

Sewer Job Gets Off To Good Start

Ditch For Outlet Line Completed, Almost 1,000 Feet of Pipe Laid

After a week of uninterrupted work by 43 WPA workers, officials in charge of Muenster's sewer installation report that the project is progressing very satisfactorily. According to E. K. Whitaker, resident engineer, the men are gradually learning the tricks of their respective jobs and will probably make better progress in the future.

Wednesday noon the digging crew was about a hundred yards past the railroad, having completed their work on more than 500 yards from the disposal tank to the railroad. At the same time another group was well started laying the 16 inch pipe. They will probably complete installing the 1,000 feet of that size before the end of this week.

Excavation for the disposal plant is also under way and the dirt is being used to build a levee to protect the plant in case of flood at the adjoining creek. Materials for that plant will be moved in when excavation is finished, Whitaker said. Other materials such as brick for manholes, which will be placed at about every 500 feet along the line, and sand are coming in steadily by the truck load. Bricks are stacked along the right-of-way at points where they will be used.

Pipe installation and covering will continue to follow directly after the digging. The line will be ready for connections in the lower part of town as soon as the disposal plant is ready.

In all the project will consist of 10,132 feet of pipe of which the lower 1,000 feet is 16 inch fed by 2,532 feet of 8 inch from 2 directions. Leading to the 8 inch lines are 6,600 feet of service line with a "joint near each home to permit connections.

By the time digging advances to the rock formation—only a few days hence—it is expected the city will have purchased a new air compressor to help with the blasting. A checkup revealed that leasing a machine for the duration of the job would cost almost as much as buying a new one. The council will probably buy the machine and sell it after the work is finished.

A thousand pounds of dynamite is on hand for blasting. It is stored in a dugout near the disposal plant site and detonation caps are stored in another dugout a few hundred feet away.

4 Escape As Speeding Car Leaves Curve

Four Gainesville youths had a narrow escape Monday night at 11 o'clock when the car in which they were riding failed to make the wide turning curve at the Bright Gable Inn a quarter mile west of town.

Joe Miller, driver of the machine did not regain consciousness until he reached a Gainesville hospital, where his injury was pronounced a brain concussion. He received the most serious injuries and was the only one of the four to remain at the hospital.

His companions, W. J. Smith, Houston Maupin, Jr., and Ross McKissack sustained painful cuts and bruises. Their car was badly wrecked.

The accident occurred as the car, making the curve at a high speed, failed to hold the road and the driver lost control on the loose gravel shoulder. Apparently it rolled over once and then skidded on the opposite side for a considerable distance. Those familiar with the road are agreed that the car must have been traveling at a terrific speed because the curve is long and well banked, technically safe for a speed of well over 60.

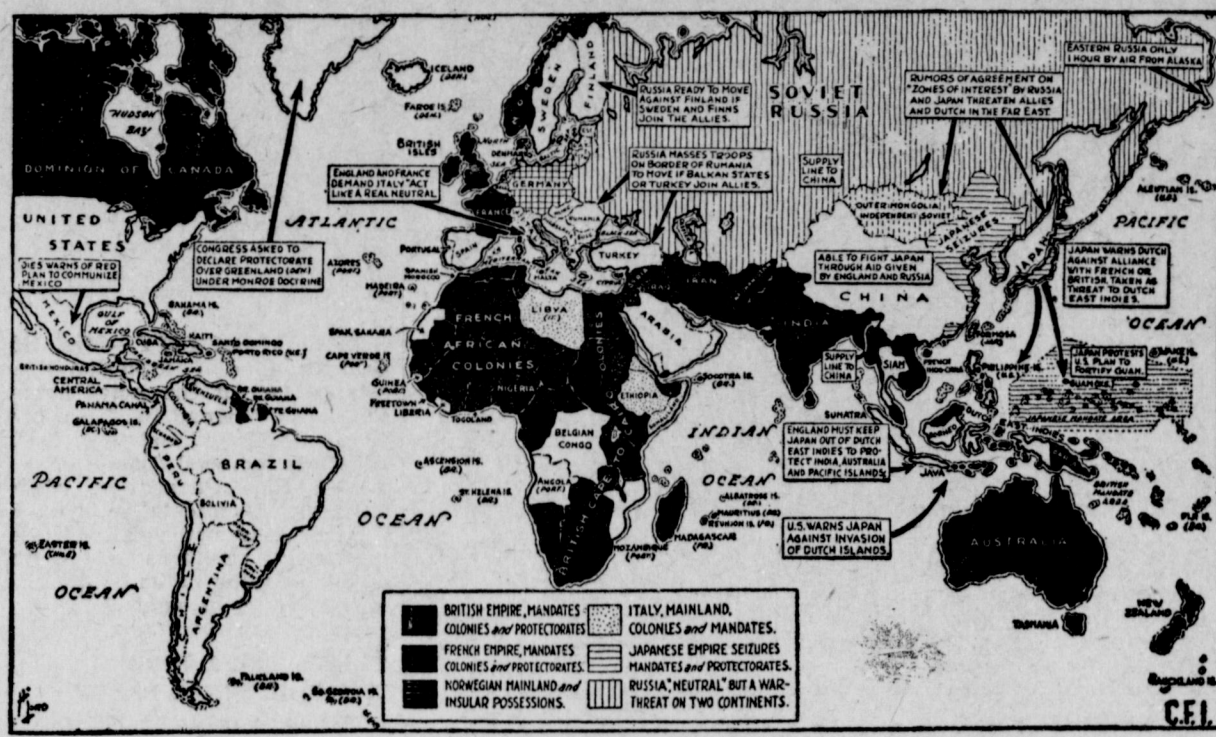

The young men were returning to Gainesville from Saint Jo at the time of the accident.

Knights Wait Too Long, Miss Bowling Alley Deal

Knights of Columbus were disappointed to learn last week that they will not have a bowling alley after all. About the time they completed arrangements for purchasing and installing the equipment they discovered that the owner had sold it to someone else. The knights had been rather slow in making up their minds.

Since the approved expenditure will not buy new equipment it will be necessary for the council to wait until another suitable used alley is available.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN EXTEND RANGE

Here is a self-explanatory map which shows you at a glance how the war situation shapes up as of April 20. No one knows where the flame may next flare up into a conflagration and your guess is as good as that of any of the so-called military experts. It seems to be generally agreed that upon the development of events in Norway depends the whole tide of war.

Bezner Asks Reelection As Commissioner

Joe Bezner has authorized the Muenster Enterprise to announce his candidacy for reelection to the office of commissioner of precinct No. 4 subject to the Democratic primary next July.

His statement to the voters of the precinct is as follows:

"During the time I have served as commissioner, it has been my pleasure to cooperate with the other members of the commissioners' court in the transaction of general county business. This is a most important part of the duties of a commissioner, sometimes overlooked by the general public estimating qualifications of candidates. I believe that my experience as a commissioner would be of great value to the county during another term in conducting its general county affairs.

"During the past two years I have traveled and otherwise constructed and improved more than 30 miles of roads in my precinct, including drainage structures and bridges, through W.P.A. projects. Large sums have in this way been obtained from the Federal government to supplement county funds. All of the common labor is furnished by the Federal government from the W.P.A. rolls including trucks hired by it, as well as some of the materials used. The Federal government estimates that it spends for labor and other items of cost an average of about $1,500.00 per mile in road construction such as that above mentioned, so that it will be seen that the county has benefited to a large extent thru obtaining W.P.A. road projects for the doing of much of its road work.

"Some eight or ten miles of roads have also been graveled by the use of county prisoners.

"In 1939, on motion of the undersigned, the commissioners' court agreed to distribute road and bridge tax moneys in accordance with tax valuations of the respective precincts outside of Gainesville. By reason of larger tax values in precinct No. 4, this resulted in that precinct receiving about 29% of the total of road and bridge tax moneys in 1939 instead of 25% received in previous years. The percentage of road and bridge funds from taxes to be distributed to precinct 4 in 1940 will be about 31 1/2% instead of 25% received by that precinct during the years preceding 1939. As time goes on, and valuations of precinct No. 4 are maintained, it is believed additional funds for that precinct will amount to considerable, although the additional amount isn't so large in any one year.

"The support and influence of all citizens in my precinct will be greatly appreciated, and if I am elected for another term it will be my purpose to benefit by my experience in order to be of maximum value to my precinct and county in the office of county commissioner.

JOB BEZNER.

M. J. ENDRES IMPROVING

Reports on the progress of M. J. Endres are encouraging this week. His left leg is healing satisfactorily after an amputation a few inches below the knee on April 14. At the same time he is gradually regaining his strength and has hopes of making the rounds in a wheel chair within a few more weeks. He has little difficulty now in shifting from his bed to an adjoining chair or back to the bed.

WHERE THIRTY-THREE DIED IN TRAIN WRECK

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—A general view from an elevation of the scene of the wreck of the Lake Shore Limited, crack New York-Chicago express of the New York Central railroad, where 33 persons were killed in one of the worst rail tragedies near Little Falls Friday night. Derailed while speeding around a curve, the powerful locomotive crashed into a rock wall and exploded. Dead and injured were trapped in the telescoped cars and were released with acetylene torches. An estimated fifty persons were seriously hurt; a score of others suffered minor injuries.

Weddings In December, January Announced By Local Teachers

Virgil Welch Marries Louise Lamb of Dexter

The many friends of Virgil Lee Welch, principal of the local public school, will be interested in hearing of his marriage to Miss Louise Lamb of Dexter.

The marriage, an event of January 27th, was performed in Marietta, Okla., and was announced only last week.

Mrs. Welch is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Lamb of Dexter. She graduated from Gainesville Junior College in 1938 and attended NTSTC during the summer sessions. She was employed this season as a teacher in the Sandy Springs school in Grayson county.

Mr. Welch is a son of Mrs. W. L. Welch of Era.

Mary Barker is Bride Of L. P. Horton of Freer

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Barker of Bonham announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary, to L. P. Horton of Freer. The ceremony was performed December 26, 1939, at Heberville, Texas.

Mrs. Horton has spent most of her life here and has many friends in this vicinity. Following her graduation from the local public school, she attended Gainesville Junior College and NTSTC at Denton. She has taught in the local public school for the past four years.

Mr. Horton is a native of Hillsboro, and is engaged with Humble Oil and Refining Co. at Freer, where the couple will make their home after the close of school next month.

17 BOYS ENROLL AS MUENSTER 4-H CLUB UNIT IS ORGANIZED

4-H boys' club work was reborn at Muenster last week after more than ten years of inactivity, when County Agent Albert Briant met at the public school with seventeen young men. Officers, elected at that time are Giles Lehnertz, president and Vincent Becker, secretary. Virgil Lee Welch, school principal was named teacher in charge. The group selected Alphonse Hoelzig as adult sponsor on condition he would be willing to accept the position. He was not present at the meeting.

Club activity will be of the nature usually sponsored by 4-H. Members will keep records on raising chickens, hogs, cattle, grain or any other farm project, and will discuss their problems at the regular meetings the first Tuesday of each month, 3:30 p. m., at the public school. Before closing the meeting Mr. Briant announced that other boys wishing to take up 4-H work will be enrolled at the next meeting, May 7. He urged the group to see their friends and bring all who are interested.

Oil Field Notes

Kingery and Frost drilling their Number 7 well at Alice Johnson's found small production from a 1200 foot sand and continued drilling in search of a better formation. At the same time their No. 8 Johnson, one location west, is nearing the 1200 foot level.

Texas Company's No. 6 Mary Kessler has been completed for 30 barrels from sand at 887 to 895. Offsetting the Kessler production Harvey Hudspeth and Wham are preparing to drill at Frank Trubench's.

Kingery, drilling for Humble on the Hellman land north of Voth's was drilling near 1,000 feet early this week.

Numbers 3 and 4 for Shaw and Russell Oil Company at TCU-Stark are both completed as good pumps from the regular 1100 foot sand and drilling on No. 5, the next location north, is about 700.

More School Mergers Are Anticipated

Unofficial, though reliable, reports indicate that the tendency toward consolidation of school districts is gaining momentum in the western part of this county. In the Hays and Van Slyke districts discussion seems to be gradually working up to the point of petition and referendum. Here at Muenster men are beginning to hope that the Linn and Bailey districts are still as interested in consolidation as they were a few years ago when local people turned them a deaf ear.

The situations at Linn and Bailey are quite similar to those which led up to the consolidation of Coppers and Muenster several weeks ago. A large percentage of pupils in both of those districts now attend the Muenster parochial school, hence cannot benefit from their own per capita allotment and local tax levy. By consolidating they can wipe out present taxes and at the same time transfer the per capita allotment to Muenster.

As regards disposition of additional funds at Muenster there are two alternatives—improve the local public school or establish a bus system available to both parochial and public school children—either of which would constitute a worthwhile improvement for the districts concerned. Those ideas, merely mentioned some weeks ago, are now breaking into open discussion and may lead to another referendum in the near future.

Reports on the Hays-Van Slyke move toward consolidation are somewhat disappointing to Muenster people. The hope was that Hays when it would consolidate would reach toward Muenster, not away from Muenster.

Like other neighboring districts, Hays has a considerable number of scholastics in the local parochial school. And it has a fairly heavy local tax. People here were looking forward to the day when they could arrange a mutually helpful consolidation as they did with Coppers.

Predictions on the street here are that the vote at Hays will be a close one. In view of the tax and the parochial school situation many persons will oppose the Van Slyke merger in the hope of arranging a connection with Muenster at a later date.

FIRST SCHOOLS IN COUNTY ARE CLOSED

Vacation time has already started for students of two rural schools in Cooke county. The Loving and Concord schools closed their terms last Friday, April 19. At least five more schools will conclude their terms next Friday, April 26. They are Oak Valley, Linn, Spring Hill, Van Slyke and Center.

Confident To Start Building This Year

Expect to Raise Most of Fund by Subscription And Borrow Remainder From Local Investors

"Will we begin the new church this year?" That question, a poser that has held the limelight of community interest for several months, will be answered within a few weeks. Such is the consensus of opinion since last Sunday when the newly elected finance committee met with trustees of the parish.

By the outcome of a parish poll, as revealed by tabulations last Thursday night, the finance committee consists of H. P. Hennigan, Barney Voth, Albert Henschel, Wm. Becker and C. J. Fette. Each of them will conduct a drive for funds in his own area.

Members of the parish trustees with whom they met are Rev. Frowin Koerdt, Felix Becker, J. M. Weinzapfel, J. B. Klement, G. H. Hellman and John Bayer.

The men are confident they have devised a system of sound financing that will prove satisfactory even though it does not meet church regulations of "90 per cent or more in cash and negotiable paper." They will collect as much as possible in cash and notes and also secure a list of persons willing to lend money to the parish. The interest rate suggested is four and a half per cent.

The ninety per cent clause was interpreted by the assemblage to mean that no more than ten percent may be raised through outside financing sources, the reason being that the church is unwilling to jeopardize the security of any of its holdings.

But the proposed system is quite different in that local persons, not a financing company, would provide the money, and their investment would be secured not by collateral but by their confidence in the parish. It is a situation in which the parish would face no risk. Theoretically individuals would accept all the risk, but in view of the community's previous splendid record of paying off, such an investment is regarded as considerably safer than normal commercial investments. According to opinions making the rounds "via grapevine," Muenster has plenty available capital to finance the new building. The only problem is to secure enough by way of donation so that the borrowed funds will be relatively small. Commitment are not willing to pay interest on a large sum.

To make payments more convenient the parish will also offer an installment plan for people who prefer to fulfill their pledges in that manner. Probably payments will be expected quarterly over a period of about five years.

COUNTY FARMERS GET ALMOST $50,000 FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Representing an increase of more than 50% over any previous year, farmers of Cooke County earned nearly fifty thousand dollars in soil improvement under the 1939 farm program. Turning under oats, barley, sudan, and cane as green manure crops contributed the largest single practice with 18,404 units earned, representing $27,606.00. Terracing constituted the second largest item with 5271 units or $7,906.00. Other practices carried out with dollars earned follow:

- Straw mulch, $6.00; Contour ridging, $678.00; Tank, dam, and reservoir construction, $4,024.00; Natural reseeding in pasture, $16.50; Seeding summer legumes, $9.00; Seeding winter legumes, $1,782.00; Seeding alfalfa, $1,968.00; Seeding permanent pasture mixtures, $231.00; Sodding cropland for pasture, $294.00; Planting Kudzu crowns, $4.50; Interplanting summer legumes, $2,975.00; Crop cropping, $285.00; Contour farming, $672.00; Contour listing, $38.00; Contour seeding, $108.00.

One or more of the above practices were carried out on 2,016 of the county's 2,800 farms.

PAROCHIAL WINS

The parochial high ball club added another victory to its season's record last week when it met the Saint Jo high school on the latter's ground. After seven innings of good playing on both sides Muenster led by a count of 6 to 4.

LAST WEEK

Aunt Olympia bought an automobile house-trailer for her "family" to use on the Senator's campaign trips. Then she decides to hire a publicity agent for the Senator, securing the services of Dave Cooper, and his assistant, young Cecil Dood.

CHAPTER IX

"Yes, it's pathetic," assented Aunt Olympia. "Cecce is all right. The trouble is that he's always been able to do what he wanted to instead of what he had to. He has enough money to live on, so he's never had to file his nose on the grindstone. It takes grindstone to make a newspaper man."

"He's really what you would call a sweet child," Helen wrote to Brick Landis. "He seems so young and so unspoiled, and yet Aunt Olympia says he's had his own way all his life and had everything he has ever wanted. He is taking this job with such deadly seriousness that she is beginning to fear he will neither amuse us nor drive Len Hardesty mad, which was her main object. He began bringing up huge volumes on politics to get Aunt Olympia's opinion on them, but she stopped that. She said he could get his opinions from her and Dave Cooper. He has bought a new, perfectly gorgeous, simply huge, brief case and a new portable typewriter. And whenever he is not sitting raptly in the Senate gallery gazing down at his candidate and taking notes of every breath he draws, he is at the Press Club trying to make 'contacts.' I just wonder, Brick, if you take politics seriously enough. You didn't pay thirty dollars for a brief case and buy a new typewriter."

Aunt Olympia went with Helen and Adele one afternoon to a large cocktail party—the invitations had said "tea." It was at the home of an outstanding Republican senator; they remembered that later, with some bitterness. Adele, left alone for a few minutes, was approached by a man, comparatively young quite handsome, whom Adele instinctively labeled a "foreigner of some sort."

"I met you just after you came in, Miss Rutherford," he said pleasantly. "I am Gabriel d'Allotti. I couldn't possibly expect you to remember me in that crowd and that confusion, but by the same token, you could not possibly expect me not to remember you in any crowd or any confusion. You are unforgettable."

Adele smiled pleasantly. But she remembered Len Hardesty's warning, "Beware of embassies and attaches!"

"Are you with one of the embassies?" she asked.

"Alas, no! I have no such importance. I am just a young man trying to get along. But I know the embassy crowd and have friends among them, so I get around. May I bring you a drink?"

"Not now, thanks."

"To tell the truth, I am one of about a million foreigners trying to get the true American picture. I do free-lance correspondence for a few foreign papers and magazines, and naturally I am collecting my impressions for a book on America."

"If you get the American picture, you see better than I do," she admitted. "It looks a hodgepodge to me. Like modern painting. You can't tell whether that pink splash is a lady's arm or a platter of fried liver with onions! And then it turns out to be a bunch of grapes."

He laughed appreciatively. "I find the same difficulty, both with art and with America. But I am young and brave. I shall die struggling. Do you like Washington?"

"Oh, very much."

"Of course you get the right slant on it," he conceded. "It helps a good deal to be on the inside looking out and around, instead of, as I am, on the outside, waiting my turn at the knothole."

"Oh, but that's my trouble! I'm on the outside, too."

"You can't be far outside in the home of Senator Slopschire. He knows his America. I have often wondered about your senators. Do they act at home as they do on the floor?"

Um, something the same. Uncle Lancy wipes his glasses; and blushes through his thinning hair when he is flattered.

"But what does he talk about? Does he merely say, as I would, how very beautiful you are? Does he complain about the eggs being overdone? Does he read his speeches to you?"

Adele laughed. "He reads them to Helen, but she asked for it," she admitted. "Helen is trying to learn politics from the ground up. She is my older sister."

"Dear me, is she going to run for something?"

"Maybe. Anyhow, she made up her mind to learn it. She goes to committees and reads the Congressional Record and at night they go to the library and argue for hours—over how many air defense guns are required here and there, and whether peace is preserved by more armaments or by disarming, and which end of a boat is the proper place to put guns and how many times the new destroyers can be torpedoed before they blow up—all that sort of thing."

"Dear me! It sounds quite horrifying. Doesn't he expound it all to you, too?"

"Oh, no, I don't listen. Limpy and I don't care for that sort of thing. We just pick out the best nuts and think of other things."

"Simply profound of you, I should say. More important things! Like, where's your yellow basket?"

"Oh, nothing half as profound as that. If we lost our yellow basket, Uncle Lancy would demand a congressional investigation and get it back for us."

Gabriel d'Allotti went away presently. He had not seen Helen before. Naturally, seeing Adele, one looked no further. He did not make the mistake of asking Adele to point out her sister. He was not so clumsy as that. He asked someone else, a stranger, where she was—Senator Slopschire's niece. The stranger, being a man, pointed to Adele.

"No, I mean the other one; the studious one; her sister."

"Oh, yes, there is another one. . . Let's see. . . Oh, there she is; over by that window. The tall girl in the black hat and veil."

Gabriel d'Allotti introduced himself to Helen. "I've been having a delightful chat with your very lovely sister," he said with engaging candor. "She tells me that you and I have a great deal in common; that we are a pair of young innocents in the primary department of the big college of politics."

"Oh, I'm not up to the primary department yet," said Helen. "I'm still in the cradle. But I am trying so hard to understand things—and making very little headway."

"We must collaborate," he said. "We are having the same trouble. We have learned the 'c' and the 'a' and the 't'; now we must digest our wisdom and combine it into 'cat.' Perhaps two digestions, like heads, are better than one."

"It sounds promising," she said. "I confess that half the time I just listen and frown and don't even try to digest it. I keep hoping one acquires it gradually, like suntan, from persistent application. Perhaps between us we could get the 'c' and the 'a' and the 't' into a little kitten, at least, if not into a full-grown cat to begin with."

"It's a bargain," he said heartily, shaking hands with her. "I shall go at once and make diplomatic overtures to your aunt."

Inside of five minutes he had Aunt Olympia's attention.

"Mrs. Slopschire," he said ingratiatingly, "it is only fair to inform you, in strictest confidence, that I have been completely enchanted with your very lovely niece. How does one go about getting permission to call?"

"One comes to tea."

"That? Why, that's Gabriel d'Allotti! You must know him. He goes everywhere."

"Oh, yes, I know him all right. But I've had so much trouble with system. He disagrees with me on nearly everything. He has the foreign idea of maintaining peace—that is, by bigger and better armaments. You'd almost think he was going to take out naturalization papers, he gets so wrought-up over America's lack of preparedness."

"To tell the truth he knows a lot more than I do about the American system, though he doesn't approve of most of it. He comes to the house quite often and once he went with me to one of Uncle Lancy's committees, and we did agree on one thing; that it is mighty hard for a dozen men sitting around a table to agree on a policy to save the nation; especially when the plan goes from them to the Senate, then to the House, back to the Senate, and back to conference again; and when they do finally agree on something, there's still the White House to reckon with."

"You needn't worry, darling. He hasn't the suggestion of a crush on me. You can't tell women about that. Sometimes we think they have when they haven't, but we never think they haven't when they have. We're not that dumb. But we are both interested in the same things and it really is more exciting to argue with him than with Uncle Lancy. Uncle Lancy's always afraid of hurting my feelings, and Mr. d'Allotti isn't. But he isn't the type. I like 'em red headed and a bit roughed up."

"Oh, Brick, the session is nearly over and nothing has happened! Wouldn't you think one really big thing—an important thing—might happen while I am here, so I could get a glimpse beneath the surface?"

Early in May, Aunt Olympia decided it was time for the assistant director of publicity, Cecil Dood, to begin sending stories to the home papers. Olympia, who was an indefatigable maker of notes, had a list of "points" ready to start the campaign on her own and the girls' behalf; the Senator, except for incidental remarks in passing, was to be left to Dave Cooper. So she sent for Cecil and, at their laughing insistence on its educational value, permitted the girls to listen in.

"Now, you see, Cecce," began Olympia, with great gusto, "politics is an elaborate and intricate system that Alencon that I try not to pick up any foreign names. . . Gabriel d'Allotti. . . Yes, I know him."

"He is very interesting," Helen wrote to Brick Landis a couple of weeks later. "And isn't it strange that he hasn't fallen in love with Adele? Well, he certainly has enlivened my study of the American of build-up. That's all. Just build-up."

Cecil took his limpleather loose-leaf notebook from his monogrammed thirty-dollar brief case and, with a U. S. Senate pencil the Senator had given him made a note of "build-up."

"A lot of it has to be done in advance because it must be gradual. An untimely climax gums up the works. It has to be a gradual ascent to the wind-up. Dave, as you know, is already at work building up the Senator's record and so forth but we women of the Senator's household must have our domestic build-up. The woman-vote, you know. Though a lot of males fall pretty hard for that domestic angle, too."

Cecil, raptly attentive, made a note of "domestic angle."

"Now, in the first place, you must announce that certain salient facts were gleaned from Mrs. Slopschire in an interview. . . This is an interview. . . I'm going to answer the questions you would ask me if you had enough experience. Now, in answer to what should be your first question, I reply, with deep feeling, no, we haven't as yet given a moment's thought to the coming campaign. That is left to the future. We—the Senator and I—are so happy in having these dear children with us, our home life is so full, so serene—Never say 'exciting' Cecce, for your life! Say 'satisfying.' Our home life is so serene, so satisfying—you might say serenely satisfying, if you like—that so far we have been entirely wrapped up in quiet family interests."

The girls gasped. Cecil made fast notes with the Senate pencil.

A YEAR OF GOOD SERVICE

Thursday of this week marks the first anniversary of rural electrical service in this community. As this is being written, a few days before the birthday, the organization can boast that it is not responsible for a single casualty—a fine record for its 620 consumers, very few of whom were previously familiar with high voltage current.

There is also another record to which the Cooke County Electric Cooperative Association can point with pride. It is a self-supporting institution. It is paying all operating expenses and also the interest on its investment. After one year it has reached the goal that, according to official regulations, should be reached in two and a half years. For the present it is not paying off any of its principal but expects to start doing so before the allotted time.

Every member of the cooperative, and especially those in charge of the company's affairs, can well be proud of this past year's record. Installing the community's greatest addition to home comfort on a basis of safety and financial soundness is a notable achievement.

Muenster's rural electrification project is a splendid example for the consideration of those who criticize the Rural Electrification Administration. Here is one of the alphabetical agencies that definitely does not have a place on the Santa Claus list. If all our government's expenditures were as well secured as those which flow through REA channels we would not be so gravely concerned over the final reckoning. In this case people aren't getting something for nothing—which is wrong in anybody's economic creed—but are taking advantage of a long term loan at a low interest rate—which is good business in any economic creed.

ACROSS THE BORDER

A few recent events are causing Americans to send anxious glances across the border, down Mexico way. For one thing officials down there are needlessly sassy about expropriation. For another they seem to be flirting too much with the possibility of becoming chore boys for Stalin and Hitler.

Naturally Americans are resentful of the Mexican attitude toward confiscating private property. Not that Mexico hasn't a right to develop its own resources rather than permit foreign capitalists to do it, but that it should openly seize foreign investment without any effort at compensation. Mexico was unjust in that act and it is unfair in its present reluctance to arrange a reasonable settlement.

That situation is a strain on international friendship, but it is much less serious than the threat, as charged by the Dies Committee, that a puppet government with Hitler and Stalin pulling the strings will be set up in Mexico. Foreignisms are too much of a nuisance now. Once they get a foothold across the Rio Grande there is no telling how bothersome they may become.

How would such a development harmonize with present day interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine? Would the establishment of a puppet rule constitute "establishment of European rule on American soil"? Should that be the official American decision, the only solution left is to send an expeditionary force down there to give Mexico back to the Mexicans. That course, as we all remember, was taken in behalf of Central American countries.

Americans can well be proud of their country's reputation to date. As much as any European country we have had provocation to absorb some of the small neighboring republics, we have even endured some indignities, but we carry on with a conscientious regard for others' independence. Though we have been accused of meddling in a few cases history will probably decide that, in the end, Central American countries were improved by our meddling.

It may develop — though we hope it won't—that American soldiers will have to perform a similar job in Mexico.

FORD VS LABOR UNION

There is a sour note in the accusation directed at the Dallas Ford branch by an examiner of the Labor Board. He says the company has been "gathering together the most brutal, vicious and conscienceless thugs in its employ" to block unionization of Ford workers under the Wagner act.

No doubt it is true that there has been some strong-arm activity at the plant. Accusations made after an official investigation could hardly be altogether groundless. The point is that labor unions, in view of their sorry reputation for rough stuff, should "go tattling" on a company that opposes them with their own tactics. It is also significant that the labor board should interfere in behalf of the union.

It is assumed the Labor Board exists solely for the purpose of protecting the rights of laborers, and, naturally, should be sympathetic toward any company that gives its workers a square deal. There doesn't seem to be room for complaint against any organization that meets union "muscling in" with company "muscling out." Fight fire with fire is a slogan of ancient acceptance.

The unions have accomplished much to improve the working man's condition. Hundreds of cases are known in which they forced unscrupulous employers to give men a decent wage. But along with all that is a sorry record of chiseling into many a place where their influence was unnecessary and unwelcome. Their conflict with Ford is a part of that record.

For twenty years Ford has been several jumps ahead of the unions in employer-employee relations. His voluntary increase of wages, decrease of hours, and improvement of working conditions have made his jobs consistently better than union-controlled jobs. His jobs are still better. Since that is the case, what right does the union have to muscle in? What right does the labor board have to support the union side of this squabble?

This case is conspicuous because Ford is one of the nation's greatest employers. But hundreds of other organizations are also following Ford's system. They pay well, equal to or above the union scale, and they maintain that unions have no right to dictate to them. Furthermore, they have the support of their workers.

Reasonable men, if they are treated fairly, will have no part in a frame-up against their employer. It is precisely at that point that many an attempt at unionizing went on the rocks.

Thus far we have conceded that Ford has resorted to the very justifiable method of hiring men to guard against union muscling in. Perhaps he has not even found that necessary. Perhaps his men are loyal enough and alert enough to give their protection of their own free will. And they must have sense enough to know that paying fees in order to get unnecessary and unwelcome union meddling is very poor economy.

What Others Say

THE WORKING MAN PAYS

Who bears the heaviest burden when an unjustified strike is called? That is easy to answer: the working man.

The San Francisco Employers' Council recently published a survey of what happened in a number of recent strikes. In one case, 135 employees lost 81 days' wages—and the strike was finally called off. In another, 153 employees lost 67 days' wages—and the strike was called off. In another, 250 employees lost 107 days' wages—and the strike was called off.

So it goes, down a long list. And in the case of really big strikes, such as that against Chrysler, the wage loss to workers runs far into the millions.

Labor organization is desirable. A well organized and fairly operated union is a great asset to the laboring man. But the unjustified strike is usually the result of unprincipled, self-seeking labor leadership. Such labor leaders don't have to worry—their salaries go on as usual. It's the working man who pays and pays and pays.—Exchange.

HE DIDN'T WANT PRAISE

Among the green hills of Vermont, in the farmhouse, where, by the light of an oil lamp, Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office which made him the 30th President of the United States, there hangs a framed letter. The letter bears the signature of Calvin Coolidge, Jr., son of the President, who died while his father was in the White House. Here is an inspiring letter written by a boy still in his teens which should be read by all boys everywhere:

Someone had written to Calvin Jr., calling him the "first boy of the land." In his answer, the son of the President in substance said: "I have earned no right to be called 'the first boy of the land.' I deserve and want no recognition until I have earned it by my own actions."

One takes off his hat to any boy who refuses to bask in the reflected glory of a father's richness or greatness—who jumps into the arena of life and says, "I'll stand on my own feet. I'll fight my own fight. I want no credit for the deeds of other men—judge me by my own." America needs more boys like that!—The Silver Lining.

Confetti

By CON FETTE

You can't teach an old horse new tricks. And the city council is finding out that it is almost as hard to teach an old driver new traffic rules. Last week's resolution to prevent turning in the middle of the block or crossing over to park on the left side has not been so well observed.

Habit has more to do with a man's driving methods than new rules. By the dozens they are crossing over as usual. Even the strong arm of the law forgot himself.

It would be better, of course, if everyone would observe a standardized system of driving and parking. The possibility of accidents could be greatly reduced thereby. Common sense regulation along with reasonable care can reduce accidents to practically nothing.

In that last respect the normal driver of Muenster has a fair rating. He makes a habit of looking both ways before he comes into the main drag traffic lane and he is generally prepared for anything the car ahead decides to do. Sometimes it results in awkward situations but seldom in smashes.

Little by little we will come to observe regulations more closely. When that time comes, let us hope we will not relax the vigilance that grew out of our helter-skelter system. Carefulness is indispensable to safety even when better regulations are in force. In fact, we would prefer our old system of careful driving in confusion to plain mechanical driving in better regulated traffic.

Consideration for the other fellow is one of the best rules of driving safety, but there are times when being considerate is more confusing than helpful. Only a few days ago this writer encountered two such cases in quick succession. The driver ahead gave the signal for a left turn and at the same time pulled over to the right side of the street and slowed down.

Obviously there is a conflict in signals there. Checking speed at the right side of the street is an invitation to pass, whereas the left signal is definitely a warning to stay back. What's the man behind supposed to do? In each of those cases both cars came almost to a stop before the driver behind definitely understood he could pass without danger of hitting the other machine.

The drivers ahead meant well, of course, and each episode came out all right. But how much better it would have been if they had used reason along with their courtesy! How much less confusing to everybody if they had held the center or left side of the road while giving the left turn signal! Such a double sign would have been unmistakable. The position of the car would not permit anyone to attempt passing, and the left signal would explain why.

Safety engineers and experienced drivers have a simple rule: "When preparing to turn do not leave room for another car to cross your path." If you are turning to the right get over to the right side of the road, don't give anyone a chance to get on your right side. When turning left get as far left as possible, don't give anyone a chance to get on your left side. In traffic that means hug the center. On the open road—when nothing is coming from the opposite direction—it may sometimes mean hogging the center or even taking the left side of the road. It's a good point to remember, "Don't give anyone a chance to cross your path." Proper signals and correct maneuvers can prevent both confusion and accidents.

Says Mayor LaGuardia: "The next president, if he wants to solve the problems that face the United States, must be willing to get his reward in heaven and his credit in history books."

It is pathetically true that every worth while reform is subjected to bitter criticism. Should this nation make a conscientious effort to eliminate unnecessary expenditures there would be a deluge of complaint from grafters and gamblers who now ride the gravy train. foreignisms is widely condemned as restriction on freedom. Try to rid this country of anything objectionable and there will be a cry from someone.

People think first of themselves or their small immediate group. If a certain policy serves their purpose they like it regardless of what it does to the rest of the country. If it pinches them a little harder or takes away something to which they were not entitled they regard it as wrong even though the rest of the country is better for it.

Most of us hope that the next man in the White House will be another Washington or Lincoln. We like their kind of principled, solidly built up from common sense fundamentals, and their kind of courage to carry through a good job in spite of whining or the next election.

Both of these men, we recall, were branded as high handed tyrants. Newspapers and commentators of their day called them the vilest names that public decency would permit. But history has shown their administrations to be a blessing for national welfare. Our next president, if he will accomplish much that is worthy of not, will have to endure the same kind of abuse.

Something new for you to expect on the market one of these days is a super silent alarm wrist watch. Instead of ringing, a little knocker gently but insistently taps you on the wrist, through a hole in the back of the case.

Your Health

BY GEO. W. COX, M. D.
Texas State Health Officer

"During 1939 over eight thousand cases of measles were reported to the State Department of Health. This large number is not unusual, since the disease characteristically assumes a cyclic nature with alternate periods of high and low incidence. 1937 represented a year of expected large number of cases, with a total of 14,768, while 1938 dropped to 5,710 cases. Lowest incidence of the past half decade was in 1935 with 4,073 cases of measles reported," states Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer.

Of considerable importance, however, is the fact that parents of small children frequently are entirely indifferent to this disease. Assuming a more or less fatalistic attitude, many of them believe that the sooner the disease is contracted by their young children the quicker the trouble will be over. This viewpoint undoubtedly is the result of a false sense of security regarding measles. That many cases of measles are mild in comparison with those of the other communicable diseases is true. It is a fact, also, that many victims recover without grave consequences. Nevertheless, there is another side to the story that deserves consideration.

In children under five years of age measles is a serious disease. The illness is more severe, the complications are more numerous, and death occurs much more frequently than in those who are attacked at an older age. Though only a fraction of the total measles cases occur in the age group under five years, the greatest majority of deaths result from these comparatively few cases. Moreover, undernourished children and those already suffering from other diseases, regardless of age, are more severely affected than are normal children.

It should be apparent, therefore, that every care should be taken to protect young children from exposure until they have passed that period of life in which the disease takes its greatest toll.

If efforts to protect fail, it follows naturally that nursing care and medical advice should be applied promptly, especially whenever a child under five years of age contracts the disease.

It is important that a sufficient period of isolation, particularly among school children, should be had to prevent needless transmission of the disease. An isolation period of two weeks is usually sufficient.

PROPER CANNING OF FOOD IS SUBJECT OF CLUB MEET

LINN.—The proper canning and preservation of food" was the topic of discussion for the Linn home demonstration club when it met in regular session Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ben Sicking.

Appearing on the program were Mrs. Darrell McCool, whose subject was, "Is it safe to leave food in an open tin can?" Next, Mrs. Selby Fielder told member why some cans are enamel-lined for certain foods and others are not, after which Mrs. Sam McCool read a paper on "Does canning destroy vitamin content?" Mrs. Jack Biffle gave an interesting talk on the pressure cooker canning and the water bath method of canning and Mrs. Ben Sicking told about the proper storage of canned goods.

During the business session, preceding the program, Mrs. Ben Sicking read a poem entitled, "Today," and members answered the roll call by telling which foods they can by the water bath method. Mrs. Darrell McCool gave an excellent report on the last council meeting held in Gainesville when mattress making was demonstrated.

Members were advised that a wild flower show for all county clubs will be held in the home demonstration building at the Fair Park in Gainesville.

should have cost $6,000. In another community a mayor sold a $50 radio set to a contractor for $500 the day before paving contracts were let. This sort of shenanigans explains why many American communities don't get their money's worth for the $4,500,000,000 they spent last year for government, say the National Consumers Tax Commission, whose study groups in 5,000 communities are seeking lower taxes through more efficient and economical local government. Those cases were among the more glaring of preliminary samples turned up by NCTC women in surveying for "economy begins at home" drives.

CAMPAIGN TO SECURE NEW SOIL DISTRICT MAY ORIGINATE HERE

A drive to spread information about the proposed soil conservation district for Cooke, Grayson and Montague counties will probably originate here on May 2, according to present plans of Cliff McMahon, secretary of the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce, and J. B. Klement and J. M. Weinzapfel, local members of the county soil conservation committee.

Persons especially invited for the event will be county agricultural agents, newspaper editors, members of county conservation committees and other influential men who can be active in explaining the purpose and methods of setting up a conservation district.

Experience throughout the state has shown that most opposition to soil conservation projects usually comes from areas that know least about the work, Weinzapfel said. That is the reason Cooke county conservation leaders propose to get information to persons who can be influential in spreading it.

The meeting will probably take place at a luncheon at noon, and the featured speaker is to be a man from the government's corps of soil conservation engineers.

MAY 2 SET AS DATE FOR PRESENTATION OF THREE-ACT DRAMA

May 2 has been set for the showing of "Dotty and Daffy," a three-act comedy now being rehearsed by the Muenster Dramatic Club. It will be presented in the parish hall at 8 o'clock.

The play is a fast moving, hilarious farce with a good plot and plenty of action. Father Francis Zimmerer is the director.

The cast of characters includes Misses Irene Walterscheid, Eleanor Henschel, Dorothy Pette, Elfreda Luke, Mathilda Hoenig and Catherine Swirczynski and Messrs. M. J. Endres, Jr., Werner and Walter Becker, Earl Lehnertz, Harry Henschel and Johnny Wimmer.

Muenster's First Air Conditioned Home To Be Occupied This Week

The new J. B. Wilde house, which has been under construction since December, will be occupied this week, according to word from Mr. Wilde. Wall work was finished Monday and floor finishing was scheduled for completion before the end of the week.

The new home has the distinction of being the most modern in Muenster and the first to be completely air conditioned. It also has numerous other desirable features such as built-in conveniences, silent mercury switches throughout and a good distribution of electrical outlet plugs, two bath rooms, all hardwood floors, and plenty of windows for good lighting.

Several weeks more work will be required to make the lawn conform to the attractiveness of the house's exterior and interior.

Holy Name Society Decorates Club Room, Installs Pool Table

The club room of the Holy Name Society in the parish hall is being favored with two important improvements this week. While paint is making a vast improvement to its appearance and a new pool table is an equally important addition to its recreational facilities.

Officers of the society will raise the greater part of necessary funds through an assessment on the membership and expect to raise the remainder by sponsoring a benefit picnic and dance the evening of May 7 at the parish hall.

Proposals for the pool table and the picnic were introduced and approved at the group's monthly meeting Monday night.

Sherman Dramatic Club Will Present Minstrel

A dramatic club sponsored by the Sherman Knights of Columbus council will appear in a minstrel next Sunday night, 8 p. m. at the parish hall, Father Francis Zimmerer announced this week. The program is being sponsored by the parish on a 50-50 basis as a benefit affair for the new church fund.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Cain and daughters spent Sunday at Hood in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Favors, where a birthday celebration honored their son, Wilfred, on his 21st birthday. One hundred and four guests registered in the guest book.

DECREASED ACREAGE, MORE FARM FAMILIES OBSERVED IN TEXAS

COLLEGE STATION, April 18.—

The farm land of Texas is now being called upon to support 42 percent more farm families than it did in 1900.

In the 40 year period, the acreage per farm has decreased 23 percent. In most sections of the South, it is likely that the land will have to support still more families on even smaller farms.

The long time trend toward smaller farms, with the greater financial burdens of present day agriculture, means that a soil conserving and soil building system of farming must be followed, C. (Dutch) Hohn, specialist in soil and water conservation with the Texas A. and M. Extension Service, has pointed out.

"Lots of our small farmers, and some of our larger ones, are behind the eight ball," the specialist observed. "They can't afford to put the necessary soil building practices into effect. On the other hand they can't make a decent living with their soil in the shape it's in."

The Farmer's

CHECKING ACCOUNT

The farmer's income is largely seasonal. There may be long weeks between the times when he receives actual cash for his products.

One of the signs of a good farmer, is a good bank account. It is a sign that his financial affairs are well managed and in good shape.

It is, therefore, especially desirable to the farmer to build up a good checking account, both as a reserve and to meet current expenses.
