

163 CONFIRMED IN CEREMONY HERE SUNDAY

Bishop Stresses Spiritual Strength in Short Address

That the faithful fortify themselves by means of prayer and the Divinely Instituted Sacraments against the temptations of spreading paganism, was the outstanding plea of the Most Rev. Joseph P. Lynch in his brief address prior to conferring the Sacrament of Confirmation on 163 candidates at the Sacred Heart Church Sunday morning.

He pointed out instances in past centuries when persecutions and flurries of paganism demanded faith and supreme sacrifice from the Christians. They met the obstacles through crusades, martyrdom, and hardships and carried the faith of the apostles through the centuries for the Glory of God and the salvation of their immortal souls. To assist his children in such times of stress, the bishop continued, Our Lord instituted the Sacrament of Confirmation, the sacrament of spiritual strength.

Administration of the Sacrament of Confirmation was accompanied by a high Mass, the usual 10 o'clock service of the parish.

In coming to Muenster the Most Rev. Bishop encountered some difficulty when he permitted his chauffeur to leave the regular Highway 5 detour. They were stuck in the mud near the Ed Schmitt home. With the help of the Schmitt family he did manage however, to reach his destination on the scheduled time.

GREGORIAN MASS BY ABBEY CHOIR GIVEN TO PARISH SINGERS

An outstanding gift to the choir of the Muenster church is a set of twelve phonograph records of the Gregorian chant of the Holy Mass as sung by the monks' choir of Saint Pierre de Solesmes Abbey, France. The records have all variations of the chant for principal feasts of the church.

The records were secured by Father Frowin to serve as a delight and a model for members of the local choir. At future practice sessions the records will be on hand as a reference whenever the singers have difficulty in mastering the selections.

The monks of Solesmes Abbey, who produced the records, have a world wide reputation as singers of the Gregorian Mass. Selecting their choir members from those who begin vocal training early in life the Solesmes monks follow a rigid course of training and study which includes not only hours of practice but even a special diet. Their music is confined strictly to church music, the greater part of it being the Gregorian Mass.

The Gregorian Mass receives its name from its originator, Pope Gregory the Great.

T. P. AND L. ASSISTS LOCAL FARMERS IN SECURING REA LOAN

The Texas Power and Light company has joined hands with the local rural electrification committee to assist in bringing the anticipated electrification project to an early and satisfactory conclusion.

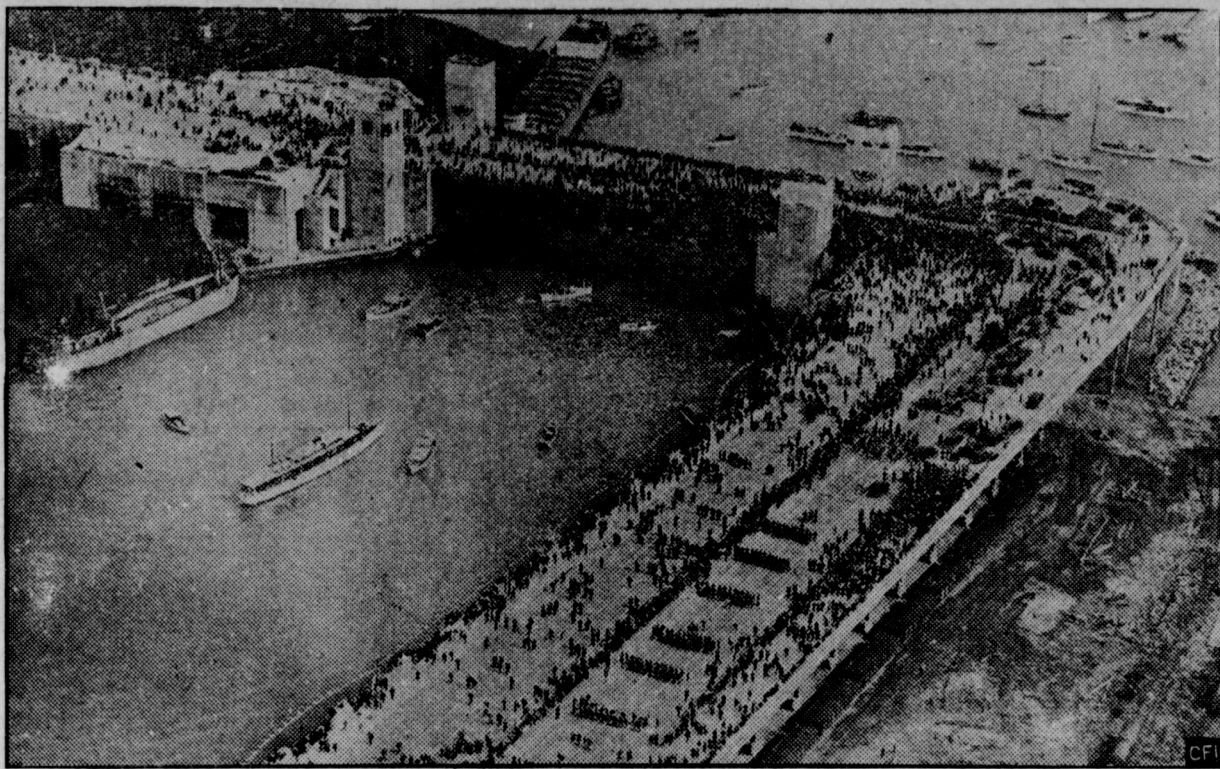

Meeting with Chairman J. W. Hess here Tuesday morning Leon Gilmore, manager of the Gainesville T. P. & L. office stated that he will gladly assign some of his company's engineers to the task of planning the most satisfactory route for a power line as well as to help secure additional survey signatures along the proposed route.

To that end Davis Olney and E. Dow Clements met with Mr. Hess Wednesday morning. They studied with him the locations of farmers who have already subscribed, outlined the shortest possible route, and prepared to drive over the entire area in an effort to eliminate unnecessary line distance wherever possible. Along the route they will seek the signatures of several who declined to sign up in the previous survey.

Mr. Hess decided to call on Texas Power and Light Company when, after looking over his completed map he felt that the project was in danger of being rejected by REA officials at Washington. Offsetting the fact that he had about 130 signatures, many of them agreeing to heavy current consumption, was the extent of more than 50 miles of line, which, according to government suggestions, should serve at least 150 patrons.

The survey now being conducted by Mr. Hess and the T. P. & L. is expected to be completed within a week, immediately after which Mr. Hess will file an application for a REA loan.

President Dedicates Chicago Bridge

CHICAGO, Ill., October 5th.—President Roosevelt dedicates Chicago's new $11,500,000 outer link bridge before hundreds of thousands of cheering Chicagoans. The repercussions of the President's speech caused world wide comment since it committed the U. S. to a definite stand on the far east crisis.

TERRACE MACHINES NOW AVAILABLE TO MUENSTER FARMERS

Arrangements were completed Friday whereby farmers of the Muenster community will be able to terrace their land at a very small expense. New terracing machines were purchased by the Bank and by the Farmers' Marketing Association through the influence of J. W. Hess, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

Both machines are now at the bank ready to be loaned to farmers. As the machines are loaned out, Mr. Weinzapfel explained, farmers will make a $3 deposit and when the machines are returned the deposit, less a charge of 75 cents per day, will be refunded. It was stated that the charge is made in order to build up a repair fund to keep the machines in first class condition. The terracer formerly owned and loaned out by the bank was permitted to run down badly because no provision had been made to keep it in repair. At times farmers repaired it of their own accord but usually, it was neglected.

A third machine will be available for the farmers as soon as the bank's old one is repaired.

Also available is the bank's farm level which in the past was frequently used in terracing work. This instrument will be loaned for 25 cents a day.

In making this charge, Mr. Weinzapfel said, the bank will make allowances for Sundays, holidays, and rainy days.

CONFIRMATION HELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON IN LINDSAY PARISH

Lindsay, Oct. 20.—The Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to a class of 65 in St. Peter's Church here Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, October 17, by Most Rev. Joseph P. Lynch, bishop of Dallas.

Arriving from Muenster where he administered the Sacrament to a large class earlier in the day, His Excellency was greeted by members of the Church committee, the parish band, and the class of confirmands with their sponsors who escorted the Rev. bishop to church where the services were conducted. Assisting in the services was the Cecilia Choir, under the direction of F. A. Wise with Miss Regina Fuhrmann at the organ.

Besides His Excellency those present in the sanctuary were the Rev. Fathers Frowin and Francis of Muenster, Brady of Gainesville and the pastor, Rev. Father John.

T. P. & L. Prexy is Host To 61 4-H Members in Three Day Celebration

TYLER, Texas, Oct. 20.—Sixty-one 4-H club boys and girls from Tyler spent three days in Dallas last week as guests of John W. Carpenter, president and general manager of the Texas Power and Light Company, a reward for winning a contest open to all clubs in the 63 counties reached by the Company's transmission lines. The contest, conducted by the Extension Division of A. & M. College of Texas, was a clean sweep for Smith County, with girls from the Starrville community and boys from Noonday being the winners. Starrville sent the boys winners to Dallas last year in a similar contest, and the girls, winners this year, were defeated by the smallest possible margin by the Spring Creek club of Parker County.

HOLY NAME MEMBERS INVITED TO ATTEND C. Y. O. GATHERINGS

Participation in a district meeting and social of the Catholic Youth Organization at the K of C hall in Gainesville on October 25 was one of the activities endorsed by the local Holy Name society at its meeting Monday night. Although no delegates were appointed, it was suggested that all who can attend do so.

Headlining the business session of that meeting will be the proposal for a CYO dance to be held jointly for the several Catholic Youth units of the North Texas District, which includes Gainesville, Sherman, Denison, Muenster, Lindsay and Pilot Point.

Another activity in which the Holy Name Society expects to participate is the Diocesan CYO rally in Dallas on October 31. Like the program at Gainesville and the proposed district dance, that at Dallas is essentially social, having for its purpose to foster a more intimate acquaintance among Catholic youth of parishes in the diocese.

The meeting will be held at the Ursuline Academy. Extending from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. it will be followed by a banquet at 6 o'clock. General interest among Holy Name members according to Father Francis, points to a large attendance from Muenster.

EMBROIDERED SILK BANNER ORDERED BY HOLY NAME SOCIETY

The Holy Name Society banner will outclass all other banners of the parish, Father Francis stated at the regular Holy Name meeting Monday night at the parish hall when revealing that officers of the society had placed their order with one of the Chinese mission houses. It will be made of native Chinese silk, which was described as more durable and more lustrous than other varieties, and will be hand embroidered by the nuns of the missions.

Because the banner is being made at such a remote place, Father Francis said, it is possible that it will not arrive in time for the Holy Name feast early in January.

Featuring the Holy Name meeting was a continuation of the open discussion on religious problems taken from current religious magazines, which was started in the society's previous meeting. Father Francis, sponsor of the club, was delighted to find that the boys are "warming up to the idea" and expressing themselves with less timidity. It is the reaction he seeks. It serves to develop the members' reasoning and argumentative abilities and at the same time bring them more forcefully to a correct answer for their problems.

About 30 members were present at the meeting, a considerable drop from normal attendance. The limited number, in the opinion of Father Francis, was caused by threatening weather early Monday night.

Myra P. T.-A. Appoints Acting Committees for Coming School Terms

Myra, Oct. 20.—The executive committee of the Parents Teachers Association met Monday afternoon and appointed the following committees: Program, Mrs. Kate Pearson, Mrs. B. C. Rosson, Mrs. Albert Andress; Membership, Miss Lillian Speake, Mrs. Fred McTaggart, Mrs. N. Melton; Finance and Entertainment, A. E. Barns, Oral Buck, Mrs. Roger Townsley, Mrs. Ray Hudson, Mrs. John Blanton; Hospitality; Mrs. Earnest Biffle, Mrs. Jake Biffle, Mrs. R. L. Pearson; Publicity; Miss Claudine Brogan; Recreational Games; Earnest Biffle, director, assistant to be appointed later.

What Irrigation Did

FOWLER, Kan., Oct. 9. — Two bunches of Atlas Sorgo on the late U. S. Senator Chester I. Long's farm. The one on the right was watered three times from wells. The U. S. Senate committee will have a hearing in Dodge City, Kansas October 25 to consider helping farmers in western Kansas establish irrigation wells.

EXPECT TO INSTALL CIRCULATING FANS IN CHURCH FURNACE

Prospects of a more cozy temperature in church for the coming winter became brighter with the report that Father Frowin has requested C. J. Fette, plant engineer at the cheese factory to be on the lookout for circulating fans to install in the church's heating equipment. Mr. Fette states that the pastor has definitely decided to make the improvement unless he finds that the cost is prohibitive.

The outstanding reason for the contemplated addition is the increased comfort experienced last year when fans from the hatchery were installed for a few days during the mission. In spite of severe weather the church was more comfortably during previous moderately cold spells. Another advantage is that the building can be heated in a comparatively short time whereas an all night fire is needed under existing conditions.

In making the change one fan is to be placed in each of the four cold air ducts leading to the furnace. By this method the cold air is forced past the heated furnace and after heating makes its exit under force, causing a circulation of the warm air.

HE WASN'T AFRAID OF THE BIG BLACK BEAR

DRUMMOND, Wis. — After this, when Roy Gore sees something flitting around in the dark, he'll call out "Ha! who goes there?" before exercising his duties as night watchman at the Pigeon Lake CCC camp.

Gore saw a shadowy form trying to slip into camp after curfew. He made a running tackle, and found his arms full of a black bear. Gore ran one way, the bear another.

Resurfacing Main Street Now In Progress; To Be Ready For Sunday Traffic

Eight of Twelve Players For New Comedy Selected

Eight out of the twelve persons who will take part in the presentation of the Muenster players' new comedy drama, "Cheerio My Deario," were selected Tuesday, Father Francis Zimmerer, director of the group stated. His plan at that time was to have the remaining four selected before the end of the week and, if possible, also to have the first rehearsal.

Presentation of the play is set for some Sunday prior to the beginning of advent, probably the last week of November.

KNIGHTS TO HAVE ADOLF AND BOYS FOR NEXT DANCE

"Adolf and the Boys" of Schulerberg will be the center of attraction at the next K of C Dance, on Friday, October 29. Following a special meeting of officers of the Knights of Columbus last Thursday night, Roy Endres, Chairman of the dance committee, stated that officers of the local council had placed their approval on his suggestion of engaging Adolf and giving patrons a totally different kind of dance.

After playing for several months on a radio program and winning first place in a popularity contest over other orchestras of the South, the Schulerberg band started touring the state as dance musicians. In their engagements to date they have met with an enthusiastic response that keeps them booked for weeks in advance.

While playing the popular numbers of the day Adolf and the Boys have endeared themselves to oldsters as well as youngsters by giving frequent selections of the old time waltzes and schottisches. Wherever they play fathers and mothers, sometimes grandparents, get back on the floor for a revival of their younger days.

GOVERNMENT GIVES TUBERCULOSIS TEST TO MUENSTER HERDS

All this week federal licensed veterinarians operating out of the Department of Agriculture office at Ft. Worth have been testing dairy herds of Muenster with a view to eliminating tuberculosis. The work was divided between Dr. Allen, assisted by George Jetzberger, and another veterinarian under the direction of Dr. Allen, and his assistant. They spent Monday, Tuesday and the greater part of Wednesday administering test shots to about 1700 cows and are now engaged in checking each of the animals for the TB reaction.

Though the test seems to be thorough it was explained that it is merely a trial test, and is to be followed by a really rigid and complete test in localities where any animals are found to be afflicted.

Any farmer who is found to have tubercular cows will be required to dispose of them, but he will not sustain a loss because one of the government's provisions of this clean up drive is to allow a payment permitting the owner to secure equally good or better animals.

MUENSTER ALL SET FOR OLD RIVALS IN SPANISH FORT TILT

Local basketball enthusiasts will have an opportunity to see whether or not the Sumacs will have another strong basketball team, when defending Cooke County Champs meet Spanish Fort, Montague County Champs, Friday night at Spanish Fort.

Coach Burger's cohorts exhibited considerable potentiality by winning their first three practice tilts. The Sumacs overwhelmed Bulcher twice, 24-6 and 38-13; and dumped the scrapping Southmayders on their own court 11-10. But when the Blue and Gold Warriors charge the Spanish Forters up at the bend of the river they must have championship caliber in order to win. Besides having one of the strongest teams in the district, Spanish Fort hasn't dropped a game on their home floor since the "fall of the Alamo." The Sumacs have contributed two games, one in 1935 and one in 1936, to their long string of home victories.

The Blue and Gold quintet will do their best to stop Spanish Fort's long winning streak and to convince the local fans that they are worthy successors of the team that won the County Championship for the past two years.

Prevailing Warm Weather Expected to Assure Good Job

Unless unforeseen difficulties cause further delay in the street paving work, the new surface will be ready for Sunday traffic, Mayor M. J. Endres stated Wednesday. At that time preliminary preparations were in progress for the application of the surface material.

Word had been received that the tank car of oil as well as the second and third carloads of chat were in transit. All of them were expected on the noon freight but none arrived, with the result that an additional delay became necessary.

In spite of this delay it will be possible to complete the job before Sunday of the actual surfacing can be started Friday morning. To make this possible the carload of oil would have to arrive sometime Wednesday night and the heating would have to be started immediately.

Thirty-six hours of heating is necessary to prepare the oil. Here that task will be accomplished by connecting steam pipes from the Hutton refinery.

Preparing the street for surfacing was started anew Wednesday morning after the week-end traffic and rain had spoiled the effects of previous work. The grader was again called into action and a new supply of rock asphalt filler was secured to fill new holes and low places.

All the street workers as well as Muenster citizens are hopeful that the moderate temperature of Tuesday and Wednesday will prevail until the job is completed. It would give assurance of far more satisfaction.

BEAUTIFICATION OF CEMETERY ASSUMED BY LADIES' LEAGUE

In a meeting in the Herbert Meurer home Tuesday night the Beautification Committee of the Ladies Civic League voted to begin now in its program of improvement for the cemetery.

Following an announcement by Mrs. Herbert Meurer that she had secured from Father Frowin permission for the Civic League to take charge of a beautification program in the cemetery, committee members promptly decided on a sidewalk following the fence on both the east and west and leading to the crucifixion group at the center.

A row of cedars is contemplated for either side of the present sidewalk and a row of hackberry trees for the walk leading to the cemetery. Another improvement is to remove all curbs and level the ground for a bermuda sod which in time is to be kept in trim by a specially employed caretaker.

The first step in their program is the planting of cedars. To that end members of the committee agreed to solicit donations from every family in the Muenster community. Their present goal has been set at $500, a figure which was estimated as sufficient to complete their immediate program.

Ladies attending the meeting were Mesdames Nick Miller, J. B. Wide, F. E. Schmitz, R. J. Hellman, Andy Hoffbauer and the chairman, Mrs. Herbert Meurer. All of them are now active in soliciting donations for their venture.

BOY SCOUT CIRCUS CALLED OFF AFTER HEAVY RAIN FALLS

Many a scout was heavy hearted last Saturday when a hard steady rain prevented them from staging their carefully prepared scout circus in Ardmore. Most of the boys were there, eager to put on their acts after weeks of patient training.

To make their disappointment worse the scouts sustained a sizeable financial loss as a result of stocking some perishable items which they hoped to sell at their circus.

Louis Nieball, Ray Wilde, Edward Haverkamp, Norman Luke and Eugene Schmitz were the disappointed group of Muenster boys. Their enthusiasm undampened by light rains Saturday afternoon, they carried their chariot and several other items to Ardmore only to wait in vain for their chance to perform. They went to Ardmore in the R. J. Hellman car and returned in Nick Miller's car.

Because the weather is so unsettled at this time of the year, Scoutmaster Nick Miller advised, the circus probably would not be attempted again until next Spring.

JOHN BAYER MARRIES ADELAIDE WALTERSCHEID
Before a large number of relatives and friends Adelaide Walterscheid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Walterscheid, became the bride of John Bayer Jr., at nuptial ceremonies in the Sacred Heart Church Tuesday morning, October 13.
The Rev. Father Frowin, pastor of the Muenster parish officiated at the marriage and read the Nuptial High Mass. In the latter he was assisted by the Sacred Heart Choir with Leo Henscheid directing and Anthony Luke leading at the organ. Attending the young couple were the bride's sister, Olivia, and the groom's brother, George.
Mrs. Bayer was attired in a flowing dress of white satin with close fitting sleeves and bolero jacket and a floor length veil. Her flowers were white carnations. The bride's maid wore red. Her floor length dress was of accordion pleated American beauty satin, as was the stitched bolero jacket. Her shoulder length veil was of similar color.
Following the nuptial ceremony the bridal party accompanied by members of their immediate families had a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents.
At noon the young couple were guests at a wedding dinner attended by members of their families and their uncles and aunts.
For the many young relatives and friends of Johnny and his bride the official celebration took place Tuesday night at the parish hall. Leasing the building for the night Johnny gave a general invitation dance which was attended by more than a hundred couples from Muenster and surrounding communities.
Mr. and Mrs. Bayer will make their home in the old family residence. John Bayer, Sr., will continue to share the home with his son.

LARGE GROUP ATTENDS TRAILER WARMING PARTY
Mr. and Mrs. George Cates were hosts Monday night to a general invitation "trailer warming" party. About 50 persons attended in spite of threatening weather.

Disregarding their original plan of holding the party on the creek, the group continued their festivities in Joe Luke's home when rain began to fall.

Featuring the program were refreshments of wieners and accessories and Ralph Richards' performance as toastmaster.

MISSION CLUB TO BUY SUPPLIES FROM 5 CENT FEE
Thirty-two ladies attending the regular mission circle meeting on Thursday, October 13, voted to charge monthly dues of 5 cents per member in order to create a fund for buying the various small items required in their sewing. Thread, buttons, elastic, snap fasteners and other such items have been lacking in past meetings, and in a few instances have prevented the completion of garments.

According to Mrs. M. J. Endres, secretary of the club, the ladies continued their steady progress in supplying clothing for foreign missions. They brought a quilt to near completion and finished 4 children's pants, 12 pairs of stockings, 5 cup towels, 1 pair of pillow cases, 1 pair of booties and several rolls of bandages. Other articles were started and will be completed at the next meeting.

The usual refreshments of coffee and doughnuts were served.

42 SOCIAL AT K OF C HALL WEDNESDAY NIGHT
Members of the Knights of Columbus with their wives and girl friends enjoyed a pleasant session of 42 Wednesday night at the order's regular monthly social gathering in the K of C hall. Thirty-two persons participated in the progressive contest and another dozen occupied themselves at pool, billiards, and duties as hosts.

High score prizes were given to Miss Ida Fisher and M. J. Endres, both of whom played the entire evening without losing a game. Mrs. W. H. Endres and Herman Swirczynski received low score consolation prizes.

Roy Endres had charge of preparing refreshment plates of sandwiches, cookies, and coffee.

Mrs. Tenderfoot—"Will the operation be dangerous, doctor?"

Dr. Slicem—"Now don't worry about that. You can't buy a dangerous operation for $50."

Black FEATHER

By HAROLD TITUS

W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER V.—Hidden from travelers on the river, Shaw leaves his stores in camp and returns to the canoe builders. Seeing a canoe pass the rapids, loaded with alcohol, he follows it to its anchorage. Realizing the advantage Rickman has in alcohol to influence the hunters and Indians, Shaw rolls the casks into the river and pulls on to Pillager lake alone. He establishes his post and calls on Standing Cloud, who promises to do all for him in his power. But Standing Cloud is not all-powerful, for Black Beaver has the people under his spell.

CHAPTER VI

"Who, then, is Black Beaver?" Shaw put this question to the Weasel, a talkative Indian who had appeared early the next day to visit him, taste his liquor, smoke his tobacco beg for presents.

Black Beaver was the medicine man, the jessakkid, the Weasel informed him. A mighty worker of magic, Black Beaver. A man of wealth and wisdom, Black Beaver. But not always a man who walked straight and in the light. And the Weasel went on, narrating the misdeeds and evil practices of the jessakkid, and Rodney grew sober and a bit dismayed.

Standing Cloud, the principal chief, was respected; Flat Mouth, the war chief, was acknowledged a great man. But Black Beaver was the dominating influence.

Black Beaver had withheld hunter's medicine from those who traded with the independent; he had even declared Windigo the river of the Laughing Musquash so that none of these hunters, dared go there. So widely accepted was his edict that not only did the Indians believe in it but the little trader's engages would not venture up Laughing Musquash for the white clay with which the buildings had been washed.

For three days, then Rodney campaigned to establish himself in the good will of the Pillagers and awaited the promised coming of Standing Cloud and the expected call of Black Beaver. Neither appeared, much to his annoyance and dismay. On the third morning he walked toward the encampment on the flat. Approaching the small stream which headed in the spring outside his gate he heard voices. Women were washing blankets there and he stopped to watch and listen, screened by bushes.

"While the sun shines, they talk," a young woman said. "While the stars are hanging, they talk! The talk of the chiefs is like the talk of geese."

An old woman spoke: "One hungers for the days before Black Beaver's words were the thoughts of all the warriors and hunters. It is sad to know that Black Beaver commands such numbers. We have not had pleasant days since ears turned to him instead of Standing Cloud."

"That is so," the other agreed. "Standing Cloud and Flat Mouth, it is said, talk loudly for the little trader. They fear if many do not accept credits from the little trader he will depart. They fear the great company if no other trader is present. Black Beaver closes his ears to their talk."

"And many hunters await the words of Black Beaver."

"That is true. They will trade where he commands them."

"He will command where gifts for him are the greatest."

Rodney went on, then, his mind filled with apprehension. So his fate was being settled in a council of chiefs.

Late the next afternoon into the lake came Rickman's brigade, men weary, canoes battered and patched, baggage and equipment bearing the marks of long and arduous travel.

But within an hour of the time he landed Burke Rickman was afloat again. Rodney saw him shove out, two voyageurs manning the canoe, and head up the lake.

He closed the gate and had Jacques fetch a rifle and watched their approach through the square loophole. Abreast the place, the paddles stopped dipping and Rickman's voice rolled across the water.

"Shaw! I come for talk. Step out!" Rodney smiled grimly, having caught sight of a rifle muzzle protruding scanty above the gunwale.

"Come ashore, Rickman, if you need talk! Have your men draw back, and come unarmed," he said sternly.

The other hesitated then, after speaking to his men, he gestured them on and the canoe slid across the shallows. The great gate then creaked inward on its wooden hinges, and rifle in the crook of his arm, Shaw advanced.

Rickman flushed. "I come unarmed," he said. "But you? . . ."

Rodney laughed. "I specified how you were to land," he said easily. "I gave no pledge myself. Your men sit ready yonder and . . ."

His eyes narrowed as they searched Rickman's figure. "The bulge beneath your shirt? Could it be a pistol tucked in your girdle, trader?"

"I came unarmed!"—hotly too hotly. "Then lift the shirt. No? . . . Good enough then! I expected as much, Rickman; hence the rifle."—stroking the stock. "What brings you here, concealing weapons?"

"Rum!" Rickman growled. "My rum. Company rum. I want it, Shaw!"

"Want it, eh? Embarrassed by lack of it, are you? Touche, trader! That thrust pricked eh? I wish I had your rum, Rickman! I could use it along with mine. And, if it were here, I'd defy even your numbers to take it back! But your rum's not here, trader. The Mississippi has your casks."

"D'you think the company will stand by and suffer theft and not retaliate with—"

"No more than I'd stand by and mourn helplessly because my canoes were smashed by company axes! That's the item in our account the loss of your rum balances!"

"You're a short-sighted, arrogant fool, Shaw. You'll trip here as you tripped at Mackinac . . . Fine days and nights, you thought you had, did you?"—voice harsh with bitterness. "In high feather, were you, thinking your charms had bedazzled a woman? Well, she wormed what we needed to know from you, didn't she? And within hours your secret was passed to me. That for your competence!" And he snapped a thumb contemptuously. "Your days in the trade are numbered!"

His reference to Annette had sent a wave of anger through Rodney; anger more at self than another.

"Ay, I admit tripping back yonder! But you and your trollop and your spurious murder charge could not turn the balance, could they? I'm here and I've rum and my goods are on the way and I'll hold these hunters close, Rickman until my canoes arrive! I won't trip again. Mark that down."

Rickman turned disdainfully and signaled his men. The canoe came swiftly and he waded out and stepped to his place, not looking again at Rodney.

And then, in the morning, word of Rickman's arrival having spread far, Black Beaver finally came to eye and appraise these traders, stopping first at Fort Shaw.

The sharp eyes probed Rodney's face; he accepted the presents spread before him; and with impassive countenance the man listened to Shaw's talk.

"Your words have fallen on my ears," he said when the harangue ended. "There is no haste. Black Beaver will ponder on what the little trader has spoken."

Dismayed but not dispirited, Rodney watched him making straight for the opposition fort.

But his spirits would have been lower, his dismay might have given way to despair had he watched the scene enacted yonder after the jessakkid had stalked through Rickman's gate.

The medicine man had his tobacco, if not his rum. His eyes glittered like buttons at the presents spread before him, and under the spell of Rickman's sustained talk, under the influence of sight of the wealth of freshly stored goods in those buildings, Black Beaver tarried long.

Into his ears was poured the lie that Shaw's canoes might never come and, if they did, would prove to be but lightly laden.

More gifts, all but spirits. And spirits were coming, Rickman promised. The casks he had brought with him had been lost in a rapid, he said, telling only half the truth. A canoe had been dispatched to Fond du Lac to draw on the company stores there for that important item.

So the jessakkid left him and had his wives paddle him from lodge to lodge and proclaimed that he would make medicine only for hunters who accepted credits from the company trader, and dissension spread among the people.

Dissension, indeed! The hunters respected Standing Cloud; they feared Black Beaver. And puzzlement lay heavily upon them. What was a trader without rum. Or a trader without goods?

Not for days was Pillager trade secured.

The debate among the old men had assumed something else than the expression of judgment which might affect the welfare of the tribe. It had come now, to a final test of influence among them.

And then Black Beaver made his supreme effort. The jessakkid sent word from lodge to lodge that talk must be made; that all hunters must meet with the chiefs; that all ears must listen to harangue.

Over 40 canoes were drawn to the beach by sundown of the day named. They wore their finery, beads and ceremonial stones. Paint had been used on faces.

But of them all, Black Beaver was the most resplendent. He was the last to come as well, sitting erect in his canoe.

A blanket was about his shoulders which he did not drop off to reveal the glory of his raiment until he stepped ashore.

A woman handed Black Beaver a pair of gourd rattles and he took them one in either hand, and advanced majestically toward the circle and Standing Cloud arose from his haunches and moved sedately toward the fire in the center of the circle.

But, Rodney thought, the old man lacked confidence. His step was slow and his shoulders were not squared.

"My children," he began, "the chiefs have called you to council. Things that cause argument are abroad. The little trader has ever been as a brother to the hunter," he said, and grunts of approval rose here and there about the circle. "The little trader comes among us and builds his lodge and is as one of our people. He stays among us.

These great companies are not so. They come as plunderers. They have no thought of another sun. They bid the hunters take all that walks and swims. They have no thought of what may befall the hunters when all is gone."

A chorus of assenting grunts was raised. But there were gaps in the chain of sound; all, it was evident, were not in accord.

"There are among you," Standing Cloud declaimed, voice rising and swelling, "those who see only the one day. The ways we travel change. I am not one to say they shall not change again. I am not one to say that all great companies are evil and their stay among us short and like running fire in the way they take fur from the land. But I do say this: wherever the great companies have dwelt alone among our brothers, sorrow has come. I fear to see sorrow come to my people. My heart is heavy when I see that many of you will not await the coming of the little trader's goods before taking credits. My eyes see sorrow coming as a storm cloud if you listen to counsel that bids you take credits from the great company and send the little trader away from us.

"Men of the forest, I have spoken!"

A thrill ran through Rodney as the grunts rose in a lusty chorus,

APES AND MAN

Dr. Philip H. Dubois, a psychologist of the University of New Mexico stated Saturday that "the difference between the intelligence of men and the so-called lower animals is quantitative, not qualitative." By that statement as well as several others in his speech before a Phi Beta Kappa campus cultural group, Dr. Dubois commits himself as being a member of that array of so-called educators who, instead of giving students a higher, more exalted idea of humanity, do little more than destroy the worthwhile convictions those students acquired in their younger days.

The esteemed professor may, if he so chooses, consider himself in a class with apes, but we feel justified in considering ourselves far above that plane. And we consider our superiority as qualitative, not just quantitative.

It is hard to imagine just what kind of world this would be if the entire order of civilization were changed to coincide with the theories of this professor and the hundreds of others who agree with him. Would our laws then be changed so that animals would be held responsible for their acts or would man be relieved of his responsibility? The absurdness of this proposal would probably strike the modern psychologist themselves even though it is a logical conclusion drawn from their own argument. And if animals are essentially the same as us where do we get the right to murder cows, hogs, and chickens for our daily meals? Mr. Dubois' idea would brand us as cannibals.

This modern, warped thinking is the result of a futile effort to prove that man is the result of evolution without admitting that somewhere along the line of change the Creator played an active part. If we admit that man is distinguished from lower animals by intelligence and will we must admit that in the process of evolution, if that is our origin, the Supreme Being endowed us with those faculties. Dr. Dubois and his cohorts brush aside that problem with the statement that there is no essential difference between man and the lower animal.

For thousands of years psychologists have had satisfactory answers concerning the mental comparison of men and animals. Those answers harmonize with man's natural conviction, they harmonize with civilization, they harmonize with the Word of God. And what is more, they are uplifting, not depressing like the ideas of our modern intellectual anarchists.

THE GREAT REPEAL

Bruce Barton, Republican nominee for Congress recently made the statement that if he is elected he wants to be known as the great repealer. He would move to repeal a law a week. By his own figures, Mr. Barton has quite a task, one that would require him to live to a ripe old age. He says that a person reading 100 laws a day would have to spend two years to get over the 59,282 statutes passed by 75 congresses.

We can suggest an even more effective plan than Barton's, at the risk of appearing ridiculous before the nation. Why not scrap everyone of 59,282 statutes in one big lump and then set up the decalogue as the law of the land? That group of laws says, for instance, "Thou shalt not kill," and the employer who gives his help mere starvation wages would be subject to prosecution as would the reckless automobile driver. "Thou shalt not steal" is equally effective for bandits, racketeers, gyp artists, unscrupulous landlords or merchants. "Thou shalt not lie" would even put an end to the fake promises of politicians. And the same is true of the rest of them. Mankind hasn't changed since the Hebrews received their ten commandments, and it is rank presumption on our part to attempt a system of laws that fit man better than those given by the Creator Himself.

Then again, our courts and executives say that "ignorance does not excuse you from the law." It is every man's duty as a citizen to be familiar with 59,282 statutes. How ridiculous! But these are only Federal laws. In addition we have our State, County, and City laws by the thousands, hundreds of them outworn and useless.

There is a story about two men who disputed over whether a person could spend one single day without transgressing some law. Their discussion led to a bet and the one person decided on the sure method of doing nothing at all, he spent the day in bed reading and sleeping in his hotel room. Late that day he was disturbed by an officer who wished to measure the bed linen, and he was fined because the sheets on beds in his hotel were not 9 feet or more in length. People who know laws can name such cases by the dozens. And we wonder whether Gainesville has repealed its law prohibiting automobiles on California Street.

The big trouble with using the decalogue is that it is so tremendously practical. It would give some meaning to the statement that "ignorance does not excuse you from the law," for anyone can memorize ten simple statements. It would include the hundreds of practices which are now considered as wrong but are still lawful because no statute definitely prohibits them. It would give judges a chance to judge rather than thumb through legal red tape and finally pass on the decision of some predecessor.

Our government should be an agency to protect the citizens' natural rights. It serves its purpose when it demands observance of the decalogue. As for its own support it can add a few laws to raise revenue, but there the man made laws should end.

OPINIONS of READERS

The Enterprise welcomes the opinions of its readers and will publish, as far as space will permit, all such letters when signed by the authors.

"OUR" ENTERPRISE

We live in a free country. How often did we not hear this somewhat worn-out slogan without really understanding its significance for a democratic country? Does it mean that we can do whatever we like? No, that would spell anarchy, dissolution of order, the end of government. It means that in a democratic country like ours we, the people have the right to elect our representatives for state and federal congresses. These representatives are empowered to express our will by laws, which must be enforced by the executives, governor and president. The courts, state and federal, are instituted to settle disputes about the constitutionality of the laws made by our congresses.

So far, so good. But here is where propaganda sets in. The masses elect their representatives, but they are often swayed in their votes by the press. Our constitution, therefore, guarantees a free press. Do we have a free press? I doubt it. Newspapers depend upon advertisements, which in turn depend upon circulation, and circulation depends a great deal upon the sensational. If the sensational is not forthcoming the typical editor is likely to invent it to keep up circulation. He must do this to continue his existence, the newspaper is his bread and butter. It follows that polished or bought newspapers may often govern the opinions of the people expressed at the polls.

Now I come to the point. We have in our community a paper far superior to the common garden-variety of country newspaper—The Enterprise. Its editor may be destined in the course of time to take up the mantle left by the late Ed Howe, the Sage of Potato Hill. His timely, often forceful, editorials contain enough meat and spice to tempt the taste of the most critical gourmand. Sometimes the food may not be pleasing to our taste and we put it away with a contemptuous sneer. In plain words, our ideas and his do not coincide, but they give us other view-points and help us to form a fairer, less biased judgment. There is always more than one way to look at any question, except that of religious dogma, and as long as he is correct on that one issue, we should allow him all liberty in treating political and local matters.

To suspend subscriptions because we find in our paper something that is not "up our alley" shows a narrow, cramped mind. And what is the use to get "stewed up" because a name is misspelled or left out of the news columns? Neither the editor nor the correspondents are omniscient. It would hurt the general usefulness of the paper if in this space, allotted to subscribers, the editor would not be absolutely free, without editorial or personal responsibility, to print the opinions of readers, as long as these opinions do not conflict with the tenets of Christian morals and charity.

This is our paper; we have all reasons to be proud of it. Let us subscribe for it, advertise in it, help its circulation, and it will help to make our city a better city and us better citizens. Let our paper be free. Vivat floreat, crescat.

What Others Have to Say--

YES, A SALES TAX IS PRODUCTIVE

When John T. Smith, editor of the Texas Tax Journal, says that a general sales tax is a "big money getter," he is painfully correct. He explains, in a phrase, why legislators turn so readily to this method of obtaining revenue.

Truly, the yield from a sales tax is bountiful, but that fact falls deplorably short of meaning that it is a just and wise levy. The productivity of the sales tax was discovered centuries ago, and the hardest rulers of the middle ages taxed sales to fill their coffers.

The tax is productive because no one who buys where it is levied can easily escape it. And the public must buy in order to live. But to say that it is easy to collect is inaccurate. Elaborate and costly machinery must be set up to apply it.

If our legislators and the Governor were courageous or industrious enough to revise our present levies and collect delinquent taxes, the state's revenue probably would be adequate. But they are being urged to levy a sales tax simply because such a tax would be productive.—Dallas Times Herald.

THE TEXAS OF TODAY

Mother Nature has been kind this year in an especial manner to her child that she calls Texas.

Using alliteration's artful aid, there is abundance of alfalfa and apricots, beans and barley, corn and cotton, ducks and dairy products, eggs and eggplants, figs and potatoes, Jersey cows and Johnson grass, kaolin and kaffir corn, lignite and long leaf pine, mohair and milo maize, northers and natural gas, oil and onions, peas and poultry, quinces and quicksilver, rice and rye, sheep and sweet potatoes, turkeys and truck crops, underground water supply and underpasses galore, vocational education and Vice President Garner, wheat and wool, extra pay and extraordinary pecan supply, yellow-hammers and yokefellows, zinc and zwiebacks.

With all this abundance Texas should be able to work out its salvation.—Houston Post.

THE AMERICAN SPIRIT

During the past year many Americans have been reading a book which describes various problems in the art of living that still await solution.

It is a cheerful book. It believes a large number of those problems will be solved, and that the solutions are not so far away. It believes that men and women striving with diligence, sincerity and self-confidence will find the answers—as did, for example, Thomas Edison and Luther Burbank in their separate and important fields.

During the same period have appeared other writings, either emanating from Europe or inspired by foreign pessimism. These take a different point of view.

They despair of the capacity of men and women, as such, to solve their problems. They urge that all initiative, all responsibility be surrendered to those who hold the reins of government—as in many foreign lands today—and that youth trade its hopes, its energies its self-reliance, for a problematical and dull future of state care and state guidance.

Here are two divergent viewpoints.

The first is American in approach and in method.

The second is foreign. It is the antithesis of the spirit which conquered our raw frontiers, and converted them into some of the most fruitful and pleasant home-sites on earth.

The new frontiers to be conquered are no longer geographical. But the spirit which will tame them and build thereon a fuller and happier life for men, is the same spirit of personal courage and confident enterprise that actuated our earlier pioneers.

IT IS THE AMERICAN SPIRIT.—Kingsville Record.

HOME MERCHANT DESERVES YOUR SUPPORT

As we face a return of better business following a bountiful harvest in this section, we ought to give a little thought to all the home business men who have fought through side by side with the farmer for the past six or seven lean years.

There's hardly a business that has been more than a meager meal ticket to its owner during the long weary years just now passing into history. The men who have stayed-put and who have smiled as they waited, are the truest friends the farmers and the laborers of the county have ever known. They have faith and have had the stamina to wait for the certain comeback of the country in a most admirable way.

Now, since there is a rift in the dark clouds and a promise of a better day for all, The News believes it is our duty to give our merchants the benefits of increased buying. Our merchants are stocking up with modern quality merchandise in every line in the hopes of getting some profit to compensate them for the long dark days of the lean years.

Support of the home merchants in the coming year will mean a stronger, happier community—and the ability to stick through any subsequent days of adversity.

The Home Merchant deserves your support, and your best interests will be served by giving it to him.—The Menard News.

Black Feather

as women, seated behind the men, stirred by the chief's oratory, grinned at one another and nodded approval and rocked back and forth.

But he looked at Rickman, standing beside Conrad Rich on the edge of firelight, and his thrill died. The man was composed, assured. And Black Beaver, immobile, sat across the circle, head up, waiting . . . waiting.

Flat Mouth spoke. Other old men spoke, all echoing Standing Cloud's words, all pleading that hunters await the coming of Rodney's canoes so he would be made welcome among them.

Black Beaver rose. In the man's very movements was a power, a magnetism, a sense of devilry foreboded ill.

"Pillagers!" he said sternly. "Pillagers, who fear my power, stay silent that my words may reach your ears. Black Beaver speaks to you. For many winters and many summers I have guided you wisely in your trading with the white man. My words have been wise; always has my medicine been good for fur.

"I have talked with the Manitous. They tell me all. But you are deaf to their voices. You can not hear their wisdom; some of you will not listen when I pass on their wisdom with my breath.

"Some of you listen to other old men. But no other man among you can hear the words of the Manitou. No other eyes among you can see what Black Beaver sees. You have heard much talk at this fire. Many of you believe that talk to be wise. You do not know. You can not hear, you cannot see, so you do not know.

"It has been said to you that the company of Flaming Hair is evil. I say to you, the company of Flaming Hair is good.

"Soon," he cried, "the great company will call its trader home unless you hunters make him welcome! The great company is not evil. The great company is good. But the great company will not wait outside our lodges many suns longer!

"You ask yourselves: How does Black Beaver know that the great company grows weary of waiting? I will tell you. I have flown as an owl to the island of the Great Turtle where the great Company Chiefs sit in council. I have listened from a tree beside the door of their lodge and have heard their principal chief say that unless the Pillagers accept credits they will send writing which will point their canoes to other places.

"You know what Black Beaver sees when he flies as an owl. You know that I flew as an owl to the Lauging Musquash and saw the Windigo there. Because I flew as an owl he could not catch and devour me. You know that because I flew there and saw the Windigo I kept many hunters above the sand and wailing from many lodges.

"I flew as owl to where the little trader tells you his canoes are coming. No canoes are coming. The little trader has no canoes coming, my children. He speaks with the forked tongue when he says these words. If the great company traders goes away you will have only the lies of the little trader to wrap around you as blankets, to make powder and lead for your guns, to smoke in your pipes.

"I have spoken, Pillagers! Flee to the lodge of Flaming Hair as you would from a fire in the forest! Accept his credits before his chiefs grow angry . . . Flee . . . Flee, my children!"

Startled grunts rose in a chorus. Even the old men, Rodney perceived believed and were frightened.

And then Rodney Shaw was among them. Boldly, presumptuously, shattering all precedent for the behavior of whites at a council, he stepped within the circle.

"My brothers! I stand before you as a son before fathers: I stand before you as a son against whom lies have been spoken. I stand before you and ask that you listen to my words!"

Standing Cloud rose.

"The Pillagers are honorable men," he said. "The Pillagers return good for good. This man is my brother's brother. It is not good that he be turned away from our council fire. He may speak."

"I stand before you to defy Black Beaver and his magic!" Rodney cried. "For many seasons you have listened to what Black Beaver has said. For many seasons he has performed his magic and flown as an owl and brought you word of many things. He has brought you word of many evil things. He has brought you word of no good things.

"Black Beaver has frightened you with his forked tongue. He has told you that he flies as an owl and sees and hears many evil things. He says he flew as an owl and saw the Windigo in the Laughing Musquash. He says he flew as an owl and saw that my canoes filled with goods do not come.

"The Windigo is evil!" he cried. "The Windigo will devour white man and Pillager alike. The Windigo will devour them if they go where the Windigo is. The Windigo is on Laughing Musquash, Black Beaver has told you. I say that the Windigo is not on Laughing Musquash and I ask you to see proof of what I say with your own eyes! I say to you that I will go alone to Laughing Musquash to show you I have been there. And I will return unharmed!"

"And when I do that what will my brothers say? Will they say that Black Beaver speaks what is so? Will they believe that Black Beaver flies as an owl and sees many things? Will you believe when he says my canoes heavy with goods do not come?"

Sounds of surprise and excitement died before this challenge.

"No," he said, and shook his head. "You will not believe these things. You will know that Black Beaver's words are those of a forked tongue. And you will know that I tell you what is so. You will know that my canoes are on the march bearing goods to you.

"Is that not so, my brother?" He ended with the question directed at Standing Cloud and the old chief rose quickly to his feet, amidst a growing tumult of voices. Black Beaver was up, as well, and crying to be heard, but with a majestic, silencing gesture, Standing Cloud stayed him and checked the confusion of voices.

"The little trader has spoken!" he cried. "The little trader has said he will do things which we can see with our own eyes. If the little trader's medicine is greater than Black Beaver's will we not be pleased to see it, my children?"

They would be pleased to see it, indeed! Cries of approval resounded. Short harangues followed. Rodney declared that he would start at dawn, so all might see, and turned to watch Rickman speak lowly and energetically with Black Beaver, urging the magician to some further strategy.

There is a story about Fathers Sorin and Granger, early builders of Notre Dame University, to the effect that their tremendous asset was a jointly owned hat. When one of the priests was seen abroad it was well known that the other was at home. But from their humble beginning grew the present Notre Dame, one of the leading universities of this country. Those two were not "down in the mouth" because difficulties faced them. They had the stuff of which great men are made—vision, confidence, determination, energy. They gave an example that can prove useful in our own improvement program. Before us lies an objective but on the way are many difficulties all of which can be overcome if we do not get "down in the mouth." It has been said that the only fellow who gets a return from "looking down in the mouth" is a dentist.

With all of our confusion over taxes the time may soon come when we have to adopt a system somewhat like that currently in use in China. There the tax collector distributes baby chicks several months before collecting time then comes around later to get the full grown chickens which are sold to provide treasury funds. Feeding one or two extra chickens, the Chinese do not realize they are being taxed, and make no complaints.

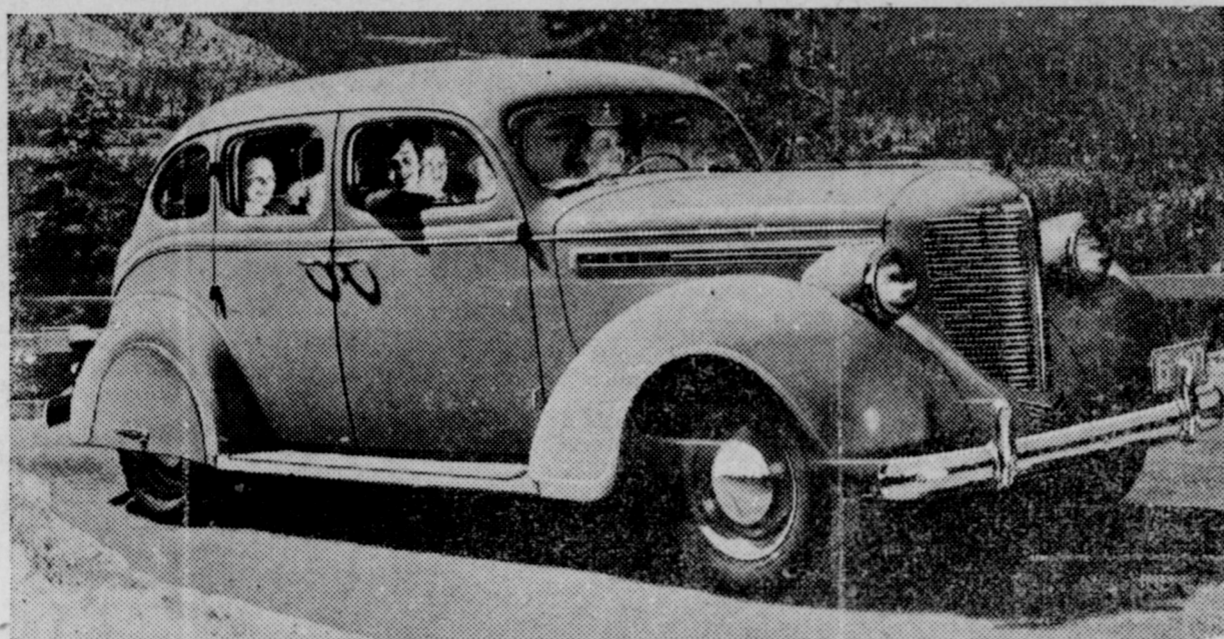

A week or so ago a news item revealed that some lawyers are concerned over whether their calling is a trade rather than a profession. To the average layman this may seem a small item but to the self-respecting lawyer it is the hair line division between honor and dishonor. It hinges on the question "does he practice law for the purpose of protecting the interests of others or merely for the money he can get out of it?" According to members of the old school of professional men the idea of service comes first, and the fee is a secondary consideration. Many a real lawyer has defended a poor man because the poor man was in the right and entitled to help. Likewise many a doctor has saved the lives of poor people knowing all the time there would be no payment for his services. This is what we think of when we say professional men, a term too dignified to include the shysters and quacks who measure their services, very frequently of questionable merit, in dollars and cents.

The lawyers who were concerned with the loss of their good name probably thought of such shysters as the one involved in a case made known to us a few days ago. A truck driver was sued for $15,000 for the alleged injuries to a colored woman who was "disabled for life" when the truck hit her. The driver calling on the lawyer (?) who had charge of the case proved that the woman had stepped from a curb and through no fault of his, as well as without his knowledge, had accidentally walked against the side of the moving vehicle. He also proved that charges of insufficient lights and obstacles at the side of the machine were groundless by the word of an inspection officer who had just passed on the load. Finally the driver cleared himself, and with the shyster sought the woman for her signature dropping the suit. They found this woman, who was disabled for life, and whose services, incidentally, had been valued at $10 a day by the lawyer, not in a hospital but in a cotton field. The case is just one of thousands in which shysters base claims on a pack of lies, and frequently collect.

After learning about all the new arrivals here last week one of our Gainesville readers commented that he noticed a flock of birds passing over. At the time he thought they were geese, but he decided later that they must have been a flock of storks headed for Muenster.

Miss Opal Wright, Walter Dyer and Milton Carter of Bowie visited Gene Carter Wednesday afternoon.

1938 Chrysler Royal Sedan

The Chrysler Royal four-door touring sedan. It has a wheelbase of 119 inches and a Gold Seal engine developing 95 horsepower. A completely new front end treatment and many new features make it the finest car in the price class that Chrysler has ever offered. This Chrysler is now on display at the Ben Seyler Motor Company.

tory result than that experienced when the tar was applied in cold weather last year.

As in their previous work, the city is indebted to Judge Ray Winder for the use of the spreader truck. According to Mr. Endres, the judge stated that the machine is at Muenster's disposal whenever it is needed.

One point of difference in this year's working plan is that the surface will be packed with a roller before traffic is permitted on the street. Following immediately behind the application of chat, the roller is expected to bind the new surface to the base much more effectively than last year when the oil was applied without packing on cold wet ground. The roller is being furnished by the R. W. McKinney Company.

Majestic Theatre Will Serve Cigarettes and Coffee at Prevue Show

The Saturday night prevue showing of the Ritz Brothers in their first starring film, "Life Begins in College," will be just a big party according to word received from Martin Wade, manager of the Majestic. Refreshments of coffee and cigarettes will be served, a community sing will be offered as an outlet for lusty voices, and the feature attraction will be the occasion for boisterous laughter.

A program such as Mr. Wade has arranged is completely new for Gainesville and is expected to make a complete hit with his usual hundreds of prevue attendants. It is more than just a show, it is a big party with a first rate show as the feature attraction. And the prevailing spirit will be the party spirit rather than the movie spirit.

HUSBAND IGNORES THAT NEW DRESS? IT'S A COMPLIMENT

NEW YORK.—When your husband doesn't notice that new dress you have on he's not unobservant, he's paying you a compliment.

So said Lucian Lelong, French designer, in a lecture before the School for Fashion Careers Sept. 28.

"A woman is well-dressed when you cannot remember anything she was wearing, even to the color of her dress or the style of her hat," he said.

1938 CHRYSLER AND PLYMOUTH NOW ON DISPLAY AT BEN'S

Three 1938 model cars, two Plymouths and a Chrysler, are now on display at the Ben Seyler Motor Company. The machines were brought in during the past week, the Plymouths on Oct. 16 and 19 and the Chrysler on Oct. 21.

Both of the new models contain the outstanding features of last year's cars along with numerous improvements resulting from latest developments in automotive engineering. The new Jubilee Plymouth, climbing ten years of great cars, combines the many high quality features that in recent years have made it an outstanding value in the low price field. In addition it is more powerful, more efficient, larger, quieter, and more luxurious.

BULCHER ATHLETES SPLIT HONORS WITH LOCAL BOYS, GIRLS

The Muenster High School, boys and girls divided honors with the Bulcher athletes Tuesday afternoon when Tony's reserves took one on the chin in their encounter with Coach Greene's cagers and Miss Fette's charges sprung a surprise attack to win their volley ball match.

It was a last point rally that gave the Muenster girls their victory in the deciding game of the match. Trailing with a score of 7 to 14 the girls braced up on the last point and then proceeded to bring up their own count slowly and surely, at the same time blocking every Bulcher threat to score. The girls lost the first game of the match in a close contest 15-12. The second was easily won 15-8 when the Bulcher coach gave the reserves a chance.

In basketball Mr. Burger's reserves just did not have the power to beat their opponents. While battling along on fairly even terms they were outclassed enough to fall short by four double markers. The score was 16-8.

that won the Cooke County High School Championship.

The Sumacs storm Spanish Fort, Friday night, hoping to break a long string of consecutive home victories for Coach Winder's team. The Sumacs have lost two games to Spanish Fort on the latter court but now are determined to stop them.

Out of the five games that have been played between the two teams, since the beginning of their athletic relationship two years ago. Spanish Fort has won 3 games and Muenster two. Here is a good chance for the Blue and Gold to break even with the Spanish Forters.

At last our Sumacs are gaining prestige in basket ball's elite. Coach Dan McCallister of Denton has given them a place on his schedule. The exact date of the game has not been set, but it will be played either the first or second week after the Xmas Holidays.

Coach Burger's second team dropped their first game of the season to Bulcher, Tuesday evening at Bulcher, 16 to 8. The Muenster volley ball team defeated Bulcher in a well played match, 15 to 12, 15 to 8 and 16 to 14.

Valley View, Muenster High School's paramount basket ball rival has taken to football. The Eagles defeated St. Jo last Friday, in a closely played game 12-6.

Successful extraction of "fats" from southern pine trees, recently accomplished by Dr. Charles Herfy, points to a new southern industry, says the All-South Development Council. The fats are useful in making a soap used by the mining industry in flotation of ores, they contain lineoleic acid used in paint manufacture, and can also supply the medical profession with quantities of cheap oleic acid for experiments.

Bits of Sport

By A. Hasbin

Our softball players might as well lay in a good supply of wood, pull up a chair, take a "chaw," and start the hot stove league. Old man winter has taken up his duty as weather maker and it looks like he means business.

The hot stove league should get busy and do the organizing for next season now, so that the teams will be ready to take the field as soon as the first signs of spring float in the air.

We would like to see Prexy call together, some place soon, representatives of the soft ball playing burgs, for the purpose of creating an eight team soft ball league. The following, with a few exceptions and additions perhaps, would make up an ideal league: Gainesville, Myra, Bulcher, Leo, Earl, Valley View, Hays, Nocona, St. Jo, and Muenster.

Four lighted fields would serve an eight team circuit. If we are not mistaken Gainesville, Myra, Muenster and Nocona each has one. With a little propoganda others would be installed.

There has been considerable talk about organizing an independent basketball team in Muenster. Muenster has enough ex-Sumacs to form the backbone of such a team. We know of a lot of teams that a few composed of Weldon Barker, Earl Fisher, Bernard Schmitz, Richard Fette, and Earl Lehnertz could beat. All of them have played on teams
