Sister Berenice Trachta, a CDP treasure, marks 85th jubilee

the exact date of Sister Berenice Trachta's final vows 85 years ago, and the sisters, director, and staff of Mc-Cullough Hall Nursing Center in San Antonio, where she resides, held a celebration in her honor. The 104-year-old renewed her vows with great joy during the celebration.

During the observance, the Jubilarian commented, "Oh I made myself very busy, because I wanted to give myself totally to Christ, wholly - completely, W-H-O-L-L-Y!" and "Oh I, I can never tell you how happy I am, knowing that Christ had accepted my offer, but I know that he asked me for it first. He, if he hadn't asked me, I would never have thought of offering myself totally to him and he did."

She was born on Oct. 23, 1909 in Muenster to Frank and Anna Sicking Trachta who named her Angeline. When she entered Our Lady of the Lake Convent of the Sisters of Divine Providence, San Antonio, she took the name Sr. Mary Berenice.

Sr. Berenice noted, "When I was a young girl, I went to a Catholic school and was taught by the Sisters of Divine Providence. They inspired me by their lives and I wanted to be just like them." She also stated, "My most rewarding experience was teaching. I loved teaching! I never had trouble with any of my students. I always made my classes interesting and the students responded."

As the longest living Sister of Divine Providence of Texas in the congregation's 148 year history, Sister Berenice Trachta has a story to tell at the tender age of 104 years, of which 85 have been as a Sunday, June 22 marked CDP. Her life story is rooted in her love for her Catholic faith and blossomed into many shades of happiness for this positive, energetic icon.

> Sister Berenice taught a total of seven years in the elementary, middle, and high school level while pursuing a Bachelor's degree Chemistry. This was followed by her 20 year teaching career in science at Our Lady of Lake College (OLLC) that included earning an M.A. degree in Biochemistry from The Catholic University of America in Washington D.C.

One of her most significant accomplishments involves being one of the first women in the USA to graduate with a Master's degree and Doctorate degree in Sacred Theology from the first institution in the nation certified to issue the degree. She attended the women's campus of the University of Notre Dame, St. Mary's College, in 1959. At that time, women were not permitted to take classes in Theology. It took a personal visit to Pope Pius XII from another determined woman, Sister Madeliva, the Superior of St. Mary's, Notre Dame, IN to initiate the change.

She returned to OLLC to teach theology for 27 years. It was during this period that she accepted the invitation from San Antonio Archbishop, Robert Lucey, to establish a Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) at OLLC to ensure that every Catholic child not enrolled in and taught in a CCD class by adequately trained catechists. Sister Berenice was very resourceful in finding places to train and teach her potential CCD teachers and did so during the evenings and weekends. Sister Berenice's efforts produced an increased attendance at Mass See SISTER pg. 3

Scam artists target elderly

Cathy Krahl Staff writer

There were more incidences of scam artists targeting the elderly last week. This time within the Lindsay city limits.

Staff at City Hall reported a woman was knocking on doors saying she could reduce cne's electric bill but she had to see their current bill. That bill contains a lot of personal data scammers could find useful in stealing identities or giving them information for future strategies against that person. Opening the door to strangers could also give strangers access into people's homes.

A resident who was approached by this woman called City Hall to ask if the woman was legitimate. The staff told the citizen no one has a permit to go door to door. The staff received a description of the woman and sent the police to find her.

Chief Ricky Crow found her. As she didn't have a per-mit, he invited her to leave and return the next day for a permit. She never returned.

"Anyone going door to door in the city must have a copy of the permit on them," Chief Crow cautioned residents. "If they have any questions, it is best to call City Hall."

The city staff was worried about the elderly who, growing up in another time, tend to believe what people tell them. The staff hopes this report convinces them not to

St. Peter's Homecoming Picnic set for Sunday

Cathy Krahl Staff writer

Tradition comes alive when St. Peter's Catholic Church hosts its annual Homecoming Picnic Sunday. Begun in 1959, the event is a day of fun, games, food, and giving back.

Starting after the 10 a.m. Mass, a dinner in Centennial Hall will be served between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. There will be a silent auction, cakewalk, and a kids' toy walk in the cool of the hall. The silent auction will close to bids at 2 p.m.

Items for the live auction will be on display in Centennial Hall and will move to the park after the meal. Live auction begins at 5 p.m.

The rest of the picnic will take place at J.M. Lindsay Park and kicks off at noon with the kitchen serving corn dogs, hamburgers, pulled pork sandwiches, French fries, and baked beans. The kitchen closes at 10 p.m.

Children's games are set to open at 3 p.m. until 7 p.m. SPY kids (St. Peter's Youth) will run the games. They include bingo, ball throw, face painting, duck pond, go fishing, dino dig, ring toss, sports throw, bounce house, grab bag, and bean toss.

The turtle races are another fun event for kids. The number of turtles entered depends on how many the children can find. In its ninth year, the races start at 4 p.m. on the tennis court. First, second and third, places are awarded. Then judging takes place on the best-dressed turtle.

Adult games in the park include high hand, bingo, and a horseshoe tournament.

The biggest fundraiser of the day is the live auction. Among the items up for sale are custom made rockers, a custom made Lindsay Knight fire pit, and numerous items handmade or hand crafted. A few items will be re-gifted like Father Eugene Luke's cross made of nails and the rifle donated by Father Raymond McDaniel, which is inscribed by him. Both men are former pastors of St. Peter's.

Top prize on the raffle is a $5,000 Visa gift card. The last two years, tickets to join the pilgrimage planned by the parish was the main prize.

All proceeds from the picnic go to the church restoration fund.

trust strangers, even those who are "nicely dressed and well groomed," as Crow described the woman.

A couple of weeks ago, two men approached an elderly woman and convinced her to let them in her house to check her electrical wiring. They too were dressed for the part they played. While one distracted her, the other stole more than $20,000 worth of jewelry.

NOTE: While the men claimed they were from the electric company, neither wore uniforms like Cooke County Electric Coop requires all employees to wear.

Hellinger transforms glass pieces into works of art

Janet Felderhoff News Editor

Mike Frank Hellinger fashions colorful pieces of glass into beautiful stained glass pictures. Although he receives many positive comments on the workmanship of his craft, he did not just decide to take it up. Mike did so at the encouragement of his wife Patsy.

Making stained glass pictures was Patsy's hobby. She enjoyed it and only quit because diabetes affected her vision and no longer allowed her that pleasure. Mike said that he told Patsy he was going to sell the equipment she had used since she no longer needed it. Patsy said no, she had another plan. She told Mike that he should learn how to make the stained glass pieces. She even sent him to school to learn how to make them.

After attending classes in Denton every Saturday for four and one half years Mike was trained in the craft of stained glass making. He then went to another class in Grapevine for an additional year and learned even more about his art.

Patsy had worked in the house and garage when she made stained glass. Mike knew carpentry and he makes wooden frames for his pieces. In his younger years, Mike worked as a carpenter.

Needing more space for his saws and other equipment, Mike decided to build himself a shed where he could work.

"The neighbors told me that I wouldn't be able to build it by myself, but I built it by myself," recalled Mike. "When I was building the shed, I got the studs up and was putting the rafters on and I found it was way crooked. The rafters wouldn't go on. I got upset and took a sledge hammer and tore it down and started over."

with water and a brush.

With the stained glass finished, Mike selects wood to frame it. He cuts the wood to the lengths he'll need to build the frame. He noted, "After I get my wood cut, I stand the wood on edge and I plow a groove in it so the glass will slide down in the groove. I put three sides together on the frame and I leave one side open so I can slide the glass in. Then I put the top piece on. It is in there. It's not going to come out because it's down in the groove a quarter inch deep."

Mike said that he works on the stained glass three to four hours every evening. "I do not try to work on it on Sundays because that's the Lord's day," Mike remarked.

There are three patterns that Mike uses often and is especially proud of. They are the rooster, map of Texas, and crosses. "I do a hexagon shape," Mike said of the stained art he does shaped like the State of Texas. Those are also his best sellers. Roses and other flowers, "About everything I do, I put in the wood frame because people like the looks of the wood and they grab it up," said the craftsman. "I tried to put lead around the outside of it to make a lead frame and people just don't care for that. They like the wood look."

Special orders can be filled by Mike. "If they bring me a copy of what they want," he said when asked if he did requests. "The littler the detail, the more expensive it gets,' he advised.

Mike enjoys working on his stained glass art. He commented, "I go from school to home to work on it. If it's been a bad day at work, I get out there by myself and it calms my nerves. It is relaxing out there. I play country and western music."

Customers have an appreciation for Mike's diligence. He said, "All the shows I go to peo-See HELLINGER pg. 3

Mike is undaunted by the fact that he does not have full use of his one arm. "I've been crippled in my right arm over half of my life," he explained. "I got tangled up in a machine and it jerked me. If the top button of my shirt hadn't busted, I'd have choked to death." It was a lathe that he was injured by. He can do anything as long as it is waist high. He cannot raise his arm because of the injury to his shoulder.

Many will remember Mike as one of the custodial staff at Muenster ISD. He proudly noted that he received his 20 year pin this year. He also said he has the five, 10, and 15 year pins. "A lot of little kids like me and they come up and give me hugs," remarked Mike. This was Mike's last year at the school. He was laid off with most of the rest of the maintenance crew. The District decided to outsource for that service in an attempt to save money. Walmart hired Mike and that is where he will be working now. June 12 was his last day at school. Mike has been doing stained glass for 14 or 15 years now. He calls his business Rainbow Art Glass. He sometimes sells his work at Germanfest or flea markets in places such as Hereford, Grand Prairie, Arlington, and McKinney. Mike and Patsy live in Gainesville. Club Schmitz, Dallas icon, closes after 65+ years

Cathy Krahl Staff Writer

A beloved Dallas dive bar, Club Schmitz, closed its doors on Saturday, May 31. That final "last call" ended a history of being open almost every day for the last 68 years.

First cousins, Lawrence "Bigun" Schmitz and Leonard Schmitz, grew up in Lindsay. Before they went off to war, they worked in construction, but did not want to return to that business. When they returned from serving in World War II, they came to Dallas.

Bigun found a beer joint on Denton Road for sale by the widow Mayberry. Her husband had just been murdered and she was ready to sell the place. Bigun needed a partner and offered half of the business to his cousin Leonard on Jan. 19, 1946.

After purchasing the beer joint, Bigun and Leonard closed it down to remodel. The cousins lived in a shack behind the building for about a month while they cleaned up the place. They decided to name their new business Club Schmitz so that friends and family from "up home" in Lindsay would see and recognize the name when coming to Dallas.

According to the history of the business, originally printed on the back of their menu, Club Schmitz initially struggled because the avail-At times, Bigun and Leonard would go to South Dallas, buy beer at liquor stores, and sell it at no profit just so they would have beer to sell.

Also, Club Schmitz did not have business hours set in stone. They would sell beer until it ran out and close for the day. In 1946, beer sold for 20 cents, but better beer like Budweiser and Schlitz sold for 25 cents.

Six months after opening and needing to expand their business, Leonard and Bigun began making and selling burgers for 25 cents. They made their own hamburger patties with an ice cream scoop and cut their own fries. With the popularity of the hamburgers, Leonard asked a friend of his, who also owned a restaurant, how to make chili. Soon it was added to the menu.

In 1953, a kitchen fire broke out and the original building burned to the ground. With a little insurance money and their own hard labor, Leonard and Bigun built a new building. During the construction, the men provided iced beer under a shade tree for loyal customers who would serve themselves. The cousins relied on the honor system, with their customers putting money in a cigar box. "We couldn't do that these days," Shawn Schmitz, wife of current owner Bobby Schmitz, said. The business grew with the new building. The men set regular business hours of 16 hours a day and seven days a week. Soon Club Schmitz became known for the burgers and chili.
