of many people can add up to significant energy savings. And you could invest your dollars saved by your personal conservation efforts.

Here is a list of energy saving practices for you to consider for refrigeration appliances:

- Vacuum around the compressor and condenser units of your refrigerator and freezer at least every three months. Dust and lint cause the motor to work harder.

- Should a power failure occur, keep the door of a freezer closed. A full freezer aids in maintaining a safe temperature.

- Frost free freezers use more energy and cost more to operate. However, forced cool air circulating within the refrigerator maintains a more even temperature and preserves food well. Avoid overcrowding food. To prevent moisture buildup on the coils of the refrigerator, and to retain moisture in the food and reduce food deterioration, seal or cover foods tightly with lids or plastic wrap.

- Level the refrigerator and freezer when installing it so that the door seals tightly, closing easily.

- Do not put a refrigerator or freezer near direct warm air, the oven door, a heat vent, or a sunny window. Place it in a cool spot in the room and allow for air circulation at the top and sides.

- Never cover refrigerator shelves with paper or foil. This cuts down on air circulation and prevents the refrigerator from operating at top efficiency.

- Periodically check the door seals to make sure they are airtight. If not, adjust the latch or replace the gasket.

- Chest freezers generally use less energy for operation than an upright with equal features and storage space.

- If you are shopping for a new refrigerator, keep in mind that the side-by-side models use more energy than either the top-mounted or bottom-mounted freezer models.

- Keep refrigerator and freezers clean, especially frost-free models. This helps to preserve the quality of food and reduces total costs.

Safety Belts Save County Tax Dollars

"Texas taxpayers pay a price for each traffic fatality or injury on the state's roads and highways."

That was the message delivered by consumer economics specialist Bonnie Piernot to more than 500 county officials gathered for the 28th annual County Judges and Commissioners' Conference, held in College Station, Feb. 25-27.

Piernot explained that a traffic fatality costs taxpayers an average of $12,000 for emergency medical services, police, highway patrol, highway and road repair and other direct costs.

She added that each non-fatal injury costs an average of $7,000.

During the first three months

Special Program Planned For Storyhour

By Ann Camp
Burt Sinclair from the Safety Education Service in Lubbock will bring the program, "Stranger-Danger" to the children who come to Storyhour at the Muleshoe Area Public Library Wednesday, March 19. This will be a film and presentation especially for children of this age. All pre-school-age, three years and up are invited to come. If Mothers want to attend they are asked to notify the library in advance so that sufficient seating may be provided.

The Muleshoe Young Homemakers will be co-hosting this Storyhour, and will provide treats for those who attend.

after the Texas mandatory safety belt law took effect in September 1985, traffic fatalities decreased 18.2 percent over the same three month period in 1984, saving 8 million in tax dollars.

But the specialist said that studies in other states with similar laws show that safety belt use can decrease over time without continued public education and reinforcement.

Piernot, who is a home economist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX), urged the officials to set an example by wearing safety belts and encourage their employees to wear them in county vehicles as well as their personal cars.

She pointed out that Texas automobile insurance rates were reduced an average of 5.1 percent based on the assumption that safety belts would be used by 65 percent of Texans. Unless that usage rate is achieved, insurance costs could go up again.

The consumer economist noted that county Extension home economics staff and local members of more than 40 organizations, such as the PTA, Red Cross, and others who have joined in the Texas Coalition for Safety Belts, can work with county officials to provide these programs.

The Texas Extension Homemakers Association, a 23,000-member volunteer leadership development organization sponsored by TAEX, has also received grants from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to initiate educational programs in nine Texas counties.

Throughout in the conference, county officials could ride the "convincer," a machine provided by the Texas Automobile Dealer's Association to demonstrate what the occupant of a car would experience if it hit a stationary object at five miles an hour.

Each official who rode the machine came away sporting a yellow button which said, "I'm convinced."

Matters Of Health From West Plains Medical Center

What is scleroderma? What is its cause and cure?

Scleroderma also called progressive systemic sclerosis, is one of the lesser known disorders in the family of rheumatic diseases which affect joints, muscles and connective tissues of the body.

Scleroderma is a disease of the connective tissue, which is found in many parts of the body, including the skin, blood vessels, joints and internal organs, such as kidneys, lungs and bowel. Scleroderma affects each person differently. In some, it occurs in only one area of the body, such as the skin or muscle. In others, it can develop into more serious, systemic disease, affecting blood vessels, the digestive system, lungs, kidneys, and joints. How a person will be affected by scleroderma, however, is impossible to predict.

No one knows what causes scleroderma, which affects an estimated 100,000 to 250,000 people in this country. It is thought by some researchers to be an autoimmune disease, one of a number of illness in which the disease-fighting system turns against the body. System lupus erythematosus is another example of an autoimmune disease.

Your hands may show the first signs of scleroderma. As many as 90 percent of people with systemic scleroderma have Raynaud's phenomenon, an extreme sensitivity to cold. Merely reaching into the refrigerator can trigger the reaction, a narrowing of the vessels supplying blood to the fingers. You may notice certain fingers will turn pale or light blue. Swelling or puffiness of the hands and feet are also a common symptom of scleroderma, especially in morning. Many people also have skin problems, including skin hardening, and localized calcium deposits, usually confined to the fingers.

The joints can become involved. People often describe tenderness, pain, stiffness. In later stages, the digestive system muscles can be affected, and because the lungs may become involved, your doctor will check for high blood pressure.

Because scleroderma affects people differently, your doctor will develop a treatment plan that should work best for you. The program will include medication as well as exercises and skin protection. While there are no cures for scleroderma, medications can help to relieve cold sensitivity, high blood pressure, and joint inflammation.

Exercise is a very important part of the overall program. Exercise benefits skin flexibility, blood flow, and the affected joints. There are also many simple ways to relieve the strain on your joints, including new ways to perform every-day tasks as well as such aids as bathroom grab bars and long handled combs. Take care to protect your skin from cold weather and dry indoor air, and treat your skin with mild soaps and detergents.

Scleroderma is a chronic disease and living with long-term disease is stressful. Take time to do what is important to you.

Bullock also sent checks totaling $24.9 million to the state's six Metropolitan Transit Authorities. Houston's MTA check for $9.8 million pushed 1986 payments to $44.6 million. Dallas' DART payment of $9.8 million brought its total to $42.6 million this year. Austin's Capitol Metro check for $2.5 million pushed payments to $10.9 million. VIA in San Antonio received $1.7 million for a total of $8.1 million in 1986. Fort Worth's MTA payment was for $522,725 increasing payments this year to $2.3 million. Alternative Available With Tax Exemptions

A statewide effort is underway to inform Texas property owners of their rights, remedies and responsibilities as taxpayers, according to Ron Patterson, executive director of the State Property Tax Board (SPTB).

Patterson says SPTB is working with appraisal districts and local news media to help make taxpayers aware of property tax filing deadlines and methods to obtain exemptions or other forms of tax relief.

"The first priority for property owners is to file renditions by March 31 and apply for tax relief by April 30 this year," Patterson said. Taxpayers should file all exemption applications and property rendition forms with the central appraisal district office.

A rendition is a report a property owner makes listing taxable property owned or managed on January 1, 1986. A rendition also gives a taxpayer the opportunity to record an opinion of the property's value. "By rendering a value for property, the owner makes the appraisal district responsible for sending a notice if the district places a higher value on the property," Patterson pointed out.

Certain property owners must render their property. "Anyone who owns or manages income-producing personal property on January 1 is required by state law to file a rendition statement with the appropriate appraisal district," Patterson said.

There are special rendition procedures for property when an exemption applies on January 1 but ends during the tax year. In such a case, the person who owns or acquires the property when the exemption ends must render the property for taxation within 30 days.

The chief appraiser may also require rendition of other taxable property upon notice to the property owner or manager. Rendition forms are available from appraisal district offices. Property owners must file renditions before April 1.

For homeowners, tax relief is usually in the form of exemptions. "An exemption lowers tax payments by deducting part of a property's value from taxation," Patterson explained. Homestead exemptions are available for all qualified homeowners, and additional exemptions are available for disabled people and for those aged 65 or over. Elderly homeowners applying for the over-65 homestead exemption also get a cap, or ceiling, on taxes they pay to the school district. All taxing units offer exemptions to disabled veterans, survivors of deceased disabled veterans and survivors of those who died on active duty.

"Likewise," Patterson continued, "farmers and ranchers who qualify may have their land taxed on its productive value instead of its market value, which also results in a lower tax bill." Productivity valuation comes in two forms, often referred to by the section of the Texas Constitution that provides them: open-space or "1-d-1" valuation and agricultural or "1-d" valuation.

Property owners who last year received homestead exemptions, disabled veterans' exemptions and open-space land (1-d-1) valuation need not reapply in 1986, unless the chief appraiser requests a new application to confirm the owner's current qualification.

Applications must be filed in 1986, Patterson said, by property owners who have not previously received tax relief on their present homesteads or land.

Farmers and ranchers who receive agricultural use (1-d) valuation must apply for it each year.

Patterson noted that people whose property is in more than one county appraisal district have an additional responsibility. These property owners may have to file for exemptions and productivity valuation in each appraisal district in which their property is located. Failure to do so could result in one or more taxing units taxing the property on its full market value. An example is where a taxing unit has territory in two counties, but only one of the appraisal districts appraises all the property in the taxing unit.

Applications for exemption and special valuation must be in the appraisal district office before May 1.

Complete information on tax exemptions and rendition requirements is in a pamphlet produced by SPTB, "Taxpayers' Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities." The pamphlet also tells how taxpayers can challenge the values placed on their property by protesting to the appraisal review board. The pamphlet is available free from appraisal district offices or from SPTB in Austin.

"The property tax is the primary source of local government revenue in Texas," Patterson said. "It will generate about $9 billion this year to help fund public schools, cities, counties and special districts like hospitals, local colleges, fire protection, water and utilities."

showing a similar average change in the water level. The three year average change is a decline of 0.44 of a foot.

District geologist Don McReynolds notes, "In most counties the rate of decline in the water table has been significantly decreased, particularly in the last five years. A combination of non-use, increased energy costs and fortunate rains at opportune times has allowed the aquifer to replenish itself."

"We urge all property owners to become familiar with the tax process, to file renditions and to apply for all exemptions or other tax relief they are entitled to," Patterson concluded.

IRS Penalizing

All Late Returns;

Includes Refunds

H&R Block has been made aware by Internal Revenue that the IRS may now penalize a late tax return, even if it shows a refund! In the past, a late return with a refund was not normally penalized.

Because of this ruling, H&R Block is alerting all taxpayers who might file late to either file now or apply for a tax deadline extension in order to avoid paying such a penalty or interest. The size and scope of the tax return could determine the amount of money saved on the penalty or interest.

According to the local manager, Doris Wedel, "We are trying to save taxpayers' money. The public may not be aware of this IRS ruling, and we feel they should be alerted."

MARGARET EPTING

Angels Of Mercy of West Plains Medical Center

Margaret Epting LVN has lived in Muleshoe a hundred years! It's really closer to 40-50 years. She and her husband, Alton, married in the Methodist Parsonage 51 years ago. They raised their two sons, Dwain & Mike, right here in Muleshoe.

She remembers when there used to be two hospitals in Muleshoe: The Green Memorial Hospital and West Plains Hospital. By the time Margaret entered nursing school and graduated in 1963, the two hospitals had merged to form West Plains Hospital. You cannot believe the stories that Margaret can tell of nursing in the early sixties!

The sixties are really not that far in the past, but the changes in healthcare which have occurred in the last 35 years have been great. Going to nursing school was, to Margaret, the fulfillment of a dream. Dr. Sanderlin, a physician here in Muleshoe, encouraged her to go back to school and fulfill her dream.

She says she enjoys nursing just as much now as she did when she first graduated because now she can do more of the actual hands-on patient care where as before, she had alot more responsibility in the position of night Charge Nurse. Even though she works part-time (most of the time she works more than she would like to!) she is still very active in Nursing Continuing Education.

She is always looking for ways to improve her skills and to update her knowledge of nursing. Margaret has a gentle touch and a soft word for each and every one of her patients. She is a Special Lady. She's an Angel of Mercy. T.Wilson RN DON

Farm Debt Restructure Plan Given

A farm debt restructuring plan announced Thursday (March 6) by Farm Bureau could help save thousands of farmers and ranchers from bankruptcy or liquidation, according to S.M. True, president of the Texas Farm Bureau.

The Plainview farmer said the two-tier restructuring program approved by the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors in Chicago March 4 essentially would allow a farmer's debt to be paid back over a longer period of time.

"This could save a lot of good farmers who otherwise might lose everything they have, and it would enable some troubled banks to salvage money that would otherwise be lost," said True, who is a member of the AFBF board.

The AFBF will seek support of its program with private and government lending institutions, True said.

"We will seek regulatory and legislative changes necessary to allow commercial banks to institute such a program and the regulatory changes necessary from the Farm Credit Administration and operational changes within all entities of the Farm Credit System to allow the Farm Credit System to institute such a program," he said.

True said the Texas Farm Bureau has already begun contacting private and Farm Credit System lending institutions in Texas to see if the plan can be expedited.

SANDHILLS PHILOSOPHER

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Sandy Acres writes about humor this week.

Dear editor: Ordinarily you wouldn't associate the Internal Revenue Service with Mark Twain, but an article in the paper the other day clearly indicates that the IRS is an admirer of America's greatest humorist.

According to the article, the IRS, which has been dragging its feet the last few years, faces a stack of 1.13 million unanswered letters from taxpayers.

According to Mark Twain, if you'll wait six months before answering a letter, you'll be surprised at how few then need answering.

Somebody should tell the IRS Twain was joking.

Speaking of humor, the new head of the Russian government, Gorbachev, addressing the 5,000 members of the ruling party, spoke for five solid hours and as far as anybody can tell didn't get a single laugh. It's said that life among the common masses in Russia can be dreary, which trains them, I suppose, if they rise to the top, to sit through a 5-hour speech without even a smile.

A lot of humor can be unintentional. For example, ex-President Marcos of the Philippines, while he was still holding on, paid a Washington lobbying firm $900,000 to improve his image in the United States. I suppose he's demanding they give him his money back.

Speaking of his money, teams of experts are working hard trying to find out how many millions he has stashed away in New York real estate, Swiss banks and suit cases, all on his salary of $4700 a year plus utilities.

There's a simpler way. Just figure up how much foreign aid the United States has furnished the Philippines in the last 10 years and you'll come pretty close to the right figure.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Wheat Farmers Brace For Leaf Rust Epidemic

Leaf rust, a fungal disease that took a big bite out of the 1985 Texas wheat crop, appears all set to strike again.

Spores which lead to the disease infection have been found in increasing numbers in central areas of the state in recent weeks, says officials with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service who are monitoring the situation.

"This winter's mild weather plus the fact that the disease was severe last year increases the potential for another major outbreak this year," points out Dr. Wendell Horne, Extension Service plant pathologist.

Horne says that the warmer weather has wheat progressing rapidly and that the crop is reaching the critical stage for control measures in some areas of the state.

"Since the cost of a fungicide application to control leaf rust is quite expensive, a farmer must be sure to treat his crop at the right time," Horne emphasizes. "Past experience has shown that a fungicide is most effective when applied just as the flag leaf is starting to emerge. This is the last leaf formed before the grain head is exerted."

Horne also emphasizes that only fields with a good yield potential should be treated to be cost-effective. "The greatest benefit is likely to result when the yield potential is 40 bushels or more per acre," he points out. "If two applications are anticipated, the yield potential should be in the range of 60 bushels per acre. Second applications should follow the first by 10 to 14 days."

The plant pathologist advises farmers to use 3 to 5 gallons of water per acre to insure good coverage when applying the fungicide by air.

County Extension agents can help farmers monitor the situation to determine if control measures should be taken against leaf rust disease, notes Horne. If the disease is present, then a farmer needs to take a close look at his situation to determine if there are any factors that might limit the crop's potential, such as stand, fertility level and available moisture.

NASA's Lynching

It's abundantly clear by now NASA management was in a deplorable state before the recent shuttle tragedy. Changes are absolutely necessary and the whole tone of effort, and methodology, at NASA, must be radically improved.

The tragic launch was reckless and irresponsible--whatever the conclusions as to why it happened and who was to blame.

But the major point of emphasis now should be one of quick reorganization and new progress--not a wallowing in recrimination and sensational circus-like hearings and investigations, with every politician in Washington pushing into the act.

Enough is already known to know that new leadership at NASA is required. Enough is known so that progress should already be underway on solving such problems as the O-ring danger. That's not a new problem, after all.

There is no need to abandon shuttle flights, or postpone them longer than is necessary to achieve a satisfactory level of safety. Nor is it logical to attempt to make the next shuttle launch absolutely safe. No such rocket launch can ever be absolutely safe. The space exploration program has proved over the years to be safer than some other military efforts.

Since millions watched the recent tragedy, and are now caught up in following the open investigation as if this were a mini-series or a TV soap, there's a real danger attention will not be focused where it should be--on a quick reorganization and corrective effort in NASA and a resumption of the space exploration program, without too much delay.

AMTRAK--Not Enough

AMTRAK, the federal government's operating arm created to provide the nation with decent railroad service, recently celebrated the tenth anniversary of its Lake Shore Limited. The Limited links Chicago, New York and Boston.

Unfortunately, there isn't much justification for AMTRAK's celebration. The Limited is slower today than was the well-remembered Twentieth Century Limited forty years ago. Other than the much-publicized Metroliner, connecting New York and Washington, AMTRAK has accomplished little in the way of producing new, fast, modern rail passenger service.

What's badly needed in the United States is rail service comparable to that in Europe or Japan. That means steady improvement in schedules, in service (rail ticket agents are still notoriously uninspiring--there's

St. Patrick's Day

St. Patrick, patron saint of Ireland, died March 17, 493. The anniversary of his death has been celebrated regularly in recent times by not only Irishmen but those of other races, and not only Catholics but those of other faiths.

The New York organization in memory of St. Patrick, the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, was organized by both Irish Catholics and Presbyterians, and its first president was a Presbyterian.

The most famous tale about St. Patrick is the one which tells of his banishment of snakes from Ireland. Yet Cardinal Moran, who some years ago wrote an article on St. Patrick for the Catholic no train competition) and new equipment and ideas.

Rail beds must be improved to allow greater speed. New equipment must be regularly added to modernize the system. Too little of this has been accomplished and many AMTRAK stations are still shabby.

Food is not what it should be on many passenger trains and, overall, the improvement achieved in fifteen years of AMTRAK operation is not impressive. Passenger rail service in the U.S., however, is vitally desirable.

Congress should prod AMTRAK management hard, even with its Gramm-Rudman budget cuts, to show more and speedier progress. Better marketing of its service and better service are both obvious priority needs today, fifteen years after AMTRAK's creation.

Encyclopedia, fails to mention it. He does mention the ordeal of St. Patrick when he was surrounded by demons in the shape of vultures, and tells of the drowning of the demons in answer to his prayers!

Whatever the tale, and there are those who believe several different versions, a great number of people enjoy celebrating the anniversary of the death of St. Patrick in the middle of this month. Irishmen take pride in the occasion, and on some occasions have even brought pieces of the "ould sod" from Ireland to observe the occasion.

Children don't play hard enough to keep heart in shape

COLLEGE STATION — Children don't play hard enough on their own to promote cardiovascular fitness and should participate in daily fitness enhancement activities, says the director of the Child Movement Laboratory at Texas A&M University.

"Parents need to be concerned not only about the mental growth of their children, but also health-related physical fitness," said Dr. Carl E. Gabbard, associate professor of health and physical education.

"Researchers report that during regular free play situations, children seldom experience physical activity of sufficient intensity to promote cardiovascular fitness," he said.

Gabbard refutes the assumption that children will simply grow out of an obese condition.

"That just doesn't happen according to studies of the population. Children, like adults, need to keep near an ideal weight, not skinny, but not overweight. By the fourth grade, 80 to 85 percent or more of the children that are overweight will have weight problems as an adult," he said.

Daily running programs of up to one mile are not uncommon for children 4-6 years old, Gabbard said.

"Generally, the same precautions (footwear, climatic conditions and use of progression) that should be followed by adults apply with children," he said.

Firefighter's Report

by Wayne Peterson

During our last business meeting, H.E. Reeder said we have received some letters of appreciation from some of those who were unfortunate enough to have need of our services. We are pleased we could be of service and thank them for their recognition.

We, as firemen, are unfortunate in that our services usually are required in cases of misfortune of others. Our consolation is, we hope to make these losses less costly and more bearable, if possible.

The department took on one more full membership, Derik Magby, was voted in after six months as a rookie. The post of sergeant-at-arms was added to the list of officers, and filled by a vote by Richard Ronek, nick named Pee Wee.

J.O. Parker will be running for fourth vice president of the Panhandle Fireman's Association this year and a good number of firemen will be attending the Panhandle Regional Convention in Amarillo May 16 and 17 to fire off his campaign.

Larry Rasco will attempt to inspire the pumper race team into a winning spot in that competition on Saturday, the 17th.

There was a motion and seconded that there be a 'Fireman of the Year,' selected from the membership to be recognized at the Christmas Party at the end of each year.

The Fireman's Annual Ball was discussed and set for the last Saturday of April, so everyone mark this on their calendar now, and plan to attend. We want to thank everyone for their support we have received in past years. The Ball has always been a success in that there have been proceeds left after expenses to help out in the department's equipment and business expenses. This is our only fund raising project of the year, so buy a ticket and come on out if you can.

It has been brought to our attention that the fire department cannot help with the 4th of July fireworks display unless someone obtains a license from the state. This will be looked into by the department chiefs and chamber manager.

Fire Marshall Owen Jones made a fire inspection of the Law Enforcement Center on request of Deputy Jerry Hicks. Everything was found in order.

EATING OUT

By Rose Hughes
THE question of tipping at restaurants has often been treated in this column. Unlike Europe, where service charges, usually 15 percent--are added to the bill, the American system is to tip, in part, according to the quality of service.

THAT rewards good service and encourages it. But a ten percent tip is often enough. The arbitrary fifteen percent in Europe removes the incentive for prompt service--and one usually doesn't get it as a result.

ANOTHER consideration in tipping, never discussed in this column, concerns the length of time a table is occupied. Recently a business twosome occupied a table in a packed restaurant for well over two hours.

THE waiter could have served two or three parties in that time. Only one tip would have lowered his average tip take.

BUT the business twosome allowed for that and tipped him double. He didn't have to do double the work so he wasn't really expecting the more than twenty percent he was tipped.

IN this case, the high percentage tip was justified.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

By Edward Thorland

Paul Volcker's testimony in Congress that the Federal Reserve Board isn't going to loosen the money supply to push interest rates down further dampened euphoria that has been sweeping the stock exchanges.

It may have been a timely and helpful influence on Wall Street even though stock averages reacted adversely.

The prospect of lower interest rates, plus sharply lower fuel costs, plus better than expected economic growth in 1986, had built a very strong optimism in the business and investment community. Some believed there was too much optimism.

The chairman of the FED has a way of making news and attracting attention, which some think he enjoys. And his latest testimony didn't particularly please the White House, also not anything new.

President Reagan is known to think interest rates should have been lower for some time. But Volcker has always seen inflation as the worst potential enemy of a healthy economy, and still does.

The FED's policy will help keep inflation in check and tend to slow the declining value of the dollar abroad
