Local grain harvest nears completion

The end of harvest season in this community is just a few days away, provided that the present good weather continues that much longer.

In general, the season can be described as about half the average yield because of the hard freeze earlier in the year and excessive rainfall.

Reports by the farmers average about 20 bushels of wheat per acre. A few choice fields are making 45 bushels but some farmers are cutting 4 to 5 bushels just to clean up the field.

Market prices for hard wheat, according to local grain dealers, is $3.10 a bushel. The high this season was $3.28 with a the low price $3.06. Soft wheat prices at one time had a 40 cent difference, but at press time was selling for $2.80.

Oats harvest is also being completed with the present price of $1.60 per bushel.

Nocona farmers were the first to bring wheat to the Muenster elevators approximately three weeks ago. Locally Aloys Fuhrmann brought the first load to Muenster Mill on May 30 while Harold Bindel and Cyril Walterscheid were the first to arrive at Tony's Seed and Feed Elevator.

Citizens state feelings on improvements

A public hearing was held Thursday, June 7 by the City of Muenster in City Hall concerning the proposed assessments to property owners abutting certain street improvements. The lengthy meeting was well attended.

After hearing the opinions and facts stated by those present the Muenster city council voted to go ahead with all but two of the proposed street improvements. It was decided not to pave the south side of 6th Street from Hickory to Pecan and Hickory from Eddy Street to 250 feet north.

The proposed paving of Hickory Street from Eddy north to present pavement at 220 S. Hickory was originally included because of two previous petitions by property owners in that area, said Joe Fenton city manager. The paving project couldn't be included in past paving projects because it wasn't curbed on the west side. The curb has since been constructed on the property which is owned by Chuck Bartush, Sr. Objections from property owners was the reason for dropping the two proposed paving projects.

Streets which will be improved with paving include 5th Street from Pecan to Hickory; 6th Street from Sycamore to Hickory; 9th Street from FM 373 to Cedar Street; Elm Street from FM 373 to 9th Street; and Elm Street from 9th Street to 8th Street.

It will probably be late summer before paving begins because the curbs must be constructed first and bids for the paving job have to be taken and a firm hired.

Yoshi excels at UIL Meet

Yoshitaka Nakamura, foreign exchange student at Muenster High School, and guest for the school year in the home of Henry and Janie Weinzapfel, competed in Austin on Monday, June 4, at the state level in solo and ensemble band concert music.

According to Band Instructor Charlotte Taylor, Yoshi did very well in competition. He received a Division III rating on a Tuba solo and was accompanied on the piano by Juanita Bright.

He presented "Airre Bourree" by Johan Bach. To qualify for advancing to state competition, he placed on Rating I at District level in Wichita Falls in February. He also received a gold medal; only winners of Rating I were gold medal winners.

Ms. Taylor said that judges comments told that "He has a great potential and he is a fine young man." The Muenster High band instructor added: "I am proud of Yoshi for his accomplishments this year. We have enjoyed having him in the Hornet Band. We will all miss him next year. We wish him well in whatever endeavor he chooses on his return to Japan."

Has anyone seen Dorie's dog?

Dorie Cole lost her dog, Dorcie, sometime Sunday night when the Sheltie wandered off while Dorie and her family were visiting with a friend in the Bulcher area.

The dog is female and looks like a miniature version of Lassie.

Dorie, who is now 7, has owned the dog since it was a puppy. She received it when she returned home from the hospital. Dorie has sugar diabetes and had both of her legs amputated.

The Sheltie is her constant companion and rides in the wheelchair with her. The family friend said that the child is lost without the pet. "It's her life," he remarked.

Anyone with any information on the animal's whereabouts should contact The Muenster Enterprise, (817) 759-4311. The animal may be along Hwy. 2382 between Tyler Bluff and Bulcher or somewhere in that vicinity. It is a very shy dog and may run if approached by other dogs.

Mildred Rauschuber, 85, dies June 6 after a lengthy illness stepson, Marvin Rauschuber of Valley View; 30 grandchildren and 52 great-grandchildren.

WITH THE ARRIVAL of warm, dry weather, city crews have begun the repair of the many pothole problems of Muenster streets. Even the subject of a recent Goad Hole is filled by David Dittfurth and Chris Yosten. You can now ride a bit easier on Sixth Street.

Always give heroes credit!

by Lloyd Bentsen
United States Senator

Not all heroes get the credit they deserve.

Take Fort Worth resident W.B. "Spider" Webb. This Texan performed many acts of bravery as a combat pilot during WWII, receiving 27 awards for his service, including the Navy Cross. He was recommended for our highest military award, the Congressional Medal of Honor, following his daring action one summer afternoon in the Pacific. But, the bureaucracy got in the way and

Opinion of parents asked on full-day kindergarten

Muenster Independent School District is considering a full-day Kindergarten program.

Parents of three and four year olds may voice their opinion by calling the school (759-2581). They may call between the hours of 8 a.m. - 12:00 noon, or 1 p.m. - 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Of the parents registering children for the 1990-1991 school year, 84 percent preferred an all-day program.

The School Board will be basing its decision on available funding, parental preference and enrollment numbers.

the recommendation was never properly reviewed.

I was a combat pilot during that war, and can appreciate Spider's amazing story. I've asked fellow Texas, and World War II aviator, President George Bush to take another look at this case. Here's what happened.

In June of 1944, a 24 year old navy enlisted man who had risen to become an officer, Spider Webb, was flying combat missions off the USS Hornet. All the pilots had put in a rough day, flying at least one or two four-hour strikes against Guam. But, late in the day, another strike was ordered, and Ensign Webb volunteered.

Shortly after take-off he spotted a downed pilot, and asked permission to cover the man until help arrived. Descending to 100 feet, he dropped dye packets to assist in the recovery.

As this was taking place Spider glanced up and caught sight of a long line of aircraft, 40 or 50 planes, flying low. He was puzzled because he knew there should be no more strikes that day. The question was answered however, as the planes turned and he saw the big red markings on the sides of the aircraft. He quickly buckled his harness, and made this long remembered radio transmission:

"Any American fighter near Orote Peninsula...I have forty enemy planes surrounded and need a little help."

Then, he launched his one-man attack.

In short order three enemy aircrafts were destroyed. Manuevering behind three more planes, Ensign Webb again opened fire. Only four of his guns were working, but he was able to down two more planes, despite hot pursuit from the enemy and intense anti-aircraft fire from the ground.

Now his guns had quit completely, so Spider headed out of the fight. But, by pumping his chargers, four guns regained life and he banked around to get another enemy plane. Again, his guns quit. Again, he pumped his chargers. This time only two guns kicked in, but he was able to fire on two more planes before he headed back to the Hornet.

Ensign Webb managed to land his F6F fighter even though his landing gear had been destroyed, his canopy had been shot off, and his goggles had been shot off his helmet. There were 147 bullet holes in his plane, but Spider was unscathed. The craft was rolled off the Hornet and buried at sea.

For this action, Admiral Mark Mitscher recommended Ensign Spider Webb for the Medal of Honor, saying he "destroyed six dive bombers in a single fight, and probably destroyed two others." But somewhere in the chain of command that recommendation was rewritten and the fact that he single-handedly attacked 40 enemy planes was left out.

I have urged the President to reexamine what happened in 1944 and determine an injustice was done that can now be corrected. Surely anyone who would risk his life in this way to defend his country deserves a thorough and careful review of his heroic conduct.

Any way you look at it, Ensign Spider Webb is a true American hero, someone we Texans can be proud of.

Not changed by the wind

Contributed by First Baptist Church of Muenster

C.H. Spurgeon was talking to a farmer who had on his barn a weather vane on the arrow of which was inscribed, "God is love." He said to the farmer: "What do you mean by that? Do you think God's love is changeable - that it veers about as the arrow turns in the wind?" the farmer answered, "Oh no! I mean that whichever way the wind blows, God is still love."

Hallmark's new line of cards premieres at Dustin's

For those who want to convey more personal messages about their feelings and relationships, Hallmark's new "Just How I Feel" everyday greeting cards are designed to meet a variety of personal communication needs.

"Now people don't have to wait for an occasion to send cards that express the caring feelings they have every day, according to Mary Lou Leftwich of Dustin Office Supply and Hallmark Gifts Shop in Gainesville.

Dustin's offers 200 "Just How I Feel" greeting cards, the most comprehensive offering of personal feelings cards in the industry.

Messages on these "anyday" cards are open and direct. They are written the way people talk and the cards can be used anytime, for any kind of feeling.

A card that offers friendship and support says, "If you ever need a hug...my arms are always open." A card that opens the door of communication with a son or daughter says, "I used to think there could be nothing worse than being a teenager! Now I realize there is...Being the parent of a teenager. Thanks for putting up with me!"

Other cards offer care and concern during difficult times: "I know your decision to be a stay-at-home mom was a difficult one for you to make."

To make it easier to select the right card, the cards are displayed by seven categories: I'm Here For You, I'm Thinking About You, You Mean So Much, I'm Glad We're Friends, I'm Glad We're Family, I Love You and Let's Work Things Out.

Muenster Public School's kindergarten classes spent Tuesday, May 22 in Gainesville for a field trip. They were accompanied by their teacher Rosemary Dankesreiter and mothers, Kenya Endres, Debbie Stormer, Gail Drachenberg, and Monnie Reid, and Dan Luke, bus driver.

At the Gainesville Municipal Airport they saw several types of airplanes and walked through the hanger where repair work is done. Each child was permitted to sit in the cockpit of a plane and view the instruments.

Next on the agenda was a stop at the Brewer Miniature Horse Farm where the children saw many champion and grand champion horses. Kent Snider told many interesting things about the horses and answered a variety of questions. To the delight of the students, each was presented with one of the large prize ribbons that the Brewer horses had won at competition shows.

After a break for refreshments in Leonard Park the group spent an educational and fun-filled time observing the animals in the zoo. Later they ate sack lunches and spent time playing in the park.

The 22 students were fingerprinted by Officer Lewis Schaflander of the Crime Prevention Department. The children brought the forms home to their parents to keep as records.

Officer Schaflander also took the children on a tour of the dispatch department where they saw and heard on computers how calls come through the police department.

The last stop of the day was the Morton Museum. The students learned about many interesting and historical artifacts from around Cooke County.

"Operation Game Thief" signs are available from TPWD

AUSTIN - Landowners can obtain durable "no trespassing" signs and support the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Operation Game Thief program at the same time by ordering official signs from the agency.

The 12- by 18-inch aluminum signs can be obtained by contacting any TPWD law enforcement field office or Austin headquarters. A $10 minimum tax-deductible contribution to the Game Thief fund is asked for each sign.

Officials said the signs identify the landowner as an Operation Game Thief contributor and also fulfill requirements of the state's criminal trespass statutes when posted on the landowner's property.

Along with the contribution, submit name, address, amount of contribution and number of signs requested.

To obtain the signs by mail, send check or money order payable to "Operation Game Thief Fund" to the TPWD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744, or for further information call (512) 389-4626, or toll-free 1-800-792-1112, ext. 4626.

Lindsay 4-H'ers place 2nd, 3rd at Round-up

COLLEGE STATION - Nearly 450 4-H Club members from around the state were winners at the 1990 Texas 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University June 4-6.

More than 2,400 young people participated in 41 contests at the biggest Texas 4-H event held each year.

In contests ranging from agronomy and entomology to rifle shooting and talent skills, young people were judged according to their knowledge and skills. Many of the contests featured method demonstration and illustrated talks.

Two Lindsay 4-H'ers finished in the top three in their events.

Charlene Lutkenhaus placed second in Food Nutrition Education Event. This contest involves nutritional value, the planning, buying, preparation and storage of foods or the relation between science foods and nutrition.

Clifford Lutkenhaus finished third in the Beef Cattle Junior Symposium contest. This involved any phase of the beef cattle industry. Topics were production-oriented and related to management practices such as beef cattle nutrition, reproduction, selection and health.

Charlene and Clifford are the children of Kathy and Walter Lutkenhaus of Lindsay.

Leader is recognized

A 4-H volunteer from Cooke County was among 30 honored June 6 at the 1990 State 4-H Roundup at Texas A&M University.

Kathy Lutkenhaus of Lindsay received the Texas 4-H Salute to Excellence Award provided by the Texas 4-H Foundation, the service organization of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service 4-H Youth Development program.

For 11 years, Lutkenhaus has provided leadership for 4-H'ers in Cooke County, helping young people to improve their self-esteem. Many 4-H'ers in Cooke County have received the highest recognition for their achievements in the district, including Gold Star Awards, over the last three years.

One of Lutkenhaus' accomplishments is coaching a first-place team of the Share-The-Fun Contest at state competition.

Lutkenhaus continues to provide leadership in the community that benefits the handicapped, the elderly and others who need help.

Poison Ivy

What it is ... what it does ... how to recognize it

Every year countless numbers of people are victims of poison ivy. In almost every instance, the suffering could have been avoided if the person could have identified on sight the itchy plant.

Poison ivy may take the form of either a vine or shrub, with the leaf arrangement, always in three, the same. Poison ivy is distinguished by its three leaflets to each main leaf. Two of these are at right angles to the center leaflet. The leaves may be light to medium dark green, turning red, yellow or orange in the autumn.

The plant also grows waxy white berries preceded by greenish-white tiny flowers. Leaves, berries, stems and even the roots of poison ivy are coated with an irritant, non-volatile oil.

Occasionally, there are some people who are not allergic to the poison of this plant, but most are not so fortunate. The itchy welts, blisters and general aggravation resulting from the ivy are usually difficult to cure. It is much easier to prevent than to cure, therefore, everyone should learn to recognize and avoid poison ivy.

This Public Enemy Number One of the plant world can be obtained by brushing against plants, handling tools or animals that have been in contact with the plants, or by permitting smoke from burning plants to touch the skin. When flowering, the poison ivy may even be blown on by passers.

When exposed to the oils of this plant, the worst effects of the poisoning can be prevented by immediately washing with soap and water. Consult a doctor if serious symptoms develop.

The best protection against this nuisance is the ability to identify it.

County Agent's Report

Annual A&M Beef Cattle Short Course is August 14-15

Texas beef cattle producers and industry leaders will want to mark their calendars for August 14-15 and travel to Texas A&M University for the upcoming 36th Annual Beef Cattle Short Course.

This year's short course will be held in the Kiebert Center with live animal demonstrations being conducted in the Louis Pearce Pavilion on the Texas A&M campus.

The program traditionally has started on a Monday, but it has been changed to begin on Tuesday this year. This change will allow people to travel to the campus on Monday, August 13, rather than over the weekend, register for the conference and visit with faculty and industry leaders during an open house and media day activity before the program. Dr. Larry Boleman is the short course coordinator and a beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Highlights of the short course program will include discussions on:

- Expedited Progeny Differences, or EPDs, including basic knowledge, predictability of next year's calf crop, use of the method to improve the herd, and a producer panel discussion on use of the method for genetic advancement in their herds. Research in gene markers for value-based marketing will be discussed by animal scientists.

- A cow-calf nutrition program will start with the basics and cover major mineral programs, micro-mineral programs and diagnostic techniques for identifying problem areas. An in-depth discussion of recent Texas cattle mineral problems with copper will be included.

- A total management session will use a multi-disciplinary approach of plant-animal relationships, pasture-forage-hay programs, calving season, heifer development, managing the heifer before calving and other management practices.

- One afternoon will be allocated to a live animal session at the Louis Pearce Pavilion. Topics to be covered will include ultrasound for evaluation of carcass traits and reproduction characteristics, animal identification ranging from tattoos to computer micro chip implants, DNA fingerprinting, health and vaccination techniques and live animal visual selection application.

Another feature will be a trade show that includes from 30 to 50 beef industry commercial representatives who will exhibit products and be on hand for discussions during program breaks.

In addition, educational booths and research information will be displayed by Texas A&M departments, educators and researchers. Participants will have an opportunity to visit with scientists of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station on various areas of research and education.

A registration fee of $40 will be charged for producers and $20 for spouses.

Farm Pond Management Seminar

Farm ponds add versatility to the enjoyment of any place. Their many uses including recreation, food production, erosion management, and water storage makes them one of the most important permanent improvements anyone can add.

They are not without problems, however. Proper management techniques are needed to keep them productive. Some of the more frequent problems associated with pond management include weeds and algae, oxygen depletion, fish stocking and unwanted fish species.

Joe Lock, Extension Fisheries Specialist from Overton, will present a Farm Pond Management Seminar on Wednesday, June 20, at North Lake. This seminar is open to all interested pond owners and managers. Fish surveys will be taken, aquatic plants identified and control measures discussed, and stocking rates and species explained. The seminar will begin at 5:30 on Wednesday, June 20.

Additional directions to North Lake can be obtained from any of the club members or by calling the County Extension Office 668-5412.

Potential is strong for expanding meat exports

COLLEGE STATION - The United States could easily double its exports of beef and cattle to Japan during the coming decade if ample quantities of desired meat are available at affordable prices.

A 20-member panel of Japanese beef and other food company representatives meeting at Texas A&M University said the Japanese consumer would like to have a safe beef product that is high in marbling, or flecks of fat, with consistent good taste and quality.

The visiting panelists, here for a National Conference on International Cattle and Beef Marketing, said the Japanese like American beef but have a problem getting the product for "a price that our consumers can afford."

"Price of meat to our consumers is a problem that our government needs to work on, however," Itsuro Shiromaru, Tokyo representative, said. He said the Japanese government first will need to sell its large supplies of frozen beef now held in storage.

"This (frozen beef) was purchased to fill requirements of the present trade agreements," Shiromaru said.

When frozen beef supplies are diminished, Japan's Livestock Industry Promotion Corp., a governmental price regulating group, will need to determine new prices that reflect the liberalized trade agreements and are more in line with consumers incomes, Shiromaru said.

The panel reminded participants that the Japanese diet is rooted historically in fish-eating, explaining that it was not until after the mid-1940s that beef was introduced as a dietary staple.

As the change to Western culture intensifies, they said, Japanese housewives are trying to learn more ways to cook beef and to use microwave ovens for cooking rather than just heating.

Officials of the U.S. Meat Export Federation, a sponsor of the conference with Texas A&M, are sending beef recipes to the various countries as part of their export merchandising efforts.

DID YOU KNOW?

If "Old McDonald had a farm today, it would be one of 2.3 million farms in the United States. Did you also know that:

- Farmland covers about half the area of the United States—over a billion acres.

- The United States has about 470 million acres of cropland, more than any other country except Russia.

Each year, the world population increases by 90 million. At that rate, just ten years from today in the year 2000, another billion people will need to be fed.

One way our nation's farmers can continue to produce the increasing amounts of food demanded by a growing world population, and do it safely and efficiently, is to use modern production-oriented agriculture.

Fungus slices into watermelon yields

COLLEGE STATION - Long before picnicking people bite into the sweet, juicy flesh of a cool watermelon, a soil-borne fungus tries to take its slice out of production.

Mixed invisibly in the soil, the parasitic fungus enters through the roots, plugging the watermelon's vascular system "like a kink in a water hose," according to Dr. Ray Martyn, a plant pathologist at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The wilted leaves stop producing the sugar needed for tasty fruit, and with no leaves covering them, the melons may crack on the vine under intense summer heat. The plant, which can not recover from the fungal disease, either doesn't produce or yields poor-quality watermelons.

But Martyn is getting to the meat of the problem. A mixture of the sun, wild watermelons and a promising "vaccination" may control the fruit-loving fungus, he said.

Texas and Florida, which together produce 50 percent of the nation's crop, run a close race for top watermelon producer each year. In Texas, the annual 60,000-acre melon crop is valued at more than $30 million. Because there has been no control for the fungus - a new race of fusarium oxysporium niveum - losses to the wilt disease can have a significant economic impact on the industry, Martyn noted.

"With poor quality, the farmer gets a poor price," Martyn said, "so economically the plant might as well be dead."

To address the immediate need to control fusarium, Martyn is adapting a soil solarization technique developed by Israeli colleague David Netzer.

"We put out a clear plastic over the row in the summer months and allow the sun to heat the soil up," Martyn explained. "The soil gets very hot and in doing so kills the fungus. It's like making a greenhouse over the soil."

Solarization under the 4-foot strips of plastic can heat the soil to 140 degrees F, killing the watermelon fungus. The strips, which remain on the fields through the winter, are rotated across the field over the years between rows or watermelon plants.

But solarization doesn't work in the northern production areas of the state because the season of temperatures hot enough to heat the soil sufficiently is shorter.
