HOW TO WOO COMMUNISTS

Adlai Stevenson, U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, has developed a simple formula to aid Communists and alienate allies. It goes like this:

- First: Select a nation that is a staunch friend of the United States;
- Second: Make sure it has not accepted more than a modest amount of the $90 billion we have doled out in foreign aid at the expense of American taxpayers;
- Third: See that it has always cooperated with the Western allies;
- Fourth: Be positive its leaders and citizens detest Communism; and Fifth: Attack, using the Red party line.

Ambassador Stevenson revealed his new strategy in the U. N. Security Council recently when he castigated Portugal, a long and undeviating friend of this country, and then voted with the Communist-Asia-Africa bloc — in opposition to our allies — for an investigation of Aniola, a Portuguese African province.

His diatribe and vote against Portugal were in opposition to the common sense policy of supporting our friends and fighting our foes — the Communists. Our U. N. ambassador has destroyed much of the world-wide good will we have been working so desperately to attain since World War II.

He said later that it was in the American tradition to oppose what he terms "colonialism", and that this was "an effort to re-establish America's traditional position".

Liberal supporters of President Kennedy's administration apparently do not agree with the ambassador. For instance Dean Acheson, Secretary of State in the Truman administration, is reported to have expressed dismay over Stevenson's Angola stand. And Robert Murphy, former Under Secretary of State and president of the United States council on NATO, is reported to view this action as calamitous.

They know that Dr. Antonio Salazar, Premier of Portugal, has always strongly supported the position of the Western allies, even to the point of turning over the Azores without cost to the United States Air Force during the war for refueling bases. He stands firmly with the American people in his hatred of Communism.

Loss of Angola very well could mean severance of Portugal's economic lifeline, because its dependence on its overseas provinces is literally a matter of life or death for its people. Moreover, loss of this outpost could mean the fall of Salazar and substitution of a Communist regime for Portugal. It is a foregone conclusion that before this happens, Franco of Spain will come to his aid. This could lead to the loss of both nations to the Western bloc.

So Ambassador Stevenson has kicked a good friend in the teeth to appease our Red enemies. For what purpose?

Paradox

"It is a strang paradox that the American people are intensely interested in their health, yet they spend more money on smoking and drinking ($16.6 billion) than on drugs, hospitals, and physicians combined ($15.4 billion) — according to the U. S. Department of Commerce. In addition, they complain about the cost of medical care but are willing, if not anxious to spend comparable amounts on their socially pleasant poisons—tobacco and alcohol." —Illinois Medical Journal.

WHAT CAN WE DO FOR AMERICA?

In his inaugural message, President Kennedy challenged all of us with the statement — "Ask not what America will do for you, ask what you can do for your country." At times of great crisis Americans have repeatedly demonstrated their loyalty and willingness to sacrifice everything, even life itself, for their homeland.

Freedom is our most precious possession and we do not intend that it shall be taken from us by any other power on earth. Unfortunately, we sometimes forget that freedom must be earned by each generation and unless we are eternally vigilant, it may slip away from us without a single missile being fired.

Many of the slave state dictatorships of the modern world have been established by power-mad minorities who took advantage of the complacency and selfishness of their own citizens — not by major military operations of a foreign power.

Not long ago I was shocked by a letter from a farmer who said, "You talk about freedom; I would be glad to give up some of my freedom for $1.20 corn."

A factory worker wishes to exchange some of his freedom for increased unemployment compensation.

The school teacher wants the entire community to give up certain freedoms in order to get federal money for school salaries.

The land owner justifies his subsidy for the purchase of agricultural limestone with the cliché — "Others get government subsidies."

The secretary of a local chamber of commerce cannot understand why obtaining a federal appropriation for the local airport or a dam on a nearby river means the sacrifice of a certain amount of freedom. Freedom includes many privileges — freedom of worship, of speech and of the press; the opportunity to move about without permit or supervision; the right to choose an occupation or to change jobs, and often overlooked but extremely important — the right to own property and to decide how to spend ones income.

As citizens turn more and more to government for economic gain — for big spending projects — taxes spiral upward and confiscate a higher portion of each person's income. It has been estimated that taxes now take approximately one third of total national income in the U. S.

Since the cost of the basic needs of life — food, shelter and clothing — now require 50% or more of the average family's income, there remains only about 17% for free choice spending and for saving.

Each time Congress appropriates money for a sewage disposal plant for a prosperous city, a subsidy for the airlines or the billions of dollars lost in supporting farm prices we all give up an essential part of our freedom — freedom to decide how to use the income from our work.

The argument is often made that good schools, adequate highways, higher farm prices, and safe airline transportation are highly desirable and that since the politicians are willing to provide these things taxpayers should be happy to give up some of their freedom of choice. The fallacy here is that all of these things can be obtained, and at less cost, without huge federal spending programs.

Just what did President Kennedy mean when he said — "Ask what you can do for your country"? One newly appointed Washington bureau chief contends that he was calling for higher taxes and more regimentation — a modern form of economic slavery. This view is supported by recent recommendations for big increases in federal spending. In any case, the President has presented a worthy challenge. He is correct in placing the responsibility on the citizens — not members of Congress or other elected officials. The greatest thing we can do for America is not to "ask."

A beach party was planned for members of Lindsay CYC when the organization met for their regular monthly meeting. Date for the outing at Lake Texoma is Sunday, June 11. Bob Fuhrmann, president, presided for business which also included discussion of participation in the Corpus Christi procession on Sunday, June 4, and Dolores Hess and Jolene Zimmerer volunteered to be in charge of the little flower girls.

Attendance Slim At Pool Opening

Opening day business at the swimming pool last Sunday was slimmer than expected. About 110 were there and most of them decided to make their visit short. By 6 o'clock the pool was deserted.

With warmer weather on Tuesday the attendance improved. George Petrus estimated about 160 were there including more adults than the first day.

Pool hours, as specified by the city council are 2 to 9 p.m. daily except Mondays. George Petrus and Dan Hamric are the joint managers.

For the first few days R. E. Hamric is working at the pool in his son's place. Dan finished his class work Wednesday at Texas Western University, El Paso, and is expected at the pool Thursday.
