

CAR ACCIDENT FATAL TO JOHN HAVERKAMP

CONDITION OF MRS. SEYLER IS IMPROVING

Blood Count and Vitality Increase; Permitted to Have Visitors

Latest reports about Mrs. Ben Seyler indicate a slow recovery from her injuries sustained in her automobile accident of three weeks ago. The blood clot that developed about two weeks ago seems to have disappeared and now permits her blood pressure to rise steadily, although it still remains far below normal.

Mrs. Seyler's injured leg also is progressing nicely as is the incision made in her abdomen when doctors operated in an effort to locate the cause of her early hemorrhages.

Under favorable conditions, it is thought, Mrs. Seyler could be removed to her home here next week but until she reaches a more advanced stage of recovery her family is reluctant to make the change. They feel the necessity of being at the hospital in case other complications set in. In spite of the fact that the patient has improved several hundred per cent in the past two weeks her condition is still regarded as critical. It is for that reason that she was not permitted to return this week as had been expected.

Mrs. Seyler's strength as well as her blood count is increasing since doctors began permitting a more substantial diet about two weeks ago. She is well enough to receive visitors and extends invitations to her many friends to drop in.

Ben Seyler advises that his broken arm is healing slowly, and that he could probably return to his work at the garage if it were not for the weakness in his knees. When going up steps or remaining on his feet for more than a very short time his knees fall him. He now spends most of his time at home and occasionally visits Mrs. Seyler at Denton.

HORSEBACK RIDING ON OL' BOSSY NOT SO HOT, SAYS RALPH

Lindsay, June 23.—Ralph Bezner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bezner, suffered a broken arm when he was thrown from a cow, on the farm of his father last Friday afternoon.

Ralph who, since his return from school several weeks ago, has been constantly at the wheel of one or the other of his father's tractors or trucks, making sharp curves and square corners with perfect ease and control, was completely surprised when the cow he was riding suddenly decided to turn. Ralph was thrown with such force as to fracture his arm above the wrist. At present he is carrying the arm in a sling and getting along as well as a restless youth with his energy and vitality is able to get along.

Girls Lose 8-5 Game to Myra; Will Play Coca Cola Lassies Saturday

Though not quite good enough to win, the Muenster softball girls, showed worlds of improvement last Saturday night in holding their Myra rivals to the close margin victory of 8 to 5.

Both teams played a fairly good brand of ball all the way through. There were a few errors but they were almost evenly divided as were the hits and runs.

The Muenster girls' next game is scheduled for next Saturday night when they take on the Coca Cola girls of Gainesville. In case the Muenster girls have profited by their practice sessions this week they have a splendid chance of getting back in the win column. The Coca Cola girls are rated as good but not so good as to have the Indian sign on the local lassies. Since Bulcher's girls nosed them out last Saturday night the Muenster girls feel that they also have a fighting chance.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Russell accompanied by two of their children and two grandchildren, left Sunday for a brief visit at Kansas City with Mrs. Russell's mother, who will join them on their return trip and spend several weeks here.

Sister Ruperta Visits Here on Jubilee Trip

Celebrating the golden jubilee of her sisterhood Sister Ruperta of St. Francis Hospital, Grand Island, Neb., arrived Saturday afternoon to spend a few days with her brother, Joe Swirczynski, her sister, Mrs. Robert Yosten, and other friends and relatives in Muenster. She was accompanied by two of her younger sisters, the Venerable Sisters Angeline of Terre Haute, Ind., and Ladislaus of Columbus, Neb. All three sisters are members of the brown garbed Franciscan order.

The day of Sister Ruperta's jubilee, June 15, was observed by a Pontifical High Mass read by Bishop Bona of Grand Island and attended by 18 priests from Grand Island and neighboring parishes. Also attending at the ceremony were Matt, Barney, and George Yosten, who live near Grand Island, and Phil Yosten of Omaha, all of them brothers to the Yostens here and well known to many in the Muenster community.

Sister Ruperta enjoys the distinction of being the first religious in the diocese of Grand Island to celebrate her golden jubilee. When she

Herr Children Observe Father's Day by Visit With Injured Parent

Following the injury sustained by John Herr last week when he fell and fractured his hip, four of his children returned home to visit with him Sunday. They were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Herr of Gladewater, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Herr and two sons of Arlington, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran and children of Gainesville, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Herr and children of Iraan, Texas.

The group met in the home of their sister, Mrs. Matt Miller, for dinner and then spent the rest of the day with their father and mother. They all returned to their homes Sunday evening except Bill Herr and family, who went to Arlington to spend a few days with Joe. From there they will return to Iraan.

Bill Herr is rapidly recovering from the burns he received about his shoulders and arms when his house burned several weeks ago.

John Herr reported that the pain in his hip is slight but that he will have to remain in bed for some time.

Muenster Pastors Will Attend First Mass of Whitesboro Man Sunday

A change in the regular schedule for church services in the Muenster parish was adopted for next Sunday to permit the local pastors as well as many parishioners to attend the first Mass of Father Wm. Wade, a newly ordained Jesuit priest, at Whitesboro. According to the Rev. Father Schmidt, pastor at Whitesboro, Father Wade will read a Solemn High Mass.

A general invitation to attend the ceremony was sent to all neighboring parishes of North Texas.

Father Wade, the son of George Wade, prominent business man of Whitesboro, is a former classmate of Rudy and Hugo Hellman while they attended St. Mary's College in Kansas.

Herman Swirczynski Visits Cheese Plants While on Kansas Trip

Herman Swirczynski combined business and pleasure on his recent trip to Emporia, Kans., where he was joined on the return drive by his aunts, the Venerable Sisters Ruperta, Angeline, and Ladislaus. He visited cheese factories at Shawnee and Sulphur, Okla., and Emporia and Oswego, Kans. At the latter place Herman had the pleasure of a several hours' visit with John Hellman, former cheesemaker at the Muenster plant. Herman says that John is just as genial, just as dizzy, and a little more bald-headed.

At Emporia, Herman was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Alex Knauft, and family.

OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

FATHER FROWIN KOERDT, O.S.B.

Father Frowin Koerdt Observes 33rd Anniversary in Priesthood

By SISTER LUCY, O.S.B.
On Friday, June 25, Rev. Father Frowin Koerdt, O.S.B., celebrates the 33rd anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Being aware of the fact that his vocation is an inestimable grace, he spends the day of the anniversary in devout thanks—giving an humble appreciation.

Indeed, his life has been a chain of graces from the time he left behind the plow and the cotton sack in Hartman, Ark., and went to study at the young monastery of New Subiaco in the picturesque western part of that State. During the first year after his ordination he taught at the college. But teaching was too monotonous for the exuberant young priest. In July, 1906, he was appointed pastor of Windthorst, Texas. There he found an outlet for his energy. Besides his pastoral duties he framed and installed a water system in the parochial buildings, which are located on a hill. He also planned the $30,000 brick school building which was completed by his successor.

In the summer of 1918 Father Frowin was chosen pastor of Muenster, Texas. Very soon he became aware of the need of a new school building. His plans were realized when the present beautiful brick building was finished in 1925. Its cost is approximately $100,000. All of this money was lent at 6 per cent by the parishioners. By his usual practice of thrifty economy and the

MUENSTER CITIZENS TO ATTEND GARLAND NEIGHBOR TOWN DAY

Two carloads of Muenster citizens are making plans to attend the "Neighbor Town Day" at Garland, Friday afternoon, June 25, according to word received early this week from J. M. Weinzapfel.

Friday is Garland's show-off day. For several years that city has been following a system of development known as the Kessler plan, and she now invites her neighbors from all over North Texas to come and take a look and, if they wish, inquire about the details that have made Garland one of the most beautiful and most progressive farm towns of Texas.

Muenster citizens are planning the trip with a view to introducing a forward program here. It is hoped that at the Garland meeting arrangements can be made to secure assistance from the Kessler Plan Association, an organization that concerns itself primarily with Dallas and lends its help gratis to many cities of North Texas.

COUNTY AGENT SUBMITS PLAN FOR WARDING OFF GRASSHOPPER SCOURGE

Recent predictions point to a superabundance of grasshoppers in the very near future, according to a statement released early this week by County Agent C. H. Clark. The pests are getting more numerous every day, he said, and farmers interested in saving their crops would do well to plan a counter-attack now.

The following is a method of preparing grasshopper poison as submitted by Mr. Clark:

One pound white arsenic (avoid calcium and lead arsenate), 25 lbs. wheat bran; one-half gallon cane molasses (avoid corn syrup—use black strap or some other syrup that has a strong odor), 2 oz. amyl acetate (first grade) or one dozen lemons, about two gallons water. Mix bran and arsenic dry, thoroughly. Mix molasses and amyl acetate, then water. Then mix together thoroughly on the order of mixing mortar or plaster.

This quantity will poison five acres without danger of injury to livestock, but be careful about using too freely. Put out late in evening or early morning, to have it fresh and moist as possible when the 'hoppers forage early in the morning.

WEDDING AT DALLAS UNITES MISS COOKE AND FRANK SCHMITZ

Miss Leona Mae Cooke of Saint Jo and Frank Schmitz were married Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the rectory of the Sacred Heart Cathedral, Dallas. Miss Agnes Weinzapfel attended the bride as maid of honor and Paul Hellman attended Mr. Schmitz.

Mrs. Schmitz was attired in a white silk crepe dress trimmed with woolen embroidery and white accessories. Her attendant wore black chiffon trimmed in white and white accessories.

Prior to the wedding the bridal party were guests at a chicken dinner in the home of the best man, Paul Hellman, Sunday night. His mother, Mrs. G. H. Hellman, was hostess.

Following the ceremony the party met Monday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Endres in Dallas. There they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Delfield and Misses Davie May Chadwell and Ruby Evans of Gainesville, and Mr. and Mrs. John Wieler, Jim Lehnert, and Robert Swirczynski of Muenster. From the Endres home the party went to the Pan American Exposition for the rest of the evening.

The bridal couple remained in Dallas until Tuesday when they left for Chicago and other Northern cities. They expect to return to Muenster about July 4.

Trachtas Back from Trip To Mexico and Carlsbad

Mrs. Frank Trachta, her daughter, Miss Dorothy, and son, Harold, returned Tuesday from a five-day vacation tour to Lubbock, Carlsbad, N. M., El Paso, Pecos, and Juarez, Mexico.

Some of the high spots of interest in their trip, as related by Dorothy, are the trip through Carlsbad Caverns, watching the three million bats as they stream from the cavern mouth for about 20 minutes, and attending a Mexican wedding at El Paso. An odd feature of the wedding was that the couple were bound together with a white silk cord.

Due to the illness of Vincent Trachta, the fourth member of the party, who turned back at Lubbock because of the ailment, the Trachtas cut their trip shorter than they originally had planned.

Harold and Vincent will both return to their respective jobs on June 30.

Myra Library Offers Special Service

Myra, June 23.—Mrs. Tom Watson, librarian, has recently made a statement inviting everyone to take advantage of the special library services now being offered. She has a wide variety of good books and magazines. Her reading room is cozy and open to the public. A story telling hour is conducted for the benefit of children at 2:30 p.m. every Monday, and the Nature Study Club for adults is held at 3:30 p.m. every Friday.

Aged Pioneer Was Walking on Road North of Muenster
When Hit; Tragedy Unavoidable.

John Haverkamp, 76, one of the pioneers of the Muenster community, died Tuesday at 2:40 p. m. from injuries sustained when he was hit by an automobile about two hours before.

The accident occurred when Mr. Haverkamp, walking on the road near John Felderhoff's home, stepped in front of the car in which B. L. Williams and his family were were riding. According to the statement Mr. Williams made to Constable Frank Hoedebeck, he was approaching Mr. Haverkamp at about 30 miles an hour. When Mr. Haverkamp began walking into his line of travel he sounded the horn and the aged man, apparently surprised, leaped directly in front of him. In his attempt to miss the victim he swerved toward the right ditch but was too late to avoid the tragedy.

Charles Haverkamp, son of the deceased, and John Felderhoff, seeing the Williams car go into the ditch, rushed to the scene to find the victim with his lower legs mangled and a bad wound in his head. They rushed him to the Muenster Clinic where first aid was administered by Miss Mary Alice Bernauer. Unfortunately Dr. T. S. Myrick was in Paris attending a medical meeting as were the doctors of neighboring towns. Finally Dr. Silas Yarbrough of Gainesville answered the emergency call and drove to Muenster.

While it was not possible to get a doctor on the scene, the general consensus of opinion is that doctors would have been unable to save him anyway. Mr. Haverkamp died without regaining consciousness.

The Rev. Father Frowin and members of Mr. Haverkamp's family were summoned immediately and remained with him to the end.

Funeral services for Mr. Haverkamp were held Thursday morning

Muenster Team Makes Clean Sweep in Double Header Softball Game

It was Muenster's day at the double-header last Sunday afternoon at the local ball park. In their first encounter they had a hard time squeezing out a 9-to-8 victory over the Pilot Point huskies who extended the game an extra two innings before permitting Muenster to scratch up the deciding run.

Henry Hennigan wielded his south paw to advantage for several innings to take credit as the winning pitcher of the first game. Assisting him in the good work were a crowd of his brother knights of the local K. of C. council, the only non-members being three youngsters who stepped in when the knights failed to gather the required number from their own membership.

In the second game Muenster easily took in the Sherman team on a 15-to-2 count. They held an advantage in both hitting and fielding that drove in a few tallies every inning.

Both visiting teams were sponsored by the Knights of Columbus councils of their respective cities and both were made up principally of Knights of Columbus. Likewise on the Muenster team the players were mostly members of the local council.

Flusches Return From Trip

Miss Marie Flusche and her brother, Andrew, returned this week from a delightful trip to Fort Worth, San Antonio, Waco, and other points of interest. They were accompanied by their sister, Miss Magdalene, who spent five years studying at Our Lady of the Lake in San Antonio and one year at teaching. Miss Flusche is home for an extended visit with her family.

LOCAL NEWS BRIEFS

Buddy Swingler is a new member of the Muenster Boy Scout troop.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luebbert of Gainesville spent last Sunday in the Bill Stelzer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren King Carter left Tuesday on a 10-day vacation. They will visit points in Oklahoma and Texas.

Al Walterscheid, Meinrad Hesse, Henry Roberg and Louis Roberg spent the day fishing at Lake Bridgeport last Sunday.

Miss Mary Barker, who is attending North Texas State Teachers' College at Denton this summer, spent Sunday here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barker.

Mrs. Bill Stelzer has just completed a home improvement program that includes new wall paper, a new finish for the kitchen ceiling and all woodwork and a re-varnish job for the floors.

A former employe of the Ben Seyler Motor Co., George McCool, is visiting here this week. His wife, who has been living here, will return with him to East Moline, Ill., where he is now working.

Calendars will reveal why so many were uncomfortable last Monday. It was the first day of summer and, incidentally, the hottest day of the year to that date. Furthermore, it was the longest day of the year.

Mrs. Alfred Schumacher returned last Monday morning from a weekend trip to Grand Prairie where her husband is engaged in bridge construction work with the Bob Wallace Construction Company.

Harry Otto left late last week for Amarillo and parts unknown. In the Panhandle metropolis he intended to visit with his sister, Lorraine, and other relatives. He did not disclose the time he expects to return.

Due to illness, Vincent Trachta failed to enjoy his vacation trip. He traveled as far as Lubbock, then returned to Muenster. He will remain here for another week before returning to his work at Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Mary Bernauer and Miss Della Bernauer, who have been visiting Mrs. Charles Reiter and family at Kerrville for several weeks, returned Wednesday in the company of Charles Reiter and two of his children. Charles left Thursday morning after spending a day visiting his many friends and relatives here.

Two of Muenster's fair young damsels (who prefer not to have their names revealed) were left twiddling their thumbs last Sunday night while their Romeos (who prefer not to have their names mentioned) were talking over the problem of motorcycle noises with one of their "friends" at the city hall in Gainesville.

If all the holes on Main Street were placed over, or under, one another how deep would the one hole be? The question has come up and this paper is delighted to get it in circulation so that everyone can have a chance to figure on it. As for us, we venture the guess that a hole of that depth would be worth a sizeable sum in some oil field.

Your CONFIDENCE is our BIGGEST ASSET

THROUGH THE YEARS we have planned and built the best, most modern and most efficient power and light service facilities which skill and money could provide. We have operated these facilities for the single purpose of earning and holding your confidence.

Recognizing that your confidence is given only in return for measurable and important values received, we have turned every effort to assure you full value in every bit of service you purchased from us. In doing this we have brought you cheaper electric service... cheaper in cost to you... better and more useful to you, at the same time.

Therefore, it becomes obvious that your confidence reposed in us works to your best advantage. That's as it should be. While we are public servants, rendering a public service, we are, at the same time, your personal servant, working for your private benefit.

All of us... you... ourselves... and every other good citizen of this community... have one common interest: The balanced growth and development of this community. Electric service, none of us can deny, is of great and common importance to us all, and to the community. It serves us individually and as a community. Your confidence in us gives life and vigor to our determination to continue to merit and hold that confidence... our biggest asset, and your assurance of better and cheaper electric service.

It's an Oliver... And It Has the BRUTE STRENGTH for HARD JOBS

For the heaviest-duty plowing... wherever the going is toughest... the new Oliver Overhead Beam Disc Plows are outselling all other similar plows.

Due to Oliver Overhead Beam construction, there's an automatic, natural pressure that drives the discs down deep, even in the hardest ground. These sturdy plows are also convertible. Should land conditions vary, they can be easily adjusted. Should a new tractor be bought, with more or less power than the old one, this plow can be readily adapted to meet the change.

With roller bearings... pressure lubrication... strong square steel beams to withstand the heaviest stress and strain... and a quicker-acting power lift... here are plows that will do better work for you. Where brute strength is needed—they have it!

Why experiment? Oliver has been Plowmaker for the World for 80 years! Come see these new plows. You'll admire them!

Gunlock Ranch By FRANK H. SPEARMAN
 COPYRIGHT FRANK H. SPEARMAN W.M.U. SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR

CHAPTER 1.—Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tarnel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tarnel, hated owner of Gunlock Ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot Ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him with Harry Boland, saloonkeeper and crony of McCrossen. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. They are then asked to propose their own stunts, McCrossen, winning the toss, picks up a handkerchief from the ground riding full speed, facing backward. Denison easily follows suit. Now it is his turn. He drops a cigarette carelessly, and it is proposed that he try to pick it up riding full tilt.

CHAPTER 2.—Racing down the track, Denison picks up the cigarette. Boland and the Gunlock ranch followers protest to Bill Pardaloe, ex-sheriff and one of the judges, but the verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tarnel is asked for her bracelet and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up, a yell from Barney Robstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Doctor Carpy. The young stranger returns the bracelet to Jane.

CHAPTER 3.—Back on Gunlock ranch after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tarnel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a thief. Later she asks Dr. Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tarnel's ruthless and unscrupulous character.

CHAPTER 5.—Visiting her father in the hospital, Jane is warned to be wary of McCrossen's honesty, but her father urges her to be nice to him. Later McCrossen tries to woo her, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again Jane loses her way in the hills and meets Denison.

CHAPTER IV

For a moment she was too upset to speak. But her silence seemed not to move her companion.

Looking placidly ahead, and after waiting for her to comment, he spoke again:

"I might be wrong. But I thought I saw that bracelet about two years ago, Fourth of July."

"Oh," exclaimed Jane for want of something better to say.

"Anyway," continued her even-speaking guide, "I know I couldn't be mistaken about the young lady that wore it. Weren't you visiting here around that time?"

"Yes," ventured Jane, stealing a glance at the questioner. His gaze was fixed steadfastly ahead.

"Were you at the Frontier Day celebration in Sleepy Cat that Fourth of July?" he continued.

"Yes," repeated Jane. "Were you?"

"If I hadn't been," he answered dryly, "I shouldn't have seen the bracelet."

They were jogging along pleasantly enough, and as the man didn't actually demand her bracelet or watch, her panic subsided.

"Stopping over at the ranch for a while, are you?"

"For a while, yes."

"Some of the boys over at your ranch were telling in town they had a young lady over at Gunlock that used to ride in a circus. I suppose it was you."

"I'm the only woman, young or old, over there."

"What circus did you work with?"

"Oh, several circuses," said Jane recklessly.

Jane, growing flighty, named one of the big ones whose shows she had attended in Chicago.

"What year were you with that show?"

She was growing desperate. With affected embarrassment she turned full on him. "You mustn't ask me that. Women are sensitive about their age, don't you know?"

For the first time he turned his eyes directly toward hers; there was a slight mutual shock at the encounter.

ter. To hide a momentary confusion, she laughed nervously; but a bridge—a little bit of a bridge over a little bit of a brook—had been crossed. And the little bit of a brook was of the kind that sometimes leads to a big river.

His eyes were brown—Jane could see them now—together with some of the lightning that flashed in response to her words. She was even a little scared.

"I've heard some women are that way," he went on, "but I shouldn't call you a woman."

"Oh, my! Why not?"

"Well, I'd call you a girl. The reason I asked was, because I was with that show one season myself."

This was growing terrifying. Jane made an effort to change the line of talk; but her stranger was interested. "Did you ever happen to ride in Madison Square Garden?"

"N-no! Did you?"

"I rode there one winter when we showed there."

"Did you like circus work?" she asked offhand.

"Can't say I did. I never worked in a circus except that one season. It was only because I needed money bad, and it was big money to me. Then the lawyers got it all. Here's the fork for Gunlock Ranch."

He pointed. They were at the parting of their ways. A saucy impulse seized Jane. She was given to impulses and to doing whatever thing flashed into her head. She checked her horse, lifted her forearm, and unclasped the bracelet. "Since you've been so kind—"

The man had halted his horse. "Nothing at all!" he protested.

"—I'd like you," she went on, paying no attention to his disclaimer, "to have a souvenir—this bracelet." She held it out to him. He looked flabbergasted. "For what?" he stammered.

His embarrassment seemed to communicate itself to Jane—she could not have told why. "I'm grateful for your putting me on my way today, and that other night when I got lost, if you remember," she went on.

He swallowed. She was secretly delighted with his confusion. "Well, that certainly is mighty kind," he said haltingly. "But I couldn't accept such a beautiful thing for doing nothing at all."

"I've got lots of bracelets."

"But sometime I've got to find something I can really do for you."

She laid the bracelet in his outstretched hand.

"I certainly thank you a thousand times." His slow response left no doubt of what he felt. Her aim now was to escape his protestations. He put on his hat. She started to go.

"Please!" he exclaimed, raising his hand. She stopped. Her guide's brow ruffled a little in perplexity.

"What is it?" she asked, superciliously impatient.

He took his hat off again. "Would it be polite," he ventured, "to ask your name?"

"Tell me yours again," she said.

"Bill Denison."

She allowed her horse to turn into the ranch trail. Denison sat motionless, hat in hand, but looking directly at her. "You haven't told me your name yet," he remonstrated quietly.

Not till after she had parted from Denison and was riding alone with her thoughts did Jane begin to feel really frightened. This was the man of whom she had heard lurid tales of rustling, an enemy of her father's, near-outlaw generally—Bill Denison.

She drew a long breath, thinking over her encounter with the redoubtable Bill; what she had said to him and how she had said it; what he had said to her and how he had said it; recalling his general appearance, his easy manner in the saddle, his peaceable features, and at last his brown eyes. As she drew near the ranch house, she resolutely dismissed him from her mind, or thought she did.

She was as hungry as a bear—but to all questioners she merely explained that she had taken a long ride over on the Reservation.

"Who was the man that brought you home?" asked McCrossen.

"Why, nobody."

"Ben Page said you rode back with a man."

So she had been discovered. No matter. "Oh, that man!" she exclaimed, tossing her head. "He was just somebody from the Reservation, going to Sleepy Cat."

In the meantime her rebuffs had not shaken the constancy of her former admirer, McCrossen. He made continued appeal for her favor—so marked once in a while as to make her angry. She could hardly get away from him, but his conversations, his suggestions, and his persistence got on Jane's nerves.

Whenever McCrossen was going to ride over the ranch, Jane was not so riding. When he was riding to town, Jane was riding over the ranch. In fact, chiefly to be rid of him, Jane spent much of the time in the saddle. And she developed a particular liking for the hill trail to town; she usually rode that way, either coming or going. What impressed itself on her was that riding the hill road alone was not quite so exciting as the first time she had ridden it with a guide. But what had become of her guide?

She controlled her impatience until she could do so no longer. Starting one day to town with Bull Page, Jane asked discreetly about their neighbor, this man Bill Denison. She had heard so much about him that she's begun to wonder what he looked like!

"Why, Miss Jane," answered Bull, "cordin' to what I hear, Bill's been down to Medicine Bend on his lawsuit."

"But why need a man go to Medicine Bend for a lawsuit, when there are courts in Sleepy Cat?"

"Well, this is before the U. S. Land Office; that's different." Suddenly Bull, peering down the trail, straightened. "Why, there's Bill, right now, on his way to town. The critter's back."

"Where is he? Oh, I see. The man that just rode around the bend?" Jane did some fast and bold thinking. She looked in her purse. "Bull!" she exclaimed in fancied alarm, "I've forgotten to bring Quong's grocery list for the kitchen. I'm afraid you'll have to ride back after it."

She was soon within speaking distance of the horseman ahead. Overtaking him, she slackened her pace.

"Good morning," she said stiffly. Denison looked around, checked his horse, touched his hat, and returned the greeting. But he was plainly confused, and Jane was correspondingly pleased. "We meet again," she said with a superior air. "And this time I'm not lost."

"I'm afraid I am, this time," he said slowly.

"How so?"

"Well, it happened I was just thinking about the other times we met, and wondering whether I'd ever see you again, when you dropped down out of the sky on me just now. It took my breath. On your way to town? So am I. Do you mind if I ride along with you?"

"I might mind if you didn't. In fact, if you don't mind a confession, I hurried a little to catch up. You were so kind before—"

"Nothing at all—"

—and you gave me such good advice that I haven't been lost since. But I do feel safer, riding with company. So thank you again—if you're not terribly tired of being thanked."

"Just as much as you like, if you'll remember you're thanking me for nothing. I was afraid you'd gone back to Chicago."

"Where have you been all this time? I certainly couldn't have missed you if you ride this trail as often as I do."

"I've been away—down at Medicine Bend. How long is it since that day?"

"Oh, I haven't any idea. It was an awfully hot day, as I remember. Wasn't it?"

"I can't remember a thing about the weather. If I measured the time by my feelings, it would be about three years."

"How perfectly ridiculous!" pouted Jane.

"What I was afraid of was, you'd gone back to Chicago and I'd never see you again. Then I figured that if you went back to Chicago, I'd look there next winter for a circus job and try to get into the same show with you."

She looked at him, frankly amused. "Now wasn't that nice of you? Really, Mr. Denison, you make me perfectly ashamed of myself. Will you get mad now if I confess again? No, you mustn't. I just won't have it. But—I was kidding about being a circus rider. It was some of our crazy cowboys started that."

"What amused you?" she asked.

"Nothing at all."

"Oh, yes it was. What?"

"You won't get mad?"

"Oh," she responded airily, "I never get mad."

"Well, I knew you were kidding because that time you rode up to Spring Ranch, I happened to see you come down the valley. It was after I'd heard these stories about circus riding. I said to myself, 'If that young lady ever rode in a circus, they'd have to tie her on.'"

Jane didn't like it—no girl could. But it gave her precisely the opening she wanted. "Now," she said with an attempted laugh, "it's my turn, and I hope you won't get mad."

"Try me—nothing'd make me mad."

Then, "You mustn't hate me because I am not someone you might have thought I was. I am Jane Van Tarnel. My name is Jane—not Marie. I know you and Father haven't got along..."

They were jogging on, side by side. Then he looked over at her with an expression she had not before seen in a man's eyes, "I certainly won't ever hate you," he said very slowly. "I just—couldn't."

CHAPTER 5

Two days passed. Jane ordered up her pony. "What's takin' you into town today?" asked McCrossen, suspiciously.

She came up with the pony. Jane tossed the question: "I forgot some errands the other day. I shan't be gone long."

"Who's goin' with you?"

"No one. The boys are busy. I don't need the wagon today."

She had ridden some two miles toward town, when a turn in the trail brought in sight a man riding out of the woods. He checked his horse and waited for Jane. His face was expectant.

Jane's cheeks flushed in spite of herself. "I hope I haven't kept you waiting long," she stammered. He smiled and shook his head as if perfectly satisfied. "I came early," he confessed. "But I'd have hung around all night for this and not thought it long. Are we going up in the hills?"

"Not today. We—at least I am going into town." Jane had private feelings of reserve about riding into the hills with Bill Denison. "In the hills we might get lost," she suggested naively.

"I might; but not in the way you mean. I'm lost right now. I've been lost for two days. Something came into my life two days ago that I hope will keep me dreaming the rest of my life."

"Don't talk nonsense."

"You don't dare ask what I was dreaming about?"

"Was it about another dreamer?"

"It was."

"I know who, then." He looked at her with pathetic hope. "It was about McCrossen," she added heartlessly.

"Never! It was—"

"Let's gallop," she exclaimed, cutting him squarely off. "I feel just like riding fast. I can beat you to that big pine!"

When she pulled up after a brisk run, her face was flushed, her eyes dancing, her lips parted in laughter. Denison was just behind her. "Why, you didn't race at all," she complained, looking around at him. "Why didn't you try to pass me in stead of sticking at my heels all the time?"

"If I passed you, how in the world could I see you? I wish it was 50 miles more to Sleepy Cat—don't you?"

OUR EDUCATIONAL RUT

ALMOST one-third of the summer vacation is past and still no action has been taken with regard to the Muenster school situation. Everyone, it seems, is sitting back calmly and expecting the other fellow to make the first move. And not a few of them are preparing to fight the proposed improvement if and when it is brought out in the open.

As usual the greater part of the antagonism to the plan for improving our school situation can be credited to lack of appreciation for its value and lack of understanding of this city's educational handicaps as compared with other places. Few realize what opportunities are offered elsewhere and how limited the opportunities are here.

Under existing conditions students here are handicapped by the limited duration of class periods. They are handicapped by unfavorable studying conditions—they are constantly disturbed by class work of others in the same room. And teachers are handicapped by overwork. In the Muenster school two persons teach all of the 16 high school subjects. No one except a genius can do justice to that volume of work.

Some will contend, of course, that since the number of high school students here is limited the improvements would not be justified. They overlook the fact that Muenster would have more students if it had more to offer. Home boys and girls would be enthusiastic about pursuing their work if courses were more thorough and more varied. Contrary to the commonly accepted belief they need the advantages of higher training even though they are destined for the farm. In agriculture as well as in all other industries new advancements are made every day and those advancements are being introduced to students in more advanced schools. Other students are destined to leave the farm and likewise need the advantages of more adequate training.

Besides those immediately surrounding Muenster there are dozens of students in neighboring communities who look forward to the privilege of doing their high school work here.

In addition to the students who lose interest and quit is the group that continues more advanced work in other schools. Last year more than a dozen youngsters from here attended schools away from home. The combined expense of that group was well over $3,000, which is more than half the proposed amount to bring the Muenster school out of the rut. Those who object to expenses would do well to appreciate that the financial burden was carried by about a dozen families whereas the financial burden of the proposed improvement would be assumed by more than 200 families and several large corporations.

The need of an improved school is sorely felt and the expense of improving it is small for each individual. Isn't it time something was done about it?

ELECTRIFICATION

JUDGING from latest reports, rural electrification in Muenster rural districts has a fair chance of becoming a reality. A comprehensive survey is in sight as soon as the annual threshing season is over. At that time people will have their opportunity to come out of the dark and enjoy the convenience that more than anything else has contributed to the comfort of their city friends.

Since Uncle Sam offers to bear the brunt of the financial burden in the proposed electrification project farmers are certain to enter the problem in a favorable state of mind. Another favorable circumstance is that everyone wants electricity. But the big problem is whether some of the people are willing to pay for the added expense of electrical current. How many will feel that they can pay a minimum of $3.50, or perhaps $2.50, a month as compared with the few cents they now pay for kerosene lighting?

For the benefit of those who would hesitate the following questions are submitted for consideration. What parent will deny to his children, who spend hours at their homework every week, the opportunity of protecting their sight with better light? How many would enjoy the opportunity of reading, a pastime that is denied in poorly lighted homes? How many housewives would throw off the drudgery of washing, ironing, cooking, and cleaning the hard way?

We make no pretense about this project. We feel that for each individual rural home electricity would add immeasurably to the joy of living. We want every person to want electricity because we feel that school children are entitled to protection for their eyes, housewives are entitled to easier and better methods of doing their work, and everyone is entitled to more pleasant leisure.

When all people want electricity badly enough to pay a reasonable rate for it, all of them can get it at a cheap rate. Volume is the important consideration and the determining factor in the success of this venture.

The present trend is to form an independent co-operative company at Muenster, buy the current at wholesale rates from some dependable power company, and retail it to consumers. All earnings would be applied against the company's indebtedness until lines are paid for and then returned to consumers in reduced rates. The plan can be highly successful here—the possible number of consumers is large enough. It will be introduced in a short time at a general community meeting, and everyone interested in better living owes it to himself to be present at that meeting.

YOUR NEWSPAPER

THE merchant's relations to his newspaper are supposed to be those of an advertiser. This is a narrow vein. Your paper is an institution. The merchant can no more escape its influence than anybody else, whether he advertises or not.

Yet, as a consistent advertiser, his relations with the local newspaper become definitely constructive. He becomes a part of this institution without which no community can express itself. Whatever its merits or demerits, the home town paper is an expression of the community, it is the "voice of the people" in a sense that cannot hold true for any other medium.

This institution keeps friends in touch with friends. To the best of its ability it answers Who, What, When, Where, How and Why. It interprets community life. Week by week it tells the story of the town and community.

Most people are so accustomed to the home town paper that they take it as a matter of course. If they think anything about it at all, they think of its deficiencies. They are present largely because it is run by fallible human beings. The wonder about your paper is that it contains so few mistakes.

To the merchant, especially, your paper is an opportunity. His business, too, is a local institution. Unless it finds some kind of expression in the paper, both the paper and the business house have to an important extent failed to function. Each is affected somewhat by every successive failure in this respect.

It does not cost a great deal of money to advertise in the local paper. Most advertisers are overjudicious rather than extravagant. It is the continual message that counts. Sporadic advertisements now and then are of doubtful value; perhaps they are better than no advertising at all. Every advertisement placed by a business house should blend into every other advertisement it places. The merchant should think in terms of a campaign rather than in terms of the single insertion.—Mount Vernon (Texas) Optic-Herald.

"Not even two miles?"
"No."
"Well, one mile then?"
"Well, maybe a mile."
"Say two."
"What a persistent tease! Well—two, then. And no more."
"We could make it two by riding a little farther into the hills."
"You might ride up that way by yourself."

"I'm just a groom. I have to follow my mistress."
"Oh, no! We mustn't ride into town together. You gallop ahead."

Jane lunched that day at Dr. Carpy's hotel, hoping she might see Carpy himself. Fortune favored her. The doctor was in the office when she came.

"By the way, Doctor," she said, "I rode into town, part of the way, this morning with a neighbor of ours who doesn't bear a very favorable reputation at Gunlock, but

"What's his name?"

"Bill Denison."

Carpy laughed his dry little laugh. "Well!" he exclaimed benevolently. "You did pick a real outsider, didn't you? What did you think of the brute?"

In her confusion, Jane hesitated. "Why—I thought him not bad at all," she declared with spirit. "What do you think of him?"

"Why, to speak just offhand, Jane, I'd say Bill Denison had his enemies; but I think he's about as square and open-and-above-board a young fellow as lives in the hills. I don't suppose any of your father's following would agree with me."

"He struck me, too, Doctor, as just such a man," interposed Jane impulsively.

"What do you know about things like that?" asked Carpy jocularly. "You're just a kid! He might be a horse thief for all you could tell, girl."

Jane drew herself up. "Don't be so sure about every girl's being a fool—some of them might fool you! He told me he used to work at Gunlock. What was the quarrel between him and Father?"

entered the convent her section of Nebraska was just another part of the wide open spaces. Through her toil and courage as well as that of her many associates, the progress of her order kept pace with the development of Nebraska.

Following Sister Ruperta to the convent were her three sisters, the Venerable Sisters Dorothy, Angeline, and Ladislaus. The latter two had the privilege of attending the jubilee celebration and now share in the pleasure of the jubilee holidays. Sister Dorothy has been dead for several years.

Four years have passed since Sister Ruperta last visited her friends and relations here. Her two companions had not been in Muenster for 27 years.

Honoring the venerable sisters, a family reunion was held last Sunday in the Bob Yosten home. All relatives of the Swirczynski and Yosten families were there for the noon-day feast. Later in the evening the visitors and all immediate relatives, members of the Joe Swirczynski and Bob Yosten families, as well as Father Frowin and sisters of the local convent had dinner at the Swirczynski home.

After the jubilee celebration the sisters were met by Alex Knauf who took them to his home at Emporia, Kans. From there they came to Muenster in the company of Herman Swirczynski. According to their original plans they were to remain here until Friday, then spend a short time visiting with John and Phil Swirczynski at Oklahoma City, and return to Grand Island.

was, indeed, a great relief to pastor and flock. How joyfully did they sing their hymn of thanksgiving, "Grosser Gott," on the last Sunday of 1936.

Nobody need imagine, however, that Father Frowin considers his life work finished. He is still quite energetic, even though his hair tells the tale that his 59th birthday is near. Besides there is a huge task awaiting him, the building of a new and larger church. A person of less initiative might shrink from such an undertaking, but Father Frowin trusts in God's blessing and the generous help of his good and loyal parishioners. They realize that in him they have an excellent financier, and many have expressed their hope that he will carry this work through. Several crops like this year's will enable them to build an edifice in keeping with their desire to honor God.

confusion of the first half schedule. When the Bulcher Oilers decided to withdraw, all games they had played were disregarded. Then when Muenster took the Oilers' place they were faced with the necessity of repeating all games their predecessors had played. More difficulty was caused by the two weeks' recess period for grain threshing.

In the only scheduled game of last week Leo retained its strangle hold on first place and a perfect record by defeating Era 13 to 2.

at 8 o'clock from the Muenster Sacred Heart Church with the Rev. Father Frowin officiating, and Nick Miller in charge of funeral arrangements. Pallbearers were John, Joe, Frank, Ben, Lee, and Bill Haverkamp, sons of the deceased.

Mr. Haverkamp was one of Muenster's pioneer settlers and one to whom a great deal of credit is due for the early progress of the community.

He was born at Carlisle, Ill., on January 21, 1861, and was married on October 13, 1885, to Miss Theresa Busch at St. Joseph, Tenn.

He moved to Muenster in 1890, when only a very few families were here, and settled on the farm now occupied by his son, Charles, one and one-half miles northeast of town. He lived on that place until six years ago when he moved to town and retired.

Mr. Haverkamp is survived by his wife; a brother, Casper; a sister, Mrs. Mary Bernauer; five daughters, Mrs. Frank Hess, Mrs. Nick Stoffel, Mrs. John Walterscheid, Mrs. John Kathman, and Sister Anselma, O.S.B., of Jonesboro, Ark.; and seven sons, Joe of Gainesville, Frank of Lindsay, John, Lee, Ben, Bill, and Charles of Muenster. He has 48 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Father Jerome Pohle Observes Silver Jubilee

From Fort Worth Star-Telegram: One of the largest gatherings of Catholic clergy to assemble in Fort Worth in recent years participated in the solemn High Mass Thursday morning, June 17, at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Catholic Church when Rev. Jerome Pohle, O.S.B., of this city, observed his silver jubilee as a member of the priesthood.

Among the prelates at the mass, which was attended by members of all of the Catholic Churches here, were Most Rt. Rev. Joseph P. Lynch, D.D., bishop of Dallas, and Rt. Rev. Edward Burgert, O.S.B., Ph.D., abbot of Subiaco, Ark. Father Jerome and Abbot Burgert were ordained at the same time in Arkansas by order of the bishop of Little Rock.

Celebrant at the mass was Father Jerome with Rev. Vincent Orth, O.S.B., deacon, and Rev. Louis Deuster, O.S.B., as sub-deacon. Rev. E. Langenhorst, of Fort Worth, St. Patrick's Church, was archpriest of the mass, while Rev. Matthew Wiederkehr, O.S.B., of Rhineland, Texas, was master of ceremonies.

The sermon, a tribute to the 25 years of service Father Jerome has given to the church, was delivered by Abbot Burgert.

Father Jerome, for the past nine years secretary and treasurer of Laneri High School, was born in Illinois and moved to Muenster in his youth. He was a member of the Sacred Heart Parish for several years before entering the Benedictine monastery at Subiaco. After his ordination he was a member of the Subiaco faculty for several years.

Fathers Frowin and Francis of Muenster, Father John of Lindsay, and Father Brady of Gainesville were among the large number of priests who attended the jubilee celebration.

Other members of the clergy who participated in the jubilee mass were:

MAN FOUND DEAD UNDER TRACTOR NEAR HERE

Gainesville, June 17.—Stacy Langston, a farmer residing about three miles south of Lindsay, was found dead Thursday morning, June 17, at 11:15 o'clock, pinned under a tractor which he was operating on a farm belonging to Mrs. A. Hinzman, two and one-half miles south of Lindsay.

The body was found by Edgar Mesman of Lindsay who was passing by after delivering a load of wheat to the elevator there.

It was thought that Langston in turning around at the end of the field, had backed the machine into a ditch, some four or five feet in depth, falling from the machine and being pinned under it.

He was dead when a Carroll and Son ambulance arrived on the scene. Langston was said to be about 38 years of age and is survived by a wife and two children.

He had been in the employ of Mrs. Hinzman about three months.—Register, Gainesville.

Checking Service on A "50-50" Basis

* The dollars in your checking account work two ways; they work for you and they work for the bank.

* They work for you by giving you a safe and easy way to pay your bills, by giving you credit and all the benefits of modern bank service.

* But some of them must work for the bank too, or the bank will not be able to keep on working for you.

* There must be a good balance in your account at all times so that the bank can use a part of it in loans to meet its expenses and for earning a fair profit like any other business.

* A checking account should be conducted on a "50-50 basis" that will be profitable both to the depositor and to the bank.
