Rose Rohmer 1920 - 2008

Mass of Christian Burial for Rose Rohmer of Muenster was held at 10 a.m. on Monday, Nov. 17 at Sacred Heart Church in Muenster with Fr. Ken Robinson celebrating the Mass. Burial followed in Sacred Heart Cemetery. Services were under the direction of McCoy Funereal Home of Muenster.

Rose Marie Sicking Rohmer died at the age of 88 at 9:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 12, 2008 at her residence.

The seventh of 11 children born to Ben and Mary Sicking, Rose grew up on the family farm eight miles south of Muenster. She attended Sacred Heart Schools and was a member of Sacred Heart Parish.

Rose had many great stories about life on the farm. One story that really stood out was riding eight miles in a horse and buggy on a cold winter day to go to school, and still arriving earlier than some of the "city" kids.

Rose married Alois Rohmer on Sept. 21, 1950 in Sacred Heart Church. She was an avid homemaker, and was active for many years in the Cooke County Home Demonstration Club.

Survivors are her daughter.

Cooke County Home Demonstration Club.

Survivors are her daughter Joan Fusco of Wichita, Kansas; sons and daughtersin-law Glenn and Gerda Rohmer of Cedar Hill, and Neil and Donna Rohmer of Lindsay; six grandchildren; sister Irene Klement of Muenster; brothers and sisters-in-law Ollie and Rose Marie Sicking of Muenster, and Ernie and Carolyn Sicking of Laurens, South Carolina.

Preceding her in death were her husband of 53 years Alois Rohmer; her parents; and brothers Frank, Martin, Bernard, Leo, Joe, Ed, and Paul.

Assisting during the funeral Mass, were altar servers Sylvan Walterscheid, Danny Walterscheid, and Alvin Hartman. Peggy Sparkman, niece, gave the First and Second Readings. Grandson Brett Fusco read the Prayers of the Faithful. Offertory Gifts were carried up by grandchildren Anna Rose and John Rohmer. Eucharistic ministers were Viola Rohmer, Kathy Vogel, Theresa Mae Walterscheid, Darla Anderle, and Charlotte Klement.

Music ministers were vocalists Roger Dieter and Christy Hesse, and pianist Isaac Davis. Sacred songs included "Be Not Afraid," The Lord Is My Light and My Salvation," "You Are Mine," "Do Not Let Your Hearts Be Troubled," "Songs of the Angels," and "On Eagles Wings." "Ave Maria" was sung in place of the eulogy.

On Sunday evening, a combined Rosary and Wake Service was held at 5 p.m. at the funeral home. Fr. Ken was the celebrant.

Drivers cautioned to DAYS GONE BY.... keep vehicle titles up

Soaring gas prices are prompting many energy-conscious motorists to consider replacing what they're currently driving with more fuel-efficient models. With millions of cars and trucks expected to change hands in the upcoming months, the Texas Department of Transportation launched its Protect Your Title, Texas public awareness outreach campaign to remind consumers not to overlook the paperwork side of buying or selling a vehicle.

State law requires buyers and sellers to provide specific information to TxDOT to keep vehicle ownership records correct and up to date. When a vehicle is sold, traded in, or given away, the vehicle's title must be reassigned to its new owner.

According to state officials, this is where things often go wrong.

According to state officials, this is where things often go wrong.

"A vehicle's title lists who officially ownsit," said Rebecca Davio, director of TxDOT's Vehicle Titles and Registration Division. "If the seller doesn't let us know when a vehicle is sold or traded, he or she will continue to show up in our records as the owner, which means the individual can be held responsible if the new owner racks up parking tickets, toll violations, or even more serious infractions."

Speaking at TxDOT's press event to announce the agency's new outreach effort, Tom Frost III, senior executive vice president of Frost Bank, warned motorists not to make the same mistake he did when he traded in his car two years ago.

"I assumed the dealership was taking care of the paperwork," Frost said. "I didn't know it was my responsibility to file a simple one-page piece of paper that could have saved me two years of stress and aggravation because of things the new owner did in a vehicle that was still titled in my name."

t one-page piece of the Vehicle Transfer That one-page piece of paper, the Vehicle Transfer Notification, is now as simple as a few computer clicks. You can file the transfer notification for free on-line at www.txdot.gov. When you submit the notification within 30 days of selling your vehicle, you are protecting yourself from actions the new owner may commit with the vehicle.

tion, sellers also should take advantage of a new state law that allows them to transfer the license plates to another vehicle they own. When the plates and windshield registration sticker are removed, it forces the buyer of your car or truck to apply for a new title and register the vehicle in his or her name.

By law, buyers must retitle a vehicle within 20 days of purchase. Recurring penalties apply to procrastinators, beginning with an initial $25 fine and $25 for every month that the buyer fails to turn in an application for a new title.

"The best advice I can give to buyers and sellers who aren't sure what to do and what forms to fill out is to go together to their local county tax office to complete the sale," said Davio. "If that isn't possible, everything they need to know and all the necessary forms are on our Web site."

The Counseling Corner Demands of an aging parent

By the American Counseling Association
Improvements in health care and lifestyles have resulted in more of us living longer lives. Many families now have one or more parents in their 70s, 80s, or older, parents who can complicate their grown children's lives with care and help demands.

It can be a difficult situ-cate their grown children's lives with care and help demands.

It can be a difficult situation. While we may feel a strong sense of responsibility to an elderly parent, we also have very real obligations to our spouse and children. Balancing what we can do for an aging parent with our family's and own needs can be difficult.

One important consideration is how real an elderly parent's needs may be. Health issues certainly can bring demands that we want and need to meet.

But there are also elderly parents who are simply demanding, insisting that their adult children "owe" them and who present never-ending lists of needs, many of them unimportant.

Giving in to such demands out of guilt often leaves a person feeling angry and frustrated, and can create the same anger and frustration in his or her spouse and children. Such resentment is natural when the demands are overwhelming and coming at the expense of the immediate family.

In such cases, it's necessary to look to alternatives to ease the stress, tension, and overall burden the elderly parent is placing on the family. For example:

- Are there siblings who can help? Even when geographically separated, your siblings may find various ways to contribute and ease your burden if asked.

- Are there neighbors or friends of your aging parent willing, perhaps eager, to help?

- Many areas also offer free or low cost Elder Day Care programs that can provide daily assistance.

- Can you manage your time better to make room for both an aging parent and your own life and family? Setting a schedule to visit and help, rather than being constantly "on-call," often makes things easier.

- Set priorities and stick to them. While it can be difficult to just say "no," it's often helpful to separate what's absolutely necessary for a parent's well being (doctor visits) from things that really can wait (gardening).

When you let an aging parent overextend you, everyone involved ends up suffering the consequences. While we all want to help someone who loved and nurtured us, it's also essential to understand our own limits, reasonably and realistically.

Children their receive First Reconciliation

Children from Sacred Heart Parish received the Sacrament of Reconciliation at three separate services on Thursday, Nov. 6, Monday, Nov. 10, and Monday, Nov. 17. Father Ken Robinson presided at each.

The theme of each service was based on the gospel story of the Good Shepherd who goes out looking for the lost sheep. The service began with the song "God Is Rich in Mercy," led by Barbara Rohmer and accompanied by Isaac Davis on the piano. Then Father Ken read the Gospel story and did an examination of conscience and talked to the children. After praying the Act of Contrition expressing sorrow for sin, the children went to confession individually. After each child received the

Preparation

• Clean the refrigerator: Take advantage of Clean Your Refrigerator Day on Nov. 15 and clean the icebox before it is loaded with turkey, mashed potatoes, and all those holiday treats. Start by removing the shelving and drawers, spray down the interior with a solution of 1-cup water and 1-teaspon dishwashing liquid and clean condiment tops. Also, do not forget to clean the outside.

• Polish the silver: After spending a year in storage, silver serving pieces and candlesticks may become dusty or tarnished. Use a silver polish, which is safe to use on silver pieces that come in contact with food.

• Clean the fireplace and stock up on wood/propane: Place newspaper around the fireplace to protect the floor and shovel ashes into a bag. Use a vacuum to pick up the remaining lightweight ashes. For glass doors, scrape off any baked-on soot with a razor and use a vinegar-water solution (1/2-cup vinegar to 1-gallon water) to clean the glass. Stock up on wood and fire starters or check the propane tank to ensure the fire will burn brightly throughout the holiday season.

In addition to being on the main route for several famous cattle trails, Gainesville became famous in the 1930s for its Community Circus. Hometown performers spent their days at their regular jobs, and during their spare time, practiced with professional circus acts. At one time, there were over 75 acts in the three ring circus. After a catastrophic fire in the early 1960s, the circus ended.

Gainesville features many large homes listed on the National Register of Historic Homes or the Texas Historic Registry. Each year, during Victorian Stroll Weekend, the Historic South Gainesville Neighborhood Association chooses homes to display. This year, Dec. 11-13, six houses have been selected for the tour. The centerpiece is an 1898 three-story home, nearly destroyed by fire in 2005.

While the fire raged in December of that year, neighbors came out to offer hot chocolate, blankets, and support to the victims and firefighters. The home was believed by most to be a total loss. In the spring of 2006, a couple and their three teenage daughters purchased the house, and began the monumental task of restoration, with much of the work done by hand. This year, the family celebrates their first Christmas in this restored beauty and shares their experience with you through pictures and words. Five other homes are featured as well; ranging in age from circa 1893 to a 1948 ranch style cottage with the first central heat and air conditioning and a walk-in refrigerator. For more information on homes, see website: historic-southgainesvilletour.com—Tickets for the Home Tour, as well as maps, information and gifts may be purchased at the Morton Museum of Cooke County, 210 S. Dixon Street (one block south of the square). The Museum, celebrating its 40th anniversary, is in an 1884 building which has served as a city hall, fire station, and calaboose. The bell, originally atop the two-story brick building, rang every night at 9 p.m. for curfew and each time a fire broke out. In 1966, demolition of the building was begun and the top story was taken down. Concerned citizens requested that the demolition halt until the city could take steps to preserve the building as a county historical museum.

With the aid of the newly formed "Historical Society, and a substantial grant from a former resident, the Morton Museum of Cooke County opened in December, 1968, and holds many items of historical interest as well as some architectural features, including a stained glass skylight, which came from the former home of U.S. Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey. This mansion, remodeled by a subsequent owner, William H. Dougherty, was donated to the City of Gainesville in the early 1920s as a memorial to their son, Newsome. With wings added, the building served as the local High School until 1958.

The Museum serves as a research facility, providing exhibits on events such as the "Great Hangings" during the Civil War, the Community Circus, and Camp Howze, a large military training base and POW camp for German prisoners. See website: Mortonmuseum.org

Beginning on Thursday, Dec. 11, downtown shops will be open until 8 p.m., car-

CASA hosts competition to win prizes for children

Throughout the State of Texas, only half of the more than 33,000 children in foster care because of abuse or neglect have a Court Appointed Special Advocate or a CASA Volunteer Advocate to look out for their best interests. This means that only 50% of the children who need a CASA volunteer looking out for them, has one. In an effort to make certain that every child who needs an advocate has one, Texas CASA, the state organization that provides assistance and oversight to local CASA programs, has set up a state wide competition for volunteer recruitment that will result in prizes awarded to winning programs that include funds to provide "extras" that the foster care system cannot provide. This effort and the contest are known throughout the state CASA network as "volunteer roundup."

Prizes will be awarded to the individual volunteer who recruits the most volunteers this year, the program that increases it's volunteer base by the largest percentage, and to the region that has the largest increase in its number of volunteer advocates. The winning region will win more than $20,000 in prizes for the children of North Texas, recently kicked off their efforts to both recruit volunteers and win prizes for the children they serve. We were thrilled to participate in this contest for several reasons. First, we always need volunteers to advocate for the children. Second, when you mention prizes to give the children. Second, when you mention prizes to give the children who research when you mention prizes to give the children. Second, when you mention prizes to give the children. The kickoff ended with a hilarious "Hee Haw" skit performed by a group of Lake Kiowa residents who added to the western theme of the evening and the kick off. The Hee Haw group ended the skit with a very sweet song adapted to show appreciation for CASA of North Texas and to cover multiple cases, our goal (locally) at this time is for each volunteer to work only one case. It doesn't hurt at all that we could win things like summer camp scholarships and other special things for the children."

CASA recently kicked off their Volunteer Roundup with a training session and entertainment in the beautiful western ballroom at Hidden Oaks Ranch, formerly known as C Quarter Circle Ranch. The training was geared toward teaching each person involved with CASA, including volunteers and board members, to be straat the First Presbyterian Church, and visits with San-ta and the Festival of Trees, and the Morton Museum. Come join Gainesville for an old fashioned holiday in an old fashioned town with charm and history galore.

Leaving his mark at MISD

Chris Valliere, BSA Troop 664, recently completed his Eagle Scout Leadership Service Project at the Muenster Elementary School playground where a United States map, including Alaska and Hawaii, was painted to scale. He also provided school personnel with a booklet of games for fun learning and educational purposes. Over 170 volunteer hours of work were involved to complete the project, funded by the Muenster Jaycees.

Muenster ISD Junior High Student Council members Miranda Pagel, ShyAnn Bartel, Brittany Pagel, and Erin Hess hang the Keep Texas Beautiful flag. The students are members of Keep Muenster Beautiful. They promoted litter free football games. Members picked up litter at all Junior High home football games. The Student Council will host the Second Annual Turkey Bowl on Nov. 25. All seventh and eighth graders collect paper towels, toilet paper, napkins, and tissues for the food pantry. The class who brings the most paper goods in, wins the chance to bowl a frozen turkey. The first turkey bowl was won by the class of 2013. They collected over 3,000 points for their paper goods.

Author shares stories with Sacred Heart School children

On Nov. 6, Mr. C. O. Sage and his wife Carol visited Sacred Heart Catholic School. Sage is an author of children's books. He read his books to students in grades Preschool through Grade Six, and answered questions the children had about his stories. The titles of the paperback books were Mabel, A Wild Longhorn Cow and Pete, the Orphan Skunk.

Sage had coloring sheets for the students, bookmarks, and order information was sent home to the parents. He took the time to write a personal message and signed

College and Career Corner -

Do your homework on college financing

By Rose Rennekamp
In a tough economy, college applications typically increase. However, the current financial crisis might have consequences for how students—and their parents—pay for that education. A recent Sallie Mae/Gallup study shows that families typically use a complex funding mix: parents provide 48% of the funds, students kick in another 33%, and 15% comes from gift aid, like scholarships and grants. The average family covers nearly 40% of the costs by borrowing, so it pays to do your homework.

Early in the college planning process, parents and students should talk about what earling a college degree positively affects lifetime earnings. It doesn't matter how it was earned. Students should explore all options for completing a college education, but keep financial factors in mind. And while a college degree does generally lead to higher does generally lead to higher lifetime earnings, some careers do have limited earning potential. Pay shouldn't be the only factor when choosing a career, but earnings could be an issue if the education will be largely financed with loans. Most student loans require repayment to start within just a few months of graduation. Students who graduate in low-paying fields with larger college loans can quickly find themselves overwhelmed.

Knowing what your family will be expected to contribute toward college expenses can be determined by completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). Every family, regardless of income, should fill it out. The FAFSA is key to unlocking all kinds of aid, including scholarships and grants, which don't need to be repaid. Visit www.fafsa.ed.govearly to know what information you will need. The form becomes available on Jan. 1 of each year.

After Federal Student Aid has processed the form, a Student Aid Report (SAR) which indicates the expected family contribution (EFC) will be sent to you and to any colleges you requested. Shortly thereafter, schools to which your student has applied will provide their financial aid offers.

After you receive this information, it will be time for some decisions: which school to attend and whether or not you will need loans.

College loan sources can be federal, state, or private. Federal loans and some state programs offer a number of advantages, including easier repayment terms, lower interest rates, and deferment options should your student choose to go back to school. The FAFSA serves as the application form serves as the application form a master's of education in guidance and counseling.

Texas Round-Up T-shirt

Texas Round-Up T-shirt Design Competition announced

First Lady Anita Perry announced the annual Texas Round-Up First Lady's Tshirt Design Competition, which encourages children age 12 and under to create a fitness-inspired design to be used on the official t-shirt for the Texas Round-Up Family Mile on April 25, 2009.
"Texas is taking the reins on combating the trend of poor nutrition and obesity-related health issues through Texas Round-Up," Mrs. Perry said. "The t-shirt competition provides a fun opportunity to engage and educate students about the importance of fitness and nutrition, as well as encourage creativity in the classroom."
Texas Round-Up is striving to improve the health of Texans through education and promotion of physical activity and healthy living.

The U.S. Surgeon General has reported that 70% of overweight children will become overweight or obese adults. Because healthy habits are best learned early in life, Texas Round-Up is reaching out to children to encourage participation in the program. "It is the responsibility of every parent, teacher, leader, and citizen to educate the children of our state about the importance of health and fitness," Meredith Garcia, executive director of Texas Round-Up said. "We must move beyond lectures, and begin modeling positive behavior and encouraging participation in projects such as this one."

havior and encouraging participation in projects such as this one."

Entries for the t-shirt design competition will be accepted through Jan. 31, 2009. The winning artist and his or her parents or guardians will be invited to attend the Texas Round-Up race weekend events on April 24-25, 2009 in Austin. Participation in the race events is encouraged, but not required, to submit a design entry.

In 2004, Governor Rick Perry launched the Texas Round-Up statewide fitness initiative and 10K race to motivate and encourage Texans to become more active and incorporate healthy choices into their daily lives. Today, Texas Round-Up is an independent not-for-profit organization working to improve the health of Texas through education and promotion of physical activity and healthy living.

The Hornets will take on the Gorman Panthers, District 15A's 3rd place team. The District got a bye in the first round, advancing to Area.

"Again, a good match-up," said Coach Cross, noting that Gorman has similar type play to Wolfe City. The Panther offense is based out of the wing. Defensively, Gorman is very aggressive. They rally to the ball and tackle well, according to Coach Cross.

"I love the excitement of the town's support and hope it carries on Friday night in Burleson," Cross added. "The support and encouragement has been rewarding. It's neat when a small town comes out with so much support."

Muenster will be the home team this Friday night. Action begins at 7:30 p.m.

Economy weighing in on calf and feeder cattle markets economist.

"We may see (cattle) prices better than 2008 simply because of where we are in supplies," said Dr. David Anderson, who spoke recently at the 37th Annual South Central

Texas Cow-Calf

Central Texas Cow-Calf Clinic.

A continued reduction in beef cattle numbers due to dry weather and higher input costs could cause prices to edge higher in 2009, according to Anderson.

For the short term, recent price swings in cattle futures and even auction markets across the state have been a direct result of a declining stock market. These factors have lowered prices paid in the calf and feeder markets, Anderson said.

"If we go into a deep reces-nave lowered prices paid in the calf and feeder markets, Anderson said.

"If we go into a deep recession, we could see some more pullback," he said. "People are eating out less and grocery store spending is going up. We're seeing that more people are doing more home cooking."

Stocker cattle operators are using caution as wheat pastures continue to emerge this fall.

"They're very cautious right now," Anderson said. "It's a wait-and-see approach with the current financial state of the economy."

The livestock industry is currently in a "cost-price squeeze," Anderson said. Production inputs, which include everything from feed to fuel, are higher than in years past and those costs are incurred throughout the beef-production chain.

"Even though corn (futures) have moved under $4 a bushel, and we're seeing some retrenchment in feed costs, these are still very a bushel, and we're seeing some retrenchment in feed costs, these are still very high feed costs," Anderson said. "And we can't rule out the speculative fund activity which has affected commodity prices. That's having an effect on the cattle market."

Anderson said there's a current tug-of-war going on in the calf market. Tighter supplies are keeping prices higher for calves, but there's also the high cost of feed.

"(With) the state of the economy, calf prices in the spring may be below what we saw this year," he said. "We still had fairly high prices during the first part of this year. However, I think we will see higher calf prices during the second quarter of next year. What we may see at the end of 2009 may be higher than now due to tighter calf supplies."

Right now, there's incentive to market heavier calves to help feeder operators offset high feed costs.

"If you have grass and a way to hang onto to those calves, there's an opportunity there to make more money by holding onto them into next year," he said. For the feeder cattle market, Anderson said he also expects to see prices better than 2008 due to reduced supplies.

"And there's still good demand for beef," he said, "If prices stay in the 90s (per hundred weight), that's still better than where we were in the first quarter of 2008."

Spring 2009 predictions, according to Anderson, could result in 500-600-pound steers averaging $1.05 a pound for No. 1 steers.

Due to declines in wheat prices, Anderson said, there may be more incentive to have stocker cattle graze those pastures and cash in on the weight gain. Weather will play a big factor in that determining that outcome, he said.

transition is completed and the U.S. economy has a chance to build some momentum after the multi-bilion dollar rescue package, the beef markets could react positively in 2009.

the beef markets could react positively in 2009.

Continued year-over-year increases in cow slaughter will restrain imports, but the stronger dollar will mitigate that effect. Increased cow slaughter can't go on forever before higher prices spur herd retention and increase imports to make up the difference, according to Anderson. If the weakening economy moves consumers to eat more ground beef instead of other cuts, then imports may increase also.

If a combination of herd retention and increases in cow slaughter continue, it's likely strong exports will occur in 2009 and result in higher beef prices.

Tree stress
When residents call the Extension Office to have a tree analyzed, they want the problem identified and a solution recommended. It is seldom that easy. Generally speaking, trees are reasonably hardy and a single irritant will rarely harm them. However, the span of several years can cause problems to accumulate.

There are three interest.

years can cause problems to accumulate.

There are three interacting factors that cause trees to show signs of disease and/or decline: (1) the genetics of the tree, (2) the environment, and (3) the presence of a pathogen. Genetics are easy to understand. Environmental factors include drought, flood, insects, hail, high wind, etc. Finally, pathogens are always present on trees. Years of life allow pathogens to accumulate the second of the second o

Economic meltdown hinders

U.S. beef, pork exports, but long-term position strong

Limited credit availability, volatile currency exchange rates, and global economic uncertainty will create an uphill climb for U.S. beef and pork exports in many foreign markets for the remainder of the year. This was common theme provided by directors of the U.S. Meat Export Federation's (USMEF) international offices at the USMEF Strategic Planning Conference in Tucson, Ariz.

Despite these obstacles, however, both products have performed extremely well in 2008, and are well-positioned for continued long-term strength.

"We're extremely pleased with the way beef and pork exports performed in the first eight months of the year," said USMEF President and CEO Philip Seng.

"But the financial crisis that has plagued us in the past six weeks has obviously had a major impact, and so our members are very inter-ing it impossible for the tree to avoid some amount of infection.

Keeping a tree healthy with proper amounts of water and fertilization are the best way to ensure its survival. If insects or a treatable pathogen such as oak wilt exist, a course of action is considered. If the problem is root compaction or an unseen cause, vertical mulching has been shown to be effective. Other treatments are oftentimes futile.

The location of a weakened tree can be critical. A tree that falls on a house or barn can have devastating effects. When a weakened tree compromises safety, removal is the only solution. Questions concerning the safety of a tree should be left to a certified arborist.

Japan is one of the few key trading partners whose economy has fared well in recent weeks, according to Greg Hanes, USMEF Japand director.

There will be some slow-down there, but not as much as we expect to see in some of the other countries," Hanes noted that seafood consumption is trending downward in Japan, and this is creating opportunities for red meat. The strength of the yen against the U.S. dollar and most other currencies also has enhanced Japan's appetite for imported products.

Through August, U.S. pork exports to Japan have increased 49% in value over the same period last year, while beef exports have increased 29% in value over the same period last year, while beef exports have improved.

According to Hanes, Japan's gate-price system for imported pork hinders in morts to some degree by moderating the current purchasing power of the yen. But that obstacle is not likely to go away until further progress a made in the Donand of the World Trade Organization negotiations.

Other markets have been much more heavily impacted by economic conditions and the surging value of the U.S. dollar. South Korea, for example, has had a sluggish economy, and the Korean won has performed poorly in 2008 versus the U.S. dollar. Still, Korea has increased its imports of U.S. port by 47% in volume and 28% in value over last year. U.S. beef also has re-entered Korea, finding some success among small retail outlets. TPWD to consider sweeping deer hunting regulation changes

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) has transitioned away from political boundaries for the purpose of monitoring white-tailed deer populations and toward biologically-based communities or Resource Management Units (RMUs). The department has identified 33 unique RMUs across the state having similar soils, vegetation types, and land use practices they believe will more accurately capture deer population dynamics. The intent is to develop deer season bag limit frameworks based on these units, although implementation will still track county boundaries to avoid confusion among hunters.

In a briefing of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission's Regulations Committee, TPWD unveiled an extensive suite of potential regulation changes in deer harvest throughout much of the state.

The department will be gathering public input on the possible proposals during the next couple of months and present to the commission in January a comprehensive set of proposals.

Those proposals will then go back out for official comment during a series of public hearings around the state next spring. A final decision will be made by the commission at its March 25-26, 2009, public meeting.

Expansion of antler restriction regulations
One key potential change involves further expansion of the department's successful antler restriction regulations.
One key potential change involves further expansion of the department's successful antler restriction regulations to 52 additional counties where biologists have identified a need to provide greater protection of younger buck deer. In these counties, data indicates more than 55% of the harvested bucks are two and-a-half years of age or younger, which creates an imbalance in the deer herd age structure.

According to Clayton Wolf, TPWD big game program director, based on data to date in the 61 counties where the rule is currently in effect, the antler restrictions have im-proved age structure while maintaining ample hunting opportunity.

Potentially affected counties include: Archer, Clay,
Cooke, Denton, Grayson, cies include: Archer, Clay, Cooke, Denton, Grayson, Harris, Jack, Kaufman, Montague, Tarrant, Wichita, and Wise.

Bag limit changes

Bag limit changes
The department is also looking at increasing the bag limit in most Cross Timbers and Prairies and eastern Rolling Plains counties from three deer (no more than two antlerless) or four deer (no more than two bucks and no more than two bucks and no more than two bucks and no more than two antlerless) to five deer (no more than 2 bucks). Some counties affected include: Archer, Clay, Jack, Throckmorton, and Wichita. Another possible change would increase the bag limit from three deer to five deer (no more than one buck) in selected counties in the western Rolling Plains. Although white-tailed deer densities are highly variable in this part of the state, areas containing suitable habitat have become saturated with deer and whitetails are expanding into marginal to poor habitat.

Another issue where deer surveys indicate a need for change involves additional antlerless deer harvest opportunities. Therefore, the department is looking to increase antlerless deer hunting or "doe days."

This proposal offers more hunting opportunity as well as making "doe days" more consistent within each resource management unit (a suite of counties with similar population and habitat characteristics). Data indicate that the deer populations can withstand the additional can withstand the auditional harvest pressure proposed. The department is also looking at expansion of the late antlerless and spike season into additional coun-season into additional counties.

Some counties affected include: Archer, Clay, Comanche, Cooke, Denton, Montague, Tarrant, Wichita, and Wise.

Biologists are also looking to implement a special muzzleloader season in additional counties, lengthen the existing muzzleloader season by five days to be equivalent in length with the special antilerless and spike buck seasons in other counties, and alter the current muzzleloader bag composition to allow the harvest of any buck (not just spike bucks) and antilerless deer without permits if the county has 'doe days' during the general season.

In response to a commission directive to seek additional opportunities for youth participation, the department is looking at extending the early youth only season to include the entire month of October and the late youth-only season by 12 days during January in selected counties to run concurrently with late antierless and spike seasons.

The intent of the proposal is to allow adults and children to hunt together during different special seasons.

The department is also considering a petition to implement a general open season (with antierless harvest by permit only) in Grayson County. TPWD staff has determined that there is no biological necessity for retaining the current rule, which restricts lawful methods to archery equipment and crossbows, but will be seeking input from county residents prior to making any official proposal to the commission in January.

The date and locations of scoping meetings in Grayson have not been finalized.
