CONFERENCE OF COUNTY AGENTS OPENED TODAY

With eighteen county farm agents and fourteen home demonstration agents, a number of A. & M. College extension service experts, and visitors, the meeting of district No. 3 agents opened in Brownwood for three days this morning.

Messages from O. B. Martin, director of the extension service in Texas, and Miss Mildred Horton, state home demonstration agent, were heard on the opening program which began at 9 o'clock.

Leaders in Work Attending Among others in attendance from the extension department are: R. H. Bush, pastor, improvement expert; A. L. Smith, beef cattle specialist; E. R. Hudaly, dairy specialist; E. N. Holmgren, poultry specialist; Miss Bess Edwards, assistant state home demonstration agent; Miss Leta Blair, food specialist; Mrs. Alice Blanton, Miss Inez Berry, county home demonstration agent; J. Reppert, entomologist.

The first question which naturally arises in the discussion of this subject is "Has the Extension Service made a distinct contribution to education?" If the answer is yes, then everybody wants to know the nature of that contribution.

The distinctive nature of Extension Training was the subject of Mr. Martin in his message at the opening session. He said in part: "Extension Service Contribution"

"The first question which naturally arises in the discussion of this subject is 'Has the Extension Service made a distinct contribution to education?' If the answer is yes, then everybody wants to know the nature of that contribution. If the answer is no, I should say amen and sit down. It is manifest that a great organization of this kind with six thousand staff members and agents working from coast to coast could not have been built up in a short time upon the traditional principles of pedagogy or upon didactic methods of instruction for adults or adolescents. It is true that evolution is evident, but a measure of revolution is just as patent to all who have eyes to see. The distinctive features which stand above current history are individual initiative, power of performance, and multiplication of successes.

Quick Action on Beer

UNLESS their very eagerness creates confusion to delay their plans, the advocates of legalized beer and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment may be able to force action on these issues early in the lame duck session of Congress which convenes next week.

Speaker Garner is said to be preparing the resolution designed to start the repeal machinery in operation. He will have the support of wets in both parties, about the only difference between the two groups being that the Democrats want beer first and then would work for repeal, while the Republicans advocate repeal and then beer.

In the meantime, it is indicated that neither house will give much consideration to pressing economic questions until after it has done whatever is to be done about prohibition. Beer, after all, is to be regarded as of more importance than bread.

"Fighting Bob" Silenced

A RULING sustaining the decision of the Radio Commission that Rev. Robert P. Shuler of Los Angeles should be denied broadcast privileges has been handed down by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, and temporarily, at least, the minister's radio station will be operated without his personal service.

"Fighting Bob" Shuler, former Texas minister and well known in this state, has been in California for the past several years, and has been constantly in the midst of conflict ever since he got there. In the summer primaries he was a candidate for the Senate, and to show his impartiality entered the Republican, Democratic and Prohibition party contests.

Mr. Shuler is a natural-born crusader, and is never happy except when he has something about which to be unhappy. The Radio Commission, therefore, instead of discouraging him probably has supplied him with new enthusiasm and provided a text for a new phase of his work.

The Unsocial Garners

NOWHERE ELSE in the world are social rules and regulations more rigidly interpreted or more vigorously enforced than in the official circles of our own national capital. The attention of the whole country was directed to this fact during the protracted quarrel between Mrs. Longworth and Mrs. Gann, both of whom claimed positions of priority, so that their case was finally the subject of an official ruling by the State Department. It is a courageous official, therefore, who dares defy social customs and with his wife determines to live according to his own desires and convenience rather than to spend most of his time trying to avoid infraction of traditional rules and practices.

That is what the unsocial Garners plan to do after John N. Garner has been inaugurated as Vice President next March, and already they are finding it necessary to decline all manner of invitations to purely social functions which would absorb most of their time if accepted. When his presence is required at any official function at the White House, Vice President Garner and Mrs. Garner will be present, but otherwise they will pursue the even tenor of their way, going to bed at bedtime and living quietly as they have done ever since they became fixtures in Washington.

The Vice-President-Elect obviously has no intention of attempting to break down the rather ridiculous structure of Washington's official social life, but it may be that he and his wife may make some progress in that direction without intending to do so. The capital city of democratic America has more social bunk in it than could have been found in the capital of any Old World monarchy of a hundred years ago.

A Pardon for Col. Miller

READERS of the newspapers have been following with much interest the long story of the misfortunes suffered in recent months by Col. Zack Miller of Oklahoma, once wealthy ranchman and showman whose 101 Ranch became known all over the world because it was the headquarters of his wild west exhibition.

The depression, and other conditions, caused Col. Miller to become deeply involved in debt, so that his properties were seized and sold to satisfy claims of his creditors. He has waged a spectacular fight in the courts against each step in the legal procedure that has been slowly but steadily accomplishing his financial ruin. His most determined battle being offered in an effort to save a part of his ranch property as a homestead. During the time when he was engaged in these financial struggles, his health began failing, and then, to cap the climax and win for him the doubtful title of champion hard luck victim he was jailed for failure to pay alimony to a former wife. For the past several days he was in jail at Newkirk, Oklahoma, from which he was rescued by a pardon.

Governor Murray, incidentally, has suggested a line of reasoning that may be of value to all the alimony victims who have been jailed at various places for failure to make prompt payments. He reasons that Colonel Miller can not be held in jail because "the bill of rights in Oklahoma constitution prohibits imprisonment for debts, and certainly no court ought to imprison a citizen for some claim created by the court and which order of the court it is impossible for the citizen to obey." Alfalfa Bill, it may be observed in passing, has some good ideas rattling around in that haywire brain of his.

High Cost of Elections.

THE COST of campaigning for any worthwhile office in Texas is almost prohibitive, because faulty election machinery makes it so. Candidates in primary elections are assessed varying amounts, in order to provide funds for defraying the cost of the elections, and in the general election the counties are compelled to pay heavy expense accounts out of the general revenues.

During the past two weeks there has been quite a controversy over the subject of election costs in Dallas county. It was found by the Commissioners Court that in some of the smaller voting boxes the cost of holding the election was equivalent to $1.10 per ballot, because of the legal requirement that in each precinct there must be at least two judges and two clerks and that the polls must be kept open for twelve hours. The claims of election judges and clerks in Dallas county were finally settled for $9,765.28 after more than a thousand dollars had been cut off by compromise agreement, and that represents an average cost of more than twenty cents per ballot in that county. Obviously, the cost is too high.

The cost of holding elections has been reduced in this county by the consolidation of small voting precincts, and still further reductions might be made by consolidation or rearrangement of precincts so as to reduce those regarded as too large and increase the smaller ones. Election expenses, when calculated upon a cost-per-ballot basis, are too high here and everywhere else in

Shop Foreman and Mechanic Suffer Burns in Explosion

Ozell Young, shop foreman at the State Highway Department division warehouse in Brownwood, was painfully, but not seriously, burned about the face and neck at 8 o'clock this morning in a gasoline explosion. C. A. Bradshaw, division mechanic, also was burned, but not as badly as was Mr. Young.

Young was taking the top off of a supposedly empty metal oil barrel with a blow torch. A small amount of gasoline, however, had been poured into the barrel. This Mr. Young did not know. When the blaze of the torch burned through the barrel, the gasoline exploded.

The injured man was rushed to a local hospital where burns on his face and neck and on his left hand were dressed. He was resting well today, according to reports. Doctors said they thought the burns not serious. Mr. Bradshaw's burns were dressed, but he was not confined to the hospital.
