AGRICULTURE'S NEW LEADERSHIP

My faith in the future of American agriculture is greater today than it has ever been. Times may be a bit hard, prices lower than they ought to be and conditions throughout industry unsatisfactory for the moment, but there is a great corrective force at work in agriculture and its effect will be increasingly evident from year to year.

The hope of agriculture, the force that will find the solutions for its many perplexing problems, the leadership that will blaze the trail to farm prosperity, is in the younger generation of farm boys and girls. On them rests a tremendous responsibility, a challenging opportunity for serving. And they are eager to accept it. In fact they have accepted it and are at work, with an enthusiasm that can't be downed, and an optimism and courage that will not countenance defeat.

During the last summer I have had repeated contacts with these farm boys and girls, men and women of tomorrow. I have seen them at 4-H club meetings, at state fairs, at county and local fairs, at farm picnics, in conversations and at work on the farms. I have talked to them, heard them discuss the problems of agriculture, both of an economic and a practical nature. I have seen the results of their thoughtful labor and I have sensed their desires and their ambitions. The more I talked to them, the more I listened to what they had to say, the more I saw of their accomplishments, the more fully I realized the power of the force for good that they represent. These boys and girls are dynamic. They are not satisfied with things as they are. They have the determination to effect the changes which will establish things as they ought to be. They are not the compromising kind. They are not willing to accept a half way victory for agriculture. They want nothing less than equality with other industry, a standard of living equal to that of other classes of our population, a future that is limited only by their ability to achieve.—Arthur Capper in Capper's Farmer.

WHEN KING COTTON REIGNED SUPREME

That immortal orator and knighted soul of the South, Henry W. Grady, once gave to cotton a golden paragraph long held in reverence by sons of the Southland and devotees of the fleecy staple. Recalling its eloquent lines one pauses to consider the present sad plight of King Cotton, and to wonder how long it will be before Southern farmers order their acreage and seed selection with such wisdom until economic independence again is theirs, and Grady's words are true once more.

Listen to the music of Grady's phrases, and pray for the return of such a time when its sentiments are real:

"What a royal plant it is! The world waits in attendance on its growth; the shower that falls whispering on its leaves is heard around the world; the sun that shines on it is tempered by the prayers of all the people; the frost that chills it and the dew that descends from the stars are noted; and the trespass of a little worm upon its green leaf is more to England than the advance of a hostile army on her Asian outposts. It is gold from the instant it puts forth its tiny shoot. Its fibre is current in every bank, and when, losing its fleeces to the sun, it floats a sunny banner that glorifies the fields of the humblest farmer; that man is marshaled under a flag that will compel the allegiance of the world and bring a subsidy from every nation on earth."

LIQUORITES ARE CROSS-EYED

Exploding another of the arguments of the liquorites, just as all their arguments are exploded, The Christian Advocate, published at Nashville, Tenn., does an exceptionally good job on the false claims of the wets that prohibition has reduced the price of grain. Here it is:

"Opponents of prohibition have said the price of grain is reduced because it is not now, in demand for distilling whisky; and the same opponents say more whisky is drunk now than ever. These two statements offered by the same people cause one to wonder whether their brains are scrambled or their hearts perverse.

"Prohibitionists would think grain prices should in the long run be better when the grain is used for healthy purposes than when it is made into a poisonous and inflaming drug. The fact, however, is that grain prices are not being affected by prohibition. The wets brag on conditions in Canada, where they claim liquor is being properly regulated, but Canada wheat is as cheap as grain in the United States. Russia manufactures no liquor but its grain is cheap. The wets are cross-eyed—they neither look where they hit nor hit where they look."

IN THE LINE OF DUTY

You would think there's little which a man loves quite so well as his life. Yet there is nothing of which he is more careless when fulfilling what he senses as duty. Not duty which is imposed upon him, but that which comes from within, voluntarily.

Men whom others have considered weaklings have risen above their ordinary selves to immortal greatness through their simple, determined adherence to what they believe to be their duty.

Everyone remembers the incident, happening a few years ago, when a wireless operator on a sinking ship went down at his post as though nothing out of the ordinary were happening. Going under rapidly, he jokingly conversed with an operator on a ship which had heard the S. O. S. call. The water was coming into the wireless room and he asked the operator who had answered his call for the loan of an umbrella. "What dam of lances brought thee forth to jest at dawn with death?" came back to him. "Good-by" came across the wireless as the water closed over him.

"It is related of William of Orange," wrote Emerson, "that, whilst he was besieging a town on the Continent, a gentleman sent to him on public business came to his camp, and, learning that the King was before the walls, he ventured to go where he was. He found him directing the operations of his gunners, and having explained his errand and received his answer, the King said, 'Do you not know, sir, that every moment that you spend here is at the risk of your life?' 'I run no more risk,' replied the gentleman, 'than your Majesty.' 'Yes,' said the King, 'but my duty brings me here, and yours does not.' In a few minutes a cannon-ball fell on the spot, and the gentleman was killed."

"Napoleon," said Goeth, "visited those sick of the plague, in order to prove that the man who could banish fear could banish the plague also; and he was right. 'Tis incredible what force the will has in such cases; it penetrates the body, and puts it in a state of activity, which repels all hurtful influences, whilst fear invites them."

Possibly, that explains in part why men are able to accomplish the superhuman, why they are able to do things immortal, because they are, in the pursuit of duty, immortal.—William J. Wyatt.

In 1928 Texas spent $195,250,325 for luxuries, that is for soft drinks, ice cream, candy, chewing gum, movies and cosmetics. One hundred ninety-five and a quarter million dollars is not a small sum of money. That year Texas paid $100,000,000 for accidents which happened at the average of 400 per day. And during the same year Texas put into her public elementary and secondary schools and tax supported colleges and universities a total of $78,684,784. Which figures make interesting comparisons.—N. E. A. Research Bulletin.

From the experience of the past year it is very probable that standard staple cotton will be grown even more extensively in Donley County in 1931 than ever before. The growing of any good pure-bred standard staple cotton will free the American farmer from the competition of foreign short-staples, and make the balanced growing of cotton again a profitable venture. Bleached standard staples from the Panhandle of Texas will command a premium this fall. Moderate acreage and better staples are the salvation of Southern farmers.

After two week's operation a newspaper launched at Claude in opposition to the Claude News suspended for lack of patronage. In the first place Claude is too small a town for two papers, and secondly, the Claude News is covering the field too well to have competition. Editor Waggner deserves better patronage than he gets and Claude has probably seen the last of "spite" newspapers for many, many years. They never pay.

SEEING HAVANA

Reports from the sunny South indicate that Havana, Cuba, is having its most successful season, and there is a steady stream of tourists traveling between New York and Florida points, and then over to Havana by the Clyde-Mallory Line. Cuba is often referred to as the "Pearl of the Antilles," is always being compared with Paris as one of the gay World Capitals. It is estimated that there are now $50,000,000 worth of palatial private yachts in the waters between Miami and Havana, and thousands of people who travel on the magnificent steamers out of New York are able to get an "eye-full" of these show boats that are the playthings of the world's millionaires.

"Look Out for Tempting Winter Dishes," Says Ona Munson

Ona Munson Knows Her Winter Sports

no timidity in accepting an invitation to engage in any of the hardy winter amusements. Crouching beneath the sail of an ice boat propelled by a sixty-mile-a-minute gale, or trudging hill and dale on snow shoes, she is in her element.

Food vs. Figure

But winter sports bring lusty appetites and conjure up visions of criddle cakes and country sausage, thick soups and thick steaks, mush rooms and mountainous baked potatoes. What to do?—for the exacting new styles with their trim, revealing sports tops and clinging evening gowns, are uncompromising. How to keep that slender but softly rounded figure for which these styles are but an accessory?

Ask Ona Munson, Miss Munson, one of First National's brightest new stars, who periodically abandons the studios for the sports of the Sierra's snowy summits, has a system.

"Winter sports are strenuous, so strenuous they will permit and offset a reasonable amount of yielding to the tempting dishes of the season," says Miss Munson. "But if the temptation is too strong or will power fails, just take a course of the 'balanced diet' treatment. It's the secret of most of these marvelous Hollywood figures."

"There's nothing complicated about the balanced-diet system. Reduce the quantity of food within reason according to the particular needs of the particular figure, but be certain that each day's menu includes something from each of these groups:

- "Sugar and starches, among the least fattening of which are fruit sugars and crisp cereals. "Proteins, such as fish, lean meat, white meat of chicken, and eggs—avoid all pork. "Mineral foods, including celery, spinach, chard, lettuce, cabbage, tomatos "Vitamins, the least fattening of which are apples, raw cabbage lettuce, lemons, liver, milk, oranges, grapefruit, fresh pineapple "Roughage, of the least fattening sorts, such as bran, lettuce, celery, cabbage, string beans, asparagus."

MISS ATHLETIC AMERICA has made her bow at King Winter's "sports court." The society maid is responding to the "Call of the North," and the rugged sports of the fascinating winter carnivals in old Quebec, at picturesque Lake Placid and far-off Banff. Sturdy college girls are rummaging through closets, tossing aside tennis rackets and golf sticks to avid search of hockey clubs, ice skates and even snow shoes and skis. The old order of things in the realm of feminine sports has undergone radical changes. Cracked are the shackles which kept the sex within a circumscribed field which offered only sleigh riding and ludicrous attempts at ice skating as the sole outdoor diversions. Four modern lass who can perform the trick of wielding a 54 inch mallet while guiding a plunging polo pony or successfully compete with the so-called stronger sex in the risky but less of motor boat racing, manifests

FIGHT FOR RANGE BY CATTLEMEN IS TOLD OF BY OLD CLARENDON RESIDENT

(From The Dallas Morning News by W. S. Adair)

"When I settled at Clarendon, Donley County, in the spring of 1890, the entire northwestern part of the State was open range, and, as most people believed, could never be worth anything except for grazing purposes."

"Any point up that way was in somebody's pasture, and Clarendon marked about the center of the Clarendon Land and Investment Company's ranch, which was thirty or forty miles in length by twenty miles in breadth."

"But the pasture of the Clarendon Land and Investment Company hardly was a patching in comparison with the possessions of Rowe Brothers on the east or those of the late Col. Charles Goodnight on the west, in either of which several unorganized counties were lost."

"The cattlemen very naturally did all within their power to discourage settlers. The Panhandle was so dry in those days that crops would not grow, and the cattlemen filled newcomers with the notion that the man with the hoe had no business in that part of the country."

"But in 1893 the snows and the rains began once more to fall, and the vegetation burst forth with the pent-up energy of three years. By early summer the country was covered with cattle, settlers were coming in greater numbers than ever, business grew brisk with the merchants and the drouth was half forgotten."

town was full of life of the frontier stripe. Gambling dens and dance halls occupied the ground floors of the buildings, and the saloons ran all night. There was always much doing when court was in session, and just after the cowboys and the railroad employees got their pay, and during the cattle-shipping season, the cowboys after getting rid of their money, always rode out of town, drunk and firing their pistols, but never with a desire to hit anybody.

"When there was enough rain to make the grass grow cattle were rolling fat by midsummer, and then the railroad began to take them by the solid trainload to the Northern markets."

"The first rivetless cargo ship was recently completed at Charleston, S. C. Only nine workmen were required for the job of building the 2500-barrel tanker and they used 8,000 pounds of welding wire as against 85,000 pounds of rivets that would have been required. Savings were 20 per cent in weight and 25 per cent in costs."

The outcome was so amazing that, with all his precautions, he must needs blurt it out himself, not caring who knew it. He showed specimens of Kafir, milo, sorghum and alfalfa, which compared favorably with the best any other section of the world had ever exhibited.

"After the dry years beginning in 1890, as a result of which cattlemen lost heavily, they began to make provisions against the next dry spell."

A woman of Paris, who sued for the unauthorized publication of her photo, obtained four cents damages.

F. W. & D. TERRACING OFFICIALS HERE MARCH 20-21

The Federal Land Bank, the A. & M. College and the Fort Worth & Denver have joined hands in a terracing campaign, extending from Fort Worth to Texline, from Wichita Falls to Abilene and from Spur and from Estaline to Lubbock, Dimmitt and Silvertown.

Other co-operating agencies in each county are being asked to help in securing good attendance. These include County Agents, Chamber of Commerce Secretaries, National Farm Loan Association Secretaries and Vocational Teachers of Agriculture.

The first meeting will be held in Tarrant County, February 18th, and the last one will be at Lubbock, April 3rd. The party will devote two days to Donley County farmers, with the terracing officials opening the school on Friday, March 20th and continuing through Saturday, March 21st.

A. K. Short, Conservation and Terracing Agent for the Federal Land Bank of Houston, will discuss the value of terraces from the view point of the Federal Land Bank. Mr. M. R. Bentley, Farm Engineer of the Extension Service, A. & M. College, will discuss the results of terracing and present some slides on the screen to visualize the effect of terraces in holding water on the field, as well as showing how terraces, when properly built, prevent washing.

In each county there will be a night meeting. The next day there will be a field demonstration in running lines and building terraces.

Terracing has been done for many years to prevent washing, but it has been found in recent years that terraces are just as valuable for conserving moisture as they are for saving soil.

It is hoped that bankers, merchants, landlords and farmers will attend both the terracing meeting and the terracing demonstration.

While the ability to travel at this terrific speed is of little practical value in itself, it does serve to illustrate the great advance made by automobile engineers in recent years.

FOUR MILES A MINUTE

A new automobile record was made on the Daytona beach a few days ago, when Captain Malcolm Campbell drove his racing car at the unprecedented speed of 246 miles an hour, nearly 15 miles an hour faster than the former world's record held by the late Captain Segrave.

The skill and daring of those who perform these extraordinary feats of speed can not fail to excite admiration, but conservative folks will have little desire to emulate them.

Most people are satisfied to travel slower, with the probability of traveling longer.
