a nibble at this new mown hay."

"I won't." said the other. "You come with me, For I, too, have some hay, you see." So they got nowhere, just pawed up dirt, And, Oh, by golly, that rope did hurt.

Then they faced about, these tubborn mules, And said, "We're just like human fools; Let's pull together; I'll go your way, Then come with me and we'll both eat hay."

Well, they ate their hay and liked it, too, And swore to be comrades good and true; As the sun went down they were heard to bray, "Ah! this is the end of a perfect day."

Now get this lesson, don't let it pass, All men can copy from the poor jackass, By pulling together, 'tis the only way To put yourself on the map to stay. -The Nut.
