

The enthusiasm of our war crimes prosecutors in trying to put away sundry big shots of Hitler's regime sometimes becomes rather embarrassing. The latest is a charge against I.G. Farben, personnel for the manufacture of poisonous gas. We prefer to think there's a mistake in the report. Otherwise we have to admit a shameful miscarriage of justice.

Before condemning Germans for making poisonous gas we ought to consider a few pertinent angles. Is it a crime in the first place? If so, what did we do about our own manufacturers of poisonous gas?

The charge seems to imply that the same act can be both criminal and honorable, depending on whether the person who does it comes out as a winner or a loser. It looks like a double standard of justice and altogether unworthy of our traditional regard for fair dealings. By all means let's prosecute real criminals, but let's abide by the same rules we use over here.

For a long time we've known that screw ball economists are exerting an alarming influence but we had no idea that the situation is as serious as revealed by a recent poll of college students. A substantial majority of the youngsters, boys and girls expected to be our future business, professional and political leaders, voted in favor of socializing business and destroying private property. The same poll revealed that lots of other Americans are also off the beam.

Such a degradation of ideals is little short of a national catastrophe. Imagine, 63 per cent of our college students have been led to believe that the economic system which gave the world's highest standard of living is actually inferior to the government directed type which flourishes in the poverty ridden countries of Europe. What's more, as a North Carolina editor observes, not one of them can cite a single instance to prove his point.

The situation is actually pathetic. Students are exposed to a conglomeration of wild theory, misrepresentation, omission and prejudice and emerge with nothing more than an unsupported opinion planted by a subversive instructor. All they know is that they are "progressives", supposedly smarter than their forefathers who made this country click — that they are supposed to boo at the mention of free enterprise and cheer at the mention of planned economy or government ownership.

Fortunately some students get a more reasonable line of instruction, and others think their way out of the intellectual fog. But the number of misled students, those who dutifully accept the wild theories, constitute a serious threat to this country's welfare.

One cause of the mess is text books on the order of "The Elements of Economics" by Prof. Lorie Tarshis of Stanford University. A review on this book by the National Economic Council reveals that it recommends discarding our free enterprise system and adopting a socialistic government controlled economy. Incidentally the review also mentions fifteen prominent schools, including Texas University and Texas Tech, which have adopted the book as a text.

What to do about it? That's a big question. Of course we all have a partial answer — that every subversive text book should be eliminated from our schools. In spite of the prattle about academic freedom we are quite generally agreed that no institution should be permitted to expose its students to falsehood. Our idea of freedom does not include a right to destroy freedom, hence we do not admit the right of any school to adopt books or instructors which seek to abolish our system of personal freedom.

But when we get that far we're stumped. Even though we decide to have some housecleaning, who will choose whom to do the job?

Remember not so many years ago when we blew our tops about loafers on the WPA rolls? People did not begrudge the help given to deserving men who used the organization to tide them over rough times, but they soon got their fill of professional moochers who did as little as possible and then lined up for the hand-outs.

Apparently we're working up to another predicament like that. The only difference is that the new set of moochers is across the ocean. At least that's the conclusion we draw from a brand new statement just made by a senator on his return from Europe. Our

General Meeting of Hospital Group to Decide on Building

Tuesday October 28 will be a red letter day to this community's cooperative hospital venture. At a general meeting set for that date the members will decide whether to defy the unfavorable conditions that have already delayed the project more than a year or to give up the idea completely.

Directors of the organization in a meeting Tuesday night decided to bring their problems up for a vote of the membership. They propose to do either of two things: adopt policies concerning the immediate construction of a building or drop the subject altogether. Another purpose is to hold the annual election of directors.

Discussion at the directors meeting brought out the following pertinent facts. The desired building would have 10 patients' rooms, all of them large enough to accommodate 2 patients in an emergency. The estimated cost of such a hospital, built as conservatively as possible, would be approximately $50,000. But the association has only about $20,000 now on hand. What to do about raising the additional $30 thousand is the big problem.

CITY SETS OCT. 20-25 AS FIRE PREVENTION AND CLEAN-UP WEEK

The week of Oct. 20 through 25 has been designated as Clean-up and Fire Prevention Week in Muenster and Mayor J.M. Weinzapfel has issued a proclamation to that effect. The project was discussed and okayed at the regular meeting of the city council Monday night.

The city will furnish a truck to haul trash and has set Thursday, Oct. 23, as the day for pick ups. There will be no charge for this service.

In making his announcement Mayor Weinzapfel asked cooperation of all individuals in the interest of health, appearance and freedom from fire hazards. Every home and business house is urged to participate to the fullest extent.

Persons are requested to have their trash sacked or boxed and placed at curbs for quick pick up.

The council recalled, for the benefit of citizens, that is a violation of the law and subject to fine to throw cans, rubbish or trash on streets, in alleys and on the highway and urges a thorough clean up of all premises during the week designated.

PNEUMONIA CAUSED ABOUT 2460 DEATHS IN TEXAS LAST YEAR

Austin. — According to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, pneumonia caused approximately 2,460 deaths during the past year in Texas, a total which is entirely too high. This disease is most prevalent during the winter and spring seasons.

Pneumonia is caused by a germ called the pneumococcus, which many of us have lurking in our throats ready to start trouble, when our resistance to it is lowered. We can keep up our resistance by avoiding undue fatigue and unnecessary exposure to extreme weather conditions. When we go outside in cold weather sufficient wraps should be worn to protect us. Keeping the temperature of our homes as low as is consistent with comfort will greatly lessen the difficulties encountered in adjusting ourselves to the cold when we leave the house.

Another method of prevention in pneumonia is not to neglect a cold, for the common cold often results in pneumonia when neglected. A person with a severe cold should stay at home, and call his physician for advice if temperature persists or the cold lingers on. He should follow his physician's advice until the cold has disappeared. A patient may really have beginning pneumonia when he thinks it is only a cold. If the physician's advice is sought he will have opportunity to start treatment early if pneumonia is present, or develops in such cases.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Walterscheid announce the birth of a daughter at the family home on Wednesday, Oct. 8. Mrs. Walterscheid is the former Miss Augusta Noggler and the grandparents are Mrs. John Schilling and Mr. and Mrs. John Walterscheid.

HALLOWE'EN VANDALS WILL BE NABBED FOR NEXT DAY CLEAN-UP

This year the city council believes it has a solution to its annual post-Halloween clean-up problem. While festivities are under way three recruiters will be active among the pranksters to draft an army of juvenile workers to clear the debris and any other mess that shows up the next morning.

The three deputies who will keep the pranksters in line have instructions to nab offenders and toss 'em in the clink for the night, in order to be sure of having them available bright and early to work the next day.

The city hoosegow, unoccupied for many a year, will be specially cleaned and prepared to accommodate the city's "guests".

City councilmen made the decision in their regular meeting Monday night. No fines will be assessed, they stated, but a nice work schedule will be arranged to restore the city's appearance back to normal. This includes washing windows, sweeping Main street, hauling off rubbish or any other work made necessary by the previous night's pranks.

The council has no objection to the harmless type of Halloween fun but it definitely has its fill of vandalism.

1.55 Inch Rain Is Welcome Relief to Community Drought

Another welcome intermission for the community's extended drought was Tuesday night's rain which, according to the city rain gauge, measured 1.55 inches.

In spite of a few short, hard downpours almost every drop of it was taken up instantly by the powdery, parched soil, especially on recently planted grain fields. Winter wheat, oats and barley now have sufficient moisture to sprout, though hardly enough to continue development. Most of the community crop, sown during the past several weeks, has been waiting for this rain.

The moisture was equally helpful to grazing land. A brighter color on vegetation apparent as early as Wednesday afternoon, indicates better and more plentiful green feed which should be reflected soon in greater milk and beef production.

Notes On Soil Conservation

C.M. Walterscheid, cooperater in the Henry Pick Conservation Group, three miles northeast of Muenster, applied phosphate on thirty four acres of vetch and alfalfa land. Mr. Walterscheid sowed nine acres of vetch and rye last week. Other cooperators of the Upper Elm-Red Soil Conservation District, who sowed vetch last week, are Frank Schilling, Alfred Bayer, J.H. Bayer, Norbert and Edgar Klement, J.A. Klement, Felix Becker, Alphonse Hoening, R.S. Mann, J.P. Embry, Wright Embry, Frank Trubench, Bob Knabe, Paul Fisher, Charles Fisher, Harry Fisher, H. V. Milligan, Tony Hesse, J.H. Embry, and H.J. Fuhrman.

Local cooperators are taking advantage of suitable weather for terrace maintenance and terrace construction. Felix Becker, group leader two miles west of Muenster, constructed 900 feet of diversion terraces and 2450 feet of field terraces. Alphonse Hoening, in the same group, constructed 1 mile of field terraces and 600 feet of diversion terraces. Paul Fisher completed 3000 feet of field terraces.

Thirty six cooperators have suitable outlets for terrace construction and are urged to start construction at once. Lines should be laid off and construction started with farm equipment before Fall grain is sown if heavier equipment is not available.

Miss Olivia Stock, president of the Muenster Civic League and Garden Club, was in Dallas Wednesday to attend Texas Garden Club Day at the State Fair. District II to which Muenster belongs had its fall meeting at 2 o'clock in the afternoon in the lecture room in the Hall of State, with Mrs. John W. Greene, state president, presiding. Miss Stock made the trip with a group of Nocona Garden Club members who chartered a bus for the trip.

Miniature Oil Derrick Built By Anthony Rohmer Features Theatre Display

Anthony Rohmer's miniature oil derrick is on location in front of the State Theatre, Gainesville, this Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Drilling steadily hour after hour, the little 41 inch model is a featured display for "Black Gold" starring Anthony Quinn in the story of an Indian, his horse and the Oklahoma oil boom.

The little rig is remembered by most Muenster people as an outstanding display at the annual community flower show last June. It is built to scale, powered with an electric motor, fully equipped and operates similar to the full sized rotary rig, with the tiny drill visible in a cut-away section under the derrick. Rohmer spent six months of his spare time building the model.

Hornets Win Easily In 27 to 7 Contest With Denison Lads

Muenster's Hornets had no trouble Sunday night defeating the game crew of undersized lads from St. Xavier's Academy, Denison, to the tune of 27 to 7. It was the local team's first home game of the season and the first under the recently installed football lights.

Though lighter and less experienced than the Hornets, the Academy's little fellows showed a vast improvement since their practice game here during the spring training season. They were more alert and more aggressive and the difference in score approximately reflects the difference in size.

The game was featured by offensive play on both sides. Almost all the way through the Hornets regularly chalked up steady advances accounting for about 15 of the team's 18 first downs whereas the visitors hit their stride against the reserves to make most of their first downs and their only touchdown.

Muenster started its first scoring march early in the opening period after its first attempt was spoiled by a fumble. From the kick-off they advanced to Denison's 30, lost the ball on a fumble, and received it again on their own 40 after holding for downs. From there they moved steadily for 60 yards and the first marker. Gremminger went over and Sicking ran for the extra point.

The next two Hornet touchdowns came in the second quarter. Early in the period Deplison braced and stopped a scoring drive on the 22. Muenster then held, received the kick and started another drive. Sicking scored the touchdown and Gremminger kicked for the extra point. After holding the visitors for downs they again started moving toward the goal line and Gremminger scored again on a 40 yard broken field sprint shaking off four tacklers on the way. A pass for extra point failed and the half ended 20 to 0.

During most of the last half reserves predominated in the Hornet line-up and the Academy boys took advantage of the weakened resistance with a drive starting on their own 35 and ending across the goal line. A pass for extra point, though incomplete, was ruled complete because of interference with the receiver.

Muenster's last score followed a 91 yard advance after taking the Denison kick on the 9 yard line. Vogel carried the ball over and a pass, Gremminger to Reiter, was good for the extra point.

The boys were accompanied to Dallas by County Agent B.T. Haws.

The Red Sox volley ball team of Sacred Heart and the public school team played their first afternoon on the latter's court. It was a closely contested game with the final score 15-13 in favor of the Red Sox.

Her trouble began last January and though she was in ill health she continued her classes until the end of the term. By this time the affliction was more serious and she went to the hospital where she was a patient for four months.

Survivors in addition to the parents are five sisters: Mrs. Aubrey (Rita) Jennings and Miss Emma Felderhoff, San Antonio; Philomena, Celine and Anselma of Muenster; also five brothers, Frank, Vincent, Alphonse, Henry and Leo, all of Muenster.

The balance of the building will be for buses. Doors across the entire front length will be the sliding type on double tracks.

Cars Give Employment To More Than Eight Million

A recent summary of the employment that has grown up around the automotive vehicle reveals the extent to which American jobs are dependent on the expansion of industry.

More than 537,000 different American business concerns have built up the automotive industry, which has become one of the fundamentals of American life.

Together, these concerns employ more than 8,200,000 workers. Automobile trucks provide jobs for more than 5,750,000 drivers. Sales and service, including repair garages and the gas stations, account for nearly 300,000 concerns, in turn giving employment to 1,300,000.

Actual automobile production provides jobs for 800,000 workers, and the economic importance of this part of the automotive business has been clearer because these jobs are concentrated in a small number of concerns.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

How to Tell You're Getting Old

Doc Walters gave me this formula: It's a sure-fire sign you're getting old when you resent other people having a good time.

And the Doc means it hasn't much to do with age. There are old folks in our town who get a big kick out of seeing other people enjoy themselves—seems to keep them young in spirit, with a twinkle in their eyes!

And there are some others who resent the young folks going fishing; who feel that community games and dances are just a waste of time; or who criticize temperate people for enjoying a mellow glass of beer with friends.

They're often well-intentioned folks, too. But from where I sit, the minute we criticize our neighbors for enjoying wholesome pleasures—like a game of horseshoes, a glass of beer, or an afternoon's fishing—it's a sure sign we're growing old (in spirit anyway) no matter what our age is.

The American Way

By George Peck THIS CAN BE IT

A two-year contract which may well prove to be a solution of management-labor difficulties and disputes, was entered into last August between Local 299 of the United Paper Workers of America (CIO) and the Continental Paper Company, of Ridgefield Park, New Jersey.

The basis of this contract is a plan devised by A.W. Rucker, of the Eddy-Rucker-Nickels Company, management-consultants of Cambridge, Mass. Under the agreement, which is known as the Rucker "Share of Production Pay Plan," the Continental Paper Co. guarantees to its employees 30 1/2 per cent of its earnings above the cost of materials and supplies. The weekly base pay of the employees is charged against this percentage and all earnings above the base pay within the 30 1/2 per cent guarantee are placed to the credit of the employees monthly in cash payments, allotments for reserve and pension-fund deposits.

For the first month under this contract, there was an additional 20 per cent of the weekly earnings to the 400 employees of the company. This averaged $56 for each employee above the average $280 base pay for the monthly period.

However, under the plan, the additional base pay is not immediately turned over to the workers. 25 per cent of the credit in each monthly period is placed in a reserve account which is balanced out twice a year. The remaining 75 per cent is divided, one-half into immediate cash payments to all employees and the other half goes into a pension fund to provide retirement income.

Thus, of the additional $56 earned during the first month of the contract, 25 per cent, or $14 went into the reserve fund; $21 was paid to employees in cash; and $21 went into the pension fund.

At any time that the base pay exceeds the guaranteed 30 1/2 per cent, the difference will be met by the reserve account. The reserve account will be closed out twice a year, and all money in the account will be paid out one-half in cash to the employees and the other half to the pension fund. If the reserve account should ever show a deficit, Continental Paper Co. will absorb it and start the account clear for the next half year.

The advantages of both company and employees under this plan are manifold. Both will increase their earnings through savings in raw material, supplies, fuel, power, repairs per ton on output, savings in labor costs, reduction in breakage, defectives and returns, increase in salable tonnage and in prices of tonnage sold. Stockholders will get more in dividends and employees will get more in their pay envelopes.

The officials of both the Continental Paper Co. and Local 299 of the United Paper Workers of America are to be congratulated upon having entered into such a fair, progressive arrangement. Mr. Rucker warrants a pat on the back for having devised the plan, which as stated in the opening sentence of this article, may well be the instrument by which labor strife will be eliminated from the American scene.

At any rate, George Canine, President of Local 299, seems to think so. Said he as he signed the contract for his union, "I have never seen anything which has met with such spontaneous and overwhelming enthusiasm as this plan. It will, in my opinion, be the 'shot that was heard round the world' in labor-management history."

The working out of this plan should be followed with great interest by workers, employers and the public because this can be it.

PRINTERS WON'T EVEN ACCEPT THE PAPER; SO PUBLISHER QUITS

The Elmira (N.Y.) News has been killed, and more in sorrow than anger, its editor-owner tells why in his last Page One editorial to his readers.

No longer able "to endure the conditions and demands imposed on us by the International Typographical Union," he and his wife offered their paper to their employees "lock, stock and barrel" — to operate as the men saw fit if they would give them in return a sum equal to a journeyman printer's wages each week.

This offer was refused by the employees on the grounds that "the men preferred to work for the wages and under the conditions laid down by the ITU."

Whereupon, Robert J. Allen and his wife Edith, announced the paper's demise in these final front-page words: "The ITU . . . (is) . . . probably the strongest and most absolute union in America, and one under which practically all newspapers and commercial printing plants have to work."

Their hand on your shop today is like a strangling hand on your throat.

"Each year the hand has been tightening a little. During late years they have become all but intolerable. They did become 'intolerable' this year insofar as the News Printing & Publishing Co. is concerned."

They went on to explain that their contract with the ITU runs out shortly. For the new year, the union handed them a contract (no longer, by the union's express stipulation to be known as a contract) entitled "Conditions of employment."

Mr. Allen said that after reading the "Conditions," the Allens felt that it would be un-American and cowardly to agree to it. "A demand for increased wages is one thing, but to agree to so many provisions in the document in question would be like lying down to enable a bully to kick you with greater facility. And we were never one for that sort of thing."

So, the editorial continued: "There is undoubtedly coming a time when arrogant union leaders will have to consider the problems of the fellow who has to dig up the money to meet the payrolls to pay the men agitators represent, but that time is not here and we do not intend to risk bankruptcy waiting for that time."

"We're damned well sick, to boot, of having to treat with the average present-day union labor leader in order to stay in business."

JUST DYING TO MEET THE USED-COW DEALERS

On another page of this issue of the Enterprise will be found a small ad which pictures a comical looking cow-boy dragging a cow by the tail.

The cow, though obviously dead, looks extremely happy as she points her four feet and her four spigots at the sky.

The cow and the cow-boy make up the trade-mark of the Central Hide & Rendering Company. The company dubs itself as "Your Local USED-COW Dealer," which is expressive enough when one considers the business engaged in by this concern.

The company is in the business of removing dead and crippled cows — also horses, mules, sheep, hogs, etc., for that matter — from the premises of the people of this area. With a branch at Wichita Falls, company representatives have on numerous occasions hauled off carcasses from this vicinity. All one need do is call collect the number in the ad and the company's truck will be right over to save the bereaved owner from having to dispose of the remains of "Old Betsy" or "Old Dobbin". There is no charge whatever for the service. For obvious reason, though, the sooner after the demise the call is made the happier everybody concerned in the matter will be. Jim McDonald, manager of the company, pointedly suggests.

FEED THE LAND AND FATTEN THE CROPS IN NEW SOIL SLOGAN

College Station. — "Feed the land and fatten the crops." That's a slogan that E.A. Miller, Extension agronomist of Texas A. and M. College, would like to see in operation on every farm in Texas.

Miller brings the slogan to attention now because it's time to "feed the land" with winter legumes, which help furnish soil fertility that fattens the crops. Winter legumes can be planted, says Miller, as soon as there is enough moisture in the soil to work it.

Legume seed that has been inoculated has produced the best crop of green manure. Miller says proper seed inoculation is a necessary phase of legume-growing, if the producer wants to get the most benefit from his winter cover crop. Fertilization is just as necessary, says the agronomist, in areas where soil and rainfall will make good use of the fertilizer. On the better type of Texas soils Miller recommends 200 to 400 pounds of 20 percent superphosphate per acre, or its equivalent, while on light, sandy soils and old fields, it will take 300 to 400 pounds 0-14-7 commercial fertilizer per acre to get the job done.

Commercial fishing, principally for salmon and tuna, is a $25,000,000 a year business in Oregon.

of the Kraft Dairy Farm Service

Sound Feeding

Saves Grain

The supply of grain and protein feed this winter probably will not meet national requirements. This means that every bit of good forage — hay and silage — will have to be used carefully to produce the most possible milk and stretch scarce grain and supplements.

To stretch your supply of grain and feed mix, follow the feeding practices proved through the years by good dairymen everywhere.

What you're after, of course, is the highest possible production from each cow. You want to give each cow the feed she deserves but not more than she deserves.

You have to know two things definitely — each cow's daily production and how your roughage stacks up as to quality. First — it stands to reason that a good producer requires more feed than a poor producer. Don't guess. Weigh the milk from each cow occasionally, night and morning. Then you'll know which cows to favor.

It's equally true that the better your hay and silage the less grain and concentrate you'll need. Good leafy alfalfa will normally need only a little grain added for even a good producer. But mixed hay of average quality will need more than just grain to make it into a good ration. And hay that has been rained on will need a full supplement of both grain and meal plus some minerals.

The principles are important any time but this year when a heavy supply of milk is needed and feed is short, they're more important than ever.

Freshening Cows

Need Extra Care

A crystal ball would be a mighty handy thing around a dairy farm — if it worked well. But even without a crystal ball here's one thing I can predict:

Your cows which are freshening this fall will be better producers if you give them the right kind of care before, at and after calving.

First give the cow a six-to-eight-week dry period so that her feed and strength can go into development of a healthy calf. Remember, most of a calf's weight is gained in the last two months before birth.

Then just before freshening, say a week or two ahead of time, the cow should get a ration which has a somewhat laxative effect. Good fall pasture or corn silage will serve.

But if you don't have either at this time, oats and wheat bran or oats and linseed meal will do the job.

Warm feed and warm water in the first day or two after calving is recommended, but make the feeding light. Increase the feeding gradually, say at a rate of about a half pound per day for the first week.

Maybe it takes a little time and trouble, but you'll see results in healthier calves, in better health of your cows and in the greater milk production you will get from the same cows, if you take that time and trouble.

Any cold weather which may be sneaking up on you will reduce the level of the thermometer reading outdoors but it won't bother the inside temperature of a cow in the least. Milk is warm when it's freshly drawn. Bacteria multiply fast in warm milk. Cool it quickly to guard quality, winter or summer.

Now's the time to locate that high grade sire for your herd. You'll be breeding your heifers for fall freshening soon. Breed them to the best dairy bulls available. Then you'll get heifer calves you'll be proud to raise for replacements.

newly begun program of belt tightening and various other sacrifice is intended to benefit people who are not making half an effort to take care of themselves.

To be specific, English coal miners are now working an average of 27 1-2 hours a week. That's the schedule of a basic industry which, because of its failure, is held principally responsible for the drastic decline in British production.

Under the circumstances England's current plea for help sets a new extreme in brazen mooching. If we were irritated by WPA chiselers we ought to be infuriated by this.

These remarks are not intended to discourage cooperation in the president's plan to help Europe. Not by any means. The simple fact is that Europe is destitute and we, as a civilized people able to help, have a moral duty to do what we can. However we have a corresponding right to lay down a few stipulations with our gifts.

Before sending a dollar's worth of relief we ought to insist that Englishmen work at least as much as we do. Just tell old John Bull in blunt words that we're not the kind of suckers to do the work and then divvy with loafers. To help without demanding such a re-adjustment would be a rank injustice to the people of this country.

We have a perfect right also to make another stipulation: that the relief will be cut off very pronto if England does not stop its socialistic nonsense and return to a common sense way of living. We're willing enough to lend a helping hand but we don't want to adopt a nation of dependents.

Inside, Looking Out

At 5 A.M. the sleepy hotel telephone girl answered a buzz from a house phone. An intoxicated man demanded: "What time doesh the bar open?"

"At eleven o'clock" the girl replied with forced politeness.

He called again at six and again at seven with the same question. So the girl said:

"Just a minute, sir. I'll let you speak to the manager."

Buzzing the night clerk, she said, "There's a drunk somewhere in the hotel. He's been pestering me for two or three hours. Will you tell him off?"

"Good morning," the clerk began gruffly. "You. . . ."

"Good morning yourself, shay, when doesh th bar open?"

"Say, you!" the clerk exploded.

"Let me tell you something. You're the kind of pest whose business we don't cater to. Just lay off. . . . we don't care if you ever get into our bar room."

"Get into your bar room?" The drunk was mad, too. "Shav, mister, I'm already in here. I'm trying to get out."
