SALUTATORY

For the last 18 years Sam M. Braswell has published The Clarendon News. He has given Clarendon and Donley County one of the outstanding weekly newspapers of the state, and has won wide recognition in the newspaper field as the result of his ability as a newspaper man.

The new management of the paper realizes the great responsibility that rests upon our shoulders in carrying out the duties connected with the publication of the newspaper. It is our earnest desire that we may be of service to this section; that we may carry on the good work done by Mr. Braswell in the past; that The News will continue to serve as an effective instrument for the betterment of the social and civic life of the community.

It is our heartfelt desire that we may become substantial, worthwhile citizens of the town; that we may earn the confidence and respect of its people, and that we may make of the paper an organ which will merit the support of its business men.

Here's to the future of the best town in the Panhandle! May it continue to grow and prosper.

Fred L. Williams.

VALEDICTORY

With last week's issue of The Clarendon News, the connection of the undersigned ends after a few days over eighteen years.

This week, acting in the capacity of a "hired man without pay," I am supervising my last issue of The News for the new owner, Mr. Fred L. Williams, who will arrive here today or tomorrow.

Words can ill express my appreciation to the people of Clarendon and Donley County for the continued and generous co-operation and treatment during all these years, and while I shall go shortly to another field there will be keen regret at the parting from so many tried and true friends for the past two decades.

While a citizen of Donley County I have tried always to build up and contribute my humble bit to the general good. Naturally I have made mistakes and not all my labors have been successful, but I still have hopes for the realization of everything good and contributory for Clarendon and Donley County.

Having sold The News, I shall soon make another connection. I am not ready at this moment to announce my plans, but I want the people of this section to know that I sold to a fine and worthy newspaper worker, a young man who will go far with his equipment, enthusiasm and character.

I bespeak for Mr. Williams a long and successful conduct of The News and invite the same kindly co-operation and generous patronage with which I have been blessed over the years.

May God in His Eternal Goodness guide and direct you all in paths of happiness and prosperity.

Sam M. Braswell.

What father would like most to get out of his new car is the rest of the family.

In principle there is no difference between those who want to do a half week's work for a full week's pay and those who demand full pay for doing nothing.

AMERICA'S WEALTH WIDELY SPREAD

Observation shows that the productivity of the American worker, reinforced with power and with improved machinery, is the greatest in the world, and that the income thus produced has been widely spread among all classes of the population.

If this were not the case, the widespread distribution of millions of automobiles, electricity, refrigerators, telephones, radios, and individually owned homes which actually took place would have proved impossible. There would not have been the money to purchase them.

On the face of things, the absurdity of statements that 2 percent of the people receive 60 to 80 percent of our national income is apparent.

As a matter of fact, if such a poor distribution of wealth existed, the very mass-production and mass consumption of goods, in which the United States has led foreign countries, would have been impossible. Our great plants, our millions of employed workers, would have been impossible.

In other words, the soap box orators, who have been poisoning the public mind with false statistics, have been trying to explain away the plain truth.

As the Brookings Institute of Washington has reported, those who work for a living receive as wages about 85 percent of all the national income. The remaining 15 percent goes as a return on capital investments, more than half of which is owned by individuals of moderate income who own the stock in our corporations.

The figures are proved by a study of the Federal income tax statistics. The truth is that those receiving incomes of $5,000 a year or more in 1933 got less than 10 percent of the national income.

Our real job, therefore, is not of re-dividing national income, but of increasing our total wealth through increased production and consumption. American experience shows that most of these increases will go into wages.—Industrial Press Service.

FARMERS GET VERY LITTLE

In 1929 the consumers of this country paid something like $19,000,000,000 for the products of American farms, according to Dr. Frederick C. Howe, consumers' council for the A. A. A.

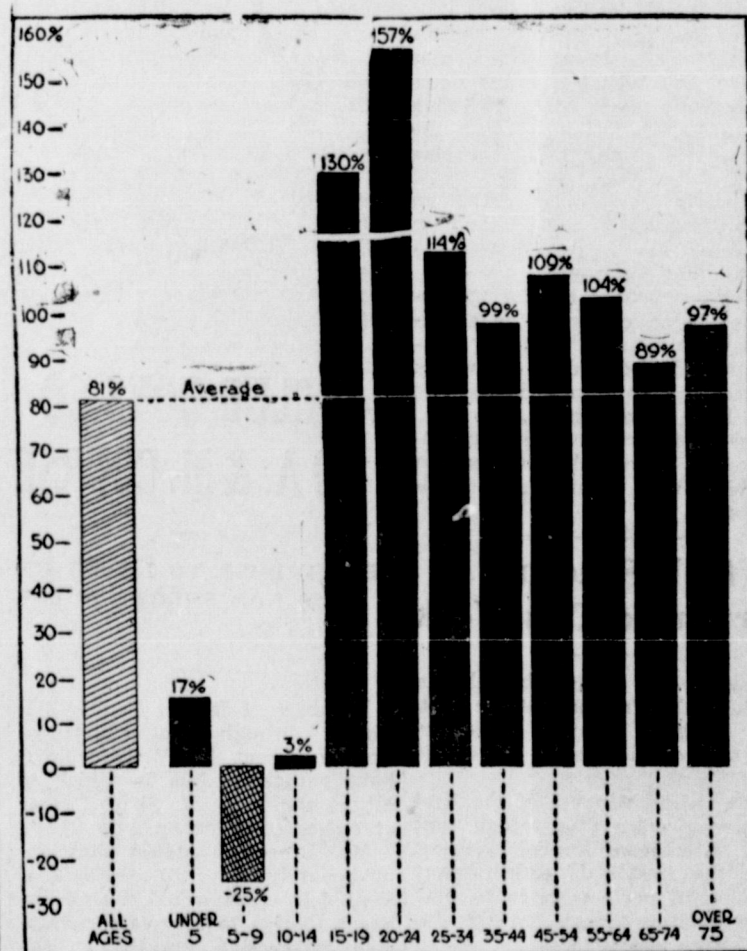

How much of this did the farmer get? How much of it did those who processed and handled get? The answer is revealing.

The farmer, according to the same authority, got seven billion and the industries wedged between him and the consumer got the other twelve. That the division is all wrong is the conviction of many economic experts, who believe that under proper control some of the twelve billions can be divided between the consumer and the farmer, to the profit to the country.—News, Heron Lake, Minn.

The broad, general rule is that a man is about as big as the things that make him mad.

Money buys only the cheaper things.

High School and College Ages Dangerous

The value of street and highway safety education in the lower grades, especially in the lower grades, are shown in the chart above. This chart brings out the percentage of change in the rates of death by automobile accidents from 1922 to 1933 inclusive.

During this period when the rate of death was increasing 81 percent for all ages combined, there was a decrease of 25 percent in the age group of 5 to 9 years, and in the next age group of 10 to 14 years, the increase was only 3 percent. Undoubtedly the great improvement in the fatal accident experience in the ages of 5 to 9 and the very small percentage gain in the ages of 10 to 14 have been the result of safety education in the schools and the protection that has been afforded by traffic officers in the vicinity of schools.

But in the age group of 15 to 19 years, which may be regarded as the high school period, deaths from automobile accidents having increased 130 percent, while in the age group of 20 to 24, which may be regarded as the college period, the increase has been even greater.

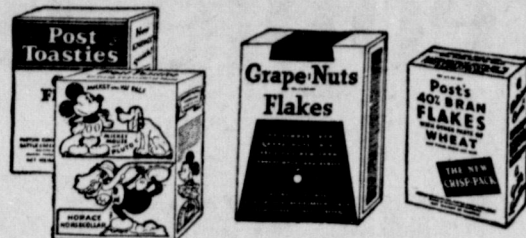

The bad record of deaths in the two age points to the great need of educational efforts at a time when young people are beginning to drive cars. Many high schools now are providing such courses of instruction, and as these are extended to all high schools, it may be expected that in time the adverse experience in the high school and perhaps also in the college groups will begin to show the improvement that must be made if coming generations of automobile drivers are to become safer drivers than many present day motorists.

SIDELIGHTS by MARVIN JONES Panhandle Congressman

In my judgment, a program of road building is the key to the future of our country. For a number of years I have been urging a complete and adequate road building program.

This should include not only the through roads, but also the state, county and farm-to-market roads. In fact, I regard the latter fully as important as the through roads.

The people of our section are glad to know that the Texas Highway Commission has decided that in applying that part of the federal fund that has been set aside for the main arteries, the gaps in the federal highways in the Panhandle are to receive attention.

I served four years on the Roads Committee of the House of Representatives, and during that time urged a proper development of the farm-to-market road system. I have been urging it from year to year since that time.

No finer form of Public Works projects could be fashioned for our section of the country than a complete, well-rounded road building program in the interest of all our people.

First shots of the President's Tourney will be fired Sunday when local golfers tee off for the qualifying test over 18 holes.

Playing under the City Tournament rules, this tourney bids fair to be bigger and faster than the former. Handsome engraved trophies will be awarded the winners of each flight, with other prizes for the medalist, the runner-up in each flight, and the consolation winner and runner-up.

There is always a good chance for the dark horses, and this seems to be the best. Excellent golf is being played by a number of the lesser known, and playing with everything to win and nothing to lose, the tournament pressure doesn't bear so strongly.

Clarendon lost their inter-city go with Shamrock Sunday, which isn't surprising after hearing of all the sub-par scores turned in.

WASHINGTON SNAP-SHOTS

Announcement that President Roosevelt is to begin a stump-speaking tour immediately after Congress adjourns in an effort to recapture some of his popularity with the masses of the people has definitely established that the next Presidential campaign will be underway long before next Spring.

In this connection, the White House secretariat was quick to follow its announcement of the President's tour with a denial that there is any parallel with President Wilson's turn from a rebuff by the Senate to an appeal to the people, only to find they stood with the Senate.

There is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt's first speech in Milwaukee will be watched closely by political observers for any further hints that he intends to make the amendment of the Constitution to curtail State's Rights the major issue of the campaign.

waiting, but so will many Southern Democrats who reputedly have already slipped a number of warnings to the White House to shy away from the Constitution and the Supreme Court as issues.

This apparent decision to push ahead despite admonitions from Democratic leaders that the support of the country is slipping away from the reform legislation is best shown by the tossing of the taxation message to the Capitol unexpectedly.

As one observer pointed out, attempts to balance the budget can only be made in the light of expenditures for the coming year, and these will not be compiled until December.

It is not generally realized that the present tax rates are already producing larger revenues than the government received in any year from 1923 to 1928.

Relief Clients To Register With USES

Austin.—Relief roll clients in order to receive benefits of work under the Works Progress Administration must be certified as to eligibility for work and be registered with the U. S. Employment Service, according to instructions received by Texas Relief Commission officials from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in Washington this week.

The instructions pointed out that priority of workers within families shall be suggested by the social service department, based upon such considerations as health, disabilities, preservation of skills, and morale.

Certification of a client for eligibility to employment under the new program will not mean that the client will be dropped from the relief rolls, but as soon as the first paycheck for such employment is received, the case will be closed and relief stopped.

Odd But True By Anderson

LIBRARY NOTES (By Mrs. C. A. Burton)

"Inheritance" by Phyllis Bentley is the story of the introduction of machinery in the textile industry of Great Britain. Miss Bentley has spent most of her life in Yorkshire, where the scenes of the novel are laid, and her family is intimately connected with the woolen textile industry of which "Inheritance" gives such a vivid picture.

The story is written very much in the style of the "Forsyte Saga" by Galsworthy. It is a chronicle of the Oldroyds, the leading family in an English community. The men of this family were strong willed and determined, both in business and social life. Will Oldroyd is the owner of a Yorkshire cloth mill. He has two sons—Jonathan, who becomes a leader in the cause of the oppressed mill-workers, and Briggs, who succeeds his father as mill-owner. And Briggs has a son, a dashing young modern. The story makes very real the impassioned struggle between workers and employer, the fierce resentment with which the workers watched the introduction of machines, one of which would do the work of ten men—and leave nine unemployed. Bitter hatred, fierce passions are developed, and many dramatic scenes result. Miss Bentley is at her best as she portrays her characters—they are clear cut, and forceful, some attractive, some otherwise, but all arresting, interesting. It is really the story of a great industrial revolution, told through the lives of the people, particularly of the Oldroyd family. Changing habits and customs, changing ideals in English life are graphically portrayed, and can not fail to be interesting to the discriminating reader. Interwoven with this is the story of the personal lives of many people with their joys and sorrows, romance and reality.

J. B. Priestley said of the book, "This is a very fine book indeed, and it should at once establish Miss Bentley as one of the best of the younger novelists. There has gone to the making of it a genuine and fine creation energy."

The London Times said, "Inheritance" is a fine and memorable novel. It is another of those long and detailed family chronicles which cover several generations, but unlike many of them, it unfolds a singularly dramatic story. I found myself charmed and delighted and moved."

The Observer, London, says, "It is a book of tense and vivid human interest. Miss Bentley uses a large canvas, but all her characters are closely and lovingly depicted."

We have another of Miss Bentley's stories, "A Modern Tragedy" in which the moors and valleys of Yorkshire and the mill town of Hudley just a few miles away from the Ire Valley of "Inheritance" form the setting of the story. This, too, is a story of textile mill life, but of a later period. It is a detailed and authentic presentation of modern industry, vitally interesting as a fictional expression of some characteristic tendencies of the present time.

A LITTLE BIT OF EVERYTHING

Achievements

Mr. Sam M. Braswell's achievements in the newspaper business were many. As publisher of the leading Panhandle weekly newspaper his outstanding successes have been many. In the publishing of a special edition in commemoration of some event pertaining to the history of the city, the upbuilding of citizenship, or newspaper anniversaries he is without an equal in this part of the state and possibly the South-western United States.

His annual 'Home Town Editions' were great achievements singly and collectively. The 'Pioneer's Edition' was an outstanding achievement in that it was his last special edition before disposing of his ownership of The Clarendon News to Mr. Fred L. Williams. That edition will be long remembered by the young folks as well as the old-timers. Many persons, and their friends treasure it; it retells the lives lived by the founders of this city. That edition recounts the trials and tribulations of the old-timers in the founding of Old Clarendon.

What better achievement could have been made by Mr. Braswell on this occasion than the publishing of an outstanding edition?

Mr. Braswell is not lost to the newspaper field, in the opinion of this writer. His future successes will be numbered over and over, both in the newspaper field and civic work.

Clarendon has not lost Mr. Braswell forever. Even though he may go thousands of miles away, he will forever hold a warm spot in his heart for his many friends here. He is not gone. We will see him occasionally.

Mr. Braswell has been my closest friend since I have been in Clarendon. The many deeds of kindness rendered me will always be remembered.

The city suffers in the loss of Mr. and Mrs. Braswell.

Welcome

We welcome Mr. Fred L. Williams as the new editor of the Clarendon News. He is an energetic young man. He is a hustler. He is a live-wire. His past business success has been wonderful. He will go far in the newspaper field. He will be an asset to the city.

May the citizens give Mr. Williams that fine co-operation for which they are so well known over the state.

Welcome to the Williams'.

"Sturdy, rugged Dodge helped me blaze a way through trackless wastelands in the Far East," writes Roy Chapman Andrews, famous explorer. "And now Dodge blazes a new trail—the economy trail. I know my new Dodge costs less to run than a small car."

A deal was consummated Saturday whereby Homer McElvany became operator of the new Sinclair service station on Highway No. 5, one block West of Kearney street.

The new station was opened June 1st, and has been operated by George Carter until Mr. McElvany took charge Saturday night.

McElvany stated he would put forth every effort to provide efficient service and high quality merchandise to the motoring public, and invites his friends, as well as new customers to visit his station.

Besides operating a well-equipped Sinclair Service Station he washes and greases cars and carries a complete line of Seiberling tires and tubes.

Carter has not announced his plans for the future.

Total Eclipse of Moon Seen Monday-Tuesday

A full eclipse of the moon was observed by Donley county people Monday and Tuesday nights, beginning about 8:30 and was easily visible in all its beauty of orange colored light as the earth's shadow totally obscured the moon.

The eclipse was visible in the whole of the western hemisphere except the extreme north parts of North America. The show lasted nearly five hours from the time the earth's shadow began to cover the face of the moon moving from east to west. The moon was completely hidden for approximately an hour, observers stated.

At the time of the eclipse the sun was about 94,415,000 miles away from the earth and the moon was 226,740 miles away on exactly the opposite side.

For a great part of the United States this was the first total eclipse of the moon since 1927.

Mr. and Mrs. Mead Haile of Dimmitt spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Clarendon with friends and relatives.
