BACK TO THE FARM BECAUSE OF MODERN WAYS

The day is passing—swiftly—for a farm not to be modernized with heating, electricity, and sanitation. Within the next four years electric service will be extended to over 1,000,000 farms in the United States, and we are certainly glad to know this condition also exists in Texas.

To make this farmer more satisfied, having greater living comforts, insures a better citizen, more willing to aid in the upbuilding of his community, and it also will cause those who look toward the cities for their homes, to hesitate and ask: "Is it really worthwhile for me to move to the city?" After consideration, he will find he will have a happier and more peaceful life right there on his farm home than living in a city, where he is buffeted through life of a city dweller.

Modern living on farms will result in a "back to the farm movement," and it will be done quickly.—Chillicothe Valley News.

SOME MORE OF OUR FREEDOM

This is a free country—one in which any man can fight as he chooses. He can fight with himself, his partner, his neighbor, his employers, his civic leaders—and even with his wife, and nothing much will be said about it. Perhaps it is this freedom to fight that puts most of us in the frame of mind for fighting instead of formulating plans for accomplishment. The only thing which brings on a fight is the men who do the fighting. Find a crew of men who will combine their energies, settle on a definite purpose, work together in harmony and you can bank on their making a success of their undertaking with worthwhile accomplishments for every member participating in the work. The one thing to be avoided is the quiet harmony one finds in ancient ivy-colored ruins, or in old graveyards or in the quiet of a hospital. Harmony produces results only so long as it is up and going, galloping through the days instead of sleeping peacefully as slumbering bedfellows side by side.—Panhandle Herald.

BUILDING CHARACTER

The most desirable of reputations are the easiest to lose. It requires years of correct living to build them up, and but an incautious moment to destroy them.

Too many men seem to forget that they are judged not by what they really are, but by what they seem to be. Their actions and their words are the only things that count.

The little things of life are of vast importance. They indicate the character that lies beneath the polished surface, and it is from them that the most lasting impressions are formed.

A sanctimonious countenance is not indicative of a clean heart. It is a cloak under which many disreputable deeds are performed.

A cheerful smile, a truthful tongue and an honest heart are all that any person requires.

Character is built from these and reputation is but the aftermath of character.—Foard County News.

WE ARE HOPING FOR THE BEST

This is a cruel time through which we are passing. It may be due to Republican prosperity, or to the fact that it is about time for a lean year, or because of the collapse of the New York Stock Market, or any number of things. Whatever it is, the times demand clear thinking, level heads and optimism. It is hard to be an optimist when things are going wrong, but in times such as these we really get a clear insight into our citizenship. We learn to know them under fire. We find out the stuff of which they are made and this information always comes in handily.

We are hoping for the best. We believe in better days ahead, although it is not up to us to say when they will come. We know that following periods of depression, matters always right themselves and it stands to reason that such will be the case again. We can make our various lots much harder to bear if we forever reflect only the dark side. If we become grouchy, petulant, ill at ease, we are certainly not helping matters to any appreciable extent. We are only making things worse.

Someone should prescribe for us just as a doctor does when we are sick. The times in which we live at the present are ill. There is something wrong, but as long as we have faith in the future, the will to look at things in the best light possible, there is a chance for us. We are by no means of the Pollyanna type, but we do believe in keeping a stiff upper lip and living in hope even though it is our lot to die in despair. We are going to continue to hope for the best, until the worst comes and then we expect to do a little more hoping.—Memphis Democrat.

THE WEEKLY NEWSPAPER THEN AND NOW

No one who was familiar with the weekly newspapers of twenty-five years ago can fail of astonishment in examining today the contemporary weekly press. A quarter century or more has served to recast the majority of weekly papers, both in appearance and content. Formerly a political year was a reason of high tide for the weekly editor. His community was political, his associates political, he was political, and he made his paper political.

Partisanship sometimes took on fever which heated every page. Usually there was an opposition organ across the street, if it was a county seat town. And the editors grew vitriolic as the days warmed into midsummer and the campaign waxed into luridly. Politics then was drama, history, emotion, and it was not uncommon for revival meetings to be postponed until politics could be put aside, after the ballots were counted—or miscounted.

The contrast reflected by the present condition is worthy of comment, perhaps of encomium. The weekly press is not excited over the various candidates and contentions of this voting year. More space is given to world comment, agricultural experiment and development, highway problems, local improvement, social life. Politics and matters of State and local administration are not ignored, of course. But the attention given them is characterized more by sincerity and discernment than by passion or hyperbole.

In short, the Texas weekly press of 1930 is broader minded, more tolerant, but not less vigilant, than that of three decades ago. Probably the fact that the publishers have large investments, more durable equities, at stake contributes greatly to the difference.

SPORTS AND TRADE

Sports play an important part in encouraging international trade and in bringing about better understanding among people of various countries, according to Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. Last year American trade in sporting goods with foreign countries amounted to nearly $5,000,000.

Baseball is becoming increasingly popular in Japan, as well as in Cuba, Mexico and other Latin-American republics. Football is taking hold in Mexico, although it has been considered as a game especially adapted to colder weather than is found there.

The story is told of an American tennis racquet manufacturer who avoided shutting down production for half the year by developing a market in countries south of the Equator, which have summer while we have winter.

For a long time America imported most of its golf sticks and balls from England, but today we export more golf equipment than we import, due largely to development in this country of the steel shaft and larger ball.

One of the interesting statements made by Dr. Klein is that most of the skies used in winter sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland, are made in Memphis, Tenn., while many from the same place are exported to Norway, where skiing is the national sport.—Wellington Leader.

Doubtless there are several of us who wish some rich man would divide his spoils, but if we were in his shoes the thought would be laughed at.

Automobiles are said to have ruined the country, but you have never heard of an owner wanting to get rid of his.

Opportunity waits for no man, it is claimed. However, man continues to wait for opportunity.

Poor people can be proud—but it is the very dickens for proud people to be poor.

NOOK DRUG AND CONFECTIONERY BEING REMODELED

The Nook Drug and Confectionery owned by L. H. Skelton has undergone a most thorough period of remodeling the first few days of this week. The interior of the place of business has been lived up with a new coat of paint while the walls have further enhanced the appearance of the place with a very pleasing design on the wall paper selected. The floors of the Nook have been replaced and new linoleum has been laid throughout the entire building.

The new improvements to the Nook Drug have made this one of the most up-to-date and attractive business houses in the city. The firm was closed on Tuesday afternoon for the reason of hastening the remodeling process.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Herd returned to their home here Sunday evening from Delta, Colo., where they had been called by the serious illness and death of the father of Mr. Herd. They left Monday of last week.

The Romance of Nickel

When a construction gang was grading for the laying of the new Canadian Pacific Railway across the cold stretches of little-known upper Ontario in 1883, a blacksmith by the name of Thomas Flanagan noticed that a certain part of the earth along the right-of-way near Sudbury was of a reddish color. This led to the discovery of copper ores.

Prospectors swarmed over the region, staking out claims on practically all the deposits. Mining was started on a large scale and the first ore was soon on the way to the smelters. There the ore was put through the usual processes but for some reason could not be worked properly.

To find out what the matter was, some of the ore was taken to a laboratory where, much to the surprise of the mine owners, the old spirit—nickel is an old German name for the evil spirit—that had troubled the early Saxon miners was discovered hidden in the copper ore.

This troublesome nickel in the ore proved to be more valuable than the copper, and today the nickel from Sudbury, Ontario, is known and used the world over.

But nickel, while it is found combined with copper, is really friendly only to iron and pure nickel occurs only with the iron in meteorites.

Of all the metals which are fused with steel to make alloys, nickel is the most widely used. Monel metal, for instance, containing nickel, copper and iron, is used for making valves for high pressure steam systems, propellers for vessels, and for many other articles that must resist the action of sulphuric and other metal eating acids. In making certain types of steel for armor plate, guns, and similar articles, nickel is sometimes used. In white gold, nickel and gold are used in varying proportions.

One use of nickel that touches daily life closely is in an alloy with zinc and copper for the contact springs inside telephones. When a telephone user lifts the receiver off the hook, these springs make contact and complete the path to the operator's signal lamp. This light lets the operator know that the caller wants a party and

AUSTIN, Texas, July 17.—The Library at the University of Texas has just acquired a group of old papers, a gift from E. L. Shettles, according to Miss Winnie Allen, assistant archivist. The papers include letters written by T. L. McKenney to B. S. Cox in 1828, a deed by Gilbert Longstreet to Augustus B. Longstreet in 1849, a letter by Horace Mann to Dr. Brewer in 1850 and one by Horace Mann to C. G. Ogden in 1851, a deed by Sam Houston and Margaret M. Houston in 1858, a bond by T. L. Scott and M. E. Scott in 1860, a letter by Opie Read to Lizzie G. Dickson in 1889, and a description of a home in Georgia, undated. Most interesting of these papers are the letters of Horace Mann, a well-known educator of the Nineteenth century, and the letter by Opie Read, a sort of Will Rogers of his day, who established the Arkansas Traveler, a humorous paper. JAMES V. ALLRED

WICHITA FALLS, July 17.—From bootblack to attorney general, sounding like the plot of an Alger book, is the step that James V. Allred will have taken if he is elected to the state post.

Allred, born in 1899 in Montague County, shined shoes in a barber shop and sold newspaper while going to school in Bowie. Later he was substitute mail carrier for his father.

Going to Rice Institute for further education Allred worked in a Houston filling station to pay school expenses. His schooling was interrupted when he entered the service at the age of 19 during the war.

After the war the Montague county youth studied law at Cumberland and entered the practice of law in Wichita Falls. He was appointed district attorney by Governor Pat Neff and elected to succeed himself.

Resigning from the prosecutor's office Allred returned to the firm he had been associated with previously—a full partner. He stayed there until he became a candidate for attorney general in 1926.

The campaign four years ago saw nearly as much interest paid to the race for attorney general as to that of Governor.

The fact that Dan Moody was stepping out of office to oppose Gov. Ma Ferguson made it especially attractive.

Allred carried his county of Montague by a majority of six to one. His total vote in the state was 356,936 but he was defeated by the narrow margin of 4,046. He accepted the result without contest.

In 1928 Young county friends placed his name on the ticket again for attorney general but he withdrew the name, refusing to run against his former opponent for a second term. Allred has spent the last four years in a general practice of law in Wichita Falls.

A resolution of indorsement signed by citizens of Montague county, reads as follows: "As a newsboy and a bootblack Jimmie Allred was a success; he had a splendid court reporter; as district attorney he showed himself to be absolutely without fear and equipped to meet the ablest lawyer at the bar, his record being equal to that of the splendid lawyers in the state that have held that position in his district.

"We have known him and watched him with pride as he builded to success. Clean, upright, courageous, industrious, efficient,

FORMER CLARENDON EDITOR VISITED BY RANCHMAN

The following was clipped from a late issue of the Rockdale Reporter, the paper published at Rockdale by John E. Cooke, former newspaper man of Clarendon. The article:

"Reporter and wife enjoyed a short visit the first of the week from M. T. (Doc) Howard, an old Panhandle friend with whom the cowboy of this column used to 'ride the range' in those more or less hectic days when Donley county was just emerging from the cowboy stage into a land of 'stock-farming,' when such old-timers as Doc Howard and Joe Horn were quite sure that the 'nesters' with their Jersey cows were going to be the ruin of the country; and when the matter of growing cotton was unthought of. Reporter and wife stayed long enough to see the first cotton gin built, and Howard has remained to witness the almost complete transformation of the country from ranching to farming. Still, he is a cowboy; a 'small cattleman,' they used to call his type, with a 'little' ranch of only twelve sections, where he mixes cattle raising with farming, and enjoys the pleasure of both the harvest and round up. Mr. Howard owns a piece of land down in Burleson county, and while on a business trip to Austin dropped off here to investigate its location with respect to any oil field development. Good citizen and good friend, Reporter and wife were privileged to have with this typical old-time Panhandle cowboy. It brought back many pleasant memories of the ten years we spent in Donley county.

FORMER CLARENDONITES HERE ON SHORT VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Hughston, former merchant of this city, were here the latter part of both the week from Crowell for a visit with friends. Mr. Hughston stated that the harvest was over near his present home city and that they were needing rain very badly. He reported also that the crops near Clarendon seemed to be in as good condition as any he had seen here the latter part of last week and that the way things looked in this immediate vicinity. This family has been out of the city for about ten years.

National Canning Contest Stirs Interest of Clarendon Women

Six hundred dollars for a quart jar of canned food! Can one jar of food be worth that?

This is a question that is agitating Clarendon home-makers since word got around that six hundred dollars in cash would be paid for the best jar of fruit, vegetables or meat entered in the second National Canning Contest which is being held at Shenandoah, Iowa, under the auspices of the Household Science Institute.

The contest seeks to further the work of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the home demonstration agents throughout the country by focusing the attention of American housewives on the economy and healthfulness of home canned foods.

First prize winner in the National Canning Contest last year was Mrs. Mary Hvass, Kennan, Wisconsin, farm woman, whose entry of a quart jar of green peas was chosen as the best entered by the girls and women from all sections of the United States.

The holding of the contest in Iowa this year is due to the influence of Henry Field, Shenandoah farmer, merchant and KFNFA announcer whose career is one of the romances of American life.

Offer $4,250 in Prizes

Four hundred and seventy prizes totalling $4,250 in cash, loving cups and ribbons, will be distributed to the winners in the contest, which comprises three major divisions: fruits, vegetables and meats. The best entry in each division will be awarded $100. One of these will also receive the five-hundred dollar sweepstake prize. Second prize in each division will be $50, third prize $25, and the fourth prize $10. The winners will also receive a loving cup and ribbon. There will also be 30 prizes of five dollars each, 75 prizes of $2.50 each and 300 prizes of one dollar each. In addition, five hundred dollars in cash will be awarded to the home demonstration agent whose county sends in the largest number of entries, $250 to the agent whose county sends in the next largest number, and $100 to the agent of the county sending in the third largest number.

The contest is open to every woman and girl in the United States. There are no restrictions as to the nature of the food sent. Contestants may enter one, two or all three divisions. Entries should be sent in as soon as possible after canning. These will be placed and kept on exhibition at Shenandoah until after the closing of the contest, which will be on October 1.

Contest Closes October 1

Fruit and vegetable entries in the contest will be judged for clearness, color, pack, neatness, flavor and texture. The meat entries will be judged on neatness, texture and flavor. Judges, each one a recognized food authority, will be Dr. Louise Stanley, director bureau of home economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture; Dr. Margaret Justin, president American Home Economics Association; George Farrell, director of extension for the north central states for the Department of Agriculture; Mrs. Josephine Zakke, director of home economics of girls club work for Mississippi.

Contestants are free to use any method of canning they prefer, according to Grace Viall Gray, nationally-known canning expert

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

R. J. Ball, editor of the Loveland (Colo) Reporter-Herald, says: "That the greatest, most dynamic force in any community is the modern, aggressive and progressive newspaper."

It is the mirror through which community activities, community progress and development, community industries, business and social life are reflected to the outside world.

It gives to the community an unselfish service, a service the value of which cannot be measured in dollars and cents, a service of benefit to even the most humble citizen, through constant and persistent effort to advance those things that mean most for community growth and development, and the happiness and comfort of its citizens.

The independent press, not throttled by political bias, selfish greed nor personal aggrandizement, fighting always for what is right and just and fair, with ever friendly consideration for the views and opinions of all classes of citizens, is the real power and guiding force that builds cities, makes for happy homes and a contented, wide-awake citizenship.

"The Home Town Paper" is a local institution in which every loyal citizen should be a stockholder—not through financial investment, but through the investment of good will and a spirit of helpfulness to the end its services may be enlarged and its usefulness gain added impetus.

A community is largely judged by the appearance, character and type of its newspaper, and should influence its business interests to do their full part in giving to their paper the volume of business essential to its success and the encouragement so necessary to keep it abreast the times in improvements and development.

I spent much of my time traveling by automobile. Just having returned from a long trip and about to start on another, I want to talk about something that everyone notices first. In fact, I would call them the "first aid" to the traveler, and that is the filling stations.

In traveling from Minneapolis to the Gulf and from St. Louis to Denver, what has come to my attention most is the filling stations of the Phillips Petroleum Company.

These stations are green with variegated color type roofs. They are unique, unusually attractive, clean and modern. The sight of them is a beacon light to the traveler: they send out a silent but cordial invitation to come in and get acquainted. These stations are especially attractive at night, having an immense eye appeal.

One of the many reasons for the popularity of these stations is the pride of the service men in their company, which is clearly reflected in the appearance of the stations. In every case I found them friendly and very solicitous of my welfare.

One of the most important things for a traveler is to have good oil, good gas, and the attention to the car that is so necessary in making the trip pleasant and enjoyable.

These Phillips Filling stations have so impressed me that I try to route my trip so I can go through the towns served by them and get the benefits of their splendid service and buy their oil and gas, because I have found none better.

D. W. Pontius, President of the Pacific Electric Railway Company, says:

That education is the foundation of progress of any nation.

Educational advantages available to the citizens of this country is the factor that has contributed more than any other single element to our high rank among nations of the world.

We may rightfully be proud of our school system and to it we should pay tribute for the large measure of progress and happiness that is our lot as a people and nation.

For still greater progress industry must look upon education and our institutions of learning as a vital industrial concern should continue to increase interest in our public schools and encourage the establishment of curricula that will further fit our

Hollis Leathers and Cecil Dyer are both incapacitated due to the results of a collision of the cars which they were driving late Sunday evening. H. L. WILDER LEAVES TO STUDY IN BOSTON

Dr. H. L. Wilder left last Saturday evening for Boston, where he will be for the coming six weeks at the Massachusetts General Hospital for study. Dr. Wilder will be in a clinic under Dr. Cabot and will make a special study of Urology since he has charge of this department of the McKean Clinic at Pampa when he returns to that city about September first. Dr. Wilder was chosen from a number of applicants for the place and will also have charge of the department of Roentology and diagnosis in addition to the department of Urology. The clinic is to be located in a new building that is now under construction and will in all probability be ready for use about September first, which date has been set for its opening.

boys and girls who have already left the schools to take up industrial work, so they may solve the complex problems of lift and permit still better citizenship.

Many of our citizens, through no fault of their own, are sometimes deprived of early schooling to which they are rightly entitled. These young men and women after entering the employ of an industry should be given every opportunity and encouraged to study in order that they may realize their ambition of a broader and fuller life of usefulness and industrial advancement.
