CC president will step down this year

Clarendon College President Bill Auvenshine confirmed Tuesday that he will step down at the end of this year.

While no formal action has taken place, Auvenshine said he informed the Board of Regents at its May 20 meeting that he intends to resign at the end of 2010.

"My only regret is that I came to Clarendon at the end of my career," Auvenshine told the Enterprise.

"Had this been my first job, I would have wanted to stay for 30 years."

Auvenshine said the college is not yet ready to receive applications for his job, but a plan is being formulated to select the next president of the Panhandle's oldest college.

A committee will draw up a profile and qualifications to be presented to the regents in June as part of a six-month process to search for a replacement. The new president will take over on January 1, 2011.

The departure will cap Auvenshine's 54th year in education. He came to CC three years ago following the resignation of Dr. Myles Shelton. Auvenshine originally was an interim president, but regents seated him as president several months later to lead the college as it worked to pass maintenance and operations taxes in Gray and Childress counties and undertook building projects at the CC Pampa Center.

"I was hired to help find a president, and that's what I'm going to do now," Auvenshine said. "I have thoroughly enjoyed Clarendon College, the city, and the citizens; and I have been extremely pleased with the direction Clarendon College is moving and know it will continue."

Auvenshine said family health problems are his reason for leaving Clarendon.

In other college news, regents approved several new hires at its May meeting including Corey Murdock and John Havens as wind energy instructors, Brian Fuller as an agriculture instructor, Mark Simmons as a welding instructor, Mikalennet Tannel to coach volleyball, and Kellye Reed as a nursing instructor. The board also accepted the resignation of volleyball coach Tennessee Brown.

Services honor those who died for America

Memorial Day services in Donley County were well attended this year with ceremonies in Clarendon and at Rowe Cemetery both drawing about 70 people each on Monday.

The first service at Rowe Cemetery near Hedley was hosted by the Adamson-Lane Post of the American Legion. Will Thompson gave the welcome and history of Memorial Day, and Bright Newhouse delivered the invocation.

Doil Messer draped the ceremonial empty chair reserved for those listed as prisoners of war or missing in action, and Connie DeBord delivered the keynote address, giving special mention to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the raising of the flag on Iwo Jima.

Jack Moreman discussed the post's effort to purchase a marker for Aunt Belle Smith, who was a spy for the Confederacy and was the wife of CSA Capt. Nat Smith. Those interested in making a donation to this effort can contact Moreman.

Later at the Donley County War Memorial in Clarendon, the Veterans of Foreign Wars hosted a ceremony that also honored the nation's fallen heroes.

Larry Capranica opened the service with a prayer, and Bill Houston performed the National Anthem as well as "God Bless the USA."

District 9 VFW Commander George Hall served as master of ceremonies and also delivered the keynote address. Capranica closed the service by playing "Taps" on the trumpet, and the refreshments were served to those in attendance.

Fifth annual event boasts several sales

Bargain shoppers will be in for a treat during the fifth annual "Trash to Treasures" garage sale event to be held in Clarendon and nearby communities this Saturday, June 5.

Twenty-four individual garage sales are scheduled to be held. A complete description of each sale is printed on the official Treasure Map located on the last page of this week's Enterprise.

From an air hockey table to cross ties, this weekend's sales will feature hundreds of treasures just waiting to be uncovered at bargain prices.

"Trash to Treasures" is being promoted with advertising dollars in area communities; and many people from neighboring counties attend.

Memphis man facing charges in sex assaults

A Memphis man is facing two local charges of aggravated sexual assault of a child, according to the Donley County Sheriff's Office.

Autray Dickson, age 18, was first arrested on May 11, 2010, and arraigned by Justice of the Peace Connie Havens, who set bond at $30,000, Sheriff Butch Blackburn said. Dickson posted bond and was released.

The investigation later turned up another possible victim, and Dickson was arrested again on May 27. Havens that time set bond at $50,000, and Dickson again posted bond and was released.

Blackburn said both of the victims in these cases are 13 years of age.

BP disaster is teaching many lessons

By Dr. Mark W. Hendrickson

The explosion that sank British Petroleum's Deepwater Horizon oil-drilling vessel/platform in the Gulf of Mexico in April was an unmitigated disaster. The accident killed 11 workers and has caused massive environmental damage, the full extent of which may not become known for months or years.

Here are some thoughts on this horrible event:

1) The deaths of 11 workers drilling for oil—less than three weeks after the deaths of 29 West Virginia coal miners—serve as a vivid reminder of the dangers faced by those who toil to supply the raw energy upon which our society depends. Most of us take for granted these vital contributors to our economic life. As one who never knew his father due to an oil-field accident long ago, I tend to view these folks as unrecognized heroes. Thank you to all who are doing this essential, dangerous work; may God comfort all who have lost loved ones in this endeavor.

2) The technologies that have been developed to extract fossil fuels from the earth are engineering marvels. Some drilling vessels in the Gulf are nearly the size of World War II-era aircraft carriers. There have been over 14,000 wells drilled in at least 700 feet of water with a superb overall safety record, including no oil spills in the Gulf despite the merciless battering inflicted by Hurricane Katrina. (Whether drilling these wells is safe enough to be permitted is a separate question that will be revisited below.) Drilling for oil in oceans five miles deep, into deposits where the temperature can reach 900 degrees and the pressure 20,000 pounds per square inch, is a colossal engineering achievement.

3) We must never forget the power of nature. Humans have devised myriad ways of fending off nature's destructive power, but there will always be times when nature will simply overpower and overwhelm our best efforts. The explosive force that erupted through the ocean floor and destroyed Deepwater Horizon is one emphatic reminder of that awesome might.

4) Was the disaster avoidable? This is the key question. It is very tempting to jump to conclusions, but first we need more fact-finding.

There have been reports that workers saw considerable physical evidence that key parts of the built-in safety mechanisms on Deepwater Horizon had disintegrated. A preliminary congressional memo containing admissions of "mistakes" by BP reinforces the impression that the disaster might have resulted from a faulty decision-making process. If so, then this horrible tragedy will enter business-school literature as perhaps the definitive case of a dysfunctional managerial chain-of-command.

One of the oldest lessons in the book is to avoid being penny-wise and pound-foolish. How tragic and foolish it would be if it turns out that a decision was made to ignore a safety shutdown that would have cost millions, thereby resulting in an accident that surely will cost BP and related corporations billions.

There has been an unconfirmed report that government regulators gave Deepwater Horizon a pass. If so, why?

5) Finally, should we stop drilling for hydrocarbons in such deep waters? The central problem we deal with in environmental economics is whether the costs of an activity outweigh the benefits or vice versa. It isn't always possible to accurately tabulate costs and benefits, but without a doubt, the environmental and humans costs of the Deepwater Horizon disaster are gargantuan.

I certainly can't say whether deep-sea oil development should continue. With 20 percent of the oil consumed in the United States coming from the Gulf of Mexico, a complete cessation of drilling there appears to be out of the question. Certainly, though, there will be a re-examination of where drilling will be allowed.

Many people are asking why there is drilling in such deep waters. This is a complex issue with multiple factors to consider, but ironically, environmentalists may be partly responsible.

For decades, environmentalists have striven to thwart the development of domestic supplies of energy. They have blocked oil exploration and development in vast tracts of Alaska, the Rocky Mountain states, and the outer continental shelf under relatively shallow waters along our coasts. Furthermore, environmentalists succeeded in preventing increased usage of another energy source that is economically competitive and ecologically and operationally the safest energy source readily and abundantly available to us—namely, nuclear energy.

If these sources of energy had not been choked off in the name of environmental protection, would energy companies be currently drilling as many higher-cost wells in deep water? Is it not possible that zealous environmentalists have unwittingly driven energy companies to drill for oil in places where perhaps they have no business drilling? Should environmentalists rethink their positions and make their peace with sources of energy that pose less of a threat to the environment than deep-water drilling?

These are important questions for environmentalists, policymakers, and indeed, all of us, to consider.

Obama is nation's smallest president

By Geoffrey P. Hunt

Would someone remind us again why the nation elected this man to be president? A man with no resume, a man with no experience in running anything other than a political campaign, a man who is ignorant of history, economics, and technology? A man who is shallow and lazy? A man who shares neither character nor temperament with the American people in this vast republic? How did this happen?

Voters were smitten by the ideological handmaidens of identity politics and the promise of big government. The identity politics substituted a cosmetic profile for character and experience. The promise was that big government has the benevolent power and enlightened expertise to remake America from the top down into a more capable, more caring, kinder, gentler, and more respected place.

What we've received instead was on display at the president's long-awaited press conference in the last week of May. Only a partisan or a fool could deny the irredeemable failure of these ideological handmaidens, the genius of Obama's shrinking presidency. No amount of posturing, buffing up, or Q&A briefing book drills could hide the reality that this man is on a raft at sea accompanied by an equally bewildered boatload of companions who have no idea how they arrived in such deep water, hundreds of miles from land, and with no clue that they are in trouble, let alone what to do about it.

What we've received instead from the ideology of identity politics and big government has been the spread of competency and accountability so thin that the federal government is utterly incapable of defending our shores and borders from invasion -- one by sea in the form of a massive crude oil slick, the other by land in the waves of illegal immigrants flooding Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, and California. In utter exasperation, the citizens of Arizona finally took matters into their own hands, only to be vilified by Obama and his cohorts, who have neither the will nor the capacity to do anything about it.

Identity politics is where grievance-mongering and class resentment intersect with entitlement agitation and representational profiling. Those who use the currency of identity politics appeal to the ideals of justice and fair distribution of resources and outcomes. But in reality they prey on those who are underprivileged and dependent, making claims of dispossession against those who have enjoyed success and independence derived from their own sweat, equity, and competence.

Leaders who devote all of their energy and emotional capital to identity politics instead of creating a competent, skills-based organization soon discover that when critical decisions need to be made and highly skilled resources need to be mobilized, nobody is around who knows how to do it. Such leaders, eventually tuned out and abandoned by even their former acolytes, become irrelevant, easily overwhelmed by events and rivals, taking their organizations -- even a nation -- down with them.

And now we are watching in slow-motion agony the failure of identity politics and big government unwilling and unable to cope with the BP Gulf of Mexico oil spill disaster, gradually revealed like a developing image from a Polaroid instant print. Identity politics assured that no one with any skills or experience would occupy the top jobs in Obama's administration needed to navigate a crisis of this magnitude.

And where oh where is the president, anyhow? Playing another round of golf and hosting the Duke University women's basketball team.

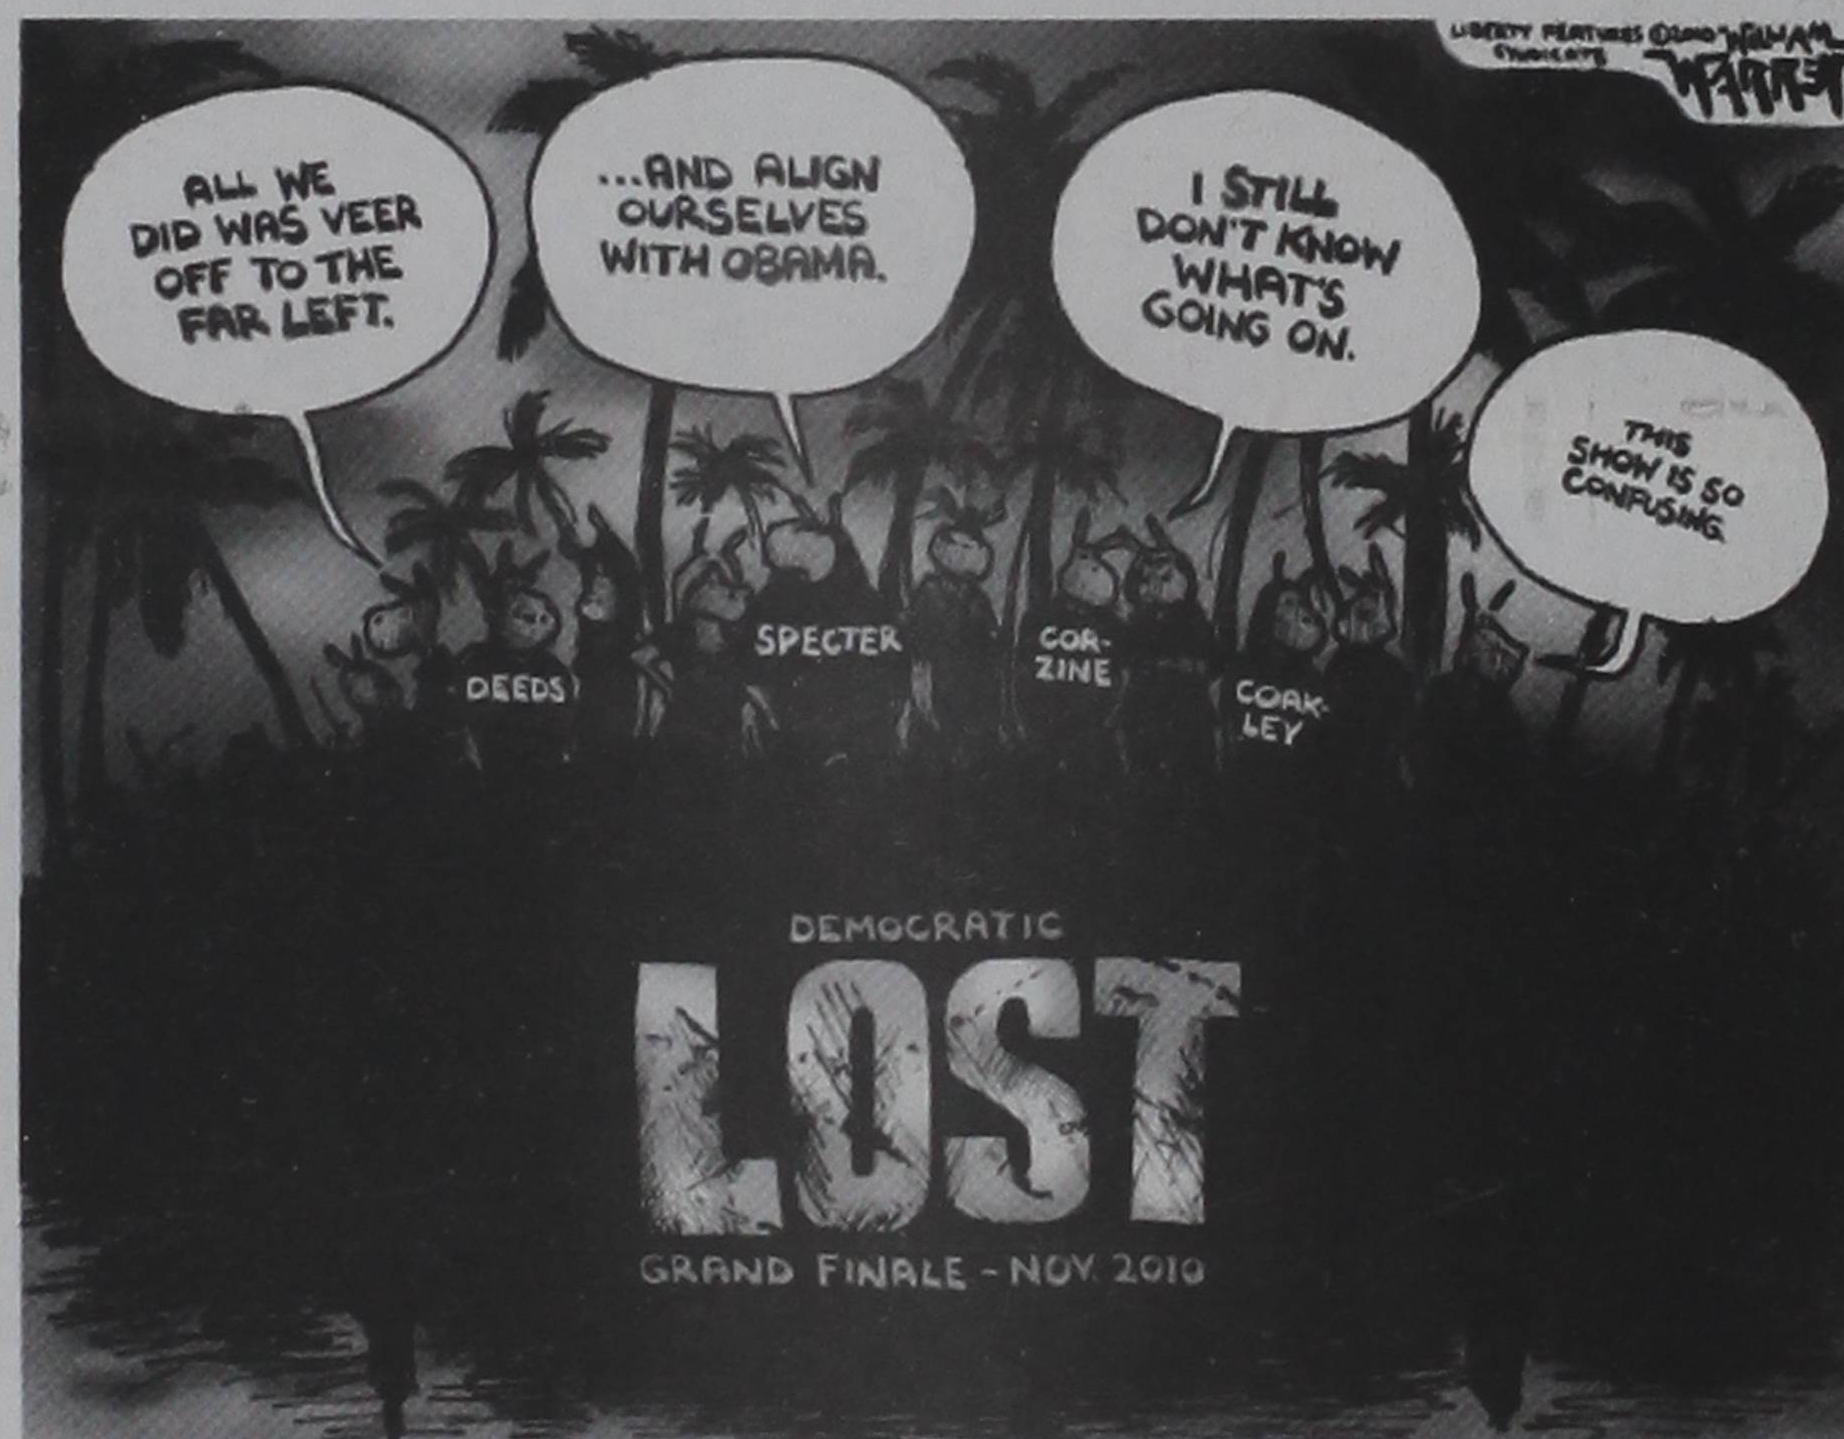

Obama's identity is finished because identity trumped competency. And without competency, his big government is dysfunctional and destructive.

So what's the alternative? Simple. The ideology of limited government. Why? Because limited government is the antithesis of identity politics. The ideology of limited government wouldn't need to rely on overextended organization competencies to manage vast and complex bureaucracies because those bureaucracies would be unnecessary and wouldn't exist. Without identity politics, people who actually know what they're doing could occupy key jobs.

Limited government has to assemble and target just those competencies needed to carry out the limited duties envisioned in the U.S. Constitution, such as providing for the common defense, facilitating interstate commerce and a monetary system, and defending the rights reserved to the people. Everything else can be better-managed by private enterprise, where distributed self interest can gather competencies in units small enough to accomplish something useful.

Identity politics combined with incompetence have exposed the absurdity in the ambitions of big government and made Obama the weakest, most anemic and flaccid president in the modern era. The Latinate word would be diminutive. In simple Saxon tongue, the word is small. This is Obama's presidency.

Border 'solution' a disappointment

For too long in Washington, the issue of border security has fallen off the radar. In communities along the 1,200 mile border that Texas shares with Mexico, however, the effects of a porous border are constantly evident. The violence associated with narco-terrorism, drug and arms trafficking, and human smuggling threatens the safety of local communities in Texas and other border states, and it undermines our national security. Preventing and responding to these challenges is stretching our border forces and law enforcement officials thin. An aggressive strategy to halt illicit activity and the spillover of violence into the U.S. is long overdue, and I am working with my colleagues to make border security an urgent national priority.

I joined with other border state Senators to offer a series of amendments to heighten border security to an emergency spending bill that the Senate recently passed. Our goal was to provide resources and support to our border enforcement officials because they are facing a real crisis in Texas, as well as in New Mexico, Arizona, and California. Altogether, we focused on two key components that must be a part of an effective strategy to secure the southwest boundary with Mexico: the strength and readiness of border forces and the high-tech tools necessary to effectively monitor the border.

I have pushed to expand the presence of unmanned aerial vehicles, or drones, to help protect the southwest border. This would allow U.S. Customs and Border Patrol (CBP) to obtain at least six new drone systems and hire pilots to operate them with the ultimate goal of covering all 2,000 miles of U.S.-Mexico border every day of the week.

Expanding the availability of UAV resources allows border enforcement officials to more efficiently and consistently monitor the border and respond to illicit activity.

These are critical tools because portions of the Southwest border that are ineffectively or intermittently monitored become open portals for drug cartels, arms dealers, human traffickers, and even terrorists.

As well as modernizing our surveillance tools, we must bolster border forces so there is adequate manpower to protect the border and respond to illegal activity. The Department of Homeland Security has 17,000 personnel assigned to the southwest border. Well under half the agents -- about 7,700 -- are currently assigned to Texas, even though 63 percent of the border runs through our state. Arizona only has 4,000 agents. Every border state needs more support.

To help address this, I authored an amendment that directs deployment of 6,000 National Guard to the southwest border. This would raise our National Guard presence to Operation Jumpstart levels. Under the amendment, the National Guard would help CBP get operational control of the Southwest border, and it would augment our security forces until we are able to hire and train more dedicated Border Patrol agents.

Shortly after my colleagues and I introduced our amendments, the President announced a proposal for increased border funding. After deemphasizing border security and even proposing to cut forces on the southwest border, this was a welcome shift in policy. Border Senators and Congressmen have repeatedly called on the President to focus on this challenge.

I am disappointed, however, that the President has only called for an additional 1,200 National Guard to be sent to the southwest border. I believe this falls considerably short of meeting our dire need for more forces. Texas alone has requested 1,000 National Guard -- spreading 1,200 National Guard over four states is an insufficient response. Adequate National Guard support is critical to helping control potential spillover violence and addressing all our security challenges until we have more CBP agents ready to handle threats on our border. The 6,000 agents that would be deployed under our proposal is a much more aggressive response.

Unfortunately, our border security amendments failed in the Senate bill. But we will continue working to provide the tools, manpower, and resources needed to protect the border. I have invited the President to join me on a tour of the border communities that are being impacted by this crisis, and that offer still stands. I would welcome the opportunity to show him firsthand the security challenges our border officials and local law enforcement are facing in Texas. Across the nation, the effects of illegal activity are seeping into American communities. This is why securing our borders cannot just be a Texas priority. It must be a national priority, and I call on my colleagues and the administration to urgently address this challenge.

Saints' Roost Museum to host Kevin Johnson Artwork Exhibit

Ranchers, cowboys, lawmen, and people from all walks of life come to Clarendon to a small shop where Kevin Johnson carefully crafts bits, spurs, badges, and jewelry.

Kevin was raised in Hedley with five older siblings of S.J. and Gail Johnson. As Kevin aged, his artistic abilities grew. After graduating from high school, he attended Clarendon College. Kevin helped his father in his carpentry business after marrying his wife, Cheryl. He would work on his artwork when he had time, perfecting his craft in pastels, oils, and ink. He later pursued his talent in making bits and spurs, which he continues to make to this day. Local cowboys and ranchers began to take notice of his craftsmanship. He prides himself on building what the customer orders and not what he thinks they should have. His talents don't stop at bits, spurs, buckles and jewelry. It also includes badges, such as sheriff and ranger, for many different departments in the Texas Panhandle, other states, and federal agencies. Kevin's paintings and artistic metal workmanship can be found all over the United States.

Kevin will be the featured artist at the annual Saints' Roost Museum membership open house and barbeque dinner. The event will take place on Friday, June 11. The open house and art show beginning at 6:30 p.m. and dinner following at 7:00 p.m. The event is free to Museum members. Annual dues are $25 and may be sent to PO Box 781, Clarendon, TX, 79226 or paid that night. Your help and support are needed and appreciated.

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting June 1, 2010, with Boss Lion Chuck Robertson in charge.

We had 12 members and three guests this week, each of whom were candidates for the 2010-2011 position of Club Sweetheart. The club heard from each of the three young ladies; and after much discussion – and some quick donations to cover extra scholarship expenses, the club for the first time chose all three ladies to share the crown this year. Ashlyn Tubbs, Annie Patten, and Kaleigh West will all be serving the club and the community in the coming year. Congratulations, ladies!

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Rotavirus Vaccines Cleared for Use in Infants
In the last few months, pharmaceutical manufacturers have reported contamination issues related to their Rotarix and Rota Teq rotavirus vaccines. Both vaccines had been shown to contain fragments of DNA from a porcine (pig) virus. This particular virus has not been shown to cause illness in humans. Still, the FDA was concerned about the contaminant and provided a precautionary and temporary suspension for one of the vaccines. More recently, it was reported that the same contaminant was also found in the other vaccine. A hearing was held, and health officials spent time evaluating scientific literature and conducting laboratory tests. Following this evaluation, the FDA concluded and announced that there was no immediate health risk. A few days later, the FDA issued a statement indicating that these two vaccines were safe, and that the health benefit to infants outweighed the theoretical risk involved. The FDA lifted the temporary suspension related to one of the vaccines, and the other was allowed to continue to be used in medical practice.

Thank a veteran for freedom we enjoy

Well, folks, school is out so we need to be watching out for our kids this summer. The older kids need jobs; so if you can help, please hire one.

Sure hope everyone had a great Memorial Day Holiday. If you see a Veteran shake his or her hand and thank them for our freedom. Mom and I went to Burleson to see my brother, Jack, and our girls. They sure are growing. We hope to have Emory and Dasia with us a few weeks this summer.

I have not received any news as of yet so just keep yourselves happy and healthy and pray for our country.

The Hedley ex-students are discussing some options to make the Cotton Festival bigger and better this year and working with the Hedley Lions Club.

Some great ideas are being tossed around and maybe we can get them started. We would like to see all Hedley ex-students come this year to represent their class in the parade. So, please get the word out and have them contact me, Kathy Spier at 806-856-5302 or pkspier1@windstream.net.

Extension to offer two food manager trainings

AMARILLO – Statistics indicate food-borne illness continues to be a health issue in the U.S., causing one in four Americans to become sick, one in 1,000 to be hospitalized and 5,000 to die annually, according to Texas AgriLife Extension Service agents.

Two professional food manager certification training courses called "Food Safety: It's Our Business" will be offered in June.

These courses are aimed at helping food establishments meet a Texas Department of State Health Services requirement, the AgriLife Extension agents said.

The first course will be offered on June 15 at the Gray County Annex, located at 12125 E. Fred-eric Ave. in Pampa, said Joan Gray-

Soria, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent for Gray County. The $100 fee covers one day of training, materials and the state food manager certification examination. Deadline to register is June 8.

The second course will be held June 22-23 at Fellowship Hall of Church of Christ, 121 Haney Street, Spearman, said Peggy Winegarner, AgriLife Extension family and consumer sciences agent in Hansford County. The sign-up deadline is June 9, and the course fee of $110 includes two days of training, materials and the state food manager certification examination. The cost is $60 for those individuals wanting to test only.

Food establishments under the Texas Department of State Health Services jurisdiction are required by law to have one certified food manager on site, Winegarner said. If successfully completed, this course allows establishments to meet the state requirement. New food manager certificates will be valid for five years.

This program is designed to not only prepare food-service managers to pass the certification examination; it will provide valuable education regarding the safe handling of food, Gray-Soria said.

According to statistics, Gray-Soria said almost 50 cents of every dollar Americans spend on food is spent on meals prepared away from home. Therefore, careful attention to food safety will help keep customers safe and satisfied.

Food-borne illnesses are estimated to cost thousands of dollars in lost wages, insurance and medical bills.

By attending the course, the agents said food-service managers will learn to: identify potentially hazardous foods and common errors in food handling; prevent contamination and cross-contamination of food; teach and encourage personal hygiene for employees; comply with government regulations; maintain clean utensils, equipment and surroundings; and control pests.

For more information about the Professional Food Manager Certification Training course in Pampa, call Gray-Soria at 806-669-8033, and in Spearman, call Winegarner at 806-659-4131.

'TEXAS' begins 45th season this Friday night

TEXAS kicks off its 45th season this Friday night, June 4, with a fantastic company of performers, technicians, and staff. Preparations for the 45th season of TEXAS began in January of this year with auditions held across the United States. The cast and crew are extremely diverse with about 50% returning from the 2009 season.

Dave Yirak, Artistic Director; Rolando Salazar, Music Director; and Crystal Bertrand, Choreographer, form an outstanding creative trio, with a proven history of producing spectacular results. The performance tem began rehearsals for the show on May 10, 2010, at the Sybil b. Harrington Fine Arts Complex on the campus of West Texas A&M University. These past few weeks were a test of endurance for all involved. Cast members, in preparation for the 68 performance ahead of them, have devoted eight hours plus per day, seven days a week to rehearsals. At the same time, the stage crew has been preparing the Pioneer Amphitheatre for all of the spectacular special effects involved with the production.

Vince Hernandez, General Manager of TEXAS, has been encouraging new and innovative ideas to promote tickets sales and increase awareness of the show. The hospitality staff has undergone important training in all aspects of customer service as they get ready for the thousands of visitors TEXAS will host this season. The office staff is working around the clock, selling tickets and program ads.

With an economic impact of $35 million dollars to the area, it in no wonder why the Texas Panhandle has looked forward to the opening of the show every summer. TEXAS is a show for the whole family; it is a story about our pioneering heritage. Adding to the romance this summer, the leading couple, Calvin and Elsie, is play by real-life husband and wife, Patrick and Stephanie Earl.

Juneteenth marks emancipation in Texas

AUSTIN – June 19 marks the 145th anniversary of Juneteenth, the date that brought Emancipation to 250,000 slaves in Texas. The Emancipation Proclamation was initially issued in 1863, however African Americans in Texas were not made aware of the liberation until June 19, 1865 when Union general Gordon Granger made the announcement in Galveston.

The news of freedom gradually travelled to slaves throughout the state as individual plantation owners read the proclamation over the months following the end of the Civil War. In 1979, the Texas Legislature passed an act declaring Juneteenth a state holiday.

Juneteenth is commemorated throughout Texas and the nation with local festivities and celebrations. Make plans to head to Brazoria County in east Texas and visit Varner Hogg Plantation State Historic Site, one of the Texas Historical Commission's (THC) 20 historic properties. From June 17-19, the site will feature a walking tour highlighting the 145th anniversary of Juneteenth. The program features singing and cultural presentations by local teachers.

Heritage travelers can also remember Juneteenth by utilizing the THC's travel guide dedicated to the African American experience in Texas, currently only available online. The THC is finalizing a new guide on African American history, which will focus on the unique stories behind the real people who migrated and settled throughout Texas, featuring a number of descriptive narratives about notable African American figures and places. The new guide will be available both in print and online upon completion.

Flirting with Sin

By Mary Beth Nelson

As each summer approaches, I continue to remember how I enjoyed working in my yard. Yesterday, I grinned when my thoughts returned to one morning when a stinging bee joined me right before I finished trimming trumpet vines. So near to completing my "project," I was determined to trim the last few limbs, regardless of my enemy's close threat. "I can do this safely, and never get hurt..." I thought! I guess we were headed for the same vine because the vicious insect quickly sent me toward the first-aid kit to relieve its uncomfortable sting.

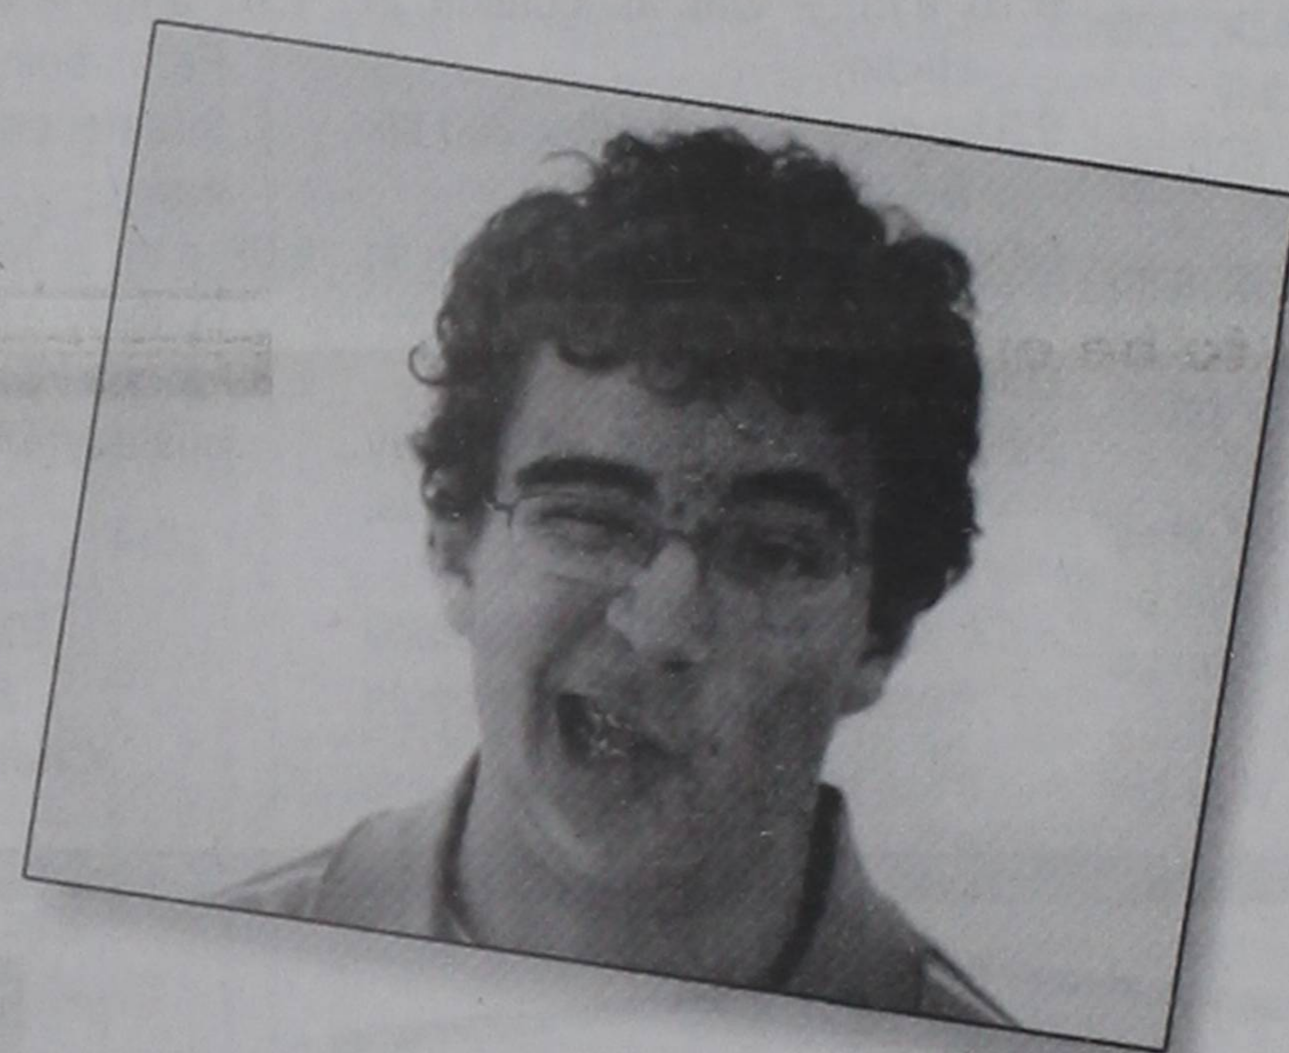

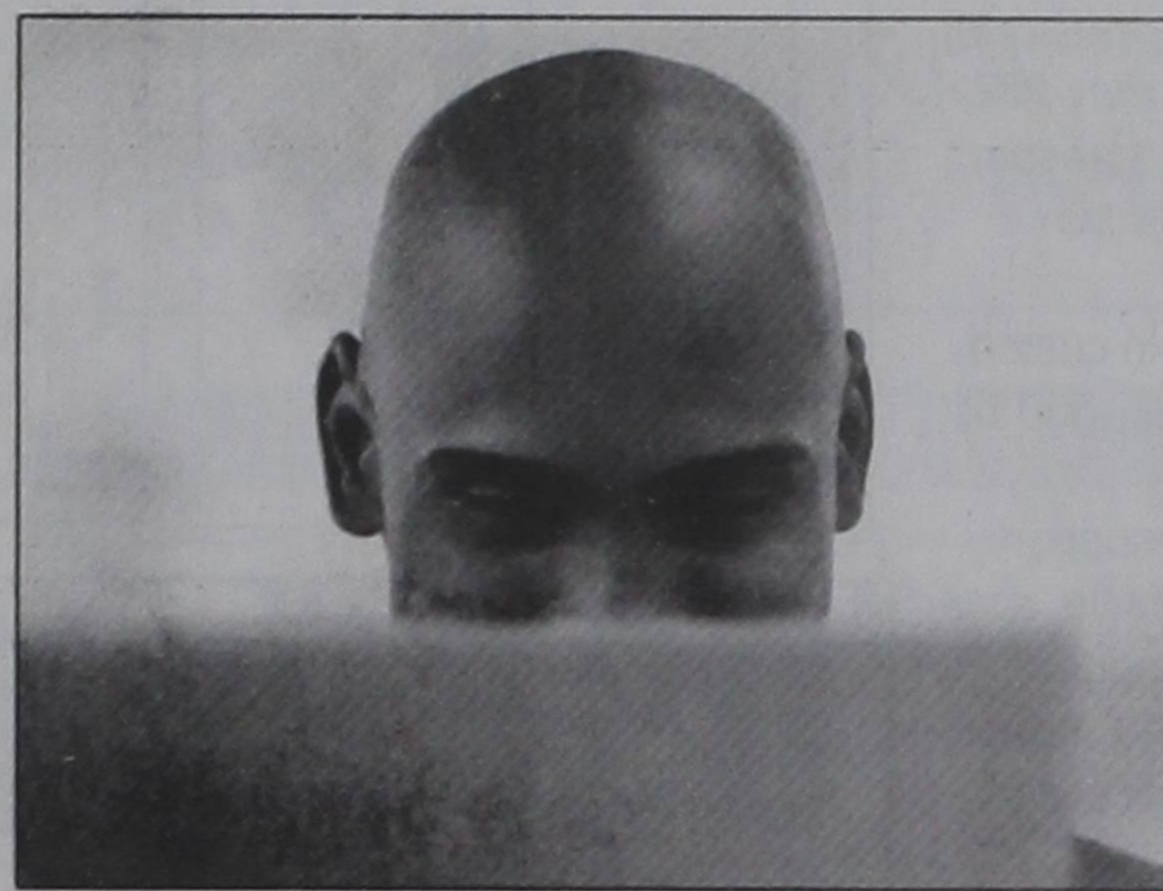

Later that day, while contemplating the unnecessary encounter with the bee, I thought how easily the incident could have been avoided if I had only kept on the right track, and refused to approach that which could harm me.

I think that must be true in other phases of our lives. We want to stay on the "right track." We try to learn to act on God's truths and accept His promises. We never intend to disobey Him. However, we may convince ourselves it is okay to occasionally partake of former habits appealing to us, but undesirable to our Lord. We rationalize, "After all, they weren't really 'big sins.' I can't get hurt." Satan loves it when we flirt with sin. He knows we may not recognize how quickly sin can take hold of our lives.

Someone has said, "What most of all hinders the spiritually minded is that they pay so little heed to small sins. Sin never stands still. It always continues to grow." And so it will with us if we do not try to travel on God's "righteous track."

Bible thought: "Be self-controlled and alert. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour." 1 Peter 5:8 (NIV) followed up a newspaper ad online in some way. 33% went to a website after seeing a print newspaper ad and 21% conducted an online search.

36%

who said they had not read a newspaper in the past week, USED a newspaper during that same week. Usage included: 19% checking sales in local stores, 15% clipping a coupon, 14% checking the weather and 10% checking movie listings.
