According to Raymond Jaramillo, Financial Aid Director, this service will enable both students and parents to make sure all their college financial aid arrangements are in order. He urges all Clarendon College students to complete their financial aid business before the beginning of school.

"There's no doubt that the Financial Aid office is the most visited location on campus come the first day of registration," he said. "Finalizing your financial aid ahead of time will definitely make your registration process go easier and faster."

To schedule a Financial Aid appointment, please call CC at (806) 874-3571, Mon.-Thurs. Students applying for the first time need to bring their 1997 Income Tax return. Parent's Income Tax return is needed if the student is a dependent.

The Clarendon Economic Development Corporation is leading the way for city beautification with the recent purchase of banners to be hung downtown.

The banners (depicted here) will be 24" x 60" with maroon ink on a white background and will be hung on the street lights where the Christmas decorations are usually located.

CEDC Executive Director Linda Williams says the new banners will "hopefully" be here before the July Fourth celebration.

Brackets used to support the banners can be used in the future to hang seasonal banners in the same places.

The banners are just part of an overall beautification plan the CEDC is developing, Williams said.

Clarendon sees increased rebate

AUSTIN — State Comptroller John Sharp recently delivered a total of $185.5 million in monthly sales tax payments to 1,093 Texas cities and 118 counties, a 14.7 percent increase over the $161.6 million allocated in June 1997.

The month's sales tax rebates include local sales taxes collected in April and reported by businesses filing monthly tax returns in May.

"The long and steady increase in consumer spending in Texas continues as jobs and new businesses remain plentiful," Sharp said.

Sharp delivered monthly sales tax rebates totaling $170.1 million to Texas cities, 15.1 percent higher than last June's payments.

Locally, Clarendon saw a 4.48 percent increase in its rebate for a total of $15,535.87. Howardwick's rebate was $1,476.52, up 1.72 percent from last year. Hedley, however, was down 3.45 percent for a $506.51 rebate.

TSCRA new Horse Inspection Program to begin June 15

FT. WORTH — Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association's new Horse Identification (HIP) program will be up and running by June 15 says association President C. Coney Burgess.

"Our members identified this program as a priority during TSCRA's April convention, and we have focused all of our resources into getting it operational at the earliest possible date," says Burgess. "TSCRA is committed to providing the same exceptional theft prevention and investigation services for our members' horses as we have for their cattle for more than 120 years," Burgess promises.

"The value of a rancher's horse is measured by dollars and sense," says Burgess. "A horse is an essential working partner who develops a lot of cow sense and responds intuitively to act as one with the rider." That same bond exists with horses used for recreation—a $1.7 billion industry in Texas.

Cornerstone of HIP will be the horse identification database at TSCRA's Fort Worth headquarters. A special form has been developed to describe the identifying characteristics of each horse. Included are the type—horse, burro, mule or donkey; sex—mare, stallion or gelding; breed; color; age; weight; height; markings on face and legs; brands, tattoos or electronic identification. Members may also send a quality 3" x 5" color photo of the horse to be digitally scanned into the database for reference.

If the horse is reported as stolen, this information will be faxed to slaughter facilities, listed in the TSCRA Theft Bulletin and made available to TSCRA's inspector force and other law enforcement agencies.

Critical to the recovery process are TSCRA's Brand Inspectors who are stationed at the two horse slaughter plants in Texas. These inspectors record information on each animal that passes through the plants and transfer the information to the headquarters database.

"Prompt reporting of a missing animal is crucial," declares Burgess, "to ensure that the descriptive information is in these inspectors' hands before the thief gets the horse to market."

Members will receive wallet-sized cards with information on how to report theft of a horse which has been entered into TSCRA's Horse Identification Program database. Contact your local TSCRA inspector as listed in The Cattleman magazine as soon as possible. If you are unable to reach the inspector immediately, contact TSCRA headquarters and have the following information available to give to the person taking the report:

- TSCRA membership number (this number is the reference number for horses entered into the database).
- Police report number from your local law enforcement agency.
- Date of theft.

- Location of theft.
- Details of theft.
- List of any physical evidence left at the scene.
- Possible suspects or suspect vehicles.
- Any available witnesses.
- Others items taken in addition to horses.

Burgess emphasizes that TSCRA may investigate only if the horses reported stolen meet the criteria of theft as defined in Section 31.03 of the Texas Penal Code or Title 21, Sec. 0.5. 1716 of the Oklahoma Penal Code. Horses on which there is a question of ownership due to civil dispute or civil litigation will not be considered stolen by TSCRA and will be held only pursuant to a court order which must be in the possession of a TSCRA inspector or other law enforcement agency having jurisdiction.

A TSCRA horse industry membership will cost $80 per year — the same as a minimum

Texas highway system still the best, Sharp says

AUSTIN — In the latest edition of Fiscal Notes, state Comptroller John Sharp says that Texas has a time-honored tradition of superior roadways.

"Anyone who's taken a long driving trip knows first-hand how well our highway system compares to highways in other states," Sharp said. "And the maintenance of our state thoroughfares is absolutely pivotal for this state to continue to advance economically."

The Texas Department of Transportation has calculated that the average cost of maintaining interstate highways is $5,600 a year per lane mile. The average cost of new projects ranges from $10,000 to apply one lane mile of a simple sealcoat to almost $1.4 million to build one lane mile of a new freeway.

"Texas has more interstate highway than any other state — about 3,200 miles of it, and it's hard to imagine life without it," Sharp said. "Without our interstate highway system, for example, the drive from San Antonio to El Paso would skirt the Rio Grande and likely take all day," Sharp said in the May issue of his award-winning monthly publication, Fiscal Notes.

In addition to federal money, Sharp noted that Texans contribute their share of funding for Texas' vast network of state and local roadways with the payment of motor fuels taxes, certain fees such as car registration, and property taxes.

"Federal studies show that Texas has had the highest volume of truck traffic in the nation since the passage of NAFTA in 1994," Sharp said. "In the last three years, truck mileage has increased by 19 percent, compared to a 12 percent growth in passenger car miles."

"Most of I-35 within Texas now operates at or beyond its capacity, other major NAFTA arteries such as I-10 and U.S. 59 are feeling the brunt of burgeoning commercial traffic, and the full effects of NAFTA are yet to be realized," Sharp said.

Texans also rely on a network of well-maintained farm-to-market roads, originally envisioned as a means of connection between far-flung farms and rural marketplaces.

While they are still a vital link for the state's agricultural producers, farm-to-market roads now account for more than half of the state's highway system—40,800 miles of it, and some are lined with retail businesses and upscale subdivisions. Some of the longest FM roads in Texas are in urban areas that were once rural.

"The vast expanses of Texas require that we keep our roads in good shape to ensure our economic vitality, while squeezing the most out of every highway dollar we spend," Sharp said.

Sharp's Fiscal Notes is published monthly by the Comptroller's Research Division. It is available by writing P.O. Box 13528, Austin, Texas 78711-3528, or by calling toll-free 1-800-531-5441, extension 3-4900.

Independent cattlemen decry defective federal program

AUSTIN — Don't mess with Texas' private lands is the message that state and federal leaders heard loud and clear recently when the Independent Cattlemen's Association (ICA) of Texas exposed the serious defects of a habitat conservation plan in Central Texas.

The Central Texas Rare Species Conservation Plan, originally touted as a win-win agreement for landowners, was brought to the light of day by ICA and the Austin-based organization, Liberty Matters, as a flawed and ineffective program for Texas landowners.

The plan, initially designed for the preservation of the golden cheek warbler and black-capped vireo, was supposed to allow landowners to "voluntarily" set aside for protection of endangered species with no strings attached. In exchange for safekeeping the endangered species, landowners would receive tax breaks on the reserved land.

"What sounded like a great idea initially was actually just a classic 'bait and switch' sales scam if I ever saw one," ICA President John Brown said. "What the federal government and specifically Secretary of Interior Bruce Babbitt didn't want property owners to know was that although you could opt out of the state program at any time for any reason, you were required to get permission to withdraw from the Federal Program."

"In essence, what the federal government was trying to do was take control of our private lands," Brown said.

To protect Texas property rights, ICA and 27 other Texas organizations joined forces for a grassroots effort to educate state and federal leaders including members of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department on the serious repercussions of the plan.

ICA members visiting Washington D.C. for a legislative seminar also personally met with the Texas delegation armed with briefs detailing the inaccuracies of the program. "Texas members were initially surprised at our opposition to the Central Texas Rare Species Conservation Plan," Brown said. "Like us in the beginning, they were unaware of the 'between the lines print' the federal government inserted."

As the word from ICA and other organizations was resounded throughout the state and federal capitals, our Congressional and state representatives swiftly responded. Support for the Central Texas program was dropped on all government levels and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officially discontinued the conservation plan.

Gary Graham, director of the Endangered Resources Program with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, commenting on the fallen plan said they were unwilling to risk the trust that they had built with Texas landowners over the past several years to continue to support the Central Texas program.

Charles Carter, Executive Director of ICA in Texas, applauded the efforts of their members and other organizations who fought to protect landowners' rights.

"We could not have succeeded without the commitment of our members and the other participating organizations," Carter said. "This is a victory not only for our organization, but for all Texas property owners."

Supreme Court has turned religious freedom upside down

No one agrees with every decision ever made by the U.S. Supreme Court. But over the past 30 years, the Supreme Court has taken a fundamental principle of our democracy and turned it upside down.

The principle is freedom of religion. Through a series of misguided rulings and questionable opinions, the Supreme Court has essentially determined that the First Amendment of the Constitution doesn't so much provide for freedom of religion as it does for freedom from religion.

In 1992, for instance, the Supreme Court ruled that a rabbi broke the law by offering a prayer at a public school graduation. In 1985, the Court determined that a moment of silence in schools was forbidden because students might use that moment to — of all things — silently pray.

And in 1980, the Supreme Court ruled that the Ten Commandments couldn't be displayed at a public school because students might "read ... and obey" what they had to say. It's enough to boggle the mind.

Last week, the House of Representatives tried to reverse these rulings when it voted on the Religious Freedom Amendment.

While this amendment didn't receive the required two-thirds vote needed to pass, it did represent the first time in 27 years that a majority of the House voted to restore voluntary prayer to public schools. It also represents a first step toward restoring the First Amendment to what it was intended to be, which is why I believe we'll be debating this issue again at some point in the very near future.

DNA tests to be performed on remains found at La Salle site

AUSTIN — The DNA analysis of skeletal remains found during the Texas Historical Commission's (THC) excavation of the Belle began in May. The Belle, one of French explorer La Salle's ships brought to the New World more than 300 years ago to establish a colony along the Mississippi River, was excavated by the THC in 1996 and 1997.

Genra Systems, a Minnesota company specializing in nucleic acid purification systems, is completing the preliminary DNA analysis and hopes to have information in the next several weeks. The results from the DNA testing could be matched with the DNA of possible descendants living in France today.

Conservation of the almost one million artifacts recovered from the Belle continues at the Texas A&M Conservation Research Laboratory in College Station. Conservation is expected to take approximately five years before all of the artifacts are ready for viewing.

THC also contracted with an independent film director to create a documentary on the Belle that will air on NOVA on PBS in 1999. For more information, contact: Renee Peterson, director of marketing, Texas Historical Commission, (512) 463-7096.

TSCRA membership, says Burgess. The membership includes scanning of one horse picture; pictures of additional horses may be scanned for $5 each.

Burgess says several horse safety and theft prevention clinics are being planned to provide opportunities for ranchers in Texas and Oklahoma to have digital pictures made of their horses, fill out descriptions for the HIP database, have their horses freeze-branded and have the brands recorded. The clinics will also include freeze-branding demonstrations and horse safety training.

Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association is a 14,000-member trade organization based in Fort Worth, Texas, which employs a unique group of law enforcement officers stationed throughout Texas and Oklahoma. Thirty-three of these "Field Inspectors" are commissioned as Special Rangers with the Texas Department of Public Safety and/or the Oklahoma Bureau of Investigation. They work closely with other law enforcement agencies in both states to educate members about theft prevention and to help recover stolen property.

Nelson home to be featured on DCSC's annual Tour of Homes

This week, Donley County Senior Citizens feature home of James and Sarah Nelson, 617 South Gorst Street. Residence ownership originated with H. J. Stockett. G. J. Teal, J. W. Anderson, Isaac Looney, and Donley County Judge, W. T. Link, followed Stockett. After death of Judge Link and wife, Ollie, the estate was sold to the late Tex Naylor from whom the Nelsons purchased it in October, 1993.

In 1994, James and Sarah began remodeling, adding a large utility room, bath, and den to the original five rooms. Interesting antiques provide charm and warmth to the comfortable home. Unique paintings, Sarah's basket collection, and many appealing items add special interest with a historical flavor.

The third annual Tour of Homes, June 20, from 2:00-4:30 p.m., includes three other homes: Leon and Sue Church, 620 West 5th; John and Willene Judd, 602 West 3rd; Ernest and Shirley Lamberson, 2 1/2 miles south of Lelia Lake.

Because of unforeseen circumstances, the J. R. Leathers residence will not be featured as previously announced. However, Donley County Senior Citizens are proud to exhibit Mr. Leathers' artistic ability through his lovely paintings and other productions at the Senior Citizen Center, 115 East 4th, during the tour. Interesting stories are involved in each of J. R.'s works.

He will be in attendance to relate and answer questions concerning his art. Refreshments will be served.

Tickets may be purchased any time at Donley County Senior Citizens and at Thriftway on Wednesday, June 17, and on the morning of the 20th. Cost: $5.00.

The home of Jim and Sarah Nelson will be featured in the Donley County Senior Citizens Tour of Homes, Saturday, June 20, 1998.

How about a good biography for a change? I do not know of a more entertaining one than that which I randomly came across a couple of weeks ago in Burton Memorial Library.

Pioneer Preacher from the Texas Collection is a humorous, heartwarming biographical narrative of an early minister, George Carroll Berryman, written by his daughter, Opal Leigh Berryman. One of her purposes in writing the book was to recognize her father and all preachers who contributed rather quietly, but greatly, to the development of the West during the early part of the century, a time when gun slingers, lawlessness, and notorious outlaws dominated the scene.

George Berryman conducted pastorates in West Texas. Big Springs, Amarillo, Lobo Creek, La Mesa, Llano Estacado, Seminole, and Hobbs, New Mexico, no doubt, sound familiar.

The story begins on an October day as Preacher Berryman, in buggy with team, moves his wife and daughter to his new pastorate in Coke County. The book is flavored with western humor during travels as well as events during his preaching assignments.

The author adored her father. His sense of humor and positive attitude encouraged her willing assistance with any task he allowed. Even though gathering cow chips for fuel was not her favorite "chore," she told him she really didn't mind. His reply? "We both mind. Where wood is so scarce, we are fortunate in having at hand the means of cooking and staying warm. But we don't have to pretend we enjoy tidying up after a herd of cattle."

Berryman possessed a warm, fearless, friendly personality, and never turned anyone away. He was instrumental in eliminating saloons, cattle rustling, and Ku Klux Klan agitation against one of La Mesa's leading citizens. He was greatly concerned with personal successes and tragedies of his contacts.

Just after settlement in their new home, an embarrassment for Mrs. Berryman occurred when the light behind red curtains in the front window lured unexpected visitors. They were shocked to find the minister's wife as she was equally shocked to learn the purpose of their visit.

Interaction between characters easily and colorfully portrays attitudes and happenings during this period of time. Intertwined is a murder mystery, cattle rustling, light romance in the life of a young girl, unexpectedly brought by her father to stay with the Berrymans in order to make a "lady" of her. Results are clever and surprising. Readers will chuckle at amusing events as well as become suspensefully involved in a dramatic climax in the life of this frontier preacher. Why not check it out?

Extension Service Update
 by Leon J. Church, CEA-AG and Sue P. Church, CEA-FCS

The 4th of July is traditionally a big fund raising day for the Donley County 4-H Club. As in the past, the club will be sponsoring the local Country Arts and Crafts Fair on the courthouse lawn. 10' x 10' booth spaces are being rented to exhibitors for $25.00 each on a first come, first serve basis.

Also, the club will be sponsoring a homemade ice cream booth at the Arts and Crafts Fair. All 4-H members are encouraged to supply a container of homemade ice cream for the event. For food safety reasons the club is requesting that it be a cooked recipe if eggs are included in the recipe. If you can assist with ice cream and/or working in the booth on the 4th of July, please call Theresa Shelton, chairman, at 874-3709.

June 17th is the deadline for youth sixth grade and older wanting to sign-up for Camp Creative which will take place at Bishop Quarterman's Conference Center in Amarillo on July 6th and 7th. A broad range of family and consumer science topics will be covered. For a complete listing of the classes, please call the Extension Office at 874-2141.

Mark Howard and Derek Shields are spending this week at 4-H Electric Camp at Camp Scott Able in New Mexico. This camp is sponsored by Southwestern Public Service Company. In addition to working with electrical projects, the participants experience wildlife and nature studies, organized recreation, leadership, citizenship and fellowship activities.

The Something More After School Program has expanded its activities this summer to include two hours of learning and fun for the participants each Wednesday from 12:00 to 2:00 p.m. The afternoon begins with a meal, followed by games, arts and crafts and/or field trips. During the month of June the students are participating in the reading program at the Burton Memorial Library in Clarendon. If you would like to volunteer with the program please call the First United Methodist Church or the Donley County Extension Office.
