MUENSTER, TEXAS, COOKE COUNTY, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1944

NUMBER 41

Viewpoints make a difference in our attitude toward similar incidents. A few weeks ago an American major and his small detachment, trapped by the Germans, stated that he would not give up until every round of ammunition was spent and every bayonet was sticking in an enemy.

About the same time a German colonel and his men, surrounded in a fortification, announced that he would fight to the bitter end.

Both events got a big play in the news. The American was hailed as a great hero, the German was ridiculed as the insane colonel of St. Malo.

Perhaps in forming our opinion we are influenced by the American's chance of being rescued — and the fact is that help did reach him in time — while we also felt quite certain that the Jerries did not have a chance — and it also developed that the colonel and his few survivors finally surrendered. But the point of similarity is that both were facing overwhelming odds and both accepted their predicament in the same spirit. To be consistent we have to admit that both were either heroes or madmen.

It would be interesting to know what German news agencies had to say about the two men. Without a doubt they praised the colonel and ridiculed the major, unless perhaps their opinion was influenced by the outcome. The case is somewhat similar to a risky play in a ball game. If it falls the guy is a dope. If it succeeds he is a clever player.

Regardless of circumstances or results, there's only one attitude that a nation of good sports can assume. Both men are heroes. Both stuck with their guns when their chance seemed hopeless. If we don't admit that we'll have to change our tune about such episodes of heroism as the Alamo or Thermopylae.

Ever since the war started we've been taking it for granted that American youth of the future will have at least a year of compulsory military training, but a recently raised question puts the subject almost as far back as it was at the beginning. When and where will the men take their training? It seems there is some indecision as to whether it will be a school course similar to ROTC or honest to goodness army life.

One outstanding objection to regular army training is the teen-age kids will be taken away from parental influence just when they need it most. On the other side there is such a multitude of good reasons that a person can hardly expect anything but the regular army. In the first place military training requires the correct number of men for an organization. Few schools if any would have sufficient enrollment. Then there would be the problem of assigning a military staff to every school in the country, most of which have less than a hundred high school boys in attendance.

In other respects, too, it would be impractical and inefficient to bring army training to the schools. The boys will have to go to camp. That's the only place that can give all phases of army training including guard duty, KP, use of weapons and instruments, discipline and constant military administration as well as drill, manual of arms and military courtesy. After all the purpose is to learn about warfare, not just the spit and polish of army life.

As to induction age, there ought to be enough latitude to allow reasonable adjustment to personal plans. A college student could be permitted to graduate first whereas the young man intending to start in business could take his training earlier. At the same time it is well to remember that the army is no place for kids. There should be a minimum age limit to avoid taking immature youngsters from under parental influence.

Far from being the unpopular bugaboo it was a few years ago, compulsory military training now appears to be one of the wisest moves this nation could make, from the standpoint of personal development and economic soundness as well as national security.

Of course no one will argue again that it does not pay to have reserves available. The loss of unpreparedness settle that argument for good. Nor will anyone deny that the vast majority of men were improved in many respects by army training. They acquired greater physical stamina, knowledge, confidence and poise.

Along with all that we now begin to see possibilities that military training will help relieve our unemployment problem. A few million young men of an age that would otherwise be in industry, business or agriculture will make (Continued on page 6)

Among out of town guests were Mrs. Felderhoff's brother, The Most Rev. Augustine Dangimayr, auxiliary bishop of Dallas, and Mr. Felderhoff's brother, Rev. Henry Felderhoff of Abilene, and his sisters, Ven. Sisters Mildred, Amora and Lutgardis, of Jonesboro, Ark.

THE EDITOR DID IT!

Someone sent the editor of a Missouri paper a few bottles of home brew. The same day he received for publication a wedding announcement and a notice for an auction sale. The result was as follows:

Wm. Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction sale at my farm one mile east of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about seventy-five guests including two mule cows, six mules and one bossied.

Rev. Johnson tied the nuptial knot with about 200 feet of hay rope and the bridal party left on one good John Deere gang plow for an extended trip with terms to suit purchasers.

They will be at home to their friends with a good baby carriage and a few kitchen utensils after ten months from date of sale to respectable parties and some chickens.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES ARREST DRUNK MAN WHO STOLE CLOTHES

A prowler who frightened a group of local persons northwest of town last Thursday evening at about dusk, was found upon investigation to be only thoroughly inebriated, and quite harmless when he woke up in the county jail the following morning declaring he remembered nothing of his wild escapade of the evening before.

The man, a resident of Wichita Falls, as cards on his person revealed, when local authorities picked him up, it is reported, drove to the Herman Dangimayr farm and threatened Mrs. Dangimayr with something like, "If you don't cross me, I won't bother you or the kids." At home alone, Mrs. Dangimayr became frightened and with the children fled to the nearest neighbor, Paul Endres, who called the local authorities.

Meanwhile the prowler entered the Dangimayr home, taking a large quantity of wearing apparel from the clothes closets, then at neck breaking speed drove his truck through the fields over to the W.H. Endres place, where he failed to go farther, having lodged in a ditch. Most of the clothing was recovered. Items checked as missing were later found scattered over the fields in the nearby vicinity. Nothing else of value was taken by the thief.

Friday morning he called a friend in Wichita Falls who came after him, paid his fine, and took him back with him.

Mrs. R.L. McNeley, Owner

Muenster

A Texas sergeant serving in France wrote the following report of the fighting there: "The Texas army is advancing steadily on Paris and will be in Berlin before long." As an afterthought, he added: "We are taking along with us some units from other states, to show them how."

It isn't exactly like that, perhaps, but there are so many Texans in the battle for France that at times it must seem that a Lone Star army really is there in force.

Sgt. Bob Jackson of San Marcos, fighting in Italy, used an old Texas trick to wipe out a group of embattled Nazis. When he found himself unable to use his grenade thrower because a chicken-wire fence was between him and the Nazis, he jumped into an old building, captured a German sniper, and used him as a shield while advancing on the enemy strong point. Then with grenades and rifle fire, he drove out the Nazis, capturing six more.

Enemy planes aren't as numerous over France these days as they once were, but Capt. Burt Marshall of Greenville managed to find one recently. He quickly shot it down. Other Texas airmen who have been cited or decorated for air victories include Lt. M.M. Tomme, Navy pilot from Troup; Lt. (jg) Roy Bechten and Ensign Jack Hogue of Graham, each of whom was credited with shooting down one or more Japs. Ens. Hogue failed to return after the fight.

On the home front, Texans are also helping win the war. Few men are doing more than the volunteer division, region and county leaders chosen to spearhead the coming campaign for the National War Fund. Under direction of Wayland D. Towner, general manager of the United War Chest of Texas, they will help put the nation's biggest state-wide drive over the top and are now working at top speed recruiting workers and perfecting local campaign organizations.

The National War Fund finances USO, War Prisoners Aid and 17 other agencies serving our own fighting men and our allies. Lucky is Pfc. Jose Lopez, a tough Brownville scrapper. Fighting in Normandy, the Texan was hit squarely in the body by a bullet. The impact spun him around but Lopez recovered his balance and with one bullet killed the German who had fired the shot. Then he discovered why he was not wounded -- the Nazi bullet had hit an ammunition clip at his belt and lodged there.

Texas' share in the war was commemorated again last month, when a new giant troopship was named for a famous Texas soldier Gen. W. P. Richardson, who was born at Hunt. The ship was launched at Newark, N.J.

And here is a partial list of Texans who have been decorated for bravery and outstanding service: Lt. Lloyd Kelly, Coleman, Air Medal cluster; Lt. Col. Ed Harris, El Paso; Sgt. Joe Ellis, Orange, and Sgt. Bob Wyatt Jr., Brownwood, Bronze Stars; Capt. Jim Dolley, and Andrew Block, Bonham, Soldiers Medal for heroism in saving lives of comrades, and the following Texans who received Distinguished Flying Crosses for fighting over Europe: Lt. Luther Abel, Gladewater; Lt. Charles Summers, Granbury; Capt. Morris Stanley, Alvin; Sgt. Hershel Moore, Del Rio, and Lt. Wade Knudson, Meridian, Sgt. Jim Daugherty of Imperial won the coveted Air Medal.

Texas fighting men in France are now getting full services of the various National War Fund agencies. United Seamens Service USO-Camp Shows and War Prisoners Aid all are operating on the continent, as are French Relief and other NWF service units.

Sgt. Henry Krolevzyk, who is typically Texan despite his Polish name crawled through a hail of machine gun bullets in Normandy and finally reached a thick hedgerow. Rising carefully, he peeked through a hole in the hedge and found himself eye-to-eye with a big Nazi soldier, who was peering through from the other side, less than two feet away.

"Hank" yelled at the man, demanding that he surrender, just at that time, however, several other Germans started lobbing hand grenades. "Hank" tossed a few himself killing four Nazis and routing the others. During the scrap the enemy in the hedgerow took to his heels. He didn't get far, however, before the East Bernard Texas trooper dropped him with a single rifle bullet.

During the same battle, S.Sgt. Homer Molina of Laredo dived into a shell hole right on top of four Huns. When he came out, he was marching the Germans before him as prisoners.

When his buddies congratulated him on the feat, the Texan grinned.

"There weren't but four of them," he insisted. "Four Nazis to one Texan -- that's about the right odds!"

Incidentally, the American fighting men are covering ground so fast in France that one of the biggest jobs is not how to whip the Germans, but how to take care of the children and old men and women freed from Nazi slavery. Field representatives of the French Relief Fund, an agency of the National War Fund, already are on the job, and will see that the aged and helpless war victims are given another chance at life.

The fighting ability of Texans is being reflected these days in the medals they are being given by a grateful government. Here are some of the Texas boys who recently won the coveted Silver Star given only for "conspicuous gallantry and bravery": -Maj. Jack Bradley, Mustang pilot, of Brownwood, who has downed 15 Nazi planes; Maj. Andrew Cheek, also of Brownwood; Lt. M.B. Etheredge of Weldon; S.Sgt. Frank Hans Kellen; S.Sgt. Otis Wiley, San Antonio and Pfc. Reuben Peterson, Kenedy.

The three fighting Clawson brothers of Llano, who have been in action overseas for many years, are back home for a rest and are reunited for the second time since they entered the service. Tcn. Sgt. Billy Clawson was the last to arrive, being preceded by two weeks by his brothers, Capt. Johnnie Clawson and S.Sgt. Doyle Clawson. Their first reunion was behind the lines in Italy.

Lt. John Holloman of Livingston Texas, has been voted "best pal" by a group of doughboys fighting in France. He pilots the little artillery observation plane known as "El Diablo," and is so good at spotting Nazi gun positions that he is credited with saving hundreds of American lives. When Lt. Holloman locates a German gun, he radios the news back to the artillery units, and they blow it off the earth.

"Does and Don'ts" For Home Canning Give Housewives Valuable Guidance

INSTEAD of putting a rabbit's foot in your pocket when canning, use your state extension service's canning bulletins, the booklets and instruction sheets that come with your pressure canner and with the jars and closures used. Spoilage may result from unclean equipment, food that isn't fresh, insufficient processing or an imperfect seal.

Dorothy Holladay offers the above and following specific advice in her article in Canner's Farmer, which if followed will produce a home-canned food supply of which a housewife can be proud:

"Do use a pressure cooker for canning all non-acid vegetables, meat, fish and poultry. Use a boiling-water bath for fruits and tomatoes.

"Don't use the open-kettle method for preserving vegetables. There are too many opportunities for bacteria to get in to the jar with boiling hot food. Only pickles, relishes, jellies and preserves can be successfully preserved with the open-kettle method.

"Do keep the pressure on the pressure gauge steady. Just before indicated pressure is reached, regulate heat to maintain a constant pressure. Do have the gauge tested for accuracy at your local canning center or through the manufacturer.

"Don't let pressure rise to 15 pounds and then drop to 5. Abrupt changes may drain the liquid from the jars.

"Do process fruits and vegetables as long as directions state. "Don't underprocess. Even if the product does look nicer for awhile, it is apt to spoil later.

"Do follow directions for sealing each type of lid. They are found on the package or tucked inside. "Don't leave jars to cool in the water when the processing time is up. This will not give extra protection. It will overcook the fruit and keep it at the right temperature for spoilage.

"Do can food as fresh from the garden as possible. Two hours from garden to jars is a good rule.

"Don't put towels over hot jars. Keeping them at lukewarm temperature for several hours encourages spoilage. Don't store in warm kitchen cupboards, especially up near the ceiling. Jellies may thin in this warmth and canned food is more likely to spoil.

So don't forget "Food is too precious these wartime days," Miss Holladay points out in the Rural Home department of the magazine which is read by 1,250,000 farm families. "Take advantage of years of research and experimentation available to you."

FEEDING AND CARE OF DAIRY CALVES

The high death rate of infant calves in Cooke County herds can be reduced sharply by proper feeding and care, says Albert S. Brient. At least one fifth of the average dairy herd must be replaced yearly and prevention of death among calves will reduce the otherwise excessive cost of raising replacements.

For best results safeguarding the calf's life should begin before it arrives. The cow should be isolated from the herd as freshening time nears and housed in a clean, dry place during bad weather. In other weather she may be placed in a maternity pasture convenient for observation because help at calving sometimes is needed. The new-born calf should be placed in dry, clean quarters free from flies and the navel cord clipped with sterile scissors about two inches from the base. Sterilize the wound with a mixture of equal parts of tincture of iodine and glycerin.

Proper feeding being the next step, Brient lays down these essential rules: The milk fed to the calf must be kept clean and always fed at blood temperature. Feeding should be at regular intervals and overfeeding avoided. Pails used for feeding should be kept clean and sterile. Changes in the amount and kind of milk, calf meal or other feed should be made gradually. He cautions that feeding milk too hot or too cold, and changes in the temperature of the milk from one feeding to the next is the most common cause of digestive upsets.

Jersey calves should be fed two pounds of milk three times daily for the first week and three pounds twice daily for the second week. If these rules are followed strictly and the calf kept in clean, comfortable quarters, Brient says, a dairyman can raise healthy, thrifty calves. If any of them are broken he is likely to have trouble.

Touching upon other details of feeding, the specialist says a calf should receive its mother's milk the first three or four days. If allowed to nurse for the first two or three days this should be restricted to about five minutes every six hours and the calf not allowed to run with the cow. Many successful dairymen hand feed the calf from the beginning because it can be taught to drink from a pail more easily if never permitted to nurse.

Your Health

Austin, Texas. — Mental disorders today represent a real problem, declares Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, and it is estimated that more than fifty per cent of all hospital beds are filled by persons suffering from mental or nervous diseases.

It thus appears that modern civilization is exacting a terrific toll. High speed living, with its cruel exactions upon nature, is responsible for a large part of the trouble. But improper personal conduct must also shoulder much of the blame. The fact is that nearly fifty per cent of the patients entering hospitals for mental disorders are there because of organic or toxic causes.

For example, general paralysis is the direct cause of one-fifth of the mental troubles in males entering hospitals and one-tenth of the disorders for all groups. This condition is an organic disease of the brain and in fact is one of the late stages of syphilis. It is a preventable disease. Early and effective treatment of an acquired syphilis will block the end results of general paralysis in the insane. Dr. Cox said that excesses and syphilis combined are responsible for approximately one-fifth of the hospitalized insanities. Neverthe-

MEAT KEEPING

A good refrigerator is not the complete answer to the keeping of meat in summer, says Mrs. Julia E. Kelley, Cooke County Home Demonstration Agent. If not given the right care in the refrigerator, meat may dry out, mold, acquire an unpleasant taste, or even spoil.

In general food scientists advise never washing or even wiping meat with a damp cloth until just before cooking. Usually washing is unnecessary and wastes good juice and flavor. Remove meat from the market paper as soon as it reaches the kitchen, lay on a plate, cover lightly with waxed paper, and put in the meat compartment of the refrigerator, just under the freezing unit. Do not cut or chop meat until just before using because cut and chopped meat spoils faster than whole pieces.

Large cuts, Steaks, chops and roasts generally keep best of all cuts, so may be safely held 2 or 3 days in a refrigerator with a temperature of 45 degrees F. or colder. Ground meat and variety cuts. Cook ground meat within 24 hours after purchasing or freeze in freezing unit. Before freezing add seasoning and form into cooking portions, then wrap tightly in waxed paper to keep from drying out. The same rules hold for variety meats like liver, kidneys, and heart.

Cured Meat. Ham and other smoked meats, if mildly cured, need refrigeration but will keep in the refrigerator as long as two weeks. To prevent mold they can be wrapped in clean cloth rung out of vinegar and then in waxed paper.

Cooked meat. Leftover cooked meat keeps best in a covered dish or wrapped in wax paper to prevent drying out. Handle as little as possible.

Poultry. Chicken and other poultry is the exception to the rule of not washing or wiping until just before using. Clean and wipe poultry with a damp cloth before putting it in the refrigerator. Leave birds whole until just before using. Chicken will keep longer whole than in pieces. Freeze chicken like meat.

less, improper living habits continue to impair many brains. Insufficient sleep, neglect of bodily care, and a consistent over forcing of nervous energy are the pitfalls to avoid in this connection.

"Nature demands that her fundamental laws be at least reasonably observed. A constant outraging of the physiological economy takes its toll not only in bodies but in minds also. Insanities and lesser nervous disorders could be spectacularly reduced if this fact were more generally respected. Training for mental health must be started in childhood as that is the time when corrections can be made to the best advantage."

room for that many others who formerly could not get a job. At the same time the break in personal plans will induce quite a number to take an extra year or two of school, thereby further increasing available jobs for the unemployed. Economically speaking, the production acre bracket will be decreased by an equal amount.

From some of the statistics we see nowadays the job situation will be sorely in need of such relief. Employment rolls list about thirty million more than before the war. To return to the old figure that thirty million will have to be dropped and about ten million more will be replaced by service men. Forty million in all, of which quite a number will quit voluntarily. Old people will go into retirement, wives will return to their homes, girls will return to a more leisurely life, teen age youngsters will return to school. But the big question is how many, accustomed to an increased income, will be willing to quit? How near will they approach the forty million mark?

On the other side of the problem is the prospect that not all the forty million will have to be relieved. Employment should be better for several years than it was during the pre war days. The tremendous volume of savings along with the volume of delayed buying ought to create a demand such as we have never seen before. The country needs cars, homes, farm tools, electrical appliances, and hundreds of everyday gadgets besides past due repairs on everything from watches to railroad equipment. It will take lots of people to do all that work. With all that going on we should be able to adjust a sound economy.

If you have several debts, maybe at high interest, why not erase them with one, low-cost bank loan? Repay the loan from income. Ask about our PERSONAL LOANS.
