Mr. Hoover Relaxes.

NOW that he has time for leisure, ex-President Herbert Hoover apparently is undecided about how to employ it. Whether to go fishing, or remain near Washington for possible conferences, or go direct to California, or look into the possibilities of business propositions seems to involve decisions for which he has neither the inclination nor the energy. It is a fairly good evidence of the fact that the former President is tired, physically and mentally.

Few Presidents have labored harder than Mr. Hoover. Shortly after the beginning of his administration the economic collapse occurred, and every day for more than three years he has carried the responsibility of directing the American people through the period of depression. This involved long hours, interminable conferences, many controversies, an avalanche of criticism. His task was made harder by his innate sensitiveness. Close observers of the former President and his work point out that the Hoover who appeared in public as President was a different man from the Hoover who carried on the business of the government. In his home and private offices. Outwardly calm as he delivered speeches or attended public functions, he was inwardly seething with resentment at criticism, and stubbornly resisting the age-old customs which require a President literally to belong to the people and give him a minimum of opportunity for purely private affairs.

This is what shortens the lives of all our Presidents. They not only have a tremendous amount of work to do, but must do it under enormous difficulties. Mr. Hoover is tired; so tired that he doesn't know what he wants to do, now that he can do as he pleases. And in spite of the fact that he is no longer responsible for the conduct of national affairs, he will not be permitted to rest peacefully, for we demand much of our Presidents, and every move he makes, every word he utters will be watched and reported and discussed.

Order Out of Chaos.

WEEK-END DEVELOPMENTS in the banking situation were many and startling, but by no means alarming. To the contrary, they give promise of an early stabilization of the whole banking system of the United States, by the application of drastic regulations whose purpose will be to provide protection against hysteria and conserve the financial assets of the nation.

In Texas the Legislature acted quickly on a measure authorizing the state Banking Commissioner to control the moratorium fixed by the Governor's proclamation last Thursday night. Texas banks had become the victims of conditions prevailing in other states, and their temporary suspension of business was in self protection. The banking commissioner is also authorized to fix restrictions governing deposit withdrawals, which will probably be claimed by comparatively few banks but which are available for the protection of all banks if needed.

Because of the fact that in all the states except three there were banking moratoria under proclamations by the several governors, the national administration found it advisable to proclaim a national holiday to provide a "breathing spell" during which remedial action may be taken. The Congress has been called to meet in special session at noon Thursday, for the purpose of enacting remedial legislation. Shipments of gold from the country have been temporarily stopped, as a means of protecting the financial assets of this country and maintaining the gold standard for American money. Money hoarding is discouraged, and the fear which promotes hoarding is condemned.

For the past several months the country has been steadily approaching financial chaos, and earlier action to check this movement might have been taken had it not been that a change of national administrations was impending. There were many elements contributing to the situation, not the least of them being that there are forty-nine banking systems in the United States, including the national and state systems. A lack of uniformity has made it difficult to take any action toward stabilization; but the conditions prevailing today will go far toward unification and out of the crisis now existing there will come a stronger banking system than America has ever had.

So far as the public is concerned there is nothing to be done except to maintain its mental and spiritual equilibrium. Along with patience and confidence there should be a spirit of courage. Every constructive force in America has been marshalled for a determined effort toward the salvaging of finance, business and industry. Granted the confident and sympathetic support of the people, these forces will win a victory which will mark the beginning of definite recovery.

Mayor Cermak.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES surrounding the murderous attack upon Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago which resulted in his death early Monday attracted the attention of the nation to the tragedy, and a nation mourns as the news of his passing is received. If he had been fatally shot under other conditions, however, not involving an attack upon Mr. Roosevelt, the country would have mourned his death on his own account.

Beginning his administration of the city of Chicago under conditions similar to those surrounding Mr. Roosevelt as he begins the national administration, Mayor Cermak had labored with courageous purpose to bring about the economic recovery of a big city which during a long period of years had been systematically looted by corruption and graft, and which in the meantime had gained an unsavory reputation as the American headquarters of crime and criminals. His task was far from completed when his death interrupted it; but he had made sufficient progress to earn the commendation of the nation and to demonstrate that honesty and courage can work miracles even in a graft-ridden municipality.

Mayor Cermak's association with Mr. Roosevelt was based upon personal friendship rather than political ambition. So far as has ever been indicated, he sought only to aid in the promotion of his friend's elevation to a position of almost limitless power, and neither asked nor expected any advancement of his own political career. He died almost if not quite as a martyr to that friendship, genuinely rejoicing that the assassin's bullet had missed the mark for which it was intended even though it meant the sacrifice of his own life.

The career of Mayor Cermak, moreover, illustrates again the fact that in America there is an opportunity for every worthwhile man to make a name for himself, no matter what his origin may have been. A Bohemian by birth, without powerful friends or great wealth to pull the strings in his belief, he raised himself to a position of power and influence and became an American in fact as well as in name. America is, indeed, in spite of all the disturbing aspects of American life now existing, the land of the free and the home of the brave.

The Farm Emigration.

DURING the last two years the agricultural population of the United States has increased by nearly 650,000 men, according to reports drawn up by economists at Chicago. This is largely due to the movement of the unemployed from the city to the country—motivated, no doubt, by the fact that no matter how bad the depression may be the man who grows his own potatoes and raises his own chickens is at least going to escape starvation.

In some ways this is an encouraging development. But in the long run little will be gained if we simply transfer poverty from the city to the country. Unless some way is found of enabling these new farmers to get something more than a bare living out of the soil, this shift cannot be permanent. A down-and-out farmer can be just about as pitiable an object as a down-and-out factory hand.

Early High

Our regular Sunday rain came again last Sunday and kept most folks at home throughout the day.

The death angel visited our community on Thursday morning of last week at 8:00 a. m. and took from our midst Mr. J. H. Jackson who had been living here on the same place of which he owned in the Jenkins Springs settlement for 30 years. He was also a friend of the writer who lived very close to him all those 30 years. Mr. Jackson was born in Georgia, in August, 1865. Moving when a small boy to Texas, with his parents, and locating in Erath county. He was married in 1886 to Miss Nannie Danley and shortly afterwards they moved to San Saba living there until they moved to Brown county some 30 years ago. Mr. Jackson was a member of the Baptist church at Stepps Creek. He having always been a strong healthy man until a few months ago, he having been shot by a doctor for a few weeks with heart trouble, but his condition did not become alarming until on Wednesday before he died, he developed pneumonia and together with the other complications he could not conquer the battle and he passed away very peacefully at his home here. He is survived by his wife, seven children, two brothers and a host of friends. The children are Mrs. James Fitzpatrick of Tucson, Arizona; Jesse Jackson, Arizona; Mrs. Boyd Gilly, San Angelo; Mrs. Maude Oldham and little son Jack, have returned to their home at Bellville, after attending the funeral of her father, Mr. J. H. Jackson.

Mrs. Robert Beal honored her father, her little son and mother-in-law with a birthday supper a few nights ago. Their birthdays all being within a few days of each other.

INVASION OF CHINA HAS BEEN STARTED

Manchuria, March 9.—Japanese headquarters at Chungking have ordered a general attack tomorrow for the purpose of annihilating all Chinese troops resisting along the great wall inside Jehol province.

BY RANDALL GOULD
Press Staff Correspondent
PING, China, March 9.—The invasion of China itself has been started. Chinese military headquarters reported.

Official communique issued yesterday reported that the Japanese had bombed Chinese troops in panic southward along Peiping highway, 15 miles in the great wall.

Air raid occurred south of Peiping, a pass through the anti-bombing wall, but no longer impervious.

Japanese bombing of Chinese troops almost within sight of the ancient capital, left city terror-stricken in fear of air raid.

Reports from the Peiping-Tientsin scanned reports from the United States Marine detail at Peiping, prepared for evacuation of Japanese and others.

Chinese frantically prepared for evacuation. Thousands began pouring out of the city.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's army in the embattled Jehol zone, resigned as commander-in-chief of the branch military council in Peiping. This was done as a routine move to general readjustment which the rest of the country undergo.

Internal situation in China was discussed at a conference between Gen. and Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and Gen. Tang Yin.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's army in the embattled Jehol zone, resigned as commander-in-chief of the branch military council in Peiping.

Chinese military headquarters published "punishment edicts" at Gen. Tang Yu-Lin, governor of Jehol, who had promised that he would defend the province.

General Tang's whereabouts, the report, were unknown.

Japanese declared they would invade China proper, but all their campaign in Manchuria, the adjoining province, the door open to proceed south if they desired to make a move.

Key reiterated statements about the coming of the Japanese, and possibility that the Chinese would resist sufficiently to cause the American marines in Peiping and the 15th Infantry regiment.

Foreigners feared not so much the coming of the Japanese, but the possibility that the Chinese would resist sufficiently to cause the American marines in Peiping and the 15th Infantry regiment.

Heads of Civic Clubs Urged to Attend C. C. Meet

Invitations are being mailed out by the Chamber of Commerce to all heads of civic clubs in the city urging that they and their members attend the membership meeting of the Chamber at 6:30 o'clock Monday evening at Hotel Brownwood.

Most of the members of the civic clubs are members of the Chamber of Commerce and all members are being urged to attend.

Directors say there has been a great deal of interest shown in the Monday night meeting and that a large attendance is expected. They believe that every local citizen interested in the future growth and progress of Brownwood and Brown county will at least help with his presence and his advice and counsel will be welcomed.

The proposed program of activities will be distributed in printed form at the meeting and until that time none but the directors will know what has been outlined. It is said, however, that the program is progressive ever to be proposed here and that the carrying out of it would be of untold benefit to this entire section of the state. Members at the meeting will be asked to approve the program and cooperate one hundred per cent to successfully carry it out.

mediate emergency. The proposals are believed in democratic capitol circles to be power for the president to reduce government costs, including veterans funds and to provide for $500,000,000 or so for public projects to spur employment.

The democratic leaders are aiming if at all possible to get the banking bill to the White House tonight.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Congress met today in its most important session since the world war. It is expected to confer upon President Roosevelt virtual dictatorial powers to handle a banking emergency that changes hourly and to extend the holiday which ends tonight.

That will be the first assigned task of a Congress overwhelmingly Democratic and ready to follow the White House lead.

President Roosevelt, who will ask sweeping authority in his message today to the special session, called Congressional leaders to the White House last night to outline his immediate program. It had been kept a secret to them hitherto.

Beyond a grant of broad executive power, Congress is expected also to ratify the provisions of the President's proclamation declaring the bank holiday and a gold embargo, as well as providing for extension of the emergency measures.

Leaders then plan to recess and return after three or four weeks to consider a permanent banking, economic and relief program to be submitted by the President.

House and Senate Democratic leaders pledged co-operation in prompt action today. Republicans, however, indicated they were disposed to shunt Roosevelt measures to committee for an inspection. Thus the hope of an early recess may be blasted.

Bank Policy Unknown

Whether the President would recommend a modified bank guarantee bill still remained a question last night. There was increasing support among Democratic leaders for a measure under which the banks themselves would set up the guarantee fund under a government corporation. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was anxious for immediate action from Congress on a farm relief measure. He pointed out that if there is to be a reduction in this year's crop, a bill should be enacted by March 15th. If the President insists upon this legislation, then there would be no recess.

Congress must organize in both House and Senate today under the new Democratic regime. This should not require much time. A few minutes will be consumed in reading the President's message which will be set up by messenger. The President decided to forego the more dramatic method of a personal appearance.

Leaders were doubtful that any legislation could be considered today.

NEW CURRENCY TO BE ISSUED BY UNCLE SAM

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, March 9.—The federal government has suddenly dropped the idea of issuing scrip and turned to plans of using additional currency to relieve the banking crisis.

Familiar Federal Reserve notes are expected to provide the backbone of this additional emergency money.

At least $3,000,000,000 could be issued without jeopardizing existing gold reserves according to financial authorities.

President Roosevelt is expected to ask Congress when it meets today for virtually dictatorial powers to deal with the fast changing situation.

Officials decided scrip would open up dangerous possibilities. They feared the country would be flooded with printing press money. Eventually the government might be under pressure to redeem it.

This sudden reversal threw confusion into some banking circles which were preparing to issue scrip under treasury authorization.

Telegrams, long distance telephone calls and personal callers showered hard-driven Washington officials with countless questions. Bankers throughout the country sought to find out what Washington expected of them. Demands for prompt clarification of the situation grew hourly.

Secretary of Treasury Woodin, dressed all in blue, smiling through pressure seldom put upon a peace-time official, came out of his office and said:

"We see light here. Things aren't going to pieces. Things are going well due to the aid of the people in all parts of the country."

He had previously wired instructions to all Federal Reserve banks to loosen up in advancing money to banks.

He told newspaper reporters confidentially that scrip would not be authorized by Washington. They pressed him to give this vital information to the public.

The diminutive business man, now in public office for the first time, looked around appealingly.

"Please advise me as to how I should make this announcement," he said.

Reporters suggested he make a flat statement which could be attributed to him.

Woodin cocked his head a moment. Go Ahead, Woodin Said "Go ahead and shoot it," he said, and a scurry of fast departing feet ended the conference.

When word flashed out from Washington that scrip was being abandoned and Federal Bank notes expended for use instead, reports that the country was embarking upon an era of inflation sprang up.

Officials were reluctant to attach labels to their policies which were changing from hour to hour.

Generally the latest move was regarded as an attempt at a controlled, managed currency.

Chiefly, the government intends to rely on the regular privileges of the Federal Reserve System. They were drafted to meet just such critical hours.

Gold Supply Plentiful

At least $2,500,000,000 in additional Federal Reserve notes—which are what, if any, the average man carries in his hip pocket—could be issued without going below the 40 per cent gold reserve required. At the moment the gold backing for Federal Reserve notes is 62 per cent. This leaves a large working margin for issuing new Federal Bank notes of the same kind now in circulation.

Under the Federal Home Loan act an additional issue of nearly $1,000,000,000 could be issued against government bonds.

Other provisions of the Federal Reserve act could be resorted to to add even to this huge reserve supply. The real problem is a technical banking problem of getting such money into circulation since banks must put up acceptable collateral on which to borrow Federal Bank notes from their reserve banks.

Johnson Memorial Revival Announced

Rev. Henry Francis, the pastor, announces that a revival meeting will begin at Johnson Memorial Methodist church on the third Sunday in this month. Rev. Chester Wilkerson of Winchell will do the preaching. The song services will be in charge of Rev. Jesse Townsend of Brownwood.

GOVERNORS TO AID ROOSEVELT IN EMERGENCY

BY FREDERICK A. STORM

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Roosevelt last night marshaled the support of the nation behind his program for economic recovery which he revealed included reduction of taxation, a national policy on mortgage foreclosures and coordination of relief work.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed his plans in an address to governors of various states in a conference at the White House. At the close of his meeting the heads of the states governments promised him their loyal support.

Mr. Roosevelt declared the states "acted with remarkable promptitude in preventing a panic at a time when it might have developed." He then explained the modified national banking holiday was proclaimed to take care of an immediate emergency.

"The only way in which money can be kept absolutely safe beyond peradventure of doubt is by using methods to keep it safe—first keeping the money in cash the way it is put in; secondly, depositing it in the Federal Reserve Bank and then purchasing government bonds with it," the President said.

Federal Bonds Safe
"Recognized government bonds

are as safe as government currency. They have the same credit back of them. And, therefore if we can persuade people all through the country, when their salary checks come in, to deposit them in new accounts; which new accounts will be held in trust, and the money kept in one of the new forms I have mentioned, we will have made progress."

He declared the federal government should not be called on to supply relief "until other agencies fail" and said he was considering creating a fact finding body within two or three weeks which will coordinate the work of the states.

Mr. Roosevelt outlined to the state executives in detail the steps he had taken to meet the banking situation. Then he offered them the original conference agenda on conflicting taxation, federal unemployment relief, farm mortgage foreclosures, reforestation, and reorganization of local government.

The governors promised Mr. Roosevelt their loyal support and expressed their convictions in the following resolution:

"In this anxious hour of a national emergency, in our banking and economic life a heavy responsibility rests on our president to lead us out of our difficulties. He is ready to lead if we are ready to follow. He needs the united support of all our people in carrying out his plans."

"Without regard to our political affiliations we, governors and representatives of governors of states in conference in the city of Washington, March 6, 1933, hereby express our confidence and faith in our president and urge congress and all the people of our united country to cooperate with him in such action as he shall find necessary or desirable in restoring banking and economic stability."

Ask For Confidence
The White House also made public a resolution adopted by the governors calling upon all governors to issue proclamations on Wednesday expressing confidence in the president "and our institutions."

After the conference Mr. Roosevelt went to his executive office for the first time and there talked with Lewis Douglas, his budget director. Later James H. Perkins, chairman of the board of the National City Bank, was seen.

Perkins emerged in an apparently optimistic mood.

Asked what he thought of the situation, he replied:

"I believe that it will be met." Later two members of the cabinet, James A. Farley, postmaster general, and George H. Dern, secretary of war, entered the office.

Neither, however, would comment on what they had taken up with the president.

Roosevelt's address to the governors follows:

"I have been so occupied since noon on Saturday that I have not had any chance to prepare any formal message to you, but in saying to the governors and their representatives that as a governor myself for the past four years I am somewhat on intimate terms with the duties of governors and also with the rights and duties of states. The country needs cooperation between the states and the federal government. I think this has been well demonstrated by the events of the past 48 hours."

"The states acted with remarkable promptitude in preventing a panic at a time when it might well have developed. The situation, however, did get to the point yesterday where some kind of uniform action seemed necessary, and as you know resulted in two things—the calling of a special session of congress for Thursday, and secondly, a proclamation to take care of immediate emergency between now and Thursday."

"In that proclamation there were four or five main objectives, the first one was to prevent the withdrawal of any further gold and currency. The old war statute of 1917 had not been repealed and we need it. It was exceedingly useful instrument. The second objective was to provide some form of circulating medium for the country in addition to the outstanding currency, because a large part had been put into hiding. I have confidence the public will accept that circulating medium."

"We should provide some method by which banking can go on with new cash coming in. It is proposed through the treasury department that every bank will be authorized to open new accounts, and the money so deposited in the new accounts can be withdrawn at any time. The only way in which that money can be kept absolutely safe beyond peradventure of doubt is by using methods to keep it safe—first keeping the money in cash the way it is put in; secondly, depositing it in the Federal Reserve Bank and third, purchasing government bonds with it."

"Recognized government bonds are as safe as government currency. They have the same credit back of them, and, if we can persuade people all through the country, when their salary checks come in, to deposit them in new accounts; which new accounts will be held in trust, and the money kept in one of the new forms I have mentioned, we will have made progress."

"All I can say is I am very grateful for what the states have done in this emergency and we want if possible to have a general banking situation, that is to say covering national banks and state banks, as uniform as possible throughout the country and at the same time we want to cooperate with all of the states in bringing about that uniformity. I have no desire to have this matter centralized down here in Washington any more than we can help. I don't believe there is much more to say about banking."

"The letter that I sent to you took up several matters:

"Conflicting taxation between federal and state governments. Every one of you have been seeking methods to find new sources of taxation. It has been natural and human to expect that the federal government should try to find some method of raising revenue."

Unemployment Relief
"A second question relates to federal aid in unemployment relief. The federal government, of course, does have to prevent anybody from starving but the federal government should not be called upon to exercise that duty until other agencies fail. The primary duty is that of the locality, the city, the county, town—if they fail and can not raise enough to meet the needs, the next responsibility is on the states and they have to do all they can and if it is proven that they cannot do any more and the funds are still insufficient, it is the duty of the federal government to step in."

"We come to the question of co-ordination work. It is very difficult to know in the federal government what states are doing well for unemployment relief and what states are not, and it is my thought that I can create some kind of central relief agency which will be a fact finding body, which will coordinate the work of states, and act as a clearing house for the relief of the nation. I hope to get that set up in the next two or three weeks."

"The third proposition, the reorganizing and consolidation of local government to reduce the taxation cost. That is your problem and it has been my problem for the past four years."

"And there is the question of mortgage foreclosures especially on farm land and also on small homes. There again we haven't a national policy. Some of the states are doing it one way and another state is doing it another way. Some states and some localities are closing their eyes to existing laws and do not have any foreclosures. As yet we have no national policy for it but I believe we can have one."

A Cast of Nearly 7,500 Used In Sign Of The Cross

For sometime Hollywood has been without its super-spectacles. But when Cecil B. DeMille returned to work he brought with him the type of picture which made him famous—the type of "King of Kings" and "Ten Commandments." The new DeMille pageant-drama is the "Sign of the Cross," which will be played at the Lyric Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week on a three-a-day schedule. Programs will be at 2:30, 5:30, and 8:30 each day. Box-office will open at 1:45, 5:00 and 7:30, and there will be no one admitted after the feature picture has started. Nearly 7,500 made up the cast of the "Sign of the Cross." These include Frederic March, Elissa Landi, Claudette Colbert, and Charles Laughton in the principal roles. Practically the entire Paramount ranch, the large tract near Hollywood, was converted into a section of the city of Rome as it was in Nero's day. Most elaborate of all the settings was the duplication of the circus maximus, a huge amphitheater which for several hundred years was the scene of bloody gladiatorial combats and chariot races. Streets, public squares, and interior settings in the film were reproduced after careful research for authentic details.
