The hall was beautifully decorated with red and white crepe paper streamers, and this color note repeated in decorations on the long U-shaped tables, which were centered with red and white tapers in wooden candelabra.

Banked with red roses, queen's lace and white tulle. Nut cups and menu-program booklets and place cards accented the red and white color theme to complete the decoration of the board. Floor baskets and vases of flowers were used in profusion throughout the hall.

FASHION AND FINANCE

A noted fashion authority looks at the prospects for America's fashion future

FORTUNATELY every day brings us closer to the termination of the war. Our men and women now in uniform will return to civilian life and America's $12-billion-a-year fashion industry will provide millions of fascinating opportunities for those who are style-minded.

In discussing the question of fashion and finance recently, Ethel Traphagen, who has trained in the celebrated New York fashion school which bears her name so many of America's foremost designers, said, "Our cotton, wool, silk, rayon, nylon, synthetics and plastics industries can bring forth fabrics surpassing anything previously produced, and afford employment for countless numbers of people."

"Since before the Revolution our forebears have put their all into building up in the United States a civilization where nothing is too good for our humblest citizen. As Alice Hughes once said: 'Where except in America, is it absolutely impossible to determine what a woman's social status might be, merely by the clothes she wears?'"

For this high standard of living our ancestors, not once but often have shed their blood. Through their patriotic efforts in the American Revolution, our national industries were first established and have now set the pace and are the envy of the entire world. For these same high ideals our boys are now fighting in every theater of the world's battle fronts, and in their absence, it is Miss Traphagen's belief that we should all use our influence to hold intact for their return our country's great industries, and to defeat such directives as the War Production Board's most recent order, M-388, which is nothing less than the undermining of America's luxury industries to the benefit of foreign interests. Styles of the volume trade will become static without the inspiration of our American luxury designers.

In denouncing this ruling, created for the professed purpose of increasing supplies of medium and low-priced clothing, the New York Herald Tribune points out that "makers of higher-priced garments, faced with extinction unless the order is revised, will find their chief difficulty in obtaining fabrics due, not to the scarcity of 'free' goods in the market, but to the fact that M-388 will close the mills which have supplied them with quality fabrics. . . . Although framed as a war measure to combat inflation, the W.P.B. order contains no termination clause."

Sylvan I. Stroock, manufacturer of fine wools, who believes that the ostensible motives of the ruling are commendable, is alarmed that "it does not appear to be a sincere movement predicated upon military necessity." In a letter to Fred M. Vinson, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, Mr. Stroock says: "This ill-advised directive, M-388, will have repercussions which will mark the future of our nation. It is the first step toward the destruction of American cultural life." Mr. Stroock, who calls M-388 "the most drastic and destructive act ever perpetrated upon American industry," said that it will result in countless bankruptcies and widespread unemployment.

F. Eugene Ackerman, who represents the American Wool Council, charged that "American fashion industries are being sacrificed to the international good-neighbor policy and while the fashion trade in America is being driven out of business this country currently is building up these industries in France and England." According to Mr. Ackerman this directive will reduce the entire American woolen and worsted industry to the making of utility fabrics, and will wipe out all the well-known brands of fabrics and garments above certain price ranges in the United States.

Should we be blinded to the self-seeking clever diplomacy of nations that would hoodwink America's present powers that be? Should we allow the effort since the birth of our nation to be scrapped?

Why should we not continue to hitch our wagon to a star and produce the best producible not only for the chosen few but for the many who have come forward so bravely in an international as well as national crisis? These are questions asked by Ethel Traphagen, a woman who has devoted her life to helping to build America's profitable fashion industry.

Perhaps, she said, the objection will be raised that my contention is biased, or that the products of England and France are superior to ours. In answer to such an argument, listen please to what two Viennese experts, Judith and Eva Sander have written:

"What has happened to the American women correspondents? Do they intend to give women in this country an inferiority complex? Since the liberation of Paris we keep reading about the immortal charm and taste of the European woman, especially the Parisienne."

"We two Viennese sisters, who came to this country four years ago, always admire the youthful beauty, the excellent cut, the lovely color combinations of the American ready-to-wear clothes. We who had all those so-called blessings of dressmaker and shoemaker are happy to have escaped them and to know that, whether we spend $7 or $150 for a ready-to-wear dress, without the agony of endless fittings, we are still better dressed here than our European sisters. . . . It annoys us greatly to see American women correspondents stand in awe before anything European, whereas the average American woman is far superior to the average European as far as beauty, figure, clothes and make-up are concerned—let alone her magnificent hair and beautiful legs."

"Why must everything foreign and imported be admired unconditionally? American women should get over this fashion inferiority complex."

stories in which the victims were burned, and which, at the time of our visit, were filled with charred skulls and skeletons. And then I saw in the open courtyard the gallows upon which many were hanged in public exhibition. Near the gallows I saw the massive monument that has been built by the inmates at Buchenwald in memory of 51,000 martyrs of all nationalities. At this one camp alone, more than 51,000 people had been murdered in cold blood, either by starvation, by hanging, by burning, by injection of death dealing drugs, by clubbing or by shooting. Every form and kind of murder had been committed.

"Before going to Buchenwald, like many people in this country, I did not completely believe everything that had been printed about the horrors of the German prison camps. I have always taken the 'atrocity stories' with a grain of salt. But after I visited this prison, and then sat down in the Commandant's office in Buchenwald and saw with my own eyes lamp shades made from human skin, and dancing girl designs in picture frames on the wall, made from the skin of human beings, then the evidence was overwhelming that the German people have been engaged for many years in the most inhuman, indescribable reign of murder and human slaughter that the history of man records. I was told by many inmates of this prison, who know that these lamp shades and other articles made from human skin was at the request and to please the whims of the wife of the camp Commandant."

It may seem ghoulish to repeat these stories, but the people should know the whole truth.

There are about 100 species of fleas, of which one-third are American.

Crooked dough brings no man wealth, except and perhaps the pretzel manufacturer.

Marrying a woman for her beauty is like buying a home for its paint.

Washington Notes

By Congressman Ed Gossett

Washington, D.C., May 11.—The House this week passed by a vote of 288 to 88 the proposal to amend our Constitution to change our method of ratifying treaties. The Constitution provides that a treaty must be ratified by a vote of two-thirds of the Senate. The House does not participate. In other words, one-third plus one of the Senate can defeat all treaties.

The Summers Resolution passed by the House proposes that treaties be ratified by majorities of the House and the Senate. This is a major piece of legislation on which I have done a lot of "leg work" during the last two years. In my opinion this change must be made before America can actively do her part in the promotion of world peace.

This week I have talked with some half dozen Congressmen just returned from inspecting the scenes of German atrocities. These first-hand, eye-witness stories told me by Congressmen are more revolting than stories and pictures carried by press, screen and radio. Congressman Albert Rains of Alabama tells the following story of what he actually saw at Buchenwald, just after it was captured.

"We proceeded into the cold, filthy, dirty, ramshackled building that still held hundreds of the victims of the Nazi atrocities. Human beings starved, sick and emaciated were lying all over the floors, unable to move, unable to speak, in the last throes of death. I shall never forget one building I visited in which there were hundreds of cases of dysentery. There was no sewerage or toilet facilities, the inmates were without clothes, without beds, and the stench of the place beggars description.

"From there we went through other buildings in which were hundreds dying of tuberculosis. It was the same pitiful, terrible story of death and starvation. We were then escorted into a building which had housed 2300 prisoners, that did not have as much floor space as an ordinary four-room bungalow. Of course there was no place to sleep, and no provision made for sanitation whatsoever.

"I noted in another building bins built into the side of the wall, these bins being about 3 1-2 feet square. We were told by the victims, who could still speak, that six people were compelled to sleep in each of these small bins.

"I saw the death chamber, on the wall of which were some 25 to 30 iron pegs, from which the victims were hanged by the German oppressors. I also saw the maul or club which the Nazi guards used to bash out the brains of the prisoners.

"I saw the clinical chamber where German doctors were using human beings as guinea pigs for experimentation of all kinds, and where no kind of anesthetic was used. I saw also the brick crema-

Next time we go to the theatre and one of those cute ushers asks us how far down we want to sit, we're going to up and tell her "All the way!"

Concert seems to be the only disease that makes everyone sick but the one who has it.

You can't change the nature of your faults by blaming them on your nature.

The recent government announcement that next season we would have only 80% of the coal we used during the last, sent me scurrying for more information on fuel conservation!

I had heard that we could pare as much as 10% from our annual fuel bills by proper use of window shades. I was a bit doubtful myself until I checked with one of the nation's foremost research foundations which recently conducted an extensive series of tests on insulation.

These experts found that as much as 30% of the heat lost from the average home escapes through the window panes! Shades drawn to the sills in all unused rooms, only half way during the day in rooms where light is needed, and to the sills at night were proved to be efficient insulators. The dead air trapped between the glass and the cloth provided enough insulation to save the 10% in fuel!

If you want to take full advantage of cloth window shades as insulators, make sure your shades are correctly fitted. I think the best way is to take actual measurements. If the shades are to fit outside the casement, add 1 1/2 inches on either side of the window opening. If they are to fit inside, tell your dealer the width of the opening and he'll give you the correct width shades to fit snugly. Then to get the proper length, measure the height of the window opening and add 6 to 8 inches more. This extra wrapping around the roller will make the shade function smoothly.

Though it's rather difficult during these lovely days to get excited about saving heat next winter, I think you'll have a grand time selecting new cloth window shades and I know you'll enjoy the added beauty they give your home — I say nothing about the extra insulation against heat and cold.

GARDEN CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE AND FLOWER SHOW

The Civic League and Garden Club held its annual flower show and pilgrimage on Friday afternoon, May 11th. Meeting at 2:30 at the Public school, members viewed an exhibit of handwork displayed in one of the rooms under sponsorship of the 4-H Club and then proceeded to the cemetery, the beautification of which was the major project of the club for several years.

The next stop of the tour was at the home of Mrs. Joe Swirczynski where the yard was inspected and then visits were made to the yards of Mrs. J.B. Wilde and Mrs. Jake Pagel, ending the pilgrimage at the home of Mrs. Jim Cook where the flower show was held and tea served.

Many lovely arrangements of seasonal flowers were attractively exhibited, among them roses, carnations, columbine, bush honey suckle, daisies, queen's lace, verbena, peonies, lilies, corn flowers, iris, amaryllis, poppies, snapdragons, begonias, petunias and ivy.

After viewing the floral arrangements tea was served. The tea table was laid with a hand crocheted cloth and was centered with a crystal basket of roses flanked with white tapers in crystal holders. Mrs. John Fisch, flower show chairman, presided at the tea service. Fancy sandwiches and small cakes were served with the tea.

A brief business session followed with Miss Olivia Stock, president, presiding, and committee chairmen gave reports.

Out of town guests were Miss Mildred Chapman of Gainesville County Home Demonstration agent, and Miss Myrtle Murray, Marketing specialist, from A and M College.

ANNUAL MAY QUEEN CROWNING RITES ARE OBSERVED SUNDAY

The annual observance of May Day and the crowning of the May Queen took place here Sunday afternoon with beautiful and impressive ceremonies at Sacred Heart church at 3 o'clock.

Participating in the procession were children of the recent First Communion class and members of the Solemn Communion class. Several hymns to the May Queen were sung by the student choir and during the ceremonies little Miss Theresa Mae Felderhoff placed a crown of white blossoms on the Virgin statue which stood on a pedestal in the sanctuary.

The statue was centered in a shrine of flowers and was flanked with the flag of Church and the United States flag.

Little Miss Felderhoff wore a floor length white frock and a veil that fell into a short train. She was attended by Misses Rosina Hess and Lusina Henschel, who also wore white floor-length dresses and carried arm bouquets of blossoms, which they laid at the shrine.

Father Thomas officiated at the rites and delivered a special sermon for the occasion. May devotions and sacramental benediction followed.

Your Health

Austin, Texas.—From a health standpoint, life after forty begins to be more complicated for the average individual. According to information from the State Department of Health, the principal health foes confronting people in middle life are heart disease, cancer, kidney disease, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, apoplexy, diabetes, and arthritis.

Middle aged people of today are healthier than were those of preceding generations, and the present generation, when they reach middle age, should enjoy even better health than their parents of today.

Medical care in middle life has two important phases. The first is going to the doctor at regular intervals for a complete physical checkup, whether or not there have been symptoms that suggest the need for medical attention. The second is prompt attention to any illness which may mean the difference between prompt recovery and prolonged good health and prolonged invalidism. It is difficult to say which of these phases is the more important.

It has been found that men and women who faithfully pursue the habit of regular health examinations and who follow the advice arising from them tend to live longer, more satisfactorily, and freer from disease than those who simply take a chance and go to the doctor only when pain or disability forces them to give up their normal activities.

It is also a fact that many diseases of middle age respond to treatment in early stages whereas if neglected until later stages they often cause permanent invalidism and even death.

Good advice for persons over forty is that they have regular physical examinations and obtain prompt medical attention for any and all illnesses.

It's probably true that all things come to him who waits; but we're inclined to believe that they are likely to come too late to do any good.

If you want to make friends at the right time, make 'em before you need 'em.

MOOS OF THE MOMENT
BY UNCLE BOB
of the Kraft Dairy Farm Service

I'm glad I don't have to claim responsibility for this one. A dairyman in Minnesota says you can't expect good results from a cow which is utterly neglected.

That brings up the matter of cutting milk losses, as discussed in the March-April KRAFTMAN. One of the ways is to be sure cows are clean at milking time, particularly around the flanks and udders—or should I say udder places?

Six rules are listed as essentials to producing clean milk. In addition to clean, healthy cows, they are:

Clean and sterile utensils; use small top pails; prompt cooling; clean, healthy milkers; and dry-hand or correct machine milking.

If you follow these rules exactly, you'll make sure of doing your full share in getting all your milk in usable condition to a plant where it can be used for the war effort.

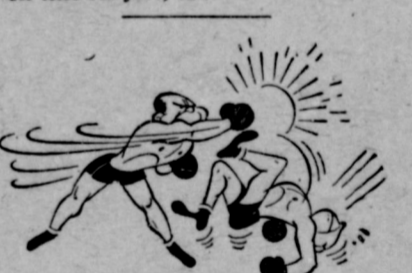

Write Uncle Bob at 500 Peshtigo Court, Chicago 90, Ill., and I'll send you a booklet giving full details on these six points. Ask for "Care of Milk on the Farm."

milk cow, by keeping records.

If you start doing this now, you won't have to guess—you'll know—which cows are the profit makers and the ones from which to raise replacements.

In every state, you'll find some fine examples of how profits have gained, over a period of years, because records of production were kept. Your county agent can tell you all about DHIA or cow-testing associations and what they will do for you.

Extension Bulletin 195, Extension Service, Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., is well worth looking over on this subject, too.

Here's a lightweight item which will carry a heavyweight punch in your battle of production.

I'm speaking of bromegrass, which is finding a place in rotation pasture programs in nearly every section.

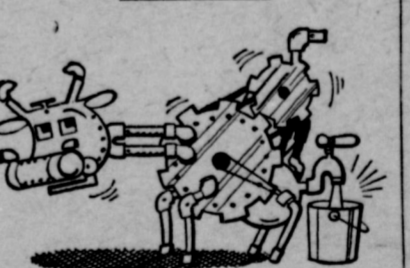

One of its great virtues is that it provides forage in summer months, when some other pasture grasses slow up. Also, it is long-lived—Ohio reports one plot which has been growing for 25 years.

The "lightweight" angle is the weight of seed—14 to 20 pounds per bushel—which presents a seeding problem, but mixing with fertilizer or with oats is helping solve this.

You can sow bromegrass in spring, summer or fall, in most areas with good results, the Ohio extension service points out. I suggest you look into this grass as a good item to plan for your pasture program.

Another good booklet on the subject of "correct milking" reached me recently. It is a special circular entitled "Better Milking Saves Time," issued by The Extension Service, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.* You'll want to add it to your collection. Ask for it by name.

*NOTE: There usually is a 5c charge for pamphlets mailed to non-residents of a state, but possibly your own state has a free pamphlet on the same subject. Ask your county agent.

Did you ever stop to think what a marvelous machine a cow is? This "machine" produces yearly many times its own weight in just about the most valuable product the world has ever known—milk.

In any manufacturing plant, the rate of production of each machine must be known. When one of the machines fails to come through with the proper production, it is scrapped and a better one installed.

Which brings me up to the matter of keeping records in a dairy herd. There'll come a day sooner or later when you'll want to know which cows are making a profit for you and which ones you can spare. You won't want to get rid of any high producers, naturally.

Dairying is a business. So to operate on a business basis and to operate at a profit, you need to know what your "producing machines" are doing for you. You can figure your cost of production per

PFC. PETE STOFFELS WRITES OF RECENT ACTIVITY IN GERMANY

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stoffels have received an interesting letter from their son, Pfc. Pete Stoffels, written April 24 from Germany. Excerpts from the letter follow:

"I am still getting along fine, living in a nice house and enjoying life. We have a radio playing now.

"Sometime ago I was picked with a few others to go on an almost suicide job of assaulting pill boxes, but by some change in the situation at the last hour I didn't have to go. Of course, that suited me better. Thank goodness there are no more jobs like that.

"Almost all I have been doing lately is carpenter work. On my rounds yesterday I saw something that was really awful. I saw where the Germans had murdered some 1200 men, slave laborers and such. From the looks of things they were driven into one big barn in the middle of a large field. The floor was covered with straw soaked with gas and oil. After the victims were in the fire was lit and machine guns started at the same time. I don't know just how it was but apparently that happened from the looks of things. I was in the barn and about half the bodies were still there. Some were completely charred, others were not badly burned.

"The Americans had the German civilians burying them in separate graves. I think the crime was done by S.S. troops and Hitler Youth. The blaze must not have lasted long for the barn was not badly damaged. The walls are brick, but the roof is held up by wooden posts. I saw only one that was burned completely through. I used to not believe such things could happen. But seeing is believing.

"Now for the brighter side — I have been drinking cognac and cokes and going fishing in a boat and deer hunting. I caught plenty of big fish that were really good, and got a few shots at deer, but missed. One of my buddies bagged a nice one though. "I have a good job now and I think my worries in this war are over, so don't worry about me. I feel like I'm living the life of Riley. Best regards to all."

42 CHILDREN IN SOLEMN COMMUNION SERVICES SUNDAY
A class of 19 boy and 23 girls participated in impressive ceremonies Sunday when Solemn Communion rites were held at Sacred Heart church. Rev. Father Thomas, pastor, officiated at the 9 o'clock mass, delivered the address for the occasion and distributed the Eucharist to the children at the foot of the altar steps. During the afternoon services at 3 o'clock, the pastor enrolled the class in the scapular association and officiated at May Devotions after which the children renewed their baptismal vows. A short instructive sermon was delivered by Father Thomas and sacramental benediction followed.

POINTS RAISED ON FATS AND OILS AGAIN

Price Administrator Chester Bowles in an emergency action Saturday night raised the ration point values of lard, shortening, cooking and salad oils from 6 to 10 points a pound, effective Sunday, May 13. He said the point increase was necessary because of a sudden cut of over 42 million pounds in the civilian allocation of these foods for the April-May-June period. Saturday's action was the second increase in point values for fats and oils in six weeks. On April 1st Bowles hiked the ration value of these commodities from 4 to 6 points. Butter and margarine, however, were not affected by the order.

AT DECATUR HORSE SHOW

Eighteen local persons were in Decatur Friday night to attend a horse show held in connection with the Wise County Breeder-Breeder Stock Show. The Muenster party consisted of Dr. and Mrs. T.S. Myrick and son, John, Messrs. and Mmes. R.L. McNelley, Alois, Joe and Tony Trubenbach, Misses Dorothy and Loretta Hartman, Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Weinzapfel and sons, Joe and Henry, and Mrs. Robin Norwood. The Muensterites were announced as present over the loud speaker by courtesy of L.W. Flusche of Decatur, and Mr. McNelley was called upon to make a few remarks, after which he announced the Muenster horse show to be held next Sunday, May 20.

We'll wager that the term "flew the coop" originated with a hen-pecked husband. In Egypt the man doesn't know his wife until after he marries her — same as here.

Your BABY

By Lillian B. Storms
"GIVE YOUR BABY THE RIGHT START IN LIFE"

How long should it take my baby to eat his meal?

Meal-times are a tiny baby's most interesting experience or are among the most interesting events of the day. Babies who are still on a formula, before other foods are started, enjoy the experience. After the first hunger is satisfied, some babies will prolong the feeding time unnecessarily. If baby is not interrupted or distracted from the business in hand and from the very first understands it is a business to be attended to, then later difficulties with dawdling at meal-times are less apt to be a serious problem.

Your baby should finish nursing, whether breast fed or given a bottle, in from 20 to 30 minutes. If he has lost interest after 20 minutes or a little longer, remove the breast or bottle, with no fuss or comment and in a matter of fact way, and do not offer any food except water until the next mealtime. When cereal is introduced and later strained soups and vegetables, allow a reasonable time, about 30 minutes and then the meal is over. If this principle is followed all through infancy and childhood, the mealtime becomes a routine requiring attention at the time food is offered or the opportunity is gone until the next meal.

Of course, babies vary but you can tell if his food has ceased to be of interest. Show no concern because he doesn't eat as much as you think he should. Give him two cereals, for variety, and as strained foods are gradually introduced, one at a time, let him help you decide how much he wants. If you are in doubt about whether or not he is eating enough, consult your doctor.

A wife with good horse sense never becomes a nag.

Just because he's a human dynamo doesn't mean that everything he has on is charged.

Confetti---

Like individuals, nations will have to learn that crime does not pay. Plans are already under way to set up international tribunals in which an estimated three million Nazis will be held accountable for their crimes. So far as humanly possible, justice will be meted out to all perpetrators of starvation, mass murder, rape, torture and any other atrocities brought to light.

But merely to punish the actual criminals is not enough. Every man, woman and child in Germany should be made to feel the impact of the country's horrible disgrace. They should be forced to witness personally the evidence of beastiality in which they were silent partners. They should have before them constantly for a long time to come a reminder of the horrors perpetrated by the ring leaders of their so called master race. The knowledge of it may prove a wholesome influence in the nation's repentance and eventual return to the folds of civilization.

Germany's greatest disgrace today is not the frustration of its insane ambition for world domination but its horrible record of atrocities. The very lopes whose pride and arrogance prompted them to support the maniac in his mad drive for power are destined forever to hang their heads in shame.
