Speaking before the Republican convention lust week John Connally pointed out that the important goal in the coming election is to overcome the liberalism that has dominated American government and get the country back on a conservative philosophy. His proposal was not just to defeat the Democrat effort to take over the presidency, but to work at replacing many persons in the legislative department. The man is right, and Nominee Gerald Ford confirmed the statement by pointing out that our already staggering national budget would be much worse if he had not vetoed many of the bills that were passed by the majority party of Congress.

Of course it can be said also that the executive department's defense against liberalism only goes part way toward maintaining responsible government. The president's veto prevented a number of brainstorms from becoming laws, but unfortunately there were worth while conservative measures which were not even considered by Congress and had no chance to become law.

By all Walterscheid, fifth grade; means our government needs a better balance of conservative and liberal philosophies.

Dedicated conservatives had a sharp disappointment in the selection of the party nominee. In the defeat of their candidate they saw the abandonment of several principles that they favored. If Reagan had been the choice they would have expected him to stand by old friends like Taiwan and Rhodesia and South Africa rather than betray them to improve relations with USSR or Red China. They would have expected support of anti-abortion and right to work while opposing gun control and forced busing.

Accident Speeds County Plans for Replacing Bridge

Plans to replace one of the older bridges of the county jelled in a hurry since Augugst 11 when the structure was knocked off its base and toppled into creek.

The bridge is across Big Elm about 5 miles southwest of town. Headed north and south its approach at each end has a sharp turn. At the south the approach comes from the west, at the north from the east.

About 11 p.m. on August 11 Arthur Bayer in his heavy cement truck failed to make the sharp south turn. The truck hit the right bridge railing knocking it off its base and into the creek. The vehicle also went down, coming to a stop, upside down, about half way down the 20 foot bank. Bayer crawled out truck tumbled over and landed on its wheels in the creek bed. A heavy oil field truck winched it out the next day.

Commissioner Earl Taylor of Precinct 3 said that the bridge was due for replacement soon and the accident speeded the plan into prompt action. This has closed the road whereas otherwise the old bridge would have remained in use until the new

Along with that reform we need to cut out thousands of government jobs and hundreds of government forms that are a burden to the people.

In addition lots more tax money could be saved by trimming the waste and graft out of our welfare program. This means to change regulations so that loafing does not pay better than working, cutting off every undeserving person and prosecute those caught at cheating. If those things were done the welfare department could save billions of tax payers dollars while saving more on reduction of that vast army of federal workers who are passing out our money.

Ronnie Walterscheid, 7 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Walterscheid, celebrated twice to observe his birthday of August 19.

The evening before, he and his parents and his brothers Johnny and Doug were guests in the home of the C. B. Fields. Since Ronnie and "Beeb" share birthdates, both families celebrate together with home-made ice cream, birthday cake and gift exchange.

On Thursday, six classmates rode the school bus home with Ronnie to help celebrate with games, birthday cake and ice cream. Special guests were his Aunt Joan, Mrs. David Walterscheid and his cousins Jason and Deann. The cake was decorated with a farm scene.

Cler Brothers See Pacific Northwest

Jim and Doug Cler have returned from a vacation trip, July 19-August 8, sightseeing in the magnificent Pacific Northwest and visiting relatives and friends.

They spent three days driving to Seattle, sightseeing along the way, and arrived at the home of their brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cler and Keith and Michael of Bothell, Washington, where they visited for two weeks.

Together they visited Rainier National Park, Mt. Rainier, and the Olympic Peninsula and Doug saw the Pacific Ocean for the first time. They also saw the Grand Coulee Dam and many more tourist attractions and historic sites. The three brothers went motorcycle riding together as a special treat in the spectacular scenery.

In Seattle they visited the Lehnertz Brothers several times and were welcomed warmly. They were impressed with the remodeling just finished on one of the Longhorn Barbecue Restaurants. Jim and Doug were also house guests of Claude Lehnertz in his beautiful home.

On their return trip they drove through Idaho and Montana and stopped at Rock Point to go sightseeing in Yellowstone National Park and join crowds of tourists at Old Faithful.

As they continued driving, only a few elk were within sight but bears were noticeably absent. The Clers were told that Park Rangers found y to move the bears to High Country, because of tourists who ignored safety rules. They drove through the Grand Teton National Park and Forest, crossed the Continental Divide and then drove home, arriving in the pre-dawn of Sunday, August Three days later their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cler, who were awaiting their return, began their own three week vacation through New Mexico to California and along the Pacific Coast.
